LABOR BOARD REPORT RAPS BETHLEHEM STEEL

Clothing Workers To Give $250,000 To Refugees

NEW YORK—CIO clothing workers here have decided to show their feelings about Nazi terror against Jews, Catholics and other minorities in a thoroughly practical way.

Thirty thousand of them represented in the Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers have voted to donate a day's pay to aid European refugees of all faiths.

Louis Hollander, leader of the Joint Board and City Councilman, announced that the sum collected would exceed $250,000.

Threaten Taxi Strike In Gotham

NEW YORK — Leaders of the Transport Workers Union this week threatened a city-wide taxi strike on New Year's eve unless operators change their position and agree to renewal of the union's contracts, which expire at the year's end.

A cabmen's strike would halt the rolling of thousands of cabs and would affect about 11,000 men in the industry, including drivers and maintenance workers.

The large fleet facing the possibility of union action include Parmalee, Terminal, Sunshine, Bell and Atlas.

Eugene Connolly, head of the TWU taxi division, said the union is pressing for "substantial wage increases and improvement of working conditions.

"We are demanding stronger contract enforcement, and particularly safeguards against racketeering elements within the industry."

The District Attorney's office, he added, has only scratched the surface of racketeering in the industry. Though the public has been told of bribery and political racketeering, he asserted, "vicious strong-arm rackets still exist and must be wiped out."

Aetna Life To Rehire CIO Member

New York — CIO insurance workers in the Aetna Life Company here have won a completely satisfactory settlement of their complaint filed with the National Labor Relations Board.

Aetna has agreed to reinstate a worker fired for activity in the CIO United Office and Professional Workers with back pay, and to post a promise never to coerce, intimidate or discriminate against workers who join the union.

ASK OBSERVER

At the same time the Industrial Insurance Agents Union, affiliated to the Office and Professional Workers, moved to secure investigation of monopolistic practices of Metropolitan Life, asking the U. S. Monopoly Committee to send an observer to forthcoming State Labor Board hearings in New York.

The request was made on the basis of a complaint by the State Board that Metropolitan, a five-billion-dollar outfit, was using policy-holders money to support a company union and for other forms of anti-labor activity.

Since Metropolitan is a mutual concern, all its funds theoretically are under the control of the policy-holders, Leon W. Berney, organizer for the insurance agents union, pointed out.

Company Union Under Attack; 100,000 Affected

(See Story Page Three)

WASHINGTON — The National Labor Relations Board made it four straight against the anti-union employers of Little Steel this week, as a trial examiner's intermediate report found the Bethlehem Steel Corp. guilty of violating the Wagner Act.

Trial Examiner Frank Bloom recommended to the Board that it order Bethlehem's company union dissolved and that it force the corporation to enable its workers to join legitimate labor organizations. His report, affecting 100,000 workers, was based on hearings held in Johnstown, Pa., between September, 1937, and July, 1938.

The report was sharply critical of Bethlehem's activities during the 1937 strike. It condemned the corporation's contributions to the the Citizens' Committee formed in Johnstown for strikebreaking purposes, and to Mayor Daniel Shields of Johnstown.

Unless the corporation makes fundamental changes in its labor policy, 1939 will be an unhappy year for the firm, second largest steel producer in the nation, it is expected.

In addition to the Labor Board action, the Department of Labor is preparing to name minimum wage rates for firms holding government steel contracts of more than $10,000. If this rate is set at 62½c an hour, as the public contracts board recommended, Bethlehem will be forced to raise its wage rates by more than 10 per cent.

Meanwhile, the CIO will press the new session of Congress to adopt legislation barring government contracts from firms which violate the Wagner Act. This bill, prevented from passage last year only through the actions of a reactionary House Rules Committee, will receive strong backing from CIO unions and progressive forces throughout the nation.

CIO Union Certified In Two Plants

Washington—The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, CIO, won certification as sole bargaining agency in two important plants last week, in orders isued by the National Labor Relations Board, covering workers at the Chicago Westinghouse Co. and the White Sewing Machine Corp., Cleveland.

At the Hatfield Wire and Cable Co., Hillside, N. J., an order and stipulation announced by the Board required the reinstatement of 87 employes with back pay totaling $15,000. The workers are members of Local 403, UERMW.

The company also agreed to bargain collectively upon request with the CIO union as sole representative of its employes at its Hillside and Hackettstown plants.

The Board's action in the Westinghouse and White Sewing Machine companies, was based on a comparison of union membership cards with the companies' payrolls.

Fight Hague Court Appeal

The U. S. circuit court of appeals, sitting in Philadelphia, heard defense counsel fight Mayor Frank Hague's appeal from an injunction restraining the Jersey City czar and his henchmen from interfering with the rights of the CIO. Left to right: Charles Herschenstein, Dean Spaulding Frazer of Newark University law school, David Stauffer, Morris Ernst and E. J. O'Marra. Frazer and Ernst are counsel for the CIO in the case.

Auto Union Wins Three Board Cases

Washington.—The United Automobile Workers, CIO, has won three recent victories under rulings of the National Labor Relations Board.

The Muncie Gear Works, Inc., Muncie, Ind., by an order and stipulation was required to give up its company union, to stop interfering with UAW Local 459 and to reinstate two employes with reimbursement of $200 each.

At the Electric Auto-Lite Co., Toledo, Ohio, UAW Local 12 was certified as sole bargaining agency for production and non-production factory employes, following an election won by the CIO union, 2,749 to 218.

In a third case, the Labor Board announced an order and stipulation requiring the Radcliff Motor Co., Kansas City, Mo., to reinstate with back pay and full seniority 15 employes admittedly discharged for membership and activity in UAW Local 447. The back pay awarded to the workers totaled $4,000.

Canadian Labor Congress Clings to Unity Course Despite AFL Threats

By WILLIAM THOMAS

TORONTO, Canada—If there is to be expulsion of CIO unions from the fold of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada it must be done directly by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor and will not be undertaken by the Canadian Congress, R. J. Tallon, Congress secretary, declared on his return from an interview with federation chieftains in Washington.

The threatened ouster of CIO unions from the Congress as demanded by leaders of the AFL remains undecided, Mr. Tallon reported.

"The AFL has absolute authority over jurisdictional disputes between its affiliated unions both in the United States and Canada, but the AFL never has had legislative authority over the Congress," Mr. Tallon explained, referring to the decision of the AFL Houston convention which deprived the Congress of its chartering powers.

"The Congress has complete authority over legislative affairs, including local trades councils," the Congress secretary emphasized.

AFL President William Green had already ordered CIO unions ousted from several Canadian trades councils (Central Labor Councils), the Toronto District Labor Council having received the third or fourth order but recently.

FIGHT SPLIT

In each case the councils in reply have passed resolutions urging the AFL to respect the autonomy of the Trades and Labor Congress and the Canadian labor movement and protesting against any moves to create division in its ranks.

According to the Congress secretary's report the AFL will probably undertake expulsion proceedings against CIO unions through its international affiliates which will order their Canadian locals to withdraw from existing central labor councils.

The Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and the International Association of Machinists have already threatened to withdraw their locals from the Congress. Local reactionary officers of the Musical Protective Association have also threatened withdrawal.

Since the AFL expelled CIO internationals in the United States in 1936, leaders of the Trades and Labor Congress and local unions have managed to maintain a united movement in the dominion with the exception of Hamilton, Ont., despite great pressure from the AFL Executive Council.

However, there is a determined drive by AFL leaders from the United States and some of their representatives here to expel the CIO unions. Since their attempts have proven fruitless in the face of a determined demand for unity it is believed they will try to force withdrawals of their own locals from the Congress and central councils in an effort to weaken them.

If all CIO-affiliated Canadian locals are expelled from the Congress, it will lose over 30,000 members, Mr. Tallon estimated, and that number will offset the gain of 30,000 members reported at the September convention of the Congress in Niagara Falls.

WITHDRAWAL SEEN

In addition, should a split be forced, there are various unions with AFL affiliation which might consider withdrawing in protest against the action.

Mr. Tallon was accompanied to Washington by Vice-Presidents Raoul Trepanier and Percy R. Bengough. They conferred for two days with President William Green and a committee of the AFL executive council.

Chinese Drop Picket Line Around Boat for Japan

SAN FRANCISCO — (FP) — To avoid inconvenience to unions and to prevent closing of the port with repercussions along the entire west coast, Chinese demonstrators have abandoned picketing of the Greek freighter Spyros, loading scrap iron for Japan. Leaders will undertake a nationwide campaign for a Japanese embargo.

Before disbanding the pickets marched past the hall of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, CIO, singing and shouting, "Thanks, longshoremen!"

The union men had refused to cross the Chinese picket lines.

Textile Union Leaders Rap Gorman in Charges

WASHINGTON—Charges of anti-union activity, dual unionism, and violation of contract between the Textile Workers Organizing Committee and the United Textile Workers of America have been filed against Francis Gorman, former member of the TWOC Advisory Council.

The charges were filed with James Starr, Secretary-Treasurer of the United Textile Workers, by George Baldanzi, UTW vice-president, and Frank Benti, vice-president, Dyers' Federation.

Starr announced that he had called a meeting of the Executive Council of the United Textile Workers, of which Gorman was formerly president, in New York for Wednesday, January 4, at which Gorman will be invited to hear the charges against him.

THREE POINTS

Starr also announced that the charges would be based on three main points:

1. Sponsoring dual unionism in attempting to withdraw the UTW from the TWOC, and in announcing his own membership in the AFL.

2. Violation of the UTW constitution in attempting to remove the Vice-President and Secretary-Treasurer from office.

3. Repudiation of the contract between the TWOC and the UTWA, entered into in good faith by the Executive Council of the UTW at the time of signing, and supported whole-heartedly by the UTW since that time.

On the third point, Starr explained tht Gorman had signed this contract himself when the TWOC was formed, that the contract was made on his initiative and that his attempt to violate it now on the pretense that a court decision in Providence, R. I., had set it aside was clear evidence of anti-union activity.

Starr pointed out in addition that the calling of a hearing on the charges against Gorman at which he was invited to be present was in sharp contrast to Gorman's undemocratic action in attempting to dismiss the officers of the UTW without any attempt at a trial.

CIO Textile Union Signs 21 New Pacts

New York — Contracts signed with 21 firms employing 600 persons and three National Labor Relations Board victories were announced this week by Emil Rieve, executive director of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee.

Agreements have been concluded with the Columbus Yarn Company, West New York, N. J., the Long Life Elastic Manufacturing Company, Haverstraw, N. Y., and the Crown Products Company, Philadelphia.

NEW JERSEY PLANTS

In addition, 15 manufacturing companies in the bias binding industry of New York City and three silk weaving companies in Paterson, N. J., signed up with the union. Other new agreements are being negotiated in every section of the country.

The Labor Board victories include the decision by the NLRB that the Western Felt Works, Chicago, must abolish its company union, reinstate 80 workers with back pay and sign an agreement.

Company unions in the Oneita Knitting Mills and the Atlas Underwear Company, Richmond, Ind., were also disestablished.

Unity

Seattle—A substantial step for unity with organized workers regardless of affiliation has just been taken by the CIO Longshoremen and Warehousemen in this city.

They have opened the doors of their union hiring hall, won through bitter struggle in 1934 and again in 1936, to a local of the AFL Teamsters for extra work. Already more than 100 Teamsters have been dispatched from the Longshoremens' hall.

New Homes For Old

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing.

By THOMAS HUMPHRIES

"Why so much fuss about housing?"

It was a young CIO'er speaking. He laughed as he asked the question.

"Of course, we're for a larger housing program. Of course, we want more housing projects. Of course, we have to put our shoulders behind the movement to have Congress increase the USHA program. . . . .

"But isn't that enough? Why must we have housing drummed into our ears so much? Why must we have so many housing pamphlets, housing columns, housing speeches? Why?

In answering this question, there is little need to point out the value of a large-scale housing program to CIO people.

Any CIO'er realizes that more low-rent housing would mean less slums. Everyone knows that more housing means more jobs, that government-subsidized housing should become the foundation of any long-term public works program.

SUPPORT NECESSARY

But what everyone doesn't realize is this: without active, intelligent support of housing in every city and town the odds will be against public housing's developing successfully.

Under the USHA program, housing is entirely a local matter. The government can't just come in and tear down a slum area and replace it with a beautiful new housing project.

Before any slums can be torn down or any projects can be built, there must be a state housing act (as there already are in 33 States) and a local housing authority. These are the first problems that must be faced by the local trade unions.

The CIO stands for a housing enabling act in every State, a housing authority in every city and town, and at least one union man on every housing authority.

Often, to achieve these objectives, a prolonged fight is necessary. In Illinois the labor movement has long been trying to get a workable state housing law—but has not yet suceeded. In Portland, Oregon, in Indianapolis, in Providence, in Richmond, in Wilkes-Barre—to give a few examples—there are still no housing authorities.

In important industrial centers such as New York, Detroit, Birmingham, Toledo and San Francisco, there is no CIO representation on the local housing authorities—as yet.

STAFFS, SURVEYS, SPEED

The authority must also hire a staff to prepare its plans. To do this, it must usually get money from the city—as a gift or a loan. In Scranton, Pa.—to cite one of the worst examples—plans for a $1,000,000 project have gone up in smoke because City Council refused to advance enough money for a small staff.

In many towns housing surveys are necessary. Yet San Francisco's city council is holding up approval of a WPA survey—merely because there isn't yet strong enough public support for such a survey.

In other towns there are other obstacles to cut down the speed of the housing program. In some places the enemies of better housing oppose local housing projects because they would be tax exempt. In some places opposition comes from the banks with heavy investments in the slum areas.

In Los Angeles the city administration has held up a $25,000,000 housing project on the fictitious excuse that it would conflict with a certain clause in the city charter. On occasions such as these it is time for all good union men and true to rally to the cause of slum clearance and better low-rent housing.

Rathborne Re-elected

New York — With reports in from the marine unions, final results of the national referendum conducted by the American Communications Association have been announced by the CIO union.

Complete returns from all divisions of the union showed that the new constitution was ratified by a vote of 3,134 to 886, receiving a substantial majority in each division.

Mervyn Rathborne, who ran unopposed for national president, received 3,822 votes, while Chester H. Jordan won the vice-presidency of the Marine Division over Roy A. Pyle by only one vote.

Resolution 27 in support of "our trade union brothers" in Loyalist Spain was adopted by a vote of 2,118 to 1953.

Total valid votes cast by all divisions numbered 4,366. The ACA is composed of the following divisions: Broadcast, Marine, Point-to-Point Radio, Cable and Aviation, and Telegraph.

UAW GIFTS

Detroit—Some 10,000 copies of Upton Sinclair's book, The Flivver King, a story based on the biography of Henry Ford, were handed out as Christmas presents to Ford workers by the United Automobile Workers, CIO.

Lumber Firm Told to Stop Vigilantes

Washington. — The Red River Lumber Company, $3,500,000 concern operating in Westwood, California, has been ordered by the Labor Board to stop organizing vigilante gangs to break up the union among its employees. The majority of the workers belong to the International Woodworkers of America, CIO.

The Board's order is based on a stipulation under which the company agreed to discourage any "invasions of the civil rights of its employees" or their families on account of union affiliation; to stop hindering membership in the IWA, and to refrain from aiding the AFL Brotherhood of Carpenters.

Under the terms of the stipulation, the company and its agents are directed to stop "urging, persuading or warning" its employes to form any kind of labor organization, to refrain from making a closed shop union contract without majority representation, and to stop contributing "financial or other support" to the local of the Industrial Employes Union, Inc., an outgrowth of the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen.

Fishermen's Council Ratifies Decision To Join CIO

SAN FRANCISCO — The Federated Fishermen's Council, representing 20,000 Pacific coast fishermen, voted almost unanimously at its convention held here to ratify acceptance of a CIO international charter. There was only one dissenting vote.

The new CIO union will be known as the International Fishermen & Allied Workers of America, and will have jurisdiction over all fishermen and workers "engaged in catching, transportation and shore-side and off-shore work in the fish industry with the exception of fish processing."

Jay Jurich of Seattle, was elected president of the Pacific Coast division of the new international, and Martin Olsen, Oakland, Calif., was elected secretary-treasurer.

AFFILIATES JOINED

The two largest affiliates of the former Council, the Alaska Fishermen's Union and the United Fishermen's Union of the Pacific, had previously joined the CIO. The UFU was granted three provisional charters in November 1938, covering the headquarters, the Puget Sound, and the California districts.

The Alaska Fishermen began a referendum on affiliation in March 1938 which was completed in October, with a vote of 1,772 to 929 in favor of the CIO.

League Issues Pamphlet On Wagner Act

Title of the pamphlet is: "Protect the National Labor Relations Act — It Protects You."

Copies are being distributed through League branches and affiliates, or may be ordered from the national office of the League, 1037 Earle Building, Washington, D. C.

Bethlehem Steel's Fake Union Faces Axe After 20-Year Career

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON — A National Labor Relations Board trial examiner's report this week recommended that the Bethlehem Steel Corp., largest and most important of the Little Steel concerns, dissolve its 20-year-old company union and stop interfering with the rights of its 100,000 employes to join a labor union of their own choosing.

The recommendations were made in the form of an intermediate report filed by Trial Examiner Frank Bloom, who had presided at hearings which stretched over a 10-month period.

If the Board upholds his recommendations, all of the corporations involved in the Little Steel strike of 1937 will have been found guilty of violating the Wagner Act. Cases against Inland Steel, Republic Steel and Youngstown Sheet and Tube are already in the courts, following Board decrees ordering dissolution of company unions and an end to opposition to bona fide labor organizations.

The Bethlehem company unions were formed in 1918 and have been maintained ever since at the corporation's plants in Johnstown, Bethlehem, Steelton, Lebanon, Rankin and Leedsdale, Pa.; Lackawanna and Blasdell, New York, and Sparrows Point, Md.

LOWER WAGES

How the company union outfits worked was demonstrated at hearings before the U. S. Department of Labor's Public Contracts Board last summer. At that time Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, pointed out that Bethlehem's wage rates were lower than those of most of its competitors, in some cases almost 10c an hour lower.

The Department of Labor is taking under consideration at the present time demands that it rescind a preliminary order fixing 62½c-an-hour as the minimum pay for work on government contracts. If the ruling, made under the terms of the Walsh-Healey Act, is allowed to stand, Bethlehem's wage bill will be increased by millions.

WENT THROUGH MOTIONS

The Labor Board official maintained in his report that the company had merely gone through the motions of making its fake union seem "independent" after the validation of the Wagner Act by the U. S. Supreme Court.

He noted that Pres. Grace of the corporation referred to the employes' representation setup as "your plan" in an article written for a company house organ early in 1938. But, he showed, in 1933 the company had referred to the company union as "our plant" in a statement which declared that "our plan" is an "integral part of our business."

Amendments to the company union constitution to make it appear as a legal organization were drafted by the companyq's representatives, who had previously been advised by the company's legal staff.

FOUGHT SWOC

The company union was used, Trial Examiner Bloom reported to the Labor Board, "to prevent organizational growth of other unions in their plants." Early in 1937, as the SWOC drive grew, Pres. Grace's letters to the employes were supplanted by the use of posters and "to more direct warn-

Denver AFL Supports Wagner Act

Denver, Colo.—Defying the dictates of AFL reactionary top leaders, the Denver Trades & Labor Assembly, AFL, this week called upon the Colorado congressional delegation to oppose any changes in the act and to resist any curtailment of appropriations for the board.

"The weakening of the act and the impairment of the board's effectiveness will result in great injury to the cause of labor in the United States," the resolution said.

The resolution, introduced by the typographical union and the stagehands' union, praised the National Labor Relations Board for its "full and vigorous protection" of the rights of labor.

Agricultural Union Wins Arizona Poll

Phoenix, Ariz. (FP)— Election of the CIO farm workers' union as the bargaining agent for Salt River valley lettuce shed workers may lead to the hiring hall system in future harvesting seasons, spokesmen for shippers declare.

Salt River valley shippers have joined the Western Growers Protective Association in appealing the ruling of the Labor Board that shed workers come under its regulation. The growers contend they are agricultural workers and therefore not affected.

Demand Grows For Funds to Halt Closing of WPA

WASHINGTON—Indications that the new Congress, which convenes at the Capitol on January 3, will be snowed under with a barrage of demands for an immediate appropriation to prevent the closing of WPA by February 7 were evident here this week.

Response to CIO Pres. John L. Lewis's demand for a million dollar appropriation for work relief funds came from all parts of the nation, from both CIO and AFL unions.

At Toledo CIO unions on WPA projects are planning a mass meeting next week to express their stand on the emergency confronting the nation's workers.

In New Jersey, Labor's Non-Partisan League has advised the state's Congressional delegation of the unions' demands, and League units throughout the state are passing resolutions and forwarding them to the Congressmen.

"Unless we act immediately, there is a distinct danger that the WPA will be abandoned and New Jersey's project workers thrown on the breadlines," Carl Holderman, state chairman of the League warned. "We cannot allow the New Year to bring nothing more than misery and starvation to thousands of unemployed and WPA workers."

TO CONSIDER PLAN

In Washington, Rep. Edward Taylor, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee announced that a deficiency bill will be discussed soon after Congress convenes.

At Cambridge, Mass., 69 leading economists from a score of universities issued a blunt statement that elimination of WPA at this time would "constitute a severe threat to the continuance of the present economic recovery, and might even cause a serious setback in business activity."

THREAT TO RECOVERY

"The expansion of the spending program was the chief governmental weapon used in fighting the recession and stimulating the recovery," they said.

"Furthermore, during those six months, the major channel for the disbursement of new purchasing power has been the WPA, and we believe that WPA should continue to perform this function until private industry clearly demonstrates its capacity to absorb all those released from relief rolls."

Signers of the statement included such authorities as Prof. S. E. Harris of Harvard, Prof. Paul Douglas of the University of Chicago, Prof. Colston E. Warne of Amherst, and Prof. Robert Brooks of Williams.

Labor Board Cites New York Times

Washington. — A complaint against the New York Times based on charges filed by the Newspaper Guild of New York, CIO union, was isued last week by the National Labor Relations Board.

Discrimination against four CIO union members was listed in the Board's complaint which accused the Times of discharging two employes and transferring two others to inferior positions for which they were not qualified by training or experience.

The Board charged that the Times was motivated by the fact that the employes joined and assisted the Newspaper Office Guild of New York, and the Newspaper Guild of New York.

New York CIO Heads Present Legislative Program to Lehman

NEW YORK—A legislative program designed to maintain New York State as a leader in labor and progressive laws was presented last week by Gov. Herbert Lehman by officials of the CIO.

The delegation, headed by Allan S. Haywood, New York CIO director and president of the state industrial union council, represented 430 CIO affiliates with a membership estimated at 700,000.

The governor, who met the delegation in his Park Avenue home here, was urged to press for the enactment of a state wage-hour law providing for a minimum pay rate of 40c an hour and the 40-hour week.

EXTEND LABOR ACT

The State Labor Relations Act, the CIO group said, should be extended to cover the employes of governmental agencies and non-profit institutions, of which the state has a large number.

Other points in the legislative program called for ratification of the child labor amendment, criminal prosecution of wage kickbacks; severance pay; health insurance and a state health program; voting rights for seamen and students; and state aid to small home owners, farmers and small business men.

The Year Ahead

It takes courage to be optimistic on this New Year's Day.

The old year was not a happy one for civilization. 1939 promises to be little more cheerful for the peoples of this troubled world. European dictatorship is extending its boundaries. Military warfare is being carried on in two parts of the globe. Political and economic and propaganda warfare is being conducted almost everywhere we look.

Here in the United States we have escaped many of the troubles which have beset our sister nations. Democracy still continues. Labor still enjoys its rights to organize and to bargain collectively. Political liberties are still respected.

For this, needless to say, organized labor must take a major share of the credit. Under the banner of the CIO, the workers of this country overcame the economic obstacles of a serious depression, maintained their organization and its newly-won benefits, and forged ahead to new gains in industries and regions where labor's rights had previously been contemptuously flouted.

There are those who propose, in times of crisis, that the lamb should lie down with the lion—to be promptly torn to pieces. With these people workers are in violent disagreement.

The way to prevent our going backward is to go forward. The CIO will do precisely that. New workers will be brought into our unions, to enjoy the freedom which organization extends to the exploited. Labor's political forces, as Pres. John L. Lewis announced a week ago, will extend their activities during the coming year. The CIO will launch a vigorous campaign not only to preserve the legislation which labor has finally won after long years of patient effort, but to place new protective statutes on state and federal law books.

Were labor to drop its campaign for the extension of industrial and political democracy, this nation's prospects would indeed be dark.

But labor will not relax its quest for human decency, for security, for the preservation of our time-honored civil liberties. For that reason, the workers of this nation and millions of progressive spirits outside the labor movement, do have the courage to be optimistic on this New Year's Day, 1939.

Labor's League Calls For Fight In 1939-40 To Aid Democracy

WASHINGTON.—"It is self-evident that those who would preserve their liberties must be prepared to fight for them," an editorial entitled, "1939 and 1940," which appeared in the bulletin of Labor's Non-Partisan League, declared this week.

"The universal cry of the people everywhere is for security and democracy," it added. "Men do not wish to exchange one for the other.

"This terrible alternative is now a fact in much of the Old World but it cannot happen here. The usual fate of those who would give up political democracy for economic security is to end by having neither. For America there can be no such Hobson's choice."

RALLY TO LEAGUE PROGRAM

For this purpose—"of assuring for themselves and their children both security and democracy"—millions of voters are uniting to support the League's "common sense program of social action," the editorial said.

"Success of this program in the years 1939 and 1940 will mean a better way of life and a more effective democracy. It looks to a government responsive only to the welfare of the people.

"In this program lies the hope of America's destiny. It is the people's program."

"Freedom Promotes Peace"

(The CIO NEWS herewith presents excerpts from a brilliant speech delivered by Chairman J. Warren Madden of the National Labor Relations Board to the American Political Science Association, meeting in Columbus, Ohio.)

I suppose that most of you who are in or past middle age must have thought, a generation ago, as laymen then thought, that the future evolution of government would be along the lines of the century and a half then past. You must have thought that the experiment in democracy, self-government, and liberty which had found its most eminent exponent in our United States, would gradually extend itself throughout the civilized world. I can recall no important country which did not have a more democratic government in 1914 than it had ever had before.

Today your problem has again become the more vital problem of a century and a half ago, and earlier. The problem is whether human beings are capable of a large measure of self-government, for convenience delegated for the time being to persons selected by themselves; or whether they must, for the sake of physical sustenance and public order, subject themselves to rulers designated by the accident of birth or of superior fanaticism or of an overwhelming desire for power coupled with recklessness in attaining it.

You see absolutism in the seat of power or in the ascendancy in great countries whose peoples seemed, a few years ago, to be as capable of self-government as we are, though not as experienced in its exercise. And we see that these new self-appointed rulers exercise despotism with none of the restraints which hereditary rulers usually imposed upon themselves, because of custom and tradition and the preservation of the composite reputation of a ruling house. Instead you see complete disregard of the accumulated cultures of centuries, shocking physical, mental and economic abuse of racial, religious and political minorities, and contempt for the decent opinion of mankind.

In sum, you see at the end of centuries of evolution and hope, governments which could not possibly be worse, according to the standards of political science and preponderant American opinion.

America's Problem

When the world at large offers such a dark outlook and prospect what of America? Is it still in truth the land of the free? What are its trends and tendencies? Is our democracy solving its problems in a way which gives hope that it can continue to solve them so that the people will not, by reason of misfortune or disgust, turn to some other form of government?

Can our economic system, under the guidance and regulation of government, furnish employment and create and transport commodities to feed, clothe and house the people, leaving the people free to select their own rulers? Or must we, in order that the "trains shall run on time" surrender our freedom in exchange for physical necessities, thinking vaguely that we may again wrest that freedom from the tyrant in some more fortunate future when the supposed efficiency of the tyrant is no longer needed?

To a group of scholars in the field of government, I can speak with equal familiarity only of the governmental enterprise in which I have been engaged for the past three years. That enterprise is based upon the soundly American tenet that freedom promotes peace, in this case industrial peace.

The statute made its entry into a system of law which had developed by accident into a condition which produced for labor the maximum of frustration, resentment and incitation to use economic or physical force to achieve its ends.

Spoon-Fed Reforms

Our government might have taken the view that if workers were underpaid, or were worked too hard or too long or under improper conditions, the government would, by statute or administrative regulation raise wages, reduce hours, and prescribe proper conditions. In this way the material situation of the worker would have been brought up to government standards. The possible perils of some self-determination on the part of the workers as to what those standards should be would have been avoided. The danger that workers, if they were given the freedom to organize, would fall under the spell of irrational or designing leaders who would lead them and the country which was dependent upon them over an economic precipice would have been avoided.

Then there was the danger that labor, even if made free to organize, would not have the power to obtain as much for itself as it could obtain from a friendly government. It is after all, easier to lobby for the bounties of government than to perform the endless, delicate, and difficult task of labor leadership.

This was the choice to be made in a world and time in which the trend was, almost without exception, toward surrendering liberties to gov-

Your WPA Job

By Ralph Hetzel, Jr.
CIO Unemployment Director

Backing For CIO Position

Two most important statements came out last week which confirm the position of President Lewis and the CIO in seeking to prevent cuts on the WPA.

The CIO has steadfastly taken the position that the WPA cuts not only mean serious damage to the unemployed but constitute a threat to recovery.

At the CIO Convention, President Lewis emphatically stated in his Report, "Any serious impairment at this time of relief and unemployment compensation expenditures would cause a very serious reaction on the general economy. Such expenditure, indeed, need to be increased until full production actively withdraws the unemployed from the need of the benefits. To do otherwise is not only inhuman but threatens a further depression."

ECCLES STATEMENT

Last week Chairman Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board vigorously stated this same position in a public letter to Senator Byrd of Virginia. He pointed out that it was foolish to regard relief and public works expenditures as wasteful and that it was wrong to regard the increase in government debt as serious.

Mr. Eccles said, "I believe that the most basic right of all is the right to live and next to that the right to work. I do not think empty stomachs build character nor do I think the substitution of idleness and a dole for useful work relief will improve either the dignity or the character of the people affected.

"We cannot expect to preserve our free institutions in this country if we condemn a substantial proportion of our people to prolonged idleness on a bare subsistence level of existence. . . ."

"The government expenditures which you (Senator Byrd) condemn have in a large part been the means of translating these basic rights into realities. Anyone who is genuinely sincere in his concern about the rights, the dignity, and the character of the individual citizen, far from seeking to tear down what has already been done, will want to have a hand in expanding and improving this work for the future . . ."

". . . I am convinced that if your program of sudden, drastic retrenchment were followed, we would witness another sharp reversal and renewed deflation."

69 ECONOMISTS

And practically the same day 69 economists made public a letter to President Roosevelt in which they said that reduction of the WPA by one-third would involve a reduction of more than fifty million per month in direct wage payments in addition to some thirty million in related expenditures.

"Such a cut in consumer purchasing power would, we believe, constitute a severe threat to the continuance of the present economic recovery, and might even cause a serious setback in business activity," they pointed out.

"The rapid upsurge in business during the past six months has been a source of encouragement to those who believe that the severity of swings in business activity need not be accepted fatalistically but can be successfully counteracted by wise social action.

"Thanks to the vigorous action taken last spring by the Federal Government under your leadership, the recession of 1937 was arrested; and the curve of business and employment turned upward. The expansion of the spending program was the chief governmental weapon used in fighting the recession and stimulating the recovery.

"Furthermore during these six months, the major channel for the disbursement of new purchasing power has been the WPA, and we believe that WPA should continue to perform this function until private industry clearly demonstrates its capacity to absorb all those released from relief rolls.

"We conclude, Mr. President, that the curtailment of the WPA at the present time would be particularly ill-timed from an economic as well as from a humanitarian viewpoint, and we strongly urge that the contemplated policy of curtailment be abandoned."

Amen, and more power to their arm.

The report dealt at length with the 1937 strike, and with the activities of the Citizens' Committee formed in Johnstown.

"There is no doubt but . . . the Citizens' Committee and the Mayor of Johnstown had definitely taken sides against the union in the strike," Bloom said.

SECRET PAYMENTS

Although the company contended that it was not connected in any way with the Citizens' Committee, evidence disclosed that company officials had been active in getting the committee formed, had paid for tear gas, purchased by city police—later entering on their books the moneys expended as "manufacturing costs"—and had paid over in excess of $41,000 to the committee or to Mayor Shields for use in the strike.

The company had endeavored during the hearings to compare its contributions to the Citizens' Committee with contributions frequently made to the Red Cross, flood relief and other similar funds.

The trial examiner, however, asserted that "there can be no comparison between contributions to charitable or semi-charitable organizations and other groups which receive widespread publicity, and handing over large sums of money in cash to organizations and individuals whose purpose was to break the strike then being participated in by respondent's (the company's) employes."

CIO Farm Stand Backed by Crop Statistics

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON—Full confirmation of the need for the CIO farm program passed at the Pittsburgh convention is seen in a study of U. S. farm incomes released by Farm Research, Inc., Washington agency of the Farmers Union.

The figures show an appalling spread in the rewards of a year's work in preparing and harvesting the nation's crops, with the large incomes going to the top fraction of the farmers and sub-standard earnings going to the great majority. Here are some of the figures:

The average farmer, representing 55 per cent of the total, gets less than $1,000 a year to feed and clothe and shelter hemself and his family.

Less than 200,000 of the nation's 7,000,000 farm families get up to $2,250 a year—which is about the level set by the U. S. Government as minimum for a decent standard of living for an American family.

ECONOMICALLY NOTHING

Down at the bottom of the ladder are 300,000 farm families who get less than $250 for a year's living—less than two-tenths of one per cent of the total farm income of the U. S..

It is these American people especially that John L. Lewis, president of the CIO, described as "economically nothing." Speaking at a conference of CIO leaders, he declared:

"Economically, socially, and politically they are nothing. Yet they are human beings and they are citizens.

"It is for the labor movement to demand a participation by these people in the bounties and blessings, material and otherwise, of our country—which are ample for the provision and participation of all.

"It is for labor here in our country to take up the task of representing these Americans."

A DOWNWARD SPIRAL

These figures on farm income are not just for the working farmer himself. They show the way the entire family, women and children as well as the head of the house, are repaid for a year of feeding America — and enriching the commission merchants and the financial captains who control farm marketing and prices.

They show more than a low standard of living. They show the working farmer caught in a constantly downward social and economic spiral. They show that only the top minority of rich farmers, who own the corporation farms and the big fruit farms, the large scale plantations, get the big returns for their work and their investment.

They show that nine per cent of the farmers in the U. S. get over one-third of the farm income earned in the entire nation. Ninety-one per cent divide the rest.

THE CIO WAY OUT

This is why the CIO, following its policy of representing the needs and aspirations of all the American people, set up a program at its convention that would end such conditions.

Under this program, all working farmers would be guaranteed:

Cost of production prices.

Extension of the benefits of all state and Federal social and protective legislation.

Purchase by the Federal government of surplus commodities for the use of the unemployed and the needy.

In the words of the resolution containing this program, the CIO recognizes that " farmers are entitled to their full share in the national income, and that industrial workers and farmers must unite for legislation protecting their mutual interests."

It would end the spread between starvation and near starvation for the majority of the nation's working farmers, and high incomes for the top minority and the Wall Street manipulators who skim the cream and the milk and practically everything else off the national farm earnings.

The Democratic Way

The proposal of Senator Wagner and his associates was directly counter to this trend. They proposed that the millions of American workers who would come within the protection of the Act should be trusted to determine for themselves and through their own chosen leaders what they wanted in the way of terms of employment, and to bargain rationally with their employers about those terms. They saw nothing in the history of American workmen and their leaders to indicate that they could not be so trusted. They saw in that history courage, patience, self-reliance, and self-restraint in the face of impossible and irrational legal impediments. They also saw some racketeering and other criminality, but probably in a proportion as small as in any other element of our population.

They proposed to create a new liberty in a world where the old liberties were being taken away. They proposed to have instead of more government, more liberty. The Congress and the President concurred with these proposals and the National Labor Relations Act was passed.

This new liberty has a significance comparable to the ancient liberties which achieved recognition in time to be written into the Bills of Rights of our Constitutions. A liberty to emerge from a condition of economic helplessness, and dependence upon the will of another, to a status of having one's chosen representative received as an equal at the bargaining conference table must be recognized as fundamental.

Indeed, the constitutional liberties of freedom of speech, press, and assembly, could not, in their aspects most important to working people, be enjoyed until this new liberty was created. These constitutional guarantees, operate only to prevent infringement by governments, and leave individuals and corporations free to prevent the exercise of these rights.

If a workman became interested in a union and spoke to his fellow worker urging him to join, and was discharged for "agitating" he wondered what the constitutional guarantee of freedom of speech was worth, when the exercise of the constitutional right could cost him his living. If a union organizer stood on the street at the gate of an industrial plant to distribute leaflets containing arguments for joining the union, and the workers refused to accept and read the arguments because they knew they were being watched and that anyone who took a leaflet would be discharged, he wondered what the guaranty of freedom of the press really guaranteed. Likewise, if spies were set upon union meetings to report what employes were there so that they might be penalized, there was no freedom of assembly in any true sense, in spite of the words of the constitutions.

The constitutions in their time forbade the infringements which they constituted a social evil, and limited their restrictions to governments, because governments were the offenders. Surely there is no more reason why private enterprises should be privileged to prevent freedom of speech and effective publication and assembly than why the government itself should be so privileged. And the employer's drastic penalty of discharge is a much more potent preventive than the penalties which the government would impose.

In most sections of the country, most employers are now obeying the law.

As a result of vigorous organization campaigns and under the protection of the Act the two great labor organizations claim about eight million members, as against less than three million in 1934.

Freedom of speech, press and assembly, are enjoyed in greater degree and in more communities in America than ever before. This has resulted almost entirely from the insistence by workers and the government that the new liberty of unionization be respected.

Through union meetings and workers education programs set up by unions and their sympathizers millions of Americans are receiving an education and experience in the principles and practices of self-government which seems to me to be more valuable to the country than any other type of adult education.

Self-Government

They there discuss their problems, commend or criticize their leaders, learn what it is practicable to ask for, and why compromise is often necessary. Their education in self-government is carried on under the most realistic conditions, since they are participating in the solution of their own most vital problems.

In my opinion, these workers are becoming one of the most intelligent and stable forces in American society, and if the test comes as to whether we can preserve our form of government, it will not be they who will be first misled by the demagogue.

These gains which I have recited seem to me to be substantial and important in themselves, but their chief importance lies in their demonstration that a government may obtain spiritual and material advantages for its people by creating a new liberty, even in a world which treats old liberties with cynicism and contempt.

Brophy Asks Aid For Hearst Strikers

Calls Upon Unions To Send Protests To Management

WASHINGTON—Full CIO aid for Newspaper Guild strikers in the Chicago province of William Randolph Hearst's empire was urged by John Brophy, national director, in a circular letter to all CIO affiliates and Councils.

Brophy's letter, after detailing the 18 months of constant violation of a collective bargaining contract by Hearst's two papers, the Chicago "Herald-Examiner" and the "American" that caused the strike, reminded CIO members of the resolution passed at the Pittsburgh convention on the subject of Hearst.

The resolution said in part: "In a nationwide attack on the rights of organization, Hearst agents have resorted to brazen sponsorship of company unions, instigation of fake jurisdictional disputes, unfounded criminal accusations, discriminatory discharges and other unlawful activities, and Hearst attorneys have left no trick untried to delay and prevent collective bargaining.

"It is vitally important to the interests of all organized labor that this powerful anti-labor employer be compelled to abandon his campaign of trouble-making, oppression and terrorization, to recognize the legal rights of his employes and to deal with them in good faith according to the law of the land."

Brophy urged CIO affiliates to send protests to Joseph V. Connolly, General Manager of Hearst Newspapers, 57th St. and 8th Ave., New York, to protest to merchants advertising in the Hearst chain, and to send expressions of support to the strikers in care of the American Newspaper Guild, 1560 Broadway, N. Y.

Chicago Hearst Papers Lose 165,000 Readers As Strike Continues

By GEORGE B. FRITZ

CHICAGO—William Randolph Hearst's two Chicago papers were in bad shape this week as the strike of 600 members of the Chicago Newspaper Guild went into its fourth week. Circulation is off 165,000, and 175 advertisers are pledged not to buy space until the strike is settled.

The strike was called Dec. 5 after the morning Herald and Examiner and the evening American had violated their contracts with the Guild on 87 counts, and had fired 500 employes during the past 18 months.

At a conference Dec. 18 Hearst executives turned the strike into a lockout by declaring their refusal to bargain collectively, and announcing that any striker whose job had been filled by a scab would not be rehired.

UNIONS BACK STRIKE

Full support of CIO, AFL and railroad brotherhoods was pledged at a mass meeting Dec. 23, where Heywood Broun, president of the American Newspaper Guild, was chief speaker.

Nearly $1,200 was raised for the Guild, including a $500 contribution from the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. The meeting was sponsored by a citizen's committee organized to raise $25,000 for the strike fund.

Over 200 persons marched in a mass picket line Christmas Eve. A few days before a three hour auto parade was staged.

No attempt has been made by the Hearst management to negotiate.

Hearst Tactics

Hearst's "Gray Terror" Nightrides As In Days Of Yore

By HARRY READ
Chairman Hearst Unit,
Chicago Newspaper Guild

Chicago. — The "Gray Terror" is nightriding the streets again after an absence of thirty years. The Hearst payroll pays it; the Hearst legal staff defends it; the Hearst influence intimidates policemen, judges and prosecutors who might interfere—just as of yore.

The loaded rubber hose flails, brass knuckles and crank handles rip open scalps, brickbats are thundered against doors of homes occupied at the moment only by women and children.

What, a new circulation war between gentlemen who brag of their earlier football sportsmanship? Not at all! This time the "Gray Terror" is out to break a strike—a Newspaper Guild strike.

Thirty years back the victims were inoffensive and defenseless corner newsstand owners or ragged little newspaper boys. Now they are workmen — Hearst employees who struck in protest over sabotage of their wages, working conditions, and the legal right to organize for purposes of collective bargaining.

CHICAGO METHODS

To understand the situation, one must remember the acquired Chicago psychology that accepts calmly settlement by clubs or gunfire of any and all disputes. Mayors and state's attorneys glow with virtuous wrath when newspapers of other towns hint that Chicago is lawless and gang-ridden. Their novel theory of choking off adverse comment by lying about the subject matter is just another Chicago phenomenon.

It ignores the undeniable fact that twenty men have been tried, condemned and executed by gang gunfire in the Chicago area during this present year of 1938—and nobody is even being sought for the murders! The statistics make Chicagoans yawn and piously express the hope that they won't be next.

It should be of interest, however, to the general public of America that fifteen of the victims can be classified vaguely as gangsters, two as business men, and three as officials or leaders in the AFL locals.

ORIGIN OF GANGS

The breakdown reveals that these murders and the Hearst thugs who now nightride the streets are off the same piece with Hearst's "Gray Terror" of thirty years back. Ask any veteran policeman how the gangs came to rule Chicago.

"Why," he will say, "it all started when Hearst came to Chicago (in 1900) and started his papers. The newspaper sluggers working for Hearst were the first gangsters."

When William Randolph Hearst arrived in Chicago and launched the American on July 4, 1900, the publishers of other papers greeted him neither with band nor banquet. By way of helping him out, corner newsstand owners and newspaper boys were told that anyone selling the American, or its later morning sister, the Examiner, would not be permitted to sell the already established newspapers.

COLLECTED THUGS

Hearst's executives met the challenge with an unprecedented stroke of strategy. Scouts rounded up the city's toughest fistic mugs and put them on the payroll at $5 a day each as super-salesmen. High on the long list were the names of Maurice "Mossy" Enright, William "Dutch" Gentleman, Vincent Altman, "Big Tim" Murphy, Walter Stephens, Dean O'Banion and Gene Geary. All of these but O'Banion were recruited from the Stockyards District.

Their instructions were to see that established street dealers, men or boys, handled Hearst newspapers. Demurs were overruled with fractured skulls, broken jaws and arms, shattered legs and ribs, many of the victims being old men or mere schoolboys. So efficacious was the method that many Chicago residents can recall having to argue for the other paper they preferred to read.

IMPROVED TOOLS

In the initial clashes between the goon squads only fists were used, but why should these gentry wear out their hands? Brass knuckles, lead pipe, baseball bats, knives and guns were quickly called into play. The police limited their interest in the incidents to ambulance service for the maimed. The state's attorney did nothing at all. The apathy born of that first decade's lawlessness stamped the pattern for present day officialdom to look on complacently at twenty 1938 murders.

BRANCHED OUT

The Hearstlings, known as the "Gray Terror", more than held their own. As could have been expected they and their fellow mercenaries began doing part time work for other employers or working on their own account. The branching out constituted a personal threat to the publishers, and so, after eight years of terrorism, it was decided to call everything even and dump the goon squads.

To effect this hazardous aim State's Attorney John E. Wayman was called in. The police began making arrests. Three stars in the Hearst outfit, Gentleman, Enright and Stevens were astonished when they were jailed on March 11, 1910, for shooting a man named Edward Mullen in the right leg, apparently for fun. Informed that the good old days were gone and knowing nothing about the deal between the publishers and Wayman, the three agreed to "resign".

The grand jury, of course, found that Mullen had been properly shot, because a no-bill was voted. The publishers did not fire all the goons at once; they let go of the bear's tail a hair or two at a time. A few were kept on the payroll to handle new problems that might arise.

1938 GOON-ISM

Small wonder that officialdom does nothing about the revival of the Hearst "Gray Terror" in the present Guild strike. A few strikers may be crippled and maimed, some may even be murdered. So what? You can't fight the newspapers, you know.

At midnight, December 15, 1938 Mrs. A. K. Fisher, wife of a leader among the striking Hearst branch managers, hysterically telephoned strike headquarters. There was, she said, a gang of goons parked in an automobile in front of her modest home. They had come to the door with a demand to see her husband.

Mr. Fisher was not at home, but his wife thought to protect him, herself and their baby son by saying he was asleep. The thugs tried to force their way inside but the safety chain held. After a parley in their automobile they whiled away the time by hurling brickbats at the door. Inside Mrs. Fisher clutched her baby in terror and telephoned the police.

NO RESULTS

Chicago boasts that the average length of time it takes for police to reach a scene of crime is under two minutes. Something must have gone wrong that night because two calls in forty minutes brought no results.

Mrs. Fisher then called strike headquarters. A demand by Guild President Harry Wohl on Chief of the Uniformed Force John Prendergast at his home, re-established radio efficiency. Three squads seized the goons — with a number of brickbats ready to hand.

One of the first callers on the goons in jail was Attorney Nissen Gross of the Hearst legal staff. At their arraignment for "disorderly conduct" a Hearst executive appeared to ask a continuance. Now the case has been sent to the jury branch for trial late in January.

There have been other instances where Guildsmen have been halted on the street by sluggers and beaten. Company executives whose mealy mouthings about the "one big happy family" carry one back to the "guaranteed" value of the Hearst preferred stock, have stood by and witnesed these atrocities. And so does '38 assume the pattern of '08.

Cleveland Labor Wins City Poll

Cleveland.—Progressive forces in this city won a smashing victory over the utility interests when results of a special city election showed a majority of the voters had supported authorization of a $3,000,000 bond issue to expand the city-owned electric light plant.

Led by Labor's Non-Partisan League and with the cooperation of CIO and AFL unions and the railway brotherhoods, the supporters of the measure polled 88,575 votes, against only 35,113 cast by its opponents.

Victory climaxed a two-year campaign of the labor and liberal forces on behalf of an enlarged plant. The existing private utilities put on a heavily financed drive against the proposal.

Labor and the Law

By Lee Pressman

CIO General Counsel

The AFL's New Tactics

The tactics of the AFL executive council with respect to the National Labor Relations Act seem to be based on attempts to bluster and threaten the Board into making all of its decisions in favor of the AFL without regard to the law or to the welfare of the labor movement. Perhaps the AFL executive council has learned its tactics from recent international events.

That blustering and threats form the basis of AFL tactics is borne out by comparison of the desired amendments to the Wagner Act announced by the executive council at the October convention of the AFL and those just put forward by William Green. At the convention, the AFL executive council recommended the following amendments:

1) compulsory craft unit in all elections

2) the curtailment of the power of the Board to invalidate any contract

3) requirement of notice to every interested party in a Labor Board case

4) the right of any interested party to intervene in a Labor Board case

5) rigid control of Labor Board trial examiners and giving employers the privilege of filing affidavits of prejudice against trial examiners

6) permission for employers to secure subpoenas requiring production of union records

7) requirement of the Board to make all its files public

8) requirement of the Board to conduct all elections within 30 days of the filing of the petition

9) requirement of the Board to decide all cases within 45 days after the close of the hearing.

In addition, at the conv ntion the AFL executive council gave serious consideration to the proposals that the courts be given the power to upset the findings of fact made by the Board, and to deprive the Board of its judicial powers.

NEW PROGRAM

The AFL now announces that it will only press for two amendments to the Act: a compulsory craft unit in all elections, and the curtailment of the power of the Board to invalidate contracts which the AFL may make with employers.

In view of the AFL change in policy, it is unnecessary to discuss the amendments which it proposed at its convention. In eliminating nine of its original proposals for amending the Act, the AFL has shown that all of its agitation for amendments to the Act were merely attempts to intimidate the Labor Board.

The fact, however, remains that the two proposals upon which the AFL executive council still insists are completely unjustified and extremely dangerous.

The demand for compulsory craft units in all elections is a typical dog in the manger claim. As is pointed out in the CIO pamphlet on "Why the Wagner Act Should NOT Be Amended," the AFL has no basis for its claim that the Board is prejudiced against the AFL and favorable to the CIO in such cases.

NO BASIS

The figures prove that the Board has given craft elections to the AFL whenever an AFL craft unit could make any showing at all in support of its claim, even though the result was to destroy the strength of the workers in an industrial plant.

The second proposed amendment of the AFL which would prevent the Board from outlawing illegal and dishonest contracts is the kind of amendment which reactionary employers would like to see put into law.

These employers know that if they are able to enter into contracts with a union which does not represent a majority of the employes in a plant, or with a union whose membership has been secured through the coercion of the employer, they will have an easy way of evading the labor law.

Thus, the AFL executive council policy in favor of amendments to the Wagner Act still represents a serious danger to the welfare of organized labor in this country, although the contrast between the extraordinary demands made by the AFL at its convention and its present policy shows that its entire policy is mainly composed of blustering and threats.

Perhaps this change may be accounted for by the fact that the rank and file of AFL membership are letting the reactionary and unscrupulous members of the AFL executive council know that they cannot get away with their attempt to destroy the Wagner Act.

New England Unions Plan Education Confab

New York.—New England unions and allied organizations will hold a regional conference on workers' education January 7-8 in Boston at the Pioneer, 410 Stuart St., under the auspices of the Affiliated Schools for Workers.

The conference will take up the practical problems connected with setting up and carrying out educational and recreational programs for union members. Reports will also be made on programs now being conducted in various parts of New England.

Thomas Flavell, business agent for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, will be chairman of the opening meeting. Practical demonstrations of the part that labor drama, music and dancing can play in making the union meeting attractive will be offered at the evening program. It will include music by the ACW orchestra, singing by the chorus of the International Ladies Garment Workers, colored movies of the Bryn Mawr Summer School, labor skits and dancing.

BACK STRIKE

Kenosha, Wis.—(FP) — The Kenosha Trades & Labor Council, AFL, has put the two Chicago Hearst dailies on its unfair list for the duration of the strike being conducted by the American Newspaper Guild, CIO.

TO MEET

Rockford, Ill.—(FP)—The United Furniture Workers will open their first national convention in Rockford, February 8.

Appointed

Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, director of women's and professional activities of the WPA, whom Pres. Roosevelt has named to a position on the Social Security Board.

Kennedy, Quill, Brophy to Speak For Guild Strikers

WILKES-BARRE, Pa.—Pennsylvania's Lieutenant-governor, Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, Michael Quill, New York City councilman and head of the Transport Workers Union, and John Brophy, director of the CIO, will be chief speakers at the Newspaper Guild's mass rally here January 9, planned in conjunction with the local CIO council.

These three leading CIO figures, together with Michael J. Kosik, president District 1, UMWA, and John Kmetz, international board member and a bevy of local AFL leaders are expected to lead the mass attack against Wilkes-Barre's three reactionary daily publishers, who, for over 90 days now, have refused to sit down and sign a contract with their employes to end the strike called October 1 for a full Guild contract.

The AFL Office Workers' "Union," composed of a group of "stooges" on the three dailies seeking to wrest away the Guild's contract-given sole collective bargaining right, received another jolt during the week as the NLRB set back a hearing on its petition from December 28th to January 12th.

CONDEMNED AS SCABS

This group, condemned as a "strike-breaking" agency by the AFL Central Labor Union here—which endorsed the Guild's stand—seeks an election in an attempt to become the bargaining agent of all white-collar employes in the local newspaper field.

Filled with part-time workers, mailing room employes, and others ineligible for Guild membership, and fostered by top AFL leaders who seek a foothold in the heart of CIO UMWA territory for their own nefarious purposes, Guild, mine union and other CIO leaders mapped a campaign during the week to smash their "union-busting" attempts.

A "truce" between striking "Times-Leader" Guildsmen and their publisher, Col. E. G. Smith, was called over the Christmas holidays, as the Guildsmen accepted Smith's bid to the annual Christmas party Saturday. But starting Monday, the "war" towards the immediate objective—a Guild contract—was resumed and T-L unionists led the way.

TO GAIN SUPPORT

The Guild's rally on January 9, though called to bring to the public the truth in the Guild's 13-week-old fight for a union contract, will also be the start of a move to unite support back of the Wagner Labor Relations Act against its reactionary enemies.

With all four papers closed tight since October 3rd, Wyoming Valley's 450,000 people continued to depend on the Guild's nightly broadcast for local news events and metropolitan newspapers for national and foreign news.

Birmingham CIO Director Nips Tory Smear Campaign

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—The lengths to which enemies of labor will go to discredit the CIO is illustrated by an attempt made by a local group here to smear the reputation of Yelverton Cowherd, attorney and CIO regional director in Alabama.

The "Birmingham News" carried a story several weeks ago to the effect that the CIO had been deliberately omitted from the list of organizations invited to take part in a public meeting sponsored by the Alabama Women's Democratic Club because Cowherd had been indicted in Etowah county for bribery of a man named Troy Higdon to murder four peace officers.

According to the story in the News, the accusation was made in the form of a resolution which also attacked William Mitch, district president of the United Mine Workers, regional director for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, and president of the CIO Alabama Industrial Union Council, for participating in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

The resolution charged that racial equality for Negroes and whites was advocated by the Welfare conference.

ADMIT ERROR

Two days later, the News ran another story to "clarify the erroneous impression" conveyed in the earlier story, under the headline "Cowherd cleared in Etowah case," which included a statement from the CIO regional director, proving that the charges against him were utterly without foundation, and that the indictment against him had been withdrawn. He quoted the court rewards in full to verify his claim.

Cowherd demanded in his statement that "this matter be fully explained to nullify the libelous inference against my character contained in your said article of Dec. 5, attributed to five ladies in their effort to find some justification in the eyes of the public for failure to invite the largest labor organization in Alabama to a conference which they stated was being held for patriotic purposes."

FRAME-UP TRY

The charges of bribery to commit murder, Cowherd explained, originated in a case framed against him in 1936, during a reign of terror instigated by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, in Gadsden, Ala., against the United Rubber Workers. After a mob had broken down the office door of the CIO union, Cowherd was retained by the union, he said, "to bring the offenders to the bar of justice."

A complaint of unfair labor practices was filed with the National Labor Relations Board, and beginning in August, 1937, hearings were held for more than three months, during which many damaging facts were brought out against the Goodyear Company. Part of the testimony involved charges against the four "peace officers" named in the quashed indictment against Cowherd.

All during the hearing, anti-labor groups inspired by the company aroused such antagonism against Attorney Cowherd that he was in constant danger of violence. On orders from Washington, a United States marshal was assigned to protect him. The marshal guarded him constantly, remaining at his side on all trips to and from the hearing.

It was during this time that the Troy Higden mentioned in the indictment, and two others appeared before the Grand Jury and framed up the charge that Cowherd had bribed them to murder the four "peace officers."

Quoting from court records, Cowherd showed in his statement that Higden had a criminal record, having been sentenced to serve one to two years in the penitentiary for grand larceny in October, 1927.

The indictment returned against Cowherd in September, 1937, was never pressed, but remained on the records for more than a year. It was finally quashed October 24, 1938, but only after the repeated insistence of Cowherd that he either be brought to trial at once, or the case dismissed.

CIO Runs Party For Needy Kids

New Castle, Pa. — Scores of children in this city received Christmas gifts and candy when the local CIO unions and the Committee of Unemployed Organizations staged a holiday party.

Mayor Charles E. McGrath was on hand to lend his help and to speak to the children. Toys were collected and repaired by local CIO members and then turned over to children of the needy.

CIO Wins Poll At RCA Firm

New York—The American Communications Ass'n. emerged an easy victor from a Labor Board poll held among the 1,300 employes of RCA Communications.

The ACA received 748 votes, compared to a total of only 449 received by a so-called independent union.

Winning of the poll, Pres. Mervyn Rathborne of ACA announced, left the union ready to resume discussions for a new contract, parleys on which were postponed until the NLRB had conducted its vote.

Oil Union Protests Use Of National Guard In Tulsa Strike

By KENNETH GODDARD

TULSA, Okla. (FP)—Embattled members of the International Oil Workers Union have laid their case against the Mid-Continent Petroleum Corp. before Dwight Blackmore, National Labor Relations Board representative here.

Six hundred unionists, about 60 per cent of the corporation's refinery workers in the Tulsa area, charged, in a statement issued by President Jack N. Hays of the local, that Gov. E. W. Marland was using the National Guard, called out Christmas eve, as a strikebreaking agency.

A formal charge accusing the Mid-Continent firm of refusing to bargain collectively was lodged with the NLRB. Chief issue in the strike is union recognition.

Seeking a settlement, Marland, a former oil operator, came here to listen to reports from his personal labor representative, from the state labor commissioner, and from Col. Charles A. Holden, in charge of the 250 militiamen.

RAP POVERTY PLEA

Hays said Mid-Continent was misrepresenting facts to the public and pleading poverty in order to evade the Wagner Act. Newspapers generally have pictured the walkout as a result of wage demands and J. C. Denton, corporation official, has sought to continue the impression with the assertion that the union's demands would cripple the company.

Actually, the only wage question affects 20 employes in the refinery's water department and test laboratories. The union is seeking recognition, the checkoff system and vacations with pay.

"The money it is costing to keep those guards here is a lot more than what the wage adjustments would come to," he said.

The Labor Board official is seeking to persuade company executives to meet with John Coulter, international vice-president of the oil union, whose headquarters are at Fort Worth, Tex.

SOUP KITCHENS

As the strike continued, determined oil field unionists and CIO affiliates fought cold and the guardsmen. A steady stream of warmed and fed pickets poured from a shelter kitchen near the picket line thrown around the refinery fence and gates, an area of 1000 acres.

Unionists charged some of the men who passed through guard lines were being held prisoners. A few escaped the refinery by swimming the Arkansas river and later signing CIO cards.

Under Fire

Gov. E. W. Marland of Oklahoma, former oil company president, who has been accused by oil union members of using the national guard for strikebreaking purposes in a labor dispute at Tulsa.

Students Hear CIO Speakers

New York. — More than 1,000 delegates to the fourth convention of the American Students Union here heard James B. Carey, secretary of the CIO, Ralph Hetzel, secretary to President Lewis, and A. A. Hartwell of Labor's Non-Partisan League discuss the relations of American youth to the trade union movement today.

Carey's brief speech stressed the importance to labor of the present school system, since future members of organized labor are trained in it.

"Schools prepare the future members of organized labor and will determine in the future whether or not we will have a labor movement and whether or not we will have a progressive labor movement, " he said.

LABOR AND PROFESSIONS

Speaking at a panel discussion on youth and the professions, Ralph Hetzel told his listeners that organized labor was interested in professional training for two main reasons.

First, he pointed out, labor is anxious to organize professional workers as it is anxious to organize all wage earners. On this point, he cited the successes of CIO unions in professional fields, including the United Office and Professional Workers, the Newspaper Guild, the Federation of Architects and Engineers, and others.

NEED FOR SERVICE

Second, Hetzel discussed labor's need for the services that professional workers have to offer, explaining that simply because workers cannot afford to hire doctors and dentists and other professional workers as much as they need them, the professions today are in a severe depression.

A. A. Hartwell, speaking for Labor's Non-Partisan League, declared that the political aims of youth and labor are "inseparable," and that they must meet common problems with a common approach.

Mooney Hopes for 25 More Years To Serve Labor

SAN QUENTIN, Calif.—Tom Mooney expects to live another 25 years after he gets out of prison early this month—and to devote all of them to the service of labor.

The veteran labor prisoner, having spent almost a quarter century in jail for the crime of being a militant labor leader in once open-shop California, is not interested in any of the numerous offers to commercialize his case that have been made to him.

"The commercial side of this never did and never will appeal to me," Mooney said. "A man doesn't spend years in prison for a principle, and then try to cash in on it when he is freed.

"I have had offers to do books, magazine articles and motion pictures and to make personal appearances, and I have turned them all down and will continue to do so."

WILL WORK FOR UNITY

Mooney added that he will work for unity within labor ranks, on a progressive basis.

"My long range work after I get out of prison," he said, "will be to seek unity for the labor movement—a progressive unity that looks to the future instead of the past."

California's newly elected liberal Governor, Cuthbert L. Olson, has indicated that he will hold pardon hearings as soon as he gets into office, and that a full pardon will result.

Utility Pays and Pays

Consolidated Edison Co. of New York, defeated in its fight against the Wagner Act by a decision of the U. S. Supreme Court, was forced to pay out $13,000 in back wages for six members of the Utility Workers Organizing Committee, who had been fired for union activity. Some $8,000 more is to be paid to the men.

Woodworkers Hold Picket Lines, Defy Thugs, State Cops

BELLINGHAM, Wash.—Picket lines at the Bloedel-Donovan mills here are holding firm in spite of every effort by company thugs, the local mayor, and the state cops, sent in by labor-hating Governor Clarence D. Martin.

The workers are on strike against an attempted wage cut and vicious use of scabs and goon squads in a company drive to break the two CIO unions involved, locals of the International Woodworkers Association and the International Longshoremens and Warehousemens Union.

WIDE LABOR SUPPORT

Support for the Bloedel-Donovan workers has come from the AFL in the shape of an agreement signed between the IWA and the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners. This agreement removes all possibility of jurisdictional disputes, which the company has previously exploited to its own advantage.

"On behalf of the CIO I protest the use of state police in an attempt to break the strike of IWA locals at Bellingham," Brophy said. "The state government should not lend itself in any way to undermining union wages and working conditions by supporting back-to-work vigilante movements.

"May I request that you urge the Bloedel-Donovan Company to accept the IWA proposal for peace."

Unionists Aid Crippled Girl

Milwaukee, Wis. — Tobacco coupons collected by CIO union members all over the country and redeemed for cash, paid for an artificial leg presented to 11-year-old Dorothy Hess by George B. Kiebler, president of District 1, Council of the United Automobile Workers.

Dorothy, daughter of Captain Erwin Hess of the suburban Whitefish Bay Fire Department, lost her right leg last May when it had to be amputated following an unsuccessful four-year fight against a bone infection.

Kiebler said that about 11,000 coupons which have been sent in since, will be saved until enough are received to pay for an artificial limb for some other sufferer.

CIO URGES UNIONS DEMAND BILLION DOLLARS FOR WPA

Demand Nazis Free American Seaman Seized on Ship

WASHINGTON — The National Maritime Union will throw its full weight into the demand for the release of George Roth, American seaman, who was seized by the Nazi secret police while on board the S. S. Washington, in port at Hamburg, Germany.

According to the NMU and the crew of the Washington, Roth was forcibly taken from the ship and put in a Nazi prison last November 29. No explanation was given by the Gestapo agents at the time, though later the charge was made that Roth possessed what they called "communistic literature". The Chief Officer of the ship made no attempt to prevent the arrest, or to ask why it was made.

FILED PROTEST

An immediate protest was filed by the crew of the S. S. Washington, and the U. S. Consul in Hamburg was urged to investigate. The Consul refused to do this, whereupon the NMU presented the case to the U. S. State Department in Washington.

The State Department has assured the NMU that "the representatives of the Department at Berlin and Hamburg will continue to follow the case closely and to extend to this American seaman all appropriate assistance and protection and will take all proper steps to safeguard his legal rights."

The NMU has sent a circular to all local unions calling attention to the case, and warning that Roth may be tried by the notorious Nazi "People's Court" early in January.

"Tell Your Congressman," Members Are Asked

(See Story Page Three)

WASHINGTON—All organizations affiliated with the CIO were this week urged to tell their Congressmen to vote for a billion-dollar WPA appropriation immediately.

Unless the money is appropriated in the next two weeks, WPA projects will commence to close down on January 26, and all WPA work will be terminated by February 7.

The CIO has taken the position that any amount less than a billion dollars will fail to fit WPA's minimum needs, will endanger the entire recovery program and will lead to intense human distress during the next few months.

Pres. Lewis of the CIO made the call for the billion-dollar appropriation immediately after announcement of the dwindling of the WPA funds a few weeks ago.

In an open letter to Congress, Ralph Hetzel, Jr., CIO unemployment director, this week warned that cities and states are unable to handle the huge relief burden, and pointed out that a reduction in WPA spending would be a serious blow to the nation, both to workers and jobless alike. (See Page 5.)

Letters to Representatives should be addressed to them at the House Office Building, Washington, D. C., while communications to Senators should be sent to the Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

Labor Board Again Raps Girdler

Washington—Cracking down on the Republic Steel Corporation for the second time in recent weeks, the National Labor Relations Board has ordered Tom Girdler's concern to stop its unfair labor practices at the Beaver Falls, Pa., plant of its subsidiary, the Union Drawn Steel Company.

The company was also ordered to reinstate with back pay two employes refused employment after the May 1937 strike, in order to discourage membership in the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

HELPED FAKE UNION

Tracing the recent history of anti-union activity at the Beaver Falls plant, the Board brought out that four company unions had been fostered at various times since the National Labor Relations Act was passed, in attempts to prevent employes from belonging to a genuine trade union.

Other efforts to defeat unionization by the CIO, included the distribution of pamphlets among the employes calling the SWOC, among other things, "communistic" and fascistic".

Republic Steel claimed that it was not responsible for the unfair labor practices at the Beaver Falls plant, as the subsidiary was a separate corporation. The Board disproved this by showing that Republic had stationed its sergeant of police at the plant, and that it had furnished its subsidiary with anti-SWOC pamphlets, a supply of tear gas, and some 25 guards used to defeat organization by the SWOC.

Office Workers Sign With Bank

Chicago — A contract covering 50 bank clerks, tellers, bookkeepers and stenographers was signed here between Local 24, United Office & Professional Workers and the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank.

The contract, which is the third yearly agreement negotiated with the Amalgamated, provides for 6 per cent pay increases, amounting to at least five dollars a month for practically every employe. Tellers and certain others receive ten dollar raises.

Clauses in the previous contract guaranteeing a closed shop, job security, arbitration, and the 40-hour week were renewed in the new agreement.

15,000 Vote In Poll At 'Postal'

New York—One of the largest elections ever conducted by the Natl. Labor Relations Board is being held among more than 15,000 of the 17,000 employes of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., land line system.

At the poll which began Dec. 19, employes are voting on the question of whether or not they wish to be represented by the American Communications Association, CIO.

CTU OFF BALLOT

The original election order issued by the Board provided that the name of the Commercial Telegraphers Union, AFL communications union, also should apear on the ballot. Later at the request of the CTU the Board issued an amended order dated Dec. 5, which removed the CTU from the ballot.

At present the ACA holds collective bargaining agreements with Postal Telegraph covering about 10,000 of the company's employes. ACA officials predict that the outcome of the Labor Board poll among Postal employes will be an overwhelming victory for the ACA and the CIO.

POPULAR SHOWS

New York—Federal WPA theater attendance will exceed $3,000,000 for 1938, according to estimates.

Cab Drivers Get Exercise

New York hackies, used to sitting, are getting plenty of exercise as they take to the picket line to gain a new contract with operators of leading taxi fleets in the nation's largest city. A meeting of 6,000 drivers authorized leaders of their organization, the Transport Workers Union, to call the walkout. (See Story Page 7.)

Marine Group To Meet In Chicago

NEW YORK—Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, CIO, and chairman of the CIO Maritime Committee, has called a meeting of the Committee to be held January 16, at the Hotel Morrison in Chicago.

In the official call, Curran stated that the meeting will consider an organizing program for the maritime industry and a legislative program which will protect maritime unions against efforts of the U. S. Maritime Commission to destroy them.

NLRB REPORT STIRS LUMBER TOWN'S IRE

Examiner Scores Residents as 'Trouble Makers' for Routing C. I. O. Organizers

ORDERS 8 'REDS' REHIRED

Newberry, Mich., Citizens Retort There Was Peace Before 'Agitators' Arrived

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

NEWBERRY, Mich., Dec. 11.—Residents here are aroused over the report of a trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board which, they assert, puts the town in a false light and encourages C. I. O. "agitators." The report contains findings against the Newberry Lumber and Chemical Company, following a hearing for eight discharged lumber mill workers.

They first showed their resentment against attempts of C. I. O. representatives to organize the 350 to 500 woodsmen and mill workers in June, 1937, when a group of twenty-five C. I. O. men descended upon Newberry and demanded that the mill plant be closed until their demands were met. The twenty-five were chased out of Newberry.

When the C. I. O. organizers left they said they would be back the next day with reinforcements. Two hundred men arrived from Munising and the lumber camps of Alger County in the upper peninsula, but when they started into Newberry they were met by several hundred townsmen and driven out.

At the time of the second expulsion it was learned that eight employes of the mill did not take part. Angry townsmen started for the mill to chase these men out of town. A friend warned them in time and they fled to their homes. Then a sawmill crew employed by the company told Philip S. Hamilton, general manager, that the eight men were Communists and warned him that the workers would not permit the eight to be rehired, it was said.

Later workers wrecked a hall which they said had been used by the eight as a Communist headquarters. Then the C. I. O. obtained the hearing which resulted in the NLRB examiner's report.

Townsmen who took part in routing the C. I. O. organizers were denounced in the report as riotous trouble makers without respect for the rights of others. This charge is particularly resented since, residents say, the town was at peace until the organizers arrived.

The examiner recommended that the company rehire the eight alleged Communists and pay them from June, 1937. The company was told it must dissolve the company union. Officials say the company has no control over the union and could not dissolve it under the labor act, since it is a labor organization chosen by the employes themselves.

The company was told it must rebuild the Communist hall and refurnish it, although the company declares the destruction was carried out by townspeople generally and against the pleas of A. L. Fayles, company counsel.

Exception to the entire report has been filed with the Labor Board.

The New York Times, which boasts that it prints all the news that's fit to print, forgot about its slogan when it carried this story aimed at discrediting the CIO and covering up vigilante activity in northern Michigan. Actually, the injured men were members of an AFL lumber workers union, who were attacked by a vigilante mob. One union man was killed, a Labor Board investigation showed. The union switched to the CIO three months after the mobs' attack.

Accuses New York Times

New York—Gross distortion in the handling of a news story which tended to "smear" the National Labor Relations Board and the CIO was charged this week to the New York Times, one of the nation's most important newspapers, by the Guild Reporter, official organ of the American Newspaper Guild.

The story in question (see picture at left) concerned a ruling of the NLRB on the case of the Newberry Chemical and Lumber Co. in Newberry, Mich.

Without quoting a single resident of the town, the story attempted to describe the community as "aroused" over the "ridiculous" NLRB report.

SHIELDS VIGILANTES

The piece referred frequently to "CIO agitators" but made no mention whatever of the fact that company-dominated vigilantes had attacked members of the Lumber and Sawmill Workers, AFL, injuring many of them and causing the death of one of the workers. The union later joined the CIO.

The Times story gave the impression that the strikers had provoked a riot, failing to mention that a rumpus was started when armed vigilantes attacked a peaceful picket line. When the strikers fled into a Finnish Workers Hall—described as a "Communist hall" in the Times story—the vigilantes followed them, and wrecked the building.

The Labor Board report, on which the Times carried no story when it appeared, ordered the reinstatement of a number of workers and the repairing of the hall by the company.

NO COMMENT

The Guild Reporter submitted its story to Edwin James, managing editor of the Times, for inspection before it appeared in the union organ, but he made no comment.

Said the Guild Reporter: "The Times' story, published in place of the revelations of the sworn testimony, is, if it's believed, well calculated to allay the public horror that would arise if the facts in the NLRB report became known.

"If this is the case, the story would fit in with the press tactics of the European Fascist countries, where organized gangs do their jobs and the incidents are dressed up to sound spontaneous and acceptable to the public."

New Homes For Old

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing.

By THOMAS HUMPHRIES

Almost without exception, however, the local CIO unions are rallying behind the banner of better housing.

CIO delegations have appeared before scores of city councils. CIO leaders have minced no words. In unmistakable terms they have given expression to labor's — and the general public's—desire that the housing program go ahead at top speed.

But the enemies of low-rent housing have also been vocal.

Reactionary real estate men who glean their living from the slum areas wail against public housing. Banks which have heavy investments in smelly, run-down dumps and are afraid that public housing will endanger their investments join in the outcry. They send lawyers and real estate "specialists" before the City Councils to present fanciful "facts" about the USHA program.

In slick, oily phrases these people charge that local housing projects for the city's workers will ruin the city's finances, increase local taxes and throw private builders and realtors on relief.

KNOWING THE ANSWERS

Unfortunately the CIO'ers have often been thrown for a loss.

They have been unable to answer convincingly some of the high pressure arguments presented by the opponents of better housing for workers. They have been surpassed by no one in showing the need for slum clearance. But they have not done so well in meeting the realtors and bankers on their own ground!

The urgent need of the moment is for CIO leaders and CIO rank-and-filers to learn all the arguments and all the anwers backwards and forwards. They must study the inner workings of the housing program now being developed under the wing of the United States Housing Authority.

WHAT TO READ

There are two pamphlets which should be read by every CIO'er who lives in a substandard home, who pays excessive rents, who is at all interested in doing away with the slums and getting decent housing at low rents.

Both of them are easy reading. Both can be secured without much trouble.

The first is "Labor's Program for Better Housing". This concise 27-page pamphlet is published by the CIO Committee on Housing. It costs only 3 cents per copy. Unions can order large quantities at reduced rates: $2 for 100, $12 for 1,000.

Two leading figures in the housing movement have commented upon this pamphlet. Said Nathan Straus, U. S. Housing Administrator: "An excellent piece of work, clear, forceful and convincing." According to Catherine Bauer, author of Modern Housing, "It's a good job and ought to be very useful."

The second is "What the Housing Act Can Do For Your City." This attractive pamphlet — published by the USHA—is well illustrated with photos of slums and of housing projects. It contains many useful tables and a wealth of vividly-presented facts.

Copies of this pamphlet have been sent to all CIO internationals, Regional Directors and Industrial Union Councils. Additional copies may be secured without payment by writing to the United States Housing Authority, Washington, D. C.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

During the coming weeks this column will discuss the basic issues that figure in most local squabbles about housing.

CIO'ers who need ammunition in their struggle to have a housing program get under way in their locality are hereby invited to send me their questions. Even more important, CIO'ers who feel that they know how housing's enemies can best be defeated on their own ground should take this opportunity to present their ideas.

Hosiery Workers End Long Fight, Get Three-Year Pact

HATBORO, Pa. — A three-year contract signed between Branch 68, American Federation of Hosiery Workers and the new owners of the DuBarry Co., has brought to a successful conclusion a long battle waged by the CIO union.

The DuBarry firm has purchased the machinery formerly used by the Oscar Nebel Co., the hosiery concern which tried to move its plant to Virginia several months ago, and precipitated a riot in which a worker was killed by a Hatboro police officer.

The agreement signed with DuBarry calls for a closed shop, check-off of union dues, and is to be effective for three years.

Mexico Gives Print Shop To Workers

Mexico City, (D. F.)—President Lazaro Cardenas' New Year gift to the Mexican printing workers is the government plant in this city, which does an annual business of $1,500,000.

The plant will be operated by the printers' union. Its former director, Ortiz Hernan, has been directed to establish a government paper mill to bring down paper prices to a point where workers and peasants can afford to buy periodicals and literature.

Machines In, Men Out At Hershey

Hershey, Pa. — New machines recently installed by the Hershey Chocolate Corp. this week started a series of gradually increasing layoffs, which will precipitate a serious unemployment situation among the workers of the chocolate king, according to the CIO union here.

Claiming that the company made $5,000,000 in profits during 1937, and more than that in 1938, the United Chocolate Workers, CIO local 2, is protesting the layoffs on the basis that the company can well afford to keep all its employes on the payrolls, and not make them bear the brunt of the technological changes made in the plant.

The company employs some 2,000 production workers at its Hershey plant.

TO VISIT CIO

San Francisco—Students from University of California, Stanford and other colleges in this area will visit meetings of the city's Industrial Union Council as part of their educational program.

Longshoremen Ask Poll in Hawaii

Honolulu, T. H. — Representatives of Local 1-37, Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, CIO, conferred with officials of the McCabe, Hamilton & Renny Co. in the office of the Labor Board examiner here, concerning an election for a collective bargaining agency.

Claiming to represent a majority of the stevedores employed by the company, the union has proposed that a Labor Board poll be held this month.

Fur Union Gets New Raises Through Pact

New York—Two new provisions of an agreement signed in May, 1938, after a general strike in the fur industry here went into effect January 1, according to an announcement from the Joint Council of the International Fur Workers, CIO.

A $2 increase in the minimum wage scales of all fur workers, affecting 13,000 members of the Furriers' Joint Council of New York, is one of the newly effective provisions. A similar increase was received at the conclusion of the strike.

The other provision limits the work of employers as craftsmen.

Until the expiration of the agreement Feb. 15, 1941, only one employer will be permitted to do the work of a craftsman. Previously two employers were allowed to do this. This limitation is intended to lessen the unemployment situation in the fur trade.

In his report to the fur workers on the union's achievements in 1938, Irving Potash, manager of the Joint Council, said that "despite the great depression in the fur trade in 1938, the union nevertheless carried through an enormous amount of work and recorded a number of outstanding accomplishments."

$28,000,000 For Jobless

Washington. — Nearly $28,000,000 in benefits were paid out by 29 state unemployment compensation agencies during November, according to figures released by the Social Security Board January 2.

This is a decline of about 21 per cent from the October total. Since August 1938, the amount has been declining steadily, with the sharpest decrease in November.

FDR's Message Defends New Deal Policies

WASHINGTON—Staunch defense of the New Deal's spending policies and a warning that to curb government relief agencies is to invite a new depression, were contained in Pres. Roosevelt's two messages to Congress this week.

The budget message called for expenditures of $2,019,000 for unemployment in the next fiscal year. It mentions, however, an immediate deficiency appropriation for WPA of only $875,000,000 less than the CIO has been demanding.

The President took the position that government expenditures in the last six years have helped build the national wealth.

"Let us all fix that fact in our minds so that there shall be no doubt about it and so that we may have a clear and intelligent idea of what we have been doing," he stated.

"We have not been throwing the taxpayers' money out of the window or into the sea. We have been buying real values with it. Let me repeat: The greater part of the budgetary deficits that have been incurred have gone for permanent, tangible additions to our national wealth.

"The balance has been an investment in the conservation of our human resources and I do not regard a penny of it as wasted."

DEFENDS WPA

Turning to recent WPA activities, the Chief Executive commented:

"A year ago, I recommended an increase in work relief, public works, and other related expenditures to check the downward spiral of business.

"The program undertaken at that time has contributed materially I believe, to the existing upward movement of business and employment, and I feel that the business men and farmers and workers of the country no less than the unemployed, are entitled to an assurance that this program will not be curtailed arbitrarily or violently.

"The necessity of increasing federal expenditures a year ago to check a recession is a well-known fact. Any decision to decrease those expenditures now that recovery has just started would constitute a new policy which ought not to be adopted

Labor Board Wins Point In Ford Case

Washington — The National Labor Relations Board opened the new year with another victory in the U. S. Supreme Court.

In a unanimous decision, the justices upheld the Board's procedure in the Ford Motor Co. case, and took note of the fact that delays in the handling of the case were caused by Ford's tactics.

The ruling, though concerned chiefly with a legal technicality, will vastly strengthen the Board's hand, and will remove the possibility of the case being quashed at a later date by the high tribunal.

The Board's order against Ford was first issued in December, 1937. A month later the Supreme Court indicated that a "full and fair hearing" should give defendants the right to argue before the Board after an intermediate report had been filed by the trial examiner.

When the Board endeavored to follow the new procedure, the Ford Co. asked the Supreme Court to refuse permission to the NLRB to withdraw its order, since it was already in the jurisdiction of the lower court. Had Ford won its argument, the Board would have been in a position of being unable to conform with the Supreme Court's recommendation.

NEGOTIATE

New York—Negotiations for a contract with the American Woolen Co. have been resumed, Sidney Hillman, chairman of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee told the TWOC advisory council at its meeting here.

Dies Report Proves Dud; Asks $150,000

Washington—The Dies Committee, allegedly investigating un-American activities, concluded months of labor this week and, in a report to Congress, brought forth a weak pink mouse—together with a hopeful request for an additional $150,000.

In his 179-page report, Dies finally admitted that his committee's investigation was something less than 100 per cent satisfactory, but he chose to blame Pres. Roosevelt, former WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins and the Department of Justice for failure to co-operate with his red-baiters.

Only about 30 pages were devoted to Nazi and Fascist activities in the country. The remainder was largely concerned with "communism", as Dies saw it.

HITS PERKINS

The committee, judging from the report, considers Secretary of Labor Frances E. Perkins as one of the main dangers to the American system of government, and is critical of her handling of the Bridges case. During the hearings, it is recalled, Miss Perkins sent a long letter to Dies justifying the Labor Department's actions in the Bridges case. The letter satisfied most fair-minded observers, but appeared to have been lost on the Texas Congressman.

The Labor Board also drew criticism from Dies, largely because its research director had once written an article on a Socialist convention in Austria.

QUOTES STRIKEBREAKER

Dies contended many times in the report that he had "convincing proof" or "conclusive proof" to back up his statements. Almost invariably the "proof" consisted of testimony given the committee by J. B. Matthews, former head of Consumers Research, who used tear gas and labor spies against his employes during a strike a few years ago.

CIO Opens Fight For Adequate WPA Funds

WASHINGTON—The CIO prepared this week to redouble its fight to win speedy passage of a billion-dollar WPA deficiency appropriation and prevent the closing of all WPA projects throughout the nation by February 7. It called on its unions to write and wire members of Congress to show labor's stand.

International unions and industrial union councils in increasing numbers have informed the CIO that they are taking action to back the CIO demand, made by Pres. John L. Lewis two weeks ago.

President Powers Hapgood, of the United Shoe Workers announced that all Senators and Representatives have received communications from his union urging the billion-dollar appropriation. The United Rubber Workers has adopted a similar program, and the National Maritime Union is appealing to all east coast seamen to make known their demands.

All CIO affiliates in New Jersey and Alabama have been asked to notify their Congressional delegations of the CIO stand on the relief issue. In addition, industrial union councils in scattered sections of the nation are taking similar action.

Pres. Roosevelt's budget message, it is noted, contained a request for $875,000,000 for WPA. CIO leaders point out, however, that full billion is needed if further curtailment of WPA activities is to be forestalled.

OPEN LETTER

In an open letter to Congress Ralph Hetzel, Jr., CIO Unemployment director, warned that a suggested appropriation of only half a billion dollars would "create indescribable misery among millions of honest, decent, American citizens who want work but can not get it."

Support for the CIO position on WPA was seen this week in a front page editorial appearing in the Philadelphia Record, pro-New Deal paper. It said:

"So far this government has played a cruel game of expanding and contracting WPA as if it were an accordion.

"No one should be dropped from WPA until there is a place for him in private employment. But hundreds of thousands have been thrown off WPA as if they were so many bags of salt, thereby scaring the living daylights not only out of all WPA workers, but out of three times as many marginal workers who live in constant fear that they, too, will be jobless.

SOUND IDEA

"A job for everyone is economically sound.

"It can be accomplished without increasing the national debt. When we examine the proposition, we find it is not such a staggering task as might appear at first glance. At most, it would add $3,000,000,000 a year to the present relief expenditure. This is based on putting 2,000,000 additional heads of families to work at $750 a year, and 4,000,000 supplementary workers at half that amount per year."

Appointed

Workers hailed Pres. Roosevelt's appointment of former Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan to fill the cabinet seat vacated by Atty. Gen. Homer S. Cummings, who recently resigned. Murphy's handling of the auto strikes two years ago, which led to a peaceful settlement without bloodshed, won him a place as one of labor's outstanding friends

Cardinal Supports Hearst Strikers

Chicago—The 600 CIO strikers on Hearst's two Chicago papers have found support from the Chicago Diocese, led by George Cardinal Mundelein.

"A Happy and a Blessed Christmas to all our readers and a special prayer and word of encouragement to the Hearst employes who are on strike," the paper says in its weekly column "Big Broadcast."

The column then goes on to analyze the role of William Green and the top leaders of the AFL in coming to Hearst's aid in fighting the strike.

FOR OR AGAINST?

"He (Green) is riding two horses going in opposite directions," the column says. "He professes to be for labor and he speaks and acts otherwise. The question should be put to him in simple terms. Is he for labor or is he against it?"

Discussing Green's assertion that AFL headquarters would support those AFL unions remaining "loyal" to Hearst, the New World adds:

"Mr. Green assured himself of a good press in the American (a Hearst paper) by asserting that the AFL is giving complete support to the AFL organizations that have remained loyal to Mr. Hearst in the strike now in progress at the Herald and Examiner and the Chicago Evening American.

"It seems timely to say something about this strike in which Mr. Green and the AFL are supporting the Hearst management. The American Newspaper Guild is a CIO affiliate. The units at the Hearst papers went out on strike December 5 in protest against wholesale dismissals in the circulation department.

"They also charged continued violations of the contract of employment by the Hearst management and the formation of company unions in collaboration with AFL officials. Picketing has gone on and there have been clashes on the picket line."

PRIEST SPEAKS

After pointing out that Father John M. Hayes spoke to a strikers' mass meeting, the column in the New World goes on to analyze the old familiar red herring that enemies of the strikers are trying to drag out.

"We mention the strike because of the persistent efforts of the daily papers to hook up the CIO with communism. For the information of our readers we may say that there are many Catholics who belong to the Guild who walked out, and who are still on strike.

"Father Hayes' appearance before the strikers also indicates how much reliance should be placed in these charges."

"Calamity"--If WPA Ends, Says League

WASHINGTON—Sharp warning that the threatened suspension of WPA would be "an immeasurable national calamity" was sent out to all Representatives and Senators by Labor's Non-Partisan League in a letter over the signature of E. L. Oliver, executive vice-president.

"Inadequate as the program of the WPA has always been," Oliver wrote, "it is nevertheless the only thing that stands between millions of Americans and literal starvation.

"At least 10,500,000 workers in the U. S. are unemployed. The WPA is now providing 3,100,000 jobs. Approximately 750,000 of those who had been certified as eligible for WPA could not be placed because of the limited program."

DESTITUTION THREATENED

Oliver also pointed out that curtailment or drastic cutting would intensify this problem, already acute, and bring mass destitution to millions of Americans. At least $1,000,000,000.00 is needed to continue WPA even at its present rate up to June, 1939, he said.

"In accordance with the requests reaching us, and in view of the incalculably harmful effects of WPA suspension, Labor's Non-Partisan League respectfully urges that Congress immediately provide the funds required by the WPA through this fiscal year," the letter concluded. "Only by prompt action can a great catastrophe be avoided."

Labor, Farmers and the National Guard

Oil workers held by the National Guard in the strikebound refinery of the Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation in Oklahoma are reported to have been making their escape to join the union ranks by swimming the Arkansas river in near-zero weather.

What is happening in this strike illustrates the courage and resourcefulness of American workers when they are compelled to fight for their union rights.

It also illustrates the hypocrisy of the pretexts on which the National Guard is often brought in to break a strike. The usual excuse is that troops are necessary to protect workers who wish to act as strikebreakers. But here we have workers who resent being herded as scabs so much that they are willing to brave both troops and chilly waters to join with striking unionists.

The whole incident lends point to the demand of the CIO for state legislation to curb the use of the National Guard in labor disputes.

A draft bill has been sent out to all CIO affiliates and Industrial Union Councils in the various states, based on the principle that "except where martial law is declared, the National Guard may not deprive any person of his rights and liberties under the constitution of the United States or of the states."

The bill would require public hearings by the Governor before the Guard is sent in, would allow the Guard to be sent in only for a fixed period and in fixed numbers, and would force the Guard or the state to pay damages in any civil suit arising from its actions.

Since 1877 at least 100 workers have been killed by Guardsmen in labor disputes. Farmers have also suffered at their hands when the Guard has been sent in to break their resistance to greedy distributors of farm products.

The union-fighting Mid-Continent Petroleum Corp. markets its products largely in farm areas. Farmers therefore as well as labor generally are being urged to aid the Oil Workers International Union in this fight for its collective bargaining rights. They may also be reasonably expected to join with labor in seeking legislation in every state to curb the use of the National Guard for strikebreaking purposes.

Striking Newspapermen

Labor unionists in every industry will sympathize with the American Newspaper Guild in its present struggles to win collective bargaining rights for newspaper employes.

The fact that they are white-collar employes has not brought these workers any politer treatment from union-busting employers than has been meted out to manual workers.

In Chicago, brass knuckles, lead pipes, baseball bats, knives and guns have been brought into play by goon squads against Guild members on strike against the Hearst papers there.

These papers are charged with violating their contracts with the Guild on 87 counts and firing 500 employes during the past 18 months.

In Chicago, as in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where the Guild is also on strike against local papers, this newspapermen's union is seeking no more than the basic collective bargaining rights which have long ago been won by other classes of employes.

In Wilkes-Barre, the United Mine Workers and the rest of organized labor are solidly supporting the Guild's fight for unionism.

Labor throughout the whole country can also make its voice heard in support of the Chicago Hearst strikers by notifying the national management of the Hearst chain of papers in New York City that working people everywhere resent the denial of their legal union rights to the Chicago employes of the Hearst papers.

Tory Tactics In Congress

DESPITE the cocky mood of some of the tories who won out in the recent elections, reaction is going to try to play a canny game in the new Congress.

Labor and progressives generally will have to be on guard more against flank maneuvers than frontal attacks.

Old Guard Democrats and Republicans have regained a little of the confidence that was so badly shattered by the New Deal sweep of recent years.

But only the fools among them will kid themselves that they have any mandate for outright attacks on progressive legislation. The rest will continue the tactics they used in the elections, of proclaiming their support for such legislation in principle, as camouflage for their attacks on it in practice.

The National Association of Manufacturers, which is the spiritual home of such tories, set the keynote for their tactics at its recent convention.

Instead of making a frontal attack on the Wagner Labor Relations Act, for instance, the NAM adopted a liberal declaration in favor of collective bargaining and decided to leave it to the AFL leaders to "carry the ball" in demanding amendments.

The character of the attacks now being made on the Wagner Act and the WPA are an indication of reaction's general strategy in the new Congress.

The tories know as well as anyone else that these are among the most popular pieces of current legislation, and they hate them all the more on that account.

But they do not dare to risk their political necks by exposing their hatred in public. So they seek to discredit the WPA administration and the Labor Board, and to strangle their work by inadequate appropriations and emasculating amendments.

Hence all the hullaballoo in the press at the opening of Congress about "politics" in the WPA; while a Democrat like Congressman Woodrum proposes that only $500,000,000 be appropriated to continue a program that needs at least a billion dollars if hundreds of thousands of unemployed are not to be victimized.

Hence also the line of attack on the Wagner Act. No politician dares to say he opposes the collective bargaining rights which the act proclaims and protects. But the odoriferous Dies Committee is encouraged to slander its administration and personnel; a campaign is launched against reappointment of a Board member; and the worst labor-hating tories declare their sympathies for AFL attempts to throw the act open to crippling amendments.

By such tactics the tories hope to bulldoze the administration into yielding to some of their demands. They hope also to trick Congress into enacting an essentially reactionary program, which most members of Congress know would excite the greatest popular indignation if baldly presented in its true colors.

Under such circumstances, labor and the progressive forces have their work cut out to keep clearly before the public and Congress the real issues which reaction seeks to confuse.

The simple and clear-cut legislative program of the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League is designed to do just that.

The first and immediate issue is continuation of the endangered WPA program. For this John L. Lewis, on behalf of the movement, has called for a deficiency appropriation of at least a billion dollars to continue WPA up to June 30, 1939.

Then in regard to defense of the Wagner Act, the CIO exposes all the camouflaged attacks on this basic charter of labor's rights by its opposition to all amendments.

Further, it demands a more consistent application of the law, by calling for legislation to require government contractors to abide by the Wagner Act if they are to continue to receive government business.

The rest of the program calls for improved social legislation to bring greater security to the aged and other groups who are now unprotected; to make adequate medical care and decent housing the right of every American; to protect the civil liberties of working people; and generally to advance the economic and social interests of the great majority of the population.

This whole program is definitely in line with the wishes of the great majority of the voters, and few politicians will dare openly to oppose the popular principles which it embodies.

But the opposition of tory reaction will take the form of confusing the issue, of drawing red herrings across the trail, and of putting every kind of private pressure on the legislators.

Against such kinds of pressure, labor will have to mobilize all the forces at its command time and again during the present Congress, to impress both the administration and the legislators with the insistent character of the popular demand for progressive legislation.

To do this, labor will have to consolidate and expand its union strength in the coming year. And in alliance with all progressives, it will have to build Labor's Non-Partisan League into a great independent political force which will uphold the hand of its friends and throw fear into the camp of its tory enemies.

Your WPA Job

By Ralph Hetzel, Jr.
CIO Unemployment Director

An Open Letter To a Congressman

Dear Sir:

Throughout the country CIO members have manifested great concern about your recent statement that the deficiency appropriation for the WPA be limited to $500,000,000.

They ask, "How can a responsible public official advocate a cut in WPA expenditures which would virtually halve the present program and yet know the extent of unemployment throughout the nation?"

The situation is this: There are at the lowest estimate at least ten and a half million unemployed employable non-agricultural workers. It is difficult to imagine an improvement in industrial conditions which would re-employ more than 500,000 of these workers in the next five months. Therefore the nation has the responsibility to care for at least ten million employable workers.

FORCED REDUCTION

At the peak of WPA employment during the past year only 3,250,000 persons have been employed on WPA. Contrary to the widespread report that re-employment in private industry began in November to reduce the WPA rolls, the fact is that such reduction has been forced by administrative orders and does not reflect any reduction among those who need WPA work.

There are, and have been for some time, at least 750,000 unemployed workers who have been certified as eligible to WPA and who have not received jobs. In addition there are in all probability at least a million more who are eligible to be certified if the local certifying agencies would accept their applications.

In the face of these conditions reduction in the WPA at the present time would be a bitter blow to American economic conditions. In addition it would create indescribable misery among millions of honest, decent American citizens who want work but cannot get it.

NO DISCRIMINATION

In your statement you suggested a reduction of projects for professional and so-called white collar workers. It is difficult to see that such workers have any less rights than industrial workers or that their misery from unemployment is any less poignant.

Your statement further suggests that relief of the unemployed be turned back to the States. We are certain that any careful survey of the financial condition of the various States and cities will clearly indicate that they are simply incapable of supporting their unemployed.

Return of relief to the States would recreate the chaos in the unemployment problem which existed before the beginning of the present administration, a chaos which the New Deal was instrumental in ending.

In the light of these conditions among the unemployed it is apparent that a deficiency appropriation for the rest of the current fiscal year to the WPA should be made in at least the amount of a billion dollars. Such an appropriation would do no more than maintain the WPA rolls at the November level—a level still inadequate to the need of the unemployed.

We most earnestly urge your careful consideration of the facts and your support of this amount for the current appropriation.

Catholic Leaders Blast Coughlin's Anti-Semitism; Paper Bans CIO Article

WASHINGTON—Father Charles E. Coughlin, anti-Semitic, anti-labor "radio priest," is under fire again from leaders of his Church.

The latest attack is contained in the current issue of Commonweal, influential Catholic weekly, over the signature of Monsignor John A. Ryan of Catholic University. It follows closely on criticism by Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago, whose diocesan paper recently disavowed Coughlin as a Church spokesman.

Monsignor Ryan's article, an objective analysis of Coughlin's anti-Semitic outbursts at the height of the latest Nazi pogroms, flatly accuses him of trying to add his bit to racial hatred by spreading lies about the Jewish people.

ANCIENT FALSEHOODS

Discussing a broadcast of last month, in which the Detroit priest repeated ancient falsehoods about the sinister international role of the Jews in promoting wars and insurrections, Father Ryan said:

"The only adequate answer (to the question of why Coughlin made the broadcast) is that Father Coughlin is eager, or at least willing, to promote anti-Semitism in the United States."

"It has been urged that Catholics in particular ought to refrain from encouraging this campaign of anti-Semitism from fear that the same methods and the same psychology will be used against them when the next anti-Catholic movement gets under way.

"The first two commandments provide an infinitely higher motive and an infinitely more effective one. From every point of view Catholics should refrain from fostering by speech, action or by silence anti-Semitism in the United States."

SUPPRESS CIO ARTICLE

At the same time John Brophy, national director, CIO, disclosed that Father Coughlin had failed to print an article specially solicited for his magazine, Social Justice, on the subject of the CIO.

The article, requested by Editor White of Social Justice, briefly reviewed the past year's work of the CIO and outlined some of its principles and aims for the future.

Among other points it took up the basic CIO principle of tolerance and equality for all races and nationalities and creeds.

"There is no room for the baiting of any minority group or nationality or race in the CIO," it said. "We are against all forms of red-baiting, of Jew-baiting, of Catholic-baiting, of alien-baiting.

"In this the CIO is a true catholic organization—built upon the principles of equal treatment for all."

Though the article was ready in ample time for the Social Justice deadline as indicated by the editor, and was asked for in time for the most recent issue, it has not appeared.

REINSTATE 13

Indianapolis, Ind. — Thirteen workers at the Hoosier Veneer Company here are to be reinstated with back pay for all time lost since October 11, 1937, according to a Labor Board decision announced by Local 607, United Veneer & Lumber Workers, CIO. The company was also ordered to bargain with the CIO union upon request.

Even Sculptors Find CIO Their Organization

New York—"CIO means regimentation."

That's the daily howl of those who have exhausted all their ammunition in the fight against industrial unionism.

But when the doors open on January 7, at the New School for Social Research, 66 W. 12th Street, New York City, the howlers will get their answer in dramatic fashion.

It is on that date that the United American Sculptors, a section of the United American Artists, of the United Office and Professional Workers of America, Local 60, affiliated to the Congress of Industrial Organizations, will open its first annual exhibition.

UNION LABEL

Art is universally recognized as a highly individualized profession. Yet here we will have 77 sculptors exhibiting, among them some of the most prominent sculptors in the nation, all of them members of one union, all of their work bearing a union label on its base.

The exhibition promises to be a significant one from the artistic standpoint. It is even more significant from another standpoint. The show is a gift to the people of the country from the CIO. If not for the CIO, the show might never have taken place!

DEPENDED ON RICH

Before the depression, artists depended mainly on the patronage of the rich. They painted and cast only subjects that the art patrons fancied. Sculptors' materials are very expensive, beyond the reach of most individuals. It requires years of training and skill in the use of tools. Sculptors were, as a matter of fact, regimented in subject choice by the art patrons, and free to starve at will.

When the depression came, the artist found himself dumped overboard. He found millions of other men, of all trades and professions, in the same predicament, and he did what all the others were doing. He organized.

The art unions were in the forefront of the battle for government-sponsored projects. The result has been the greatest freedom the American artist has known in years and the flowering of a great American art movement which is still expanding.

In the above bust, Jo Davidson, internationally known sculptor, has caught the youthful spirit of Charles W. Ervin of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. A life-long fighter in labor's cause, Ervin is known and respected by countless workers in many industries, for he is usually found where the struggle is hottest. Labor editor, organizer and speaker, he has been a champion of the CIO since its inception.

Not all of the members of the United American Sculptors are on federal projects, though the work of the project will be shown at the exhibition. Many of the sculptors joined because they felt that all sculptors could benefit from the close relation of men of similar ideas. The union has proved invaluable to them.

CIO SUPPORTS DEMAND for Amalgamated Label On Clothing

The Constitutional Convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations unanimously adopted a resolution in support of the union label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

The resolution reads:—

"Resolved, that this Convention of the CIO go on record as urging all members of its affiliated organizations to demand the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America label on all men's and boys' apparel in daily wear and work clothing of all kinds and to refuse to buy articles of apparel not so labeled."

—ON—
Overalls, Work Clothes, Work Shirts

Neckties

Gloves

The Amalgamated label is a guarantee that the product was made by Amalgamated members who enjoy union standards of wages and hours, and that the product is of the best workmanship.

Make sure that the Amalgamated label is on the coat, on the pants, on the vest and on every article of men's and boys' wearing apparel.

CIO Drafts Bills To Protect Civil Rights in Strikes

WASHINGTON. — Bills to curb the use of the National Guard in labor disputes, to guarantee collective bargaining to employes of firms holding state contracts, and to prevent local governments from infringing civil liberties are the chief items in the state legislative program outlined by the Congress of Industrial Organizations for the coming year.

In addition, the program includes measures to limit the authority of the courts in issuing injunctions, to curb the use of deputy sheriffs and private detectives, to prohibit eviction of workers on strike or unemployed, to set up state labor relations boards and state wage hours acts, and to regulate payment of wages.

Other items in the state program in preparation include bills to promote low cost housing, to improve and extend unemployment compensation laws, to establish state civil liberties bureaus, and to repeal state criminal syndicalism bills and other repressive anti-labor measures.

The program was sent out in the form of draft bills, together with a covering letter, to all CIO affiliates, Industrial Union Councils, and Regional Directors.

NATIONAL GUARD

The bill to control the National Guard is based on the principle that; "except where martial law is declared, the National Guard may not deprive any person of his rights and liberties under the constitution and laws of the United States or of the states".

The bill would require public hearings by the Governor before the Guard is sent in to aid civil authorities, would allow the Guard to be sent in only for a fixed period and in fixed numbers, and would force the Guard or the state to pay damages in any civil suit arising from its actions.

Commenting on this bill, Leo Pressman, CIO general counsel said:

"The terrible record of the National Guard amply justifies this legislation. Since 1877 at least 100 workers have met their deaths at the hands of Guardsmen, while the number of wounded men and women runs into the hundreds. The National Guard has not only been used to break strikes but also to break the resistance of farmers against the greedy policies of distributors of food products."

COLLECTIVE BARGAINING

The bill to guarantee collective bargaining to workers employed by firms holding state contracts is patterned after a similar proposed federal measure, which has been placed as item No. 1 on the CIO federal legislative program, announced last week.

Similarly the bills to set up state wage and hour regulation and state labor relations boards are designed to supplement the protection to workers already available in federal law.

Measures to curb the use of deputy sheriffs and private detective agencies are designed to correct the gross abuses of workers' rights revealed by the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee, as are the bills to provide for permanent state civil liberties bureaus and to prohibit evictions of workers engaged in strikes or who are unemployed.

The bill to promote low cost housing through state legislation is intended to enable states to make loans and subsidies for this purpose, and to take full advantage of federal loans and subsidies for the same purpose.

Proposed amendments to state unemployment compensation laws are designed to increase existing benefits and to simplify procedure and administration.

Finally, the measures for the repeal of repressive anti-labor state laws will remove numerous statutes that are at present used to prevent organization and to take away workers' rights to collective bargaining through unions of their own choice, such as criminal conspiracy and anti-syndicalism statutes.

FDR Defends New Deal Policies

80 BILLION A YEAR

In his speech on the state of the nation, Roosevelt set a national income of 80 billion dollars a year as the goal of the New Deal, and asserted that with such an income, our present relief expenditures would scarcely be a matter of concern.

His speech called for vigorous and united defense of democracy against Fascist aggressors. "There comes a time in the affairs of men," he said, "when they must prepare to defend not their homes alone, but the tenets of faith and humanity on which their churches, their governments and their very civilization are founded.

"There are many methods short of war, but stronger and more effective than mere words, of bringing home to aggressor governments the aggregate sentiments of our own people."

Looking towards the future, the President mentioned extension of social security, launching of a federal health program, institution of economic planning, solution of the railway problem and the setting of new financial ethical standards as immediate problems.

But, he added, there is no room for dictatorship to help solve these questions. The President boasted that the New Deal has contributed to the nation's welfare "without conscription of labor or capital, without concentration camps and without a scratch on freedom of speech, freedom of the press or the rest of the Bill of Rights."

Green Signed Contract With Drug Swindler To Stall CIO Drive

BRIDGEPORT, Conn.—Swindlers and ex-convicts were not the only people who were involved in the McKesson and Robbins mess. Top leaders of the AFL were there too, with an anti-CIO contract signed by William Green, president; Lewis G. Hines, director of organization, and F. Donald Coster Musica, the crook that got away with everything for 25 years.

Coster-Musica was not only interested in fleecing his stockholders and adulterating McKesson and Robbins drugs, but he wanted to swindle his workers, too. So when the workers started to organize in District 50 of the United Mine Workers, Coster-Musica pulled a familiar trick out of the hat—a signed contract with the AFL that shut out any other unions.

According to the Bridgeport Herald, which dug up the contract and printed a photostat showing Green and Hines as signers, the clause designed to shut out the CIO read:

"The Federation agrees to do all within its power to prevent imposition upon or interference with the business of the employer by any other labor body not affiliated with the Federation."

WORKERS NOT CONSULTED

This clause, and the entire contract, was written and signed without any pretense of consulting the workers involved. As far back as August of 1937, District 50 and the CIO Office and Professional Workers had started their drives, the UOPWA conducting a strike in the company's New York plants and representing 90 per cent of the workers.

In addition, Green and Hines promised Coster-Musica that they would act as strikebreakers in the event of a labor dispute.

"Should any such other labor body attempt to strike or picket against any place of business of the employer, the Federation agrees to notify the public and keep it notified that the employer, at such place of business and elsewhere, is fair to organized labor and the Federation," the contract said.

ANTI-AFL TOO

The Green-Hines-Coster-Musica triple play was aimed not only at the CIO, but also at the rank and file of the AFL, in another clause forbidding any AFL affiliate to bargain for better conditions than the contract had secured.

Specifically, it forbade any attempt to shorten the 45-hour week in the contract, and provided that the whole business could be terminated in 10 days if any AFL affiliate failed to abide by the contract or tried to alter it.

The provisions didn't offer very much protection to the workers, according to an analysis of the contract.

You had to work a year before you got the minimum wage rates. Holidays that came on working days had to be made up, without overtime pay. Seniority clauses were tempered by a sentence that "recognized that leeway is necessary to the employer."

Compulsory arbitration was agreed to, and strikes were outlawed during the life of the contract—on no matter what provocation.

District 50 has announced that it will go back into McKesson and Robbins with an intensive organizing drive designed to clear up the mess that the AFL top leaders and the leading swindler of recent American history cooked up for the workers there.

FILE CHARGES

Hilo, Hawaii.—Fired for organizing employes of the Kress Co. store here, Thomas Nakashima, president of the United Retail Employes, CIO, has joined the ranks of five other Kress unionists, dismissed nearly a year ago for CIO activity. Charges against the company have been filed with the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

Asks Unions' Aid For Oil Workers' Strike in Tulsa

WASHINGTON—Full aid for the striking CIO oil workers in Tulsa, Okla., is urged on all CIO affiliates in a circular letter sent out over the signature of John Brophy, national director.

The letter points out that the strike was caused by the flat refusal of the company, Mid-Continent Oil, to bargain collectively or to recognize the union, a local of the Oil Workers International.

The letter adds that the Natl. Guard has been called in to try to break the strike, and that county judges in Oklahoma have obliged with a series of injunctions designed to do the same thing.

"In spite of these strike-breaking efforts," it said, "the picket lines are holding firm around the company's 1,000 acre plant in near-zero weather. Pickets report that many workers taken by the Natl. Guard through the lines have escaped by swimming a river and have signed CIO cards."

CIO affiliates are asked to write or wire expressions of support to the Oil Workers Intl. Union, 1101 Commerce St., Ft. Worth, Tex., and to send protests to Governor Phillips at Oklahoma City, Okla.

In addition affiliates are urged to put the company's products, DX Gasoline and Diamond 760 Motor Oil, on their unfair lists, and to urge local dealers not to handle these products until the strike is settled.

Mid-Continent markets chiefly in Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado, Kansas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Texas.

Here's an Example

Of National Guard working against unions in a labor dispute. An officer of the Oklahoma National Guard tries to tell members of the Oil Workers Intl. Union to break up their picket line. The Guard was called for strikebreaking purposes when CIO members walked out at the Mid-Continent Petroleum Corp. in W. Tulsa, Okla. The management had refused to bargain collectively.

Labor and the Law

By Lee Pressman

CIO General Counsel

The Courts and the Laws

We are reprinting in this column a letter which the CIO legal department sent to two Muhlenberg College students at Allentown, Pennsylvania.

"Dear Sirs:

"You have written to us stating that in 1914, Congress passed a law providing that labor unions could not be sued under the anti-trust laws, and making it lawful for unions peacefully to strike, to picket, and to boycott non-union goods. You inquire why the CIO legal department does not make use of this statute when defending lawsuits against the CIO.

"Upon receipt of your letter, our first thought was to tell you that you had misinterpreted the law, but after rereading the statute in question, we decided that you were right. Congress did pass a law in 1914 providing that labor unions could not be enjoined from carrying on peaceful labor activity and that such action was lawful. We agree with you that this is what Congress intended. However, as you know, the statutes passed by Congress are subject to interpretation by judges.

"The judges, including the United States Supreme Court, have handed down many decisions on this particular statute. The purpose of the law was plainly to correct certain decisions which had been made by the courts preventing unions from striking, picketing, and conducting boycotts. The statute was the result of years of agitation by organized labor and volumes of debates in Congress.

"When it was passed, it was hailed as the 'Magna Charta' of organized labor. Yet, notwithstanding the plain terms of the statute and its history, the judges ruled that its passage did not give any new rights whatsoever to organized labor. The judges, including a majority of the Supreme Court said that the statute only made lawful those union activities that were already held lawful by the courts before it was passed.

"The statute says that peaceful strikes, picketing and boycotts in any dispute between employers and employes or persons seeking employment concerning terms or conditions of employment are lawful. But the judges said that the refusal of union members to handle non-union goods in their own industry was unlawful. They said the statute does not protect union organizers in non-union territories, since they are rank 'outsiders.'

"They said that the statute does not apply when an employer is able to break a strike since then the relationship of employer and employee has been terminated so far as the strikers are concerned. The judges refused to permit workers to break a yellow dog contract, to attempt to gain union recognition or to persuade customers not to deal with a non-union employer.

"As has been remarked, a law means not what Congress says, but what the judges say.

"In short, by a process of judicial interpretation, the law intended to protect organized labor and give its activities legal protection, was completely nullified.

"We therefore regretfully wish to advise you that there is nothing which can be done under this statute to protect organized labor. But organized labor continued its struggles against these decisions and as a result, the Norris-La Guardia Anti-Injunction Act was passed in 1932, and the National Labor Relations Act was passed in 1935.

"We appreciate your interest in labor laws and hope that you will continue your studies along this line."

District 50 Wins Case Upholding Check-off

WASHINGTON.—Strengthening of District 50, United Mine Workers, check-off rights was gained in a decision rendered by the circuit court of Cabell County, West Virginia.

The matter at issue was the check-off of dues of former members who had resigned from Local 12039 of District 50. The local had signed a contract with the Standard Ultramarine Co. of Huntington, W. Va., which contained a clause authorizing the company to deduct dues regularly from the pay of each member.

Sixteen men withdrew from the local union and sent letters of withdrawal to the company. They contended that the check-off of their dues should cease with their withdrawal from membership in the union. The case was brought before Philip G. Phillips as arbitrator in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Philips gave the following decision:

"Letters of withdrawal from employes sent to the company are not effective as against a certification by the proper union authorities, that an employe is a member of the union.

"The contract specifically states that dues be checked off for those men properly certified by the union as members. It is silent as to the form of certification and therefore any specification from the union as to who are its members should be asked by the company in good faith.

UNION'S RIGHT

"Of course the union should not certify anyone who is not a member; but the company should do nothing to persuade or dissuade its employes for or against the union. It is not for the company to decide what constitutes union membership and it is fully protected in contract from any loss which may result from an erroneous certification upon the part of the union.

"For the company to decide on its own behalf as to whether an employe is or is not a union member not only violates the rights given the union by contract, but might amount, in some instances, to tacit persuasion on the part of the company that a worker should resign from the union."

Immediately after the umpire rendered his decision in favor of Local Union 12039, the 16 former members secured an attorney and filed a petition for an injunction against Local Union 12039 and the Standard Ultramarine Company. The injunction sought to restrain these two agencies from collecting dues from the men who had resigned their membership.

The case was heard in the Circuit Court of Cabell County at Huntington, W. Va., and Special Circuit Judge George S. Wallace approved the agreement which was finally arrived at.

ALLOWED TO RESIGN

The 16 former members were given the right to resign or withdraw from membership in Local Union 12039 at any time by giving notice in writing to the president or recording secretary of the local. The obligation to continue the payment of dues to the local to the end of the contract year during which the resignation was submitted was maintained.

The company, therefore, was authorized to continue to check off membership dues and the union was entitled to collect such dues even though the 16 men had resigned their membership.

The Court went even further in maintaining the sanctity of the check-off. While the litigation was going on, the 16 former members had refused to pay their dues and the company had refused to check them off until the case was clearly decided. Under order from the Court, the Standard Ultramarine Company was required to pay to the union $5.00 for each man in back dues and the former members were required to reimburse the company for this belated check-off.

This case constitutes a landmark in the legality of the check-off clause under a contract between a union and an employer.

Oust Gorman As Head Of Textile Union

New York—The executive council of the United Textile Workers of America, CIO, this week ousted Francis J. Gorman as president on charges of violating the union constitution and supporting a dual, opposition union.

The former UTW president failed to appear, although he had been notified to do so. The decision to oust him was made by 15 members of the executive council who attended the trial and heard the charges. The full council consists of 20 members, including Gorman.

Gorman was found guilty of: 1. Advising, assisting and encouraging a "dual and antagonistic organization"—the Providence and Woonasquatucket Woolen and Worsted Council, made up of AFL locals in opposition to the UTW.

6. Engaging in disruptive acts detrimental to the union.

2. Ceasing to be a UTW member and holding membership in an AFL local.

3. Attempting to usurp power granted the president in the UTW constitution through his attempted expulsion of four UTW vice-presidents.

4. Directing UTW locals to withhold the payment of per capita from the international.

5. Attempting to repudiate his own action in writing the agreement between the union and the CIO.

Taxi Drivers in Poll To End Walkout

NEW YORK—The most effective and most peaceful general strike of taxi drivers this great metropolis ever witnessed cleared virtually all of the city's 8,500 fleet-operated cabs off the streets here for three days—January 3-4-5—and ended in victory for the CIO Transport Workers Union. More than 11,000 cab drivers and 1,000 garage maintenance workers answered the TWU'S general strike call to compel major fleet operators to negotiate.

Less than 24 hours after the TWU declared the strike at 3 P. M. January 3, Mayor LaGuardia intervened and at a City Hall conference, 11 A. M. January 4, compelled taxi company owners to consent to a Labor Board election for collective bargaining representative. The election was to be held January 5 in one of the city's large armories.

Despite desperate last minute attempts by taxi employers to intimidate drivers and the sudden emergence of a flock of company-dominated and racketeer-led 'unions', the Transport Workers' Taxi Division was confident of overwhelming majorities in the industry-wide elections.

ALL TRANSIT SIGNED-UP

The TWU, which has closed shop contracts covering more than 55,000 employes on the city's major subway, elevated, trolley and bus lines, entered the taxicab field 18 months ago. Following a whirlwind organizing campaign it signed agreements covering more than 15,000 drivers employed by the major fleets.

The contracts established wage minimums, increased general wages by 10 per cent, shorter hours, vacations and provided for other improvements which for the first time brought some degree of stabilization to New York's most chaotic industry.

Six months ago the employers started a concerted campaign to smash the TWU. Contracts were brazenly violated and the companies refused to negotiate with the union.

The general strike was the union's reply.

The strike had been voted on December 27, but was deferred over the New Year's holiday to permit hackies to share in increased holiday revenues and to guarantee sufficient service during New Year festivities in New York.

Workers, Bosses Pleased As WPA Clothes Needy

June 25, 1938

Dear Mr. Clothing Manufacturer:

Have you a surplus of good, sound clothing in the low-price field? If so, please send samples and quote your lowest terms.

Yours truly,
UNCLE SAM

December 15, 1938

Dear Mr. Smith:

Will you kindly bring your boy James and your wife Martha to see us next Tuesday morning if convenient? We have something to talk over that we think will interest you.

Yours truly,
JOHN JONES
Welfare Department.

This, in the very simplest terms, is the gist of some important correspondence that has been entered into during the past six months. There hasn't been much in the papers about it yet. What it all comes down to is that the government is trying to help the clothing manufacturers out of a hole, put garment workers back on their jobs, and give clothes to people who are so poor that they couldn't possibly get new cloths in any other way.

HILLMAN'S IDEA

The idea originated with Pres. Sidney Hillman of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers. Union members were jobless, stocks of clothes had piled up, and the industry was in a sick condition.

Hillman communicated with WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins, made arrangements for the government to become Number One clothing buyer.

And so last June a letter went out to every clothing manufacturer in the country. Soon the samples began to come in. Next, a dozen dollar-a-year men from the biggest clothing wholesale houses in the country set to work to choose the best bargains for the Government out of the thousands offered.

Next, through the Treasury Procurement Division, the Government bought $15,000,000 worth of warm, sturdy coats, suits and dresses, most of them practically at cost, to be distributed to people like Mr. and Mrs. Smith and their boy James who couldn't possibly buy them but who needed them the worse way.

EMPLOYERS HAPPY

Competition with business, all this? Not at all. After business had a chance to study the plan, it enthusiastically endorsed it.

The people who are getting these clothes aren't potential customers. Some of them never had a decent garment before in their lives; all of them are in such desperate need that a few extra nickels spent on milk would cause a serious budget problem. Moreover, they represent less than one-tenth of the people in this country badly in need of essential clothing and unable to buy it.

Remember the old story of Mahomet and the mountain? All right, said Hopkins, here is your mountain—a mountain of clothing surpluses piled up so high it would take a Swiss yodeler to get into communication with the owners. Will the mountain move? It will not.

IT'S SIMPLE!

How about bringing Mahomet to the mountain? How about letting case workers from local relief offices find out just what people need a coat or a suit the most? Get statisticians to figure out the proper proportion of people in each state to get the clothes, so that distribution will be just as even and fair as possible.

What happened was that 70,000 workers in the garment industry went back to their jobs; payrolls increased by more than $2,500,000 weekly (this in spite of seasonal trends); ninety-five per cent of the surplus in men's and boys' clothing was absorbed, and hundreds of factories began operating full time.

Altogether, 3,385,000 units of union-made men's and boys' wear, and 3,055,000 units of women's and children's wear have been purchased.

Clothes from Uncle Sam

Millions of people throughout the nation have benefitted through the WPA plan of buying up surplus clothing and distributing it to the needy. Picture shows typical scenes as children and men receive new garments from WPA.

Union, Goodyear End Parleys

Akron, Ohio.—Negotiations for a written contract with the Goodyear Company here have ended for the present with the firm refusal to enter into an agreement "at this time", Local 2, United Rubber Workers announced here.

Efforts to get the company to sign a contract began in June 1937, at which time Goodyear officials indicated they were ready to negotiate an agreement. Conferences held at various times for more than a year, however, failed to induce the company to agree to terms which the CIO union could accept.

READY TO RESUME

The negotiating committee states that it is ready to resume conferences at any time.

URW locals at Cumberland, Md., and Los Angeles, Calif., say that they have received the same treatment as Local 2.

Goodyear is the only large rubber company in the United States operating on a strictly open shop basis. The firm's chief competitors, Goodrich, Firestone, and U. S. Rubber, are all operating under written contracts with the United Rubber Workers.

Ask Mooney To Address Oregon CIO

Portland, Oreg. — (FP) — Tom Mooney has been asked to address Oregon's first CIO state convention, which meets here January 14.

Mooney will owe his freedom to the solidarity of the California workers who elected the liberal Culbert L. Olson as governor, said James Frantz, Portland CIO official and secretary of the convention arrangements committee.

"In achieving this solidarity, Mooney himself played a vital role," Frantz added. "His message to Oregon workers at a time when they are faced with the necessity of removing the anti-labor initiative 131 from the statute books would therefore be of the greatest importance."

Oregon observers believe Mooney will be free in time to attend the convention.

Hearst Thugs Face Judge

Three Hearst thugs face a Chicago judge after their arrest on a disordery conduct charge. They were waiting in a parked car outside the home of a member of the Newspaper Guild on strike at the Hearst papers. In their car police found lead-filled pipes and clubs.

Labor Board Reports On Cases

Washington—Since the Fall of 1935, a total of 18,591 cases involving more than 4,000,000 workers has been handled by the Natl. Labor Relations Board. In November, 1938, alone, 548 cases affecting 71,390 employes were closed. The figures include all cases up to December 1, 1938.

Less than 2,000 of the cases arose out of strikes. Out of the total of 1,933 strike cases, involving 330,471 workers, 1,459 or about 75 per cent were settled. More than 216,000 workers were reinstated following strikes and lockouts, and an additional 14,280 were reinstated after discriminatory charges.

NEWARK, N. J.—"Your No. 1 problem is to protect the security of those less fortunate than yourselves," James Carey, UERMW president, told 300 delegates to the installation meeting of the Greater Newark Industrial Union Council here tonight.

"Unemployment is the greatest question facing union members," Carey said. He told the delegates it was their duty to let their Congressmen know their feeling on proposals to slash WPA appropriation and emasculate the Wagner Act.

DEFENDS WAGNER ACT

Defending the record of the Wagner Act, Emil Rieve, president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, warned of a "flank movement to deprive the National Labor Relations Board of the power to render judgments and the suggestion has been made that, since this is a judicial function, it should be lodged in the courts. The role of judges and courts in labor disputes has convinced everyone that, in these tribunals, labor unions are treated as social and economic outcasts."

The proposed amendment to the act which would "free workers from coercion of any sort," was bitterly attacked by Rieve as being sponsored by employers' organizations.

A resolution opposing any changes in the Wagner Act was passed by the delegates, who are officers and executive board members of all CIO unions in the area.

Ernest Arvidson, UERMW official, was re-elected president of the GNIUC. Edward Selden of the FAECT was re-elected secretary and William Ross, treasurer. Albert Stango is new treasurer.

Plans for legislative action through Labor's Non-Partisan League against the Hague machine, and for functioning of all unions in the area through affiliation to the GNIUC, were discussed on the basis of an officers' report presented by Bro. Arvidson. W. J. Carney, state CIO director, presided.

30,000 MILES

Washington—WPA workers have built or improved more than 30,000 miles of roads and tsreets during the fourth month period from July to November, 1938, according to an announcement made by Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator.

Open-Shoppers Honor Dies

CHICAGO—Some of this city's leading open shop employers this week gave credit where credit is due.

In the grand ball room of the Stevens Hotel, members of the Employers Association of Chicago celebrated the 37th anniversary of the founding of the organization by having as their guest Rep. Martin L. Dies, who spoke on "Americanism."

Specialty of the outfit which is bringing Dies to Chicago is the breaking of strikes. At the present time it is engaged in fighting a strike of restaurant and waiters.

One of the selling points of the Association, it has been charged, is that members may utilize its strikebreaking service. Director of the outfit is Gordon L. Hostetter, who formerly functioned as head of the strikebreaking and gumshoe activities of the Seagrove-Christenson Agency, which for a number of years handled the anti-labor work of the Association.

When Hostetter came directly over to the bosses, they stopped using the detective agency and let their new director handle anti-union work directly.

CONGRATULATE FDR

New York—Local 105 of the CIO Intl. Woodworkers of America has wired President Roosevelt congratulating him on his message to Congress.

The local was especially interested in Roosevelt's "characterization of social security as an integral part of national security."

Ignore Plea Of Jobless

Washington — Tories in the House of Representatives this week called for a cut in the deficiency appropriation for WPA to $725,000,000, an amount less than asked by Pres. Roosevelt, the CIO, jobless and civic organizations.

A coalition of conservative Democrats and Republicans voted down the President's request for $875,000,000 by a vote of 226-137, using a parliamentary trick to avoid a roll-call vote.

As The CIO NEWS went to press, debate was continuing on the bill in the House. Reactionary leaders had hoped to ride it through with little difficulty, but a flood of wires and letters protesting the cut had influenced many of the Congressmen.

After the passage in the House, the appropriations bill will go to the Senate, where hearings are to start Monday, Jan. 16.

The CIO had asked for a billion dollar appropriation, while the mayors sought $915,000,000 and Pres. Roosevelt $875,000,000.

Four CIO Men On Pay Board

Washington — Four CIO members were named this week to the wool industry committee named by Wage-Hour Administrator Andrews to establish a minimum wage for the 150,000 workers in the industry.

Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and vice-president of the CIO; Emil Rieve, Horace Riviere and Louis Guilmet of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee were appointed. One AFL representative was also chosen.

The committee is the third formed by the wage-hour administration. Others previously announced will deal with wage problems in the textile and in the apparel industries.

Donald M. Nelson of Chicago, Sears Roebuck executive, heads the group, while Prof. George W. Taylor, of Philadelphia, who has long been an arbitrator in the hosiery industry, is vice-chairman. Both are also on the textile committee.

Unions Fight Anti-Labor Proposals

Republicans Seek To Curb Right To Strike

DETROIT—Organized labor in Michigan is preparing for a stiff battle against Republican attempts to hamstring the right to strike and to picket now brewing in the minds of newly-elected Governor Fitzgerald and the big anti-union employers whose money put him into office.

Under Fitzgerald's announced plans, strikes will be illegal unless called by three "recognized officers of recognized unions, or by three representatives named by a bona fide vote of the employes of any plant."

After that, the strikers would have to give 10 days' notice in writing to a Labor Board, to be followed by mediation by the Governor, if the board fails. During this time of course the men would stay at work.

If even the Governor decides the strike is legal, it must be conducted in a thoroughly restricted fashion. Only employes of the struck plant could picket, and then all they could do is to "advertise the fact that those participating in legal strikes believe their employer is unfair."

MORE DELAY

Strikes in "utilities, dairies, food establishments, delivery services or other enterprises where cessation would be injurious to the health of the people" would be even further handicapped.

In such places, the Governor would enforce a rule requiring an added 30 days mediation delay to the original 10. If that fails, the state would take over the plants and operate them until a settlement was reached. Nothing is said on this point about profits from the operation of the plants. Presumably they would continue to go to the employer, who would then have no further need for his workers, since the state would be making money for him.

The plan is dressed up with language about protecting labor and maintaining the right to strike and bargain collectively. The Governor even goes out of his way to say that company unions will be forbidden, but admits that "the right to form a bona fide independent union would be recognized."

Michigan is full of these "independents" that invariably turn out to be independent of everything but the company.

UNIONS CRITICAL

The Republican plans got sharp condemnation from both CIO and AFL leaders in Michigan. Adolph Germer, CIO regional director in Detroit, declared:

"The Governor would put the right to strike in a straitjacket. Labor would always rather confer than walk the picket line but employers force strikes. Had General Motors done before what it did afterwards there would have been no GM strike. It is absurd to outlaw mass picketing. Unions are no longer criminal conspiracies. The Governor seems to breed the troubles he says he desires to prevent."

Secretary John Reid of the state AFL body commented:

"We will go along on any bill that is right, but labor will never give up the right to strike, nor have that right abridged in any manner that will work to the advantage of employers."

League Starts To Expand Activities

Washington—Expansion of the organizing activities of Labor's Non-Partisan League in line with the recent policy statement of Chairman John L. Lewis for 1939-40 was announced by the League's national office.

Under the expanded program of League action particular emphasis is being placed on enlisting progressive-minded voters from outside as well as inside the ranks of organized labor. Effective January 1 the League opened its membership to any American approving its tenets.

The League is adding organizers to its national and field staffs. Special advices are going forward to League affiliates on how to proceed under the new program.

Further development of League units in the northeastern states, especially in the larger cities, is an immediate goal and action to this end has been begun. Organizers from the national office are being sent into these cities to confer with League officials there and assist them with this program.

Murphy Cuts Sentence Of Maki

Marenisco, Mich.—Ero Maki, union woodworker, who was sentenced to 20 years during the strike of the Michigan timber workers in the summer of 1937, will be eligible for release March 15.

His sentence was reduced to two years by former Gov. Frank Murphy shortly before his term as Governor of Michigan expired.

As Maki has already served 17 months, he will be eligible for release in March. Another worker, Lawrence Kantola, was pardoned by Gov. Murphy in May, 1938.

Local 15 of the Intl. Woodworkers of America, CIO, to which Maki belonged, carried on a vigorous campaign for the release of the two men through the Maki-Kantola Defence Committee.

Madden Charges Burke Lies About Board

Washington — Anti-labor Senator Edward R. Burke, who is a leading enemy of the Wagner Labor Relations Act and one of the principal Tory Democrats on Capitol Hill, has been bluntly accused of "mis-statement of facts, mishandling of statistics and perversions of Labor Board policies" by NLRB Chairman J. Warren Madden.

The accusations were made in an open letter to Burke from Madden, in reply to a recent radio address in which Burke went over stale and false accusations against the Board and repeated Tory outcries for crippling amendments to the Act.

Burke's most recent offensive against the Act was based, according to Madden, on the "fundamental proposition that the Act has failed in its purpose, and the Board in its duty, allegedly because industrial discord has increased."

PHONEY FIGURES

This was fabricated out of statistics of labor disputes in such countries as Palestine and Esthonia, which are compared to similar disputes in the U. S. A. As Madden points out, these figures offer no real basis for comparison, since such countries are primarily agricultural, while the U. S. is predominantly industrial.

The real figures, Madden contends, show that in highly developed nations such as Great Britain, Japan, Sweden, Czecho-Slovakio, Canada, Belgium, France, there were 215 strikes per 1,000,000 wage earners, while in the U. S. there were 44 per 1,000,000 in the same period.

"If you were genuinely interested in the facts, if you were genuinely interested in our problems, if you were genuinely interested in a two-sided discussion, you have had the oportunity to help us and to improve the administration of the law," Madden concludes.

"Your failure to act upon them and your statements, so often unfounded in fact, do not indicate that your interest is fairly to discuss the problems in a genuine attempt to call to our attention mistakes we may have made.

"Rather we believe that as regards the Board, whatever your personal motives may be, you had confused the public with false statements."

Kennedy, Brophy Urge Wilkes-Barre Papers To Sign Guild Pact

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. — Warning reactionaries that labor will not permit emasculation of the Wagner Labor Relations Act, Pennsylvania's Lieutenant-governor Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, spoke before 3,000 people in a local Armory here Monday night in behalf of Newspaper Guildsmen on strike for nearly 16 weeks to win a full union contract.

Kennedy also hit proposed laws seeking to curb labor's rights. He said until the NLRB was established, labor had the right "in theory, only" of organizing, and not in practice. The UMW leader reviewed the Guild's strike, the part the miners' union has played in the controversy to date, and urged continued support of the newspapermen until publishers of the three strike-bound dailies here signed a Guild contract.

'DOWN TO BRASS TACKS'

John Brophy, CIO director, reviewed the growth of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and said furtherance of its policies would checkmate any Fascistic defender of Democracy and said that only by strong, democratically-governed unions can freedom from all "isms" be assured.

He told the publishers to "get down to brass tacks" and bargain with the Guild if they hoped to continue business in this labor-minded community, and said the CIO would back the Guild here in its fight to the end.

Michael Quill, president of the Transport Workers' Union, scheduled to speak, was unable to attend.

A resolution urging the Guild to call back publishers into conference to settle the strike was adopted unanimously — with the understanding that if the three daily publishers refused, "labor would take other means to show them the fault of their ways."

CIO-AFL UNITY

Showing again that rank and file labor leaders, not only in this area but in many other sections of the country stand as one when a brother union is threat-following AFL unions were represented on the speaker's platform: Brewery Workers', Bakers', Teamsters', Retail Clerks, Teachers, Hotel and Restaurant Workers', The Locomotive Engineers, independent union, was also represented.

The "mushroom" union sprouted here by top AFL leaders seeking to cause dissension in local union ranks — the Office Workers' "Union" on the three dailies — was also condemned as a "strike-breaking" agency before the large assemblage and roundly booed.

Morris Watson, international vice president of the Guild, Michael Kosik, president of District 1, United Mine Workers of America, and other Guild and labor leaders also spoke.

Gov. Aiken Asks Voice For Labor

By JAMES F. C. CHRISTIE
Vice-Pres., Quarry Workers Int'l Union

South Barre, Vt.—In his inaugural address, delivered before the Vermont General Assembly, Governor Aiken declared that the present Department of Industries requires overhauling.

He suggested that it be reorganized and be named a "Department of Industrial Relations." He also declared that "labor should be represented in the management in this department."

While Vermont labor realizes that it is quite revolutionary to have a voice in any department in the state, it is not letting its imagination run away, in thinking that if, as and when this department is reorganized, it will be a department of labor.

For the Governor stated further in his speech that "it is now time that we expand the scope of our Department of Industries and create a Department of Industrial Relations to (here's the rub), promote and assist our industries and (incidentally) the hitherto insufficiently recognized interests of those who work therein."

Shoe Union Fights Maine Frame-Up

AUBURN, Me.—While Tom Mooney was making a triumphant exit from a California prison, nine members of the United Shoe Workers entered the Androscoggin County jail here to serve five-month sentences for violation of an ancient almost-forgotten state law.

The nine members—one of them a woman—were arrested during the shoe strike in Lewiston-Auburn in 1937, and charged with "conspiracy to injure the business" of the struck companies.

Main Tories have applauded the resurrection of the old statute, pointing out that under a strict interpretation not only strikes but practically all organizing activity in the Pine Tree State could be made illegal.

Appeals by the unions to higher courts failed to win reversals of the original issue. The state supreme court failed to give a decision in the case, while the U. S. Supreme Court held that no federal question was involved.

START CAMPAIGN

National Director Powers Hapgood of the shoe workers union, leading liberals and union leaders throughout New England, as well as Sen. Lodge of Massachusetts, have joined in the protest against the imprisonment of the shoe workers.

Action of the nine convicted workers in coming from Massachusetts to Maine to surrender themselves embarrassed police authorities, who had hoped they would fail to give themselves up. The prisoners were given a gigantic send-off by shoe workers in Lynn, Mass., who pledged to work for their freedom.

STRIKE IN 1937

The strike, which started in March, 1937, against almost 20 shoe companies in the two cities, found the National Guard being used as an anti-union agency. More than 145 strikers were arrested on felony charges, while police jailed dozens of others for alleged misdemeanors.

Director Powers Hapgood, Atty. Sidney Grant and five other union leaders spent 58 days in jail until

Urges Labor Unity In Canada

Glace Bay, N. S.—"My stand is that of strict adherence to the decision of the recent convention of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress held at Niagara Falls, that there would be no division in the ranks of Labor in Canada."

This is the answer of Congress Vice-President D. W. Morrison to the polling of the Congress executive on the question of expelling affiliates of the Congress of CIO unions.

FOR UNITY

Vice-President Morrison of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress, who is also President of District 26, United Mine Workers of America, further declared in his opposition to the poll.

"The organization of which I have the honor of being an officer and a member, the United Mine Workers of America, stands for unity in the ranks of Labor, not only in Canada but in the United States as well."

Justice

Auburn, Me. — Nine members of the United Shoe Workers who are starting to serve 5-month sentences here received wide publicity the day they entered the county jail.

They collected $18.10 for a woman who had been jailed when she was unable to pay a fine. The woman, wife of a jobless worker, had been convicted for inability to pay a tax on a dog given as a present to one of her children.

CIO Wins Poll At Postal

New York—Results of the poll conducted by the Nat'l. Labor Relations Board among the employes of the Postal Telegraph & Cable Co., reveal an overwhelming victory for the American Communications Association, CIO. It was one of the largest elections ever conducted by the Board.

Out of 13,101 employes eligible to vote, 6,506 ballots were cast for the ACA and 1,469 against, with 10 held void. The ACA ran unopposed in the election as the name of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union, AFL, was removed from the ballot at the request of CTU officials.

REGARD FOR ACA

The CIO union's victory was hailed by ACA officials as "a clear indication from the Postal employes of the high regard in which they hold the ACA which has held a contract with Postal covering about 10,000 employes for about a year."

The election was regarded, union spokesmen said, as a "go-ahead" signal to the ACA negotiating committee, now conferring with company officials for a new contract. The ACA victory will bring about 5,000 more workers under the new contract than were covered by last year's agreement.

MUST REHIRE WORKERS

Washington—Swift & Company and its local subsidiary corporation, Newton Packing Co. and Iowa Packing Co., were ordered by the Natl. Relations Board to reinstate, upon application, all employes fired for taking part in a strike at their Detroit, Mich., packing plant during the early spring of 1937.

House May Cut WPA Finances; Distress Looms

WASHINGTON—A barrage of protest from all parts of the nation held up, temporarily at least, a cut in the WPA deficiency appropriation to $725,000,000, as demanded by Tory Congressmen.

Senate hearings will start Monday, Jan. 16, with representatives of the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League appearing to ask for a billion dollar appropriation.

They will start while labor, civic and progressive groups throughout the nation are demanding that WPA appropriations be sufficient to care for the millions of needy.

CIO unions were informing Congressmen that a billion dollars is necessary to keep WPA from being sharply curbed at this time. Among the international unions, the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians sent a letter to Pres. Roosevelt warning of the dangers in a WPA cut.

How the cuts have already affected relief rolls was shown this week in figures released by the state of Pennsylvania. They showed that public relief rolls at their highest peak in three years, with 82,000 persons going on relief in the two-week period ending Jan. 7.

In Cleveland, where unions have been passing numerous resolutions, a mass meeting was held by the CIO late last week. California Congressmen and senators were in receipt of communications from locals affiliated with the Industrial Union Council in San Francisco. In New York City, Allan Haywood, regional director, called upon CIO locals to send their protests to Washington.

In Detroit, the WPA department of the United Automobile Workers planned a conference and plans have been laid for a mass meeting of thousands of workers in Cadillac Square.

MANY APPEAR

Appearing before the sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee were Ralph Hetzel, Jr., CIO unemployment director, who presented the CIO program; Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York, representing the Conference of Mayors; David Lasser of the Workers Alliance, and Col. F. C. Harrington, new WPA administrator.

The hearings were secret and no statement was given explaining the meager $725,000,000 appropriation recommended — $150,000,000 less than the amount asked by Pres. Roosevelt and a quarter-billion less than the CIO has been seeking.

CIO STAND

Hetzel, in a statement to the press after his appearance before the committee, outlined the CIO stand.

"Minimum reliable estimates place the current unemployment of those who are able to work at something between ten

Hearst Chicago Papers Rapped by Board

CHICAGO—The Chicago American and Herald-Examiner were charged wih violation of the Wagner Act in an intermediate report issued by the National Labor Relations Board this week, as the Chicago Newspaper Guild maintained its strike against the two Hearst publications.

At the same time the Guild revealed that Remington-Rand, Inc., originator of the notorious Mohawk Valley Plan of strike-breaking, is cooperating with Hearst to provide scabs for the papers.

The NLRB report, filed by L. A. Bajork, Labor Board regional director here, charged that the management had fired workers for union activity, interfered with the organization of the employes and favored the "Newspaper Commercial Associates," a phoney organization chartered by the AFL to help Hearst fight the Guild.

The Guild had launched proceedings with the Board prior to the beginning of the strike early in December.

RAND SENDS SCABS

That Remington-Rand was branching out to help other employers fight labor was revealed in evidence offered by an AFL union member.

"Shortly after Christmas I saw an advertisement of Remington-Rand in the Chicago Tribune, announcing there were jobs available, but not what kind of jobs.

"I knew Remington-Rand's record. I had heard these were scab jobs. I came to the Guild and offered myself as a guinea pig. Then I went to the Chicago office of Remington Rand. There I was told they were looking for office help and filing clerks. After talking about my experience, I was given a card."

The card introduced Johnson to the head of the Hearst reference room as an applicant for a permanent position as clerk. Four others told similar stories to the Guild, adding that at no time had Remington-Rand told them that the jobs were strike-breaking positions.

SALES DROP DOWN

Indications of the sympathy for the Guild strike was seen in Hearst's action in scrapping a home-delivery circulation system built up at a cost of $4,000,000 during the past eight years. Unable to get the papers to its former 80,000 subscribers, the Hearst management offered another organization free copies for two weeks if it would take over the distribution job.

Some 212 advertisers have already volunteered to withdraw their space from the paper until the end of the strike. In addition, Marshall Field & Co.—one of the nation's largest department stores — has invited Pres. Harry Wohl of the Guild to present the strikers' story to its advertising executives. There are indications that the store may stop advertising after expiration of its present contract with the Hearst papers.

Carey Asks Aid For Democracy

Washington—James B. Carey, secretary of the CIO and president of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, was the featured speaker at the opening meeting of the fifth national Congress for Peace and Democracy here.

Seated on the platform with him were Jerome Davis, president of the American Federation of Teachers, vice-president McLaurin of the Brotherhood of Pullman Porters, and others. Beryl Whitney substituted as chairman for A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, who is also chairman of the Congress Trade Union Committee.

MAINTAIN DEMOCRACY

Centering his speech on the maintenance and extension of democracy in America, Carey told the 2,000 Congress delegates that: "The function of government is to assure security to the people who live under it.

"To assure this security, government must remain democratic. It must preserve human dignity, advance cultural and ethical standards, and assure the people an in-

A & P, CIO Sign Pact In Altoona

Altoona, Pa.—The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., world's largest food distributing system, last week signed a closed shop contract with the United Retail & Wholesale Employes, CIO.

The pact covers employes in two suburbs near here — Curwensville and Clearfield — where three-day strikes had won widespread support from members of the United Mine Workers, who make up a large share of the population.

That the Curwensville and Clearfield contracts were of more than local significance was seen in the fact that A. C. Pierce, national vice-president of the company, was present at the negotiations to assist O. H. Weinert, executive representing the company.

The contracts won a 36 per cent wage increase and a reduction in hours of as high as 80 per cent for the workers affected.

The Force That Frees

It was a great day for labor when Tom Mooney was freed from his living tomb.

During the 22 years of his imprisonment, there was hardly a labor unionist in the United States, or in the world for that matter, who did not hear the story of Tom Mooney.

Mooney's only crime was that he was an aggressive labor organizer. Union fighting employers conspired with their political hirelings to frame him for a ghastly crime he never committed.

Year after year more facts were brought out to show that he was convicted on perjured evidence and to prove his innocence. Yet the powers of reaction were great enough to keep him behind the bars.

Hardly a labor convention of any kind has been held in all these years that has not gone on record for the release of Mooney and his fellow prisoner, Warren K. Billings.

And it is the power of labor that has finally pried loose the prison doors for Mooney. For labor support was the biggest factor in securing the election of Culbert Olson, the progressive governor to whom goes the honor of releasing the labor prisoner.

But almost on the same day that Mooney was freed, nine union shoe workers were consigned to jail in Maine for no other crime than their legitimate activities in a strike of the United Shoe Workers there.

Billings is still in jail, and so are a number of agricultural workers, miners, marine workers, wood workers and others, "whose only crime is that they have struggled for the rights of labor," as the last CIO convention resolution expressed it.

Labor will not forget these other prisoners in its cause, any more than it forgot Mooney. It knows that organization is its chief weapon to end such injustices as well as to fend off the general forces of reaction and oppression which threaten this country as well as the rest of the world today.

Mooney himself pointed this lesson on his release, when he said:

"I know of no greater force in this world today that can prevent the onward march of the terrific, dark and sinister fascist reaction that is creeping over the world than the force of economic organization of the workers."

Fair Words, Foul Acts

We do not know of a single politician who told the voters before election that he didn't give a damn for the unemployed. Nor have we heard of any frankly saying they were going to Congress to make paupers of thousands of people who have only the meager pay of WPA jobs between themselves and starvation.

Before Congress opened WPA was already laying off thousands who had no other means of support. But even to continue the WPA program on its present inadequate scale until the end of June would require an appropriation of at least a billion dollars.

Yet the House appropriations committee voted to recommend only $725,000,000 to keep WPA going, and many members of Congress indicated that they favor this or even worse slashes in support for the unemployed.

All of these politicians who are now so callous to the plight of the unemployed were full of fair words before election. But by their present acts they will be judged.

Labor will continue its fight for an adequate public works program to employ all those who are now jobless through no fault of their own. At the same time it will not forget which members of Congress courted the unemployed in November, only to jilt them in January.

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Let's Study The Facts

BEFORE WPA is strangled to death by reduced appropriations there is one simple project it might start, which would give employment to a few elementary school teachers and save the whole country a lot of trouble.

It would be a course in reading and arithmetic for members of Congress and others who make speeches against the Wagner Labor relations act.

Required reading would be the wording of the act itself and some of the simpler reports on the actual activities of the National Labor Relations Board.

Then, in order to qualify to speak and vote on the subject, the pupils should be able not only to write their own names but also the names of the Board members. The teachers might explain that Smith is a common name, and train the pupils to distinguish between different Smiths by writing out the names Donald Smith and Edwin Smith a hundred times each.

Finally, the course in arithmetic should be continued until the pupils can count at least up to the number of cases decided by the Board in favor of the AFL and against the CIO.

Advanced students might also learn to count up the number of cases in which Board elections and collective bargaining have averted serious industrial strife.

Mistaken Identity

William Green of the AFL should be one of those required to attend at least the above mentioned class in writing. For, according to Kenneth Crawford, reporting in the Philadelphia Record, Green got himself out on a limb in opposing the renomination of Donald Wakefield Smith to the Labor Board through confusing him with the other Smith on the Board, Edwin S. Smith.

As a matter of fact, D. W. Smith supported the AFL craft unit point of view in a number of decisions against industrial unionism; while it was E. S. Smith who brought in minority opinions upholding the right of the workers to vote unitedly in industrial units.

But in spite of this, with as much ingratitude as confusion, Green has continued his campaign against the renomination of the Smith who made the pro-craft decisions.

Facts of the Case

The most elementary study of the Wagner Act and the Board's reports will knock into a cocked hat all the speeches and arguments now being made in favor of the act's revision.

These attacks follow the line that the act is unfair to employers; that it has encouraged rather than reduced industrial strife; that the Board is pro-CIO and anti-AFL, and so forth.

To make such facts readily available, Labor's Non-Partisan League has just published a booklet of facts and figures on the subject, which is a valuable supplement to the pamphlet already published by the CIO giving the arguments why the Wagner act should not be mended.

The League booklet, entitled "Protect the National Labor Relations Act", presents in outline form, first a description of the act, its purposes and its achievements; second, the actual facts which dispose of the various unjustified criticisms of the act and the Labor Board; and finally, the reasons why each of the proposed amendments would defeat the purposes of the act and damage the whole cause of collective bargaining and peaceful industrial relations.

The Act's Enemies

It is the very success of the act in promoting the purposes for which Congress passed it, that has led to the viciousness of the present campaign against it.

By giving the workers organizing rights which the employers themselves have long enjoyed, the act has helped spread collective bargaining through non-union industries. Consequently union-hating employers want to amend it to make it "fair" to their kind.

By enabling workers to vote and negotiate, the act has prevented countless strikes. Therefore professional labor-baiters who fatten on industrial strife hate it and seek to amend it.

A certain type of labor leader has also been drawn into opposition to the act, because it permits the workers to choose the type of union they prefer and because it forbids employer-imposed unionism under whatever guise.

When free to choose their own unions, through Board elections, the great majority of workers have voted for the CIO type of industrial unionism. But this is not to say that the Board is pro-CIO. On the contrary, in the majority of cases in which the Board has had to decide between the CIO and AFL type of units, it has favored the AFL.

But the general benefits of the act have been so great, that no true labor man will lend any support to the present moves to amend and cripple it.

they were finally released on bail. the supreme court later ruled that contempt of court proceedings against them were illegal, and quashed the case.

The National Labor Relations Board confirmed the strikers' charges by finding the majority of the companies guilty of violating the Wagner Act, ordered the reinstatement of many strikers, and called upon the corporations to bargain collectively with the union.

Duluth, St. Louis AFL Groups Rap Attack On Labor Board

WASHINGTON — Flat rejection of the position taken by AFL President William Green and other top officials of the Federation in launching attacks against the Wagner Act has been registered by a number of AFL unions throughout the country who have come out for unqualified support of the law.

In Duluth, General Drivers Local 346, largest AFL union in the city, went on record at its last meeting as "opposed to any amendment at this time to the Wagner Labor Disputes Act."

The Denver Trades & Labor Assembly also defied reactionary AFL leaders by passing a resolution declaring that "the weakening of the act and the impairment of the board's effectiveness will result in great injury to the cause of labor in the United States."

The resolution, introduced by the Typographical Union and the Stagehands' union, praised the Labor Board for its "full and vigorous protection" of the rights of labor.

MEMPHIS

Another repudiation of Green's plan to amend the Wagner Act was voiced by the president of the Memphis Trades & Labor Council during a radio forum broadcast. In answer to a question Council President Lev Loring said:

"The AFL will ask for amendments to the Wagnor Labor Act, but personally I am against it."

Previously, Loring, speaking in what he termed "overall vocabulary," vigorously opposed any changes in the act, which he said was already "150 years late."

"It should not be disturbed," he continued. "If they open it up for amendments it will soon look like the Christmas turkey three days after Christmas—it will be just a carcass."

An editorial appearing in the St. Louis Union Labor Advocate, AFL weekly, pointed out in a recent issue that "the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, too, are clamoring for changes."

Declaring that the Act has "unshackled the working people of America," the editorial lists a number of examples to show that under it "the AFL has grown as never before. We do not know of one St. Louis union that has declined in membership, while we do know of many that have grown phenomenally under the Wagner law."

Deploring attacks on the Act in the face of the phenomenal growth of unions, the editorial asks: "Can labor afford to take the chance and face the danger of losing a thousand times more than any merit the proposed amendments may hold?

"We must not lose sight of the fact that the recent election sent a few additional Old Deal congressmen and senators to Washington and to that extent, the 'copperhead' bloc there has been supplemented. That's why we say of the proposed Wagner Act amendments: 'Handle with care.'

"Admitting that there have been Labor Board errors and injustices here and there, we nevertheless feel that in view of the combination of facts outlined, an attempt from us to alter the Wagner Act in this Congress would be loaded with dynamite and gravely dangerous to the future of organized labor."

and eleven million . . . In the face of this situation the request for a billion to provide an average of 3,350,000 subsistence jobs for our people is modest indeed.

"It is currently estimated that there are at least 750,000 persons certified to the WPA as eligible and in need of work. There are at least as many more who could quickly be so certified if there were adequate certification facilities. Certainly the provision of an average of 3,350,000 jobs for the next five months is not excessive.

"Congress must decide whether there will be an adequate appropriation for the continuation of the WPA for the next five months. Its decision on this appropriation will indicate to the American people whether or not Congress will go forward with the New Deal, or will return our American unemployed to the apple-selling days of Hoover."

The Conference of Mayors blasted the sub-committee's action, pointing out that 1,151,300 WPA workers will be forced off the rolls if the reduced appropriation is voted through Congress. As a result, only about 2,000,000 workers would be left on the WPA payroll by the end of the fiscal year June 30, the statement warned.

LETTER FROM ICKES

Greetings from Harold L. Ickes, U. S. Secretary of the Interior, were read to the Congress, in place of a scheduled speech that Ickes was unable to give.

"The greatest safeguard of democracy is real demcoracy," Secretary Ickes wrote, "which means equal opportunity under the law for every citizen; the right of free press, free speech, free assemblage, the right of every man to face his accuser, to defend himself when attacked and to be regarded as innocent until his guilt is proved beyond a reasonable shadow of a doubt."

The Congress, sponsored by the American League for Peace and Democracy, was attended by delegates from CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhood unions, church groups, youth organizations, womens' groups, civic federations and the like.

Main theme of the Congress was defense of the Wagner Labor Relations Act, together with measures to defeat the menace of Fascism in this country and abroad.

Board Report Shows Great Gains Won by Labor Under Wagner Act

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON — The overwhelming majoriy of American workers vote for the CIO, when given the chance to decide which union they want to do their collective bargaining for them.

Figures in the third annual report of the National Labor Relations Board, just released, show the CIO far in the lead on number of elections won and on number of times workers have used the Wagner Act to indicate their preference.

During the past year, the CIO won close to 70 per cent of elections for collective bargaining agency in which it participated. Over 175,000 voters were involved in 816 elections.

These contests, the report shows, were 86.4 per cent of the total run during the year.

The nearest figures to those of the CIO show that the AFL wasn't as active in utilizing the Act its top leaders want to amend, since it took part in 604 elections, of which it won only 43.5 per cent.

WINS OVER AFL

The CIO showing on victories is even better in those elections where CIO and AFL each ran. There were 312 of these, of which the CIO won 219, leaving 86 for the AFL.

Many more workers took part in elections in which the CIO was involved. In all its 816 cases, an average of 215 voters took part. In those in which the AFL was concerned, the average was 94. The total number of workers in CIO votes was nearly three times as great as those in AFL contests, the totals being 175,000 and 60,000.

Just to push the comparisons a little further, study of the election charts in the report shows that AFL election victories trailed behind those won by unaffiliated unions by three per cent, with approximately the same number of workers involved.

In only one respect was the AFL ahead of the CIO, and that was in favorable decisions handed down by the Board involving the question of the appropriate bargaining unit.

These cases involve the heart of the principle of industrial unionism. AFL top leaders are always claiming that workers in Labor Board cases should be broken up into small craft units for collective bargaining representation. They don't like the idea of all the workers in one plant or one industry being represented by one union—which is the basic CIO idea.

LEANING TO THE AFL

So they intervene whenever they have even the shadow of an excuse—and often when they don't—demanding that the workers be split up into little craft divisions and these splinters certified separately.

Thirty-nine of these cases have been brought before the Board by the AFL leaders in the year covered by the report. Of these, the Board gave the decision to the AFL in 21, to the CIO in 18.

This point ought to meet one of the principal attacks by the AFL Executive Council, which bases its demand for amendments to the Wagner Act on the charge that the Labor Board is pro-CIO.

The evidence shows exactly the opposite—that on questions of appropriate unit for collective bargaining representation, the Board has ruled against the CIO and for the AFL in the majority of cases.

STRIKES CUT

Other sections of the Labor Board report show how the Act has helped to prevent labor disputes from reaching the strike stage. Discussing this point, the report says:

"The purpose of the Act is to provide a legal channel through which labor disputes centering around the right to organize and bargain collectively can be adjusted without resort to strikes or other forms of economic action."

Then, after pointing out that since April, 1937, when the Supreme Court upheld the Act, the number of disputes settled by the Board has been far ahead of the number of strikes conducted for union recognition, the report states:

"As an established, legally sanctioned agency, it (the Board) provides an outlet for industrial protest which might otherwise result in strikes; and a larger proportion of such protests are being taken to the Board rather than expressed in the form of strikes."

SETTLED OUT OF COURT

The value of the Board's work in carrying out the Act is clearly shown in the summary of cases settled without the necessity of formal orders by the Board itself.

Of 8,851 cases settled during the year covered by the report, 95 per cent were dealt with without the necessity of formal hearings. Regional officers were able to effect settlements out of court—that is, without going through a full dress National Board hearing. Only five per cent had to be taken to Washington headquarters.

Some idea of the scope of the Board's activities can be gained from the total number of cases under consideration during the year, which was 12,632, involving over 3,000,000 workers.

Another test of the Board's work, the report says, is contained in its court record. In spite of the fact that anti-labor employers have used every conceivable means in their attack on the court, relying chiefly on long drawn-out legal action, the Board has been sustained every time by the U. S. Supreme Court, has lost only six of 27 cases in the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Nation Hails Mooney Release

Thousands Cheer Labor Martyr In San Francisco

By MIRIAM ALLEN DeFORD

(Special to THE CIO NEWS)

SAN FRANCISCO — Never in the history of San Francisco has there been such an ovation as when Tom Mooney came home to his people.

The scene when Gov. Culbert Olson, in the Assembly Chamber at Sacramento, handed Mooney his "free and unconditional pardon" and when Mooney, a free man for the first time in nearly 23 years, pledged himself first to the freedom of Billings, then to forwarding the unity of labor — that scene was impressive enough.

For several minutes Mooney tried in vain to speak while the crowd yelled and cheered, following the granting of his pardon. Then, while reviewing the scene of his conviction, he broke down completely and burst into tears.

When he recovered, he said, "I am not unmindful of the tremendous significance of this occasion and all the forces that go to make it. You (to Gov. Olson) and myself and the scene just enacted are symbols of the democratic expression of the will and desires of the people of California. It is not a case of an individual charged with the crime of murder — it symbolizes our whole economic, political and social life, not only in California but in the entire world. The present economic system is in a state of decay. It will be replaced by a new, and I hope, a better social order, and to that end I shall dedicate my life."

The next day 50,000 union members — CIO, AFL and railway brotherhood workers — marched from San Francisco's Embarcadero up to the City Hall, with Tom marching with his own union. The CIO longshoremen had charge of the parade, and by herculean effort cleared a way for it through the cheering throngs which lined the streets.

For at least 200,000 San Franciscans — perhaps more — lined and filled the streets. They stretched, a silent solid mass for three square blocks, in the Civic Center, to hear Tom speak from a rostrum built in front of the City Hall steps.

Lieutenant-Governor Ellis E. Patterson spoke; Robert Minor, head of Mooney's first defense committee, came from New York to speak; and Jack Shelley, liberal young president of the city's AFL labor council and a newly-elected state senator, was chairman.

But the greatest applause of the day, except for the cheers for Mooney himself, went to Harry Bridges when he rose to speak, preceded by a telegram from CIO Pres. John L. Lewis authorizing him to act on behalf of the entire CIO. Bridges pledged the CIO's resources to the freeing of the 11 other labor prisoners in San Quentin and Folsom.

PLEDGES NEW FIGHT

Mooney, after telling of his appreciation for the management of the reception demonstration, pledged himself to work once again for the freedom of Warren K. Billings.

"The next most necessary step is complete unity in the labor movement," he said, adding that the "only thing that stands between the people of this country and absolute slavery is a genuine militant labor organization.

"The convicts in San Quentin have more liberty than any human being in Germany or Italy. But fascism is not three thousand or seven thousand miles away. The California anti-labor initiative was the first step toward fascism in California.

"The same corrupt gang that framed Billings and myself was back of it."

After a complete review of the frameup, from 1913 on, Mooney said that he himself "was a symbol of the wreck of that monstrous conspiracy. But there are other potential Tom Mooneys and Warren Billingses and Earl Kings. Who knows but that any of you might not be railroaded to prison because of your fidelity to the working class? Nothing would give more pleasure to the same gang that farmed me than to railroad Harry Bridges."

Mooney plunged into a busy week, following the initial demonstration. He joined the picket line of AFL retail employes outside the Kress department store in downtown Frisco, and gave the strikers $5—half of the sum the state of California gives to each released prisoner. Then he went over to headquarters of the Newspaper Guild, and donated the other five-dollar bill to the Guild strikers on the Chicago American and Herald-Examiner.

He attended, later in the week, a big dance staged by his own union—the AFL moulders. CIO longshoremen packed their Hall when he appeared at their regular meeting. Speaking over a nation-wide hookup, he once again told of his future plans. Later in the week, he was to attend a giant mass meeting in Los Angeles.

TO TAKE REST

After that, Mooney contemplates a thorough physical check up and a good rest to help him gain some of the strength lost during his long years in prison. After that—back to the fight for labor's rights.

But now, a happy, tired man, he breathes in the fresh air, glories in the sunshine, shakes a thousand hands — "the longshoremen were the worst," he smiled, looking at his own tired hand—and receives congratulations by wire and mail and phone from workers in all parts of the world who took part in his 22-year fight for freedom and justification.

Prison Doors Swing Open

Mooney, his face wreathed in smiles, steps out of his cell in San Quentin prison for the last time. A few hours later, he received his pardon from Gov. Olson.

Warren K. Billings, still serving a life term in a California prison, was greeted by Mooney as soon as he arrived in San Francisco. Mooney will devote much of his time to work for the release of Billings, who, through a legal technicality, may not be pardoned except upon recommendation of the California Supreme Court.

BANNED!

Washington—Shakespeare's Hamlet has been banned in Japan because of the "dangerous thoughts," including disrespect for royalty expressed in it, according to China Information Service.

Voting Power FreedMooney Says League

Washington—"Direct political action by progressive and labor forces in California has now accomplished what two decades of humble petitions, of court battles, and be general national protest had failed to do," declared E. L. Oiver, executive vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, when news of Mooney's release from prison was announced.

"Tom Mooney goes free because of the results of the last California election, and in spite of every court to which he has appealed.

"Labor's Non-Partisan League is proud of its central part in the political fight which won California for progressive government, and finally set Tom Mooney at liberty," he said.

Labor and the Law

By Lee Pressman

CIO General Counsel

Felix Frankfurter

This column recently referred to the CIO convention resolution on federal judges which called upon President Roosevelt to make appointments of men who understand modern problems and have the ability to adjust the law to these problems.

In naming Felix Frankfurter to fill the vacancy on the United States Supreme Court created by the death of Justice Cardozo, the President has made such an appointment. Professor Frankfurter will bring to the Supreme Court a background of considerable experience directly affecting the interests of organized labor.

Others have described Professor Frankfurter's great legal skill and his thorough understanding of vital public issues. We shall mention briefly his outstanding contributions to the development of labor law and civil liberties.

HELPED LABOR

Professor Frankfurter lent his legal ability to labor's fight for the enactment of federal and state anti-injunction laws. He is co-author of a book on labor injunctions which is the outstanding legal analysis of this subject. In this book, he shows how labor injunctions were often used to decide the merits of a labor dispute in favor of the employer, and how, in handing out injunctions, judges frequently violated the fundamental principles of equity.

In concluding his study of the labor injunction, he pointed out that the mere intellectual mastery of the law is not enough. He said:

"Indeed a highly educated Bar is more dangerous to society than one superficially trained, if such mastery is wielded by men who identify the advancement of private interests or the promotion of pernicious abstractions regarding 'freedom' and 'equality' with the purposes of law in our industrialized democracy."

The law, according to Professor Frankfurter, is but an instrument for the achievement of socially desirable objectives.

CIVIL LIBERTIES

In the field of civil liberties, Professor Frankfurter took a leading and courageous role in the attempt to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair, and in the successful fight to free Tom Mooney.

We can expect that his appointment will help to continue the liberal line of decisions which the Supreme Court has recently been making.

DEAN CLARK

President Roosevelt has made another good judicial appointment when he named Dean Charles E. Clark of the Yale Law School to be a judge on the Federal Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit which sits in New York. Dean Clark supported the President's Court Plan and has shown himself to be a vigorous and progressive liberal. He also acted as a trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board in some of its cases.

There are a number of vacancies in the federal judiciary which have not yet been filled. CIO organizations throughout the country should learn about the candidates for these offices in their localities and let their Congressmen and President Roosevelt know whom they believe qualified to serve as federal judges.

LaFollette Committee Bares New Spy Data From Cleveland

WASHINGTON—Strong evidence that the Associated Industries of Cleveland derived a large portion of its income from anti-labor espionage services, and that it worked closely with a large labor spy service, was disclosed this week by the LaFollette civil liberties committee.

The committee was able to make its findings despite the fact that the Associated Industries and the Corporation Service Bureau haddestroyed a number of documents which their executives feared might shed light on their espionage activities.

"The Corporation Service Bureau offered industrial espionage service to its clients," the commitee said, "and many of its clients were members of Associated Industires, but there were no documentary records of any other connection between Associated Industries and the detective agency."

Committee investigators noted, however, that a number of entries on the income account of the employers groups had been eradicated, with the word "contribution" substituted. Analysis by technical experts at the Department of Justice showed, however, that in every case the original wording had contained the name of the Corporation Service Bureau.

ESPIONAGE

Reconstructing the evidence, the committee found that in 1934 and "possibly earlier," AI had employed its own agents. Though William Frew Long, secretary of the association, had claimed that they were merely used to watch "communists," they were actually active in labor meetings and among workers in factories.

In the later part of 1933, and until February, 1935, the association was billed by the Corporation Service Bureau for undercover work, with the association in turn billing its member-clients.

These included the Ohio Rubber Co., the Cleveland, Statler and Carter hotels, the Addressograph-Multigraph Co. and the Reliance Electrical & Engineering Co.

During 1936 and 1937, the detective agency made contributions to Associated Industries totaling $2,385. Whether this was in the form of a "kickback" is uncertain, the committee said, but pointed to the importance of the fact that the employer group received some of the profits of labor espionage for its own treasury.

EDUCATION

The "Vocational Education" account on the AI books, the committee asserted, was probprobably the cover for the financial dealings in the labor spy business. Income on this account totaled more than $23,000 in 1933-35, and in 1934 amounted to 20.5 per cent of the outfit's entire receipts.

In another statement, the committee, pointed to official connections among Girdler's Republic Steel Corp., Youngstown Sheet & Tube, the powerful Cleveland Trust Co., the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co.

The evidence, the committee indicated, points to a "community of interest through stock ownership and common management of iron ore properties." Referring to the 1937 Little Steel strike, the committee noted that the links between the companies "would seem to indicate . . . at least sympathetic understanding in matters of economic policy."

Ask Relief For Tenant Farmers

Washington. — The CIO this week took a direct hand in securing relief for the more than 1,000 sharecropper families facing destitution and winter weather on the open roads in southeastern Missouri.

Wires were sent by John Brophy, national director, demanding relief and works projects from U. S. government agencies, including the Secretary of Agriculture, WPA Administrator Harrington, W. W. Alexander, head of Farm Security, and J. W. Tapp, chief of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corp.

The sharecroppers, who are members of the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers, were thrown off their land by cotton planters greedy for even more profits than they could make by exploitation on the sharecrop system, and who are anxious to mechanize their farms and to get Federal benefits by acreage reduction.

The evictions were carried out in spite of Federal rulings that sharecroppers must receive part of the benefits under the program, and in spite of the fact that they had no place to go.

APPEAL TO GOVERNOR

O. H. Whitfield, vice-president of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union (a section of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers, appealed to Governor Stark of Missouri for National Guard tents and food supplies for the evicted families, who have no shelter and very little food.

At the same time H. L. Mitchell, secretary of the STFU, wrote to all southern Congressmen and Senators calling attention to the critical situation and urging an additional $125,000,000 on President Roosevelt's relief bill for use in the cotton growing areas.

Olson Pardoned Mooney; Tory Freed Labor Spy

Sacramento—Nothing has more clearly brought out the difference in the labor viewpoint between California's new governor, Culbert Olson, and that of ex-Governor Frank Merriam, CIO West Coast unionists say, than two instances having to do with pardons.

One of Governor Olson's first official acts after taking office was to pardon Tom Mooney, framed labor prisoner, whom California governors for more than 20 years had refused to free.

During the closing weeks of Merriam's regime, one of his final acts was to pardon Arthur James Kent, alias Scott, alias Parker, labor spy and twice convicted thief, who was sentenced recently to serve 15 years at Folsom prison for burglary.

Merriam freed Kent "for exposing and interpreting radical and subversive activities in the United States." Kent, CIO officials here point out, was reputed to be in the employ of Col. Henry Sanborn, who admitted writing the report which Harper Knowles presented to the Dies Committee.

It was on "evidence" given by Kent, they say, that attempts were made to frame Harry Bridges, West Coast CIO director and head of the Int. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

Cut Relief?

Guild Renews Contract

Cumberland, Md. — The Newspaper Guild here has succeeded in renewing its contract with the Times and Alleganian Company, publishers of the Evening Times, Sunday Times, and Cumberland News.

Last year the Guild had contracts with both the Times Company and the Cumberland Daily News Company, then publishers of the Daily News. Later the Daily News was bought by the Times, following which an attempt was made to smash the Guild by refusing to hire members of the old News staff.

New York Bus Drivers Get New Contract

NEW YORK—Wage boosts ranging from 6 to 18 per cent and establishment of a new high minimum wage for intra-city bus operators of $48.50 is included in a new closed shop contract signed by the CIO Transport Workers Union in behalf of 2,500 employes of the New York City Omnibus Corporation, largest bus company in the metropolis.

The wage boosts, averaging 12½ per cent, were granted on top of wage increases of from 8 to 16 per cent won by the TWU in its first closed shop agreement negotiated 18 months ago. The new agreement, announced by John Santo, international secretary-treasurer of the TWU, is to run until March 1, 1941.

Other new improvements won by the TWU in the new pact include sick leave with pay of one week; four holidays with pay per year; pay for traveling time to and from terminals; two weeks' vacation for three-year men and one week for those employed less than three years;

free passes to employes' wives and limitation of swing runs to 9 hours.

5 PER CENT RAISE

Negotiations with the Fifth Avenue Coach Company, which is controlled by the same holding corporation headed by John A. Ritchie of New York and Chicago, resulted in wage boosts averaging 5 per cent on top of increases of 10 per cent granted 18 months ago. Other features of the new Omnibus agreement also are included in the new TWU contract covering the 1,500 Fifth Avenue Coach employes.

"The wage scale for Omnibus drivers is the highest in the United States and the contracts just reached with both the Omnibus and Fifth Avenue companies are the best all-around agreements in the industry," Mr. Santo declared.

The Transport Workers Union has been busy on many other fronts as well.

During the past week, it won by 70 per cent the election to become the bargaining agent for 1163 ticket agents, mostly women, employed by the B.M.T. subway and elevated system in New York. Loser in the election was the AFL's Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes union which had 'muscled in' and taken over leadership of a company union outlawed by the State Labor Relations Board on a complaint filed by the TWU.

The election gives the TWU sole bargaining rights for all the 12,000 employes of the B.M.T. System.

By an 87 per cent margin, the TWU also won a collective bargaining election to represent the 400 employes of the East Side Omnibus and the Comprehensive Omnibus Corporations.

TAXI NEGOTIATIONS

The TWU, Santo reports, is now carrying on negotiations for a new agreement covering all BMT workers, the East Side and Comprehensive bus employes, and 5,500 taxi drivers employed by the Parmelee and Terminal taxi systems, largest in greater New York.

The taxi negotiations are the first to be held as a result of the TWU's victory in the city-wide strike January 3, 4, 5. Negotiations with smaller taxi fleets in New York are to begin soon.

Aid Refugees, Honor Hillman

New York—A group of CIO unions here headed by the Amagamated Clothing Workers, is cooperating with Ort, an organization for aiding Jews in Europe, in a drive called the "fund for the Hillman Labor Institute."

The money is to be used to establish an Ort Labor House in Kovno, Lithuania, in honor of Sidney Hillman, president of the ACW, who was born in that town.

Proof of the Pudding

If anybody needed proof that New York's taxi strike was effective, here it is. The photographer just mosied over to the taxi company's parking lot and snapped this shot of cabs lying idle. Strike ended when the drivers chose the Transport Workers Union, CIO, as bargaining agent for 60% of their number.

60% of Homes Need Repairs

Washington — Only 40 per cent of American homes covered in a survey of 203 cities are in good condition, Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA Administrator announced this week.

Some 8,000,000 homes were inspected in the study.

More than 16 per cent of the homes covered by the study, with the exception of New York City residences, were rated "unfit for use" or in need of major repairs to make them habitable. Over 40 per cent lacked central heating while 20 per cent were without private bath or shower.

In the southeast, it was found one city home in four had no gas or electric lighting and nearly hal fwere without gas or electric cooking equipment.

And no code are used as members of the American Communications Assn. picket the offices of Press Wireless, Inc., in San Francisco. A strike has kept the firm, which handles press messages to and from the United States and the Far East, closed down tight.

New Homes For Old

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing.

By THOMAS HUMPHRIES

A Question from Portland

Dear Brother Humphries:

Is it true that a USHA housing project here would increase local taxes?

The real estate people here have just won a big fight. They've succeeded in preventing the city government from setting up a local housing authority which would build a workers' housing project with money borrowed from the United States Housing Authority.

Their main argument—as set forth in an anti-housing leaflet—is that a USHA housing project would mean "A New Financial Burden on City of Portland." Is this true?

H. B., Portland, Oregon.

* * *

Absolutely not!

A USHA project in Portland—or in any other city—would help to lighten the city's financial burden.

PUBLIC HOUSING COST

A public housing project—even though financed by the USHA—does cost a city something. But very little.

The only cost to a city is the amount of tax revenue it loses by replacing tax-paying slum dwellings with a tax-exempt project.

This loss naturally is always extremely small—for the simple reason that no city ever collects much taxes from the slums. First of all, slum property isn't worth much and the taxes levied on it don't amount to very much. Second, the taxes that are levied are not collected. Tax delinquencies are always high in slum areas.

BENEFITS

But the small tax loss which every housing projects means to a city is more than overbalanced by the benefits which a city reaps from every housing project.

These benefits are of two kinds, those that increase a city's income and those that decrease its expenditures.

Wherever a housing project is constructed, the property in the neighborhood increases in value. Tax delinquencies decline. Modernization or improvements often take place. New dwellings and new stores spring up. All of these things mean a larger income to a city—without any increase in the tax rate.

How does a housing project decrease a city's expenditures?

The cost of the extra police, fire and health services which are necessary in slum areas is terrific. Usually it is the greatest drain upon a city's treasury.

LESS EXPENSE

Replacing slums with clean, safe and sanitary dwellings means less disease, less crime and less fires—and thus less expenditures in the slums.

In addition, every housing project means employment. It means more work at good pay for hundreds, sometimes thousands, of a city's workers. Not only for building trades workers, but for the workers in the innumerable building supplies industries — steel, cement, brick, glass, timber, electrical equipment, plumbing, etc.

More employment means lower relief rolls, better business and a more prosperous city.

EASING FINANCIAL BURDENS

Looking at the matter in this light, one can see that the Portland realtors who claimed that a USHA project would mean a financial burden for Portland were either woefully ignorant or deliberately falsifying the facts.

Actual USHA housing projects lighten a city's financial burden. Without them workers' families by the thousands are doomed to live in slums and city treasuries are doomed to foot the bill.

Labor must help to advance the New Deal's Housing Program, H. B., by showing that it provides a method of conserving the taxpayer's money. When labor learns to use this argument to full advantage, the enemies of low-rent housing for workers in every city as well as in Portland—will go down to ignominious defeat.

NATIONWIDE PROTEST SLOWS PLAN TO SLASH WPA FUNDS

Transit Union Cuts Seniority Of 1926 Scabs

NEW YORK—One of the most significant victories in the history of the labor movement has been achieved here by the CIO Transport Workers Union.

In July, 1926, about 400 motormen and switchmen employed by the Interborough Rapid Transit Subway, organized as an independent union and later chartered by the AFL, went on strike. The strike was broken after 26 days by the notorious Pearl S. Bergoff agency.

The strikers were reinstated, but lost their seniority rights. Non-strikers and strike-breakers hired in 1926 were advanced in seniority over the strikers. That was 13 years ago.

Last November when, with CIO President John L. Lewis, the Transport Workers Union negotiated an extension of its closed shop contract covering all 14,000 IRT employes, Thomas E. Murray, Jr., IRT receiver, was persuaded to agree to an election among the affected motormen and switchmen to determine whether the strikers' seniority should be restored.

EASY VICTORY

Held under supervision of the New York State Mediation Board last week, the IRT men voted 75 per cent in favor of restoration. Of the 439 motormen and switchmen eligible to vote, 405 cast ballots; 298 voted for restoration, 105 against, with one void and one blank ballot.

Restoration of seniority to the 1926 strikers will mean as much as 15 and 20 years tenure added to their credit, plus choice of runs which will mean increased earnings and other benefits gained through seniority.

"While as an organization, the Transport Workers Union was not involved in the 1926 strike, it is happy to have been instrumental in righting a wrong committed 13 years ago," declared James J. Fitzsimon, secretary of the TWU's New York local, himself an IRT motorman.

This is not the first time the Transport Workers Union has rectified a wrong committed prior to the unionization of transit workers by the CIO.

CIO Leads At Utility

Washington — Workers in the Consumers Power Co. of Michigan have shown their preference for the CIO in spite of floods of anti-union propaganda poured out both by the company and by the leaders of the AFL Int. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

They have just voted 1164 to 1072 for the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee in a Natl. Labor Board election for certification as collective bargaining agency.

Certify Glass Workers

Washington. — The Federation of Flat Glass Workers gained a new victory this week when it won Labor Board certification as sole bargaining agency for the 6,500 workers in the six plants of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co.

The announcement from the NLRB came shortly before the CIO union started negotiations for a new industry-wide contract for flat glass workers.

As a result of the Board's action, the union will be able for the first time to bargain for employes of the company's plant at Crystal City, Missouri. Over the union's objections the management had excluded the mid-west plant from negotiation for the 1937 contract.

Auto Union Convention March 20

Detroit—The executive board of the United Automobile Workers, in session here this week, voted to call a special convention of the union in Cleveland on March 20.

The union's regular biennial convention had been scheduled for August, in Toledo, Ohio.

Delegates will be asked to elect international officers and executive board, and to make such changes in the constitution as are deemed necessary.

Wagner Files Health Bill

Washington. — Senator Robert Wagner of New York, whose name is closely connected with great government projects in labor, housing and social security, this week announced his sponsorship of an $850,000,000 federal health program.

Senator Wagner announced that his bill would carry out the recommendations made by the National Health Conference last summer, which have the backing of Miss Josephine Roche, chairman of the U. S. committee on health and welfare activities; Pres. Roosevelt, and the CIO.

The CIO Pittsburgh convention endorsed Miss Roche's proposals after she had addressed the delegates and given them a picture of the contemplated program.

The Senator's bill, it is expected, will call for increased medical care, greater hospitalization facilities and a form of health insurance.

Senate May Vote To Restore Cut; House Wavers

WASHINGTON — A flood of protests from CIO unions, from mayors of some of the nation's largest cities, from organizations of the unemployed and from small businessmen seemed this week to be halting the Tory drive to cut the WPA deficiency appropriation to $725,000,000 or less.

The Senate is due to vote on the bill momentarily. A survey of sentiment in the upper house, made by Ralph Hetzel, CIO unemployment director, indicated sufficient sentiment in the Senate to turn the tide in favor of more adequate WPA funds.

Even in the House, where a revolt of conservative Democrats and Republicans sliced $150,000,000 from President Roosevelt's request, a number of Congressmen are considering action to reverse the earlier decision, it was learned.

The CIO has called for a billion dollar appropriation. President John L. Lewis pointed out in a statement some time ago that only that amount will suffice to prevent widespread human misery and a halt to the present business revival.

Secretary James Carey of the CIO, Hetzel, and President Jacob Baker of the United Federal Workers, CIO affiliate, all appeared before the Senate appropriations committee to warn of the dire consequences if the action of the House is repeated in the Senate.

Present WPA funds are almost exhausted, and WPA executives have announced they will have to start dropping projects January 26 unless funds are made available.

CIO, Postal Sign New Contract

New York—The American Communications Association, CIO, gained new power this week when it signed a closed shop contract with the Postal Telegraph Co., covering 13,000 workers throughout the country.

Signing of the contract, which came only a few days after ACA had scored an easy victory in a National Labor Relations Board poll, sharply increases the number of workers covered by the agreement with the firm. The union last year signed a preferential shop contract with Postal.

An important clause provides that when technological improvements are made, the first opportunity to learn new jobs will be given to workers already employed. All full-time workers as of Jan. 12 will remain on full time duty, while part-timing, a cause of much job insecurity, has been eliminated.

Philly Labor Kills Sales Tax

When Tory Councilmen in Philadelphia hit upon the idea of a sales tax to finance city expenditures, CIO groups led the public protest against the plan. Result: the City Council gave up the plan.

Unions Defeat Sales Tax

Philadelphia. — Forces of organized labor mobilized to fight the proposed wage and three per cent sales tax, won an impressive victory when both measures were withdrawn by the City Council.

The Philadelphia CIO Industrial Union Council joined with other labor groups and business organizations in planning a march on the City Council. But 24 hours before it was scheduled to start, the city fathers announced that the sales tax was off and other means would be found to meet the municipal deficit.

CIO Regional Director John Edelman and Carl Bersing, president of the CIO Council, directed the picketing of the homes of all councilmen who voted in favor of the tax, and more than 100,000 leaflets were distributed.

1,600,000 Gain Through Wage-Hour Act

Andrews Report Asks More Power For Enforcement

WASHINGTON—More than a million and a half American workers have gained direct benefits from the Fair Labor Standards Act since it went into effect last October 24, Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews announced in his first annual message to Congress.

Some 300,000 workers, he estimated, have received wage increases bringing their pay up to the 25c-an-hour minimum decreed by the law. The number of workers whose hours have ben cut to 44 a week, or who have been getting time-and--a-half for overtime since October, is 1,384,000, the report said.

When the 30c hourly rate becomes effective in October of this year, the administrator predicted, 550,000 workers will receive wage increases, while 1,751,000 will benefit through the cutting of the work week to 42 hours.

Surveys made by the new section of the Department of Labor "have failed to produce evidence of widespread layoffs" as a result of the enactment of the law, Andrews said.

PUBLIC APPROVES

The division's experience, he added, "has been that employers, employes and the public approve of the purposes of the Act, agree that it is well designed to accomplish these purposes; and wish to see it become within the shortest possible time and integral part of the economic structure of this country.

"This was confirmed during an inspection trip of approximately 8,000 miles made by the Administrator over the Thanksgiving holiday and the week thereafter, on which he stopped in more than a dozen major cities from coast to coast, and discussed the Fair Labor Standards Act with thousands of employers and employes.

"Employers and employes expressed their approval of the Act; and appeared willing to give and take, to go to some trouble to make this law work, and to forego temporary personal advantage for the welfare of their industries and communities and of the nation."

Discussing enforcement of the law, Andrews said "several hundred reported violations" had been investigated but as yet no legal action against violators has been taken. In a number of cases, employers who were not informed of the law's provisions have agreed to pay back wages due to their employes.

RAPS "HOME-WORK"

Major problem facing the administrators, Andrews indicated, was the tendency of low-wage employers to resort to "industrial home work" in order to evade the law.

Commenting on the fact that state labor departments have so far been unable to halt these practices, Andrews said: "It can be safely said even at the present time with only three months of experience with the Fair Labor Standards Act, that further legislation will be necessary with respect to industrial homework if the Fair Labor Standards Act is to function with complete effectiveness in industries in which homework is practiced."

INDICTED

San Antonio (FP)—Mayor C. K. Quin, city boss here and longtime foe of liberal ex-Rep. Maury Maverick, has been indicted by a county grand jury on charges of misappropriating city funds.

New Yorkers, who have benefitted from facilities of WPA projects, protest the dismissal of 1,526 workers on federal art projects. None of the pickets was a WPA employe.

CIO Leads In Board Polls

Washington—CIO unions won 36 elections conducted recently by the National Labor Relations Board, and AFL groups won seven out of a total of 56 polls, figures released by the board reveal.

The United Cannery, Agricultural Packing & Allied Workers won 20 of the CIO victories, 19 of them in Arizona and one in Fresno, California, among employes of various fruit and vegetable growers and distributers.

Four elections were won by CIO local industrial unions in the peanut industry of Suffolk, Virginia; two by the American Communications Association in New York City and two by the United Mine Workers in Kentucky.

OTHER VICTORS

Other CIO unions listed as winning one election each were: the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, American Federation of Hosiery Workers, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, United Shoe Workers, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers' Intl. Oil Workers, Textile Workers Organizing Committee and the United Optical Workers, local industrial union.

Four of the remaining 13 elections were won by independent unions and nine were for no union.

WASHINGTON — Charging that the Maritime Commission has refused to bargain collectively with the union chosen by seamen on Commission ships to represent them, the National Maritime Union, CIO, has filed charges of unfair labor practices with the National Labor Relations Board.

The complaint, filed by William L. Standard of New York, counsel for the CIO seamen, declares that "the United States Maritime Commission is a governmental agency engaged in a proprietary enterprise through its agents, the Southgate Nelson Corp. and in competition with private enterprises in the shipping industry," and is therefore subject to the provisions of the Natl. Labor Relations Act.

"Its failure and refusal to negotiate in good faith with the NMU," the petition states, constitutes a violation of the Act, as "the Maritime Commission is operating these vessels for profit in the same manner as the private operators who are operating with government subsidies."

Textile Union Signs 20 New Contracts

New York — Twenty new closed shop and sole bargaining contracts in various parts of the country have been announced by the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, CIO. Included in these are closed shop agreements signed for the first time in the history of the Philadelphia upholstery and drapery weaving industry.

The Philadelphia contracts, providing for a 40-hour week, eight-hour day, time and a half for overtime, seven holidays, arbitration of grievances, equal division of work and other improvements, were signed by A. Theodore Abbott & Co.; Alta Weaving Co.; Craftex Mills, Inc., of Pa.; Robert Lewis Co.; Zenith Mills, Inc.; Vigilant Mills, Inc.; and Ionic Mills, Inc.

In New York, the standard bias binding agreement was signed by: L. Gerstein; Excelsior; Venus Trimming and Binding; Standard Bias Binding, Fairsex Novelty Co., Inc., H. & D. Klein and M. Doers.

Succeeds Gorman

New York — George Baldanzi, former president of the Federation of Dyers, has been selected by the executive board of the United Textile Workers, to act as president to replace Francis J. Gorman, ousted for attempting to form a dual union.

Chemical Firm OK's Contract

Detroit. — The contract committee of Local 12093, District 50, UMWA, renewed its contract with the American Agricultural Chemical Co. with improved seniority and vacation provisions.

The company agreed not to employ outside mechanics or labor, except in isolated cases where particular skill is needed for the work. Vacations will be granted during 1939 to employes who have worked steadily for five months or more during the fiscal year.

It has been the practice of the company to hire contractors for all construction work. Local 12093 members will now get this extra work except in the event of a shortage of inside mechanics.

The vacation provision is important since a great many workers will not get more than five or six months' steady work during the year. They will now be granted vacation rights on a par with the older workers in the plant.

Organization is progressing in the Florida plant of Agrico and the District hopes to announce an equally good agreement covering the southern workers soon.

WPA RECOGNIZES UNION

Washington—WPA Administrator F. C. Harrington has recognized Local 1 of the United Federal Workers, CIO, as collective bargaining agency for the Washington administrative staff of WPA.

League Offers Play On CIO Convention

NEW YORK—A living newspaper dramatization of the CIO national convention suitable for simple production by CIO locals has been published by the New Theatre League, national center of labor theatres in New York City.

The play dramatizes the highlights of the convention, including the report of John L. Lewis and the most exciting events and important resolutions of the historic gathering. It is scheduled for a showing before CIO educational directors in New York soon.

The League recommends it for production, especially in those locals where reports on the convention have not yet been made.

Inquiries on the script, entitled "The CIO on the March," may be directed to the New Theatre League, 132 West 43rd St., New York City.

CIO Helps Win Pay Lifts For 90,000 in Steel

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON—Ninety thousand steel workers are due to receive substantial wage increases February 1 as a result of CIO activity.

Acting upon recommendations of the Public Contracts Board, Asst. Sec. of Labor C. V. McLaughlin ruled that steel companies in 18 northern states must pay the prevailing wage rate of 62½c an hour if they wish to obtain government orders for steel.

Particularly hard hit by the order are the Republic and Bethlehem firms, whose anti-union policies have been accompanied by wage rates lower than those of the corporations with union contracts.

Action to bring about the government's order, made under the terms of the Walsh-Healey Act, was started last summer by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee through its chairman, Philip Murray. The Act affects all purchases by the government amounting to $10,000 or more.

Importance of the order was seen in the fact that last year the government spent $63,000,000 for iron and steel products, amounting to 9 per cent of all government contracts placed.

HIT CIO FOES

Bethlehem Steel, which has sold more material than any of the other firms to the government, has been a bitter foe of the SWOC.

Only recently an intermediate report of the National Labor Relations Board accused it of violation of the Wagner Act, and called for dissolution of the corporation's old company union.

By its refusal to deal with the CIO steel workers' organization, Bethlehem was paying wages almost 10c an hour less than its unionized competitors, and was therefore able to underbid them on many jobs. Girdler's Republic Steel was in a similar position, Murray told the public contracts board at the initial hearings last summer.

BASIS IS GONE

Now, with the possibility of undercutting wage rates removed it is felt that Little Steel's resistance to bona fide unionism may soon evaporate. The corporations have spent millions of dollars to fight the SWOC, and wasted a score of lives, but organization work has continued steadily in their plants.

The 18 states in which the SWOC minimum wage rate was held to be the "prevailing rate" included all important eastern steel producing areas, as well as Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana and those sections of West Virginia near Pittsburgh where large amounts of steel are manufactured.

Hearst Strike Wins New Support

Chicago — Increasing support for the strike of the Chicago Newspaper Guild against Hearst's two papers in the Windy City was being received here as the fight to win a contract and prevent unlimited firings went into its eighth week.

Strike headquarters anounced the formation of an American Federation of Labor Committee to Aid the Guild Strike. The group, composed of more than 50 union leaders, is headed by representatives of the AFL teachers union and the typographical union.

From CIO unions throughout the country came pledges of support. The CIO maritime committee, meeting in Chicago, adopted a resolution pledging all possible aid.

Meanwhile, the Natl. Biscuit Co. in New York revealed to the Guild that it was dropping all advertising from the two struck papers.

Pressure From Workers Checks Tory Campaign To Cut WPA Funds

The CIO Position

Secretary James B. Carey: "As usual during depressions, industry has made many technological improvements which displace workers, and has placed millions more on part time. The displaced workers are without hope of jobs when industry starts up again, and those on part time are put on full time before the wholly unemployed are taken on.

"Those hundreds of thousands of the unemployed who will be thrown off WPA rolls if the cut goes through will have no hope. I would like to ask the senators and those anonymous representatives who voted for the cut in the House just how many American citizens they are willing to starve in order to carry through this myth of balancing the budget.

"Many months ago the CIO took the position, when John L. Lewis, our president, declared: 'Each worker has the right to a job and must be guaranteed security of employment. This is a basic American right.

" 'If private industry cannot guarantee this right to our people, the federal government must do so with public funds'."

* * *

Unemployment Director Ralph Hetzel: "I say to you with great solemnity that the issue of adequate WPA funds is the most serious one that confronts the Congress.

"The Congress must decide whether or not this administration and this form of government shall provide to the American people relief from unemployment and security from hunger.

"If this Congress blocks attempts to give the common people of this nation elementary security, the Congress will take upon itself in history the blame for turning the people's faith away from democratic institutions and toward alien and un-American faiths.

"It is not hard now for the Congress to give the people what they need. They do not ask for very much. But unless action is taken now, more and more difficult will grow the fight to keep our democracy."

Washington—A majority of the members of the U. S. Senate favor a WPA appropriation of at least $875,000,000, as recommended by President Roosevelt, Ralph Hetzel, CIO unemployment director, declared late last week on the basis of a preliminary survey.

The WPA bill, having been slashed by $150,000,000 in the House, is now under discussion by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The stemming of the Tory cut-relief drive, Hetzel said, "is a reflection of the increasing sentiment throughout the country that is absolutely necessary to appropriate $875,000,000 as a minimum." Hetzel said information from the House shows increasing sentiment for a reversal of its WPA-slash action taken last week.

CIO ASKS BILLION

The CIO, he noted, is still pointing out to members of Congress that the relief situation will be handled adequately only thru a billion dollar appropriation, as demanded by President John L. Lewis.

The slash, President Roosevelt warned Congress, will result in the dropping of a million and a quarter workers from the WPA rolls, and will work hardship on four or five million of their dependents.

The President told his press conference that the question constantly on his mind is, who will feed the needy? The cities are deep in debt, he pointed out, and unable to take on further relief expenditures.

The CIO protests to Congress grew in number following receipt of a letter sent by Hetzel to all affiliates, in which he said that "a group of conservative Democrats banded together last week with the Republicans to slash the amount of the appropriation and to put in the appropriation bill several crippling amendments.

"The Democrats" he charged, "headed by Woodrum of Virginia, pulled a special behind-the-scenes maneuver to prevent any Congressman from putting on record how he voted on cuts on WPA funds.

"These Congressmen worked it out so that the unemployed will never know who is responsible for voting to throw them off WPA jobs."

Green Forces Split Between CIO, AFL In Canada

MONTREAL—Notice of suspension from the Trades and Labor Congress has been sent to all CIO unions in Canada, following an executive council vote forced by Pres. Wm. Green of the American Federation of Labor.

Canadian unions have heretofore maintained their unity in the Congress, despite repeated efforts of AFL headquarters officials to bring about a split in Canada similar to that which they caused in the United States by expelling the CIO unions.

The suspension order brought immediate protest from CIO leaders in Canada. D. W. Morrison, vice-president of the Trades & Labor Congress and District 26 president of the United Mine Workers, declared that the action had been taken despite the fact that the last convention of the Trades and Labor Congress "decided by a practically unanimous vote against any division in the ranks of labor in Canada."

The suspension, he said, "is not the desire nor does it reflect the attitude of labor generally in Canada, whether members of the CIO or AFL."

Silby Barrett, international board member of the UMW and Canadian director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, declared:

"The executive officers of the Trades and Labor Congress pledged themselves in convention in September to a united trade union movement.

"Six hundred fifty delegates pledged themselves for a united trade union movement.

"Ninety per cent of trade unionists of Canada will denounce the decision of the Congress executives as most dictatorial. The executives have no authority to expel any unions which are affiliated with the Trades and Labor Congress."

In announcing the suspension, R. J. Tallon, secretary and acting president of the Trades and Labor Congress, indicated that the suspension was forced by the unyielding attitude of Green and his associates. He expressed the hope that friendly relations would still continue between CIO and AFL unions in Canada.

USED THREATS

Threats of withdrawal of per capita tax payments and even reorganization of the Congress were methods used by the AFL leaders to force a split.

"We are not declaring war on the CIO" Tallon declared. "From the individual point of view each and every one of our members have for the last two years striven to maintain unity in the ranks of the Canadian labor movement. We still want it.

"In our letter of expulsion we reaffirm our friendliness and good spirit. We hope to continue that way."

The Congress Council vote for suspension was 3-1. Morrison, upholding the CIO position for unity, cast the dissenting vote.

CIO Unions Grow Fast In Canada

Toronto — The success of the CIO unions in adding to the total strength of CIO labor is indicated in the recent report to Parliament by Federal Minister of Labor Norman Rogers.

"An outstanding development during the fiscal year 1937-38 was the marked increase in trade union membership throughout the dominion," he says.

The combined Canadian union membership is 343,751. Those adding to the increased membership during this period were mostly CIO unions.

The minister continues: "It is worthy of note that striking progress was made during 1937 in the organization of workers in many industries hitherto largely unorganized. The largest gains of the year were recorded in the steel, automoblie, garment, lumber, rubber, metal mine, mill and smelter, coal mine, electrical and radio industries."

CIO unions have conducted membership drives in all the above-mentioned unions showing that their policy of industrial unionism has greatly benefitted Canadian labor. AFL unions have no such record for the period mentioned by the cabinet member.

State Union In Drive In West

San Francisco. — Membership in the State, County and Municipal Workers, CIO, has increased 25 to 35% in California since the union started its drive in the Golden state a few weeks ago. The state CIO Council and Labor's Non-Partisan League have both pledged full support to the SCMW campaign in California.

Special emphasis is being placed in the drive on the 100 per cent unionization of the State Relief Administration staff.

CIO Sends Delegate To Cuban Labor Congress

Washington — Joseph Kovner, assistant CIO counsel, left for Cuba last week to act as CIO fraternal delegate at the Cuban Labor Congress, whose meetings start in Havana Jan. 23.

The meeting was called to unify labor ranks on the island, where until recently unions have met bitter opposition from the government.

Who Are the Splitters?

Those who desire further proof of who is responsible for present divisions in labor ranks, are invited to examine what has been happening in Canada.

The CIO from the first has stood for a united labor movement. In the United States the movement was split, against its will, by the action of the AFL executive council in expelling the CIO unions.

In Canada, both CIO and AFL unions remained united in the Trades and Labor Congress and in nearly all the local trades councils, despite the split in the United States.

It has been the policy of the CIO in Canada, as it was in the United States, to continue this unity as long as possible. And this policy has succeeded for three years there, because it has also been backed by the AFL membership, as shown by repeated convention decisions of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress.

But the top leaders of the AFL have long been trying to divide Canadian labor in the same way they divided the movement in the United States.

Repeated orders have been issued from AFL headquarters in Washington to drive the CIO unions out of the local trades councils in Canada, and to disaffiliate them from the Trades and Labor Congress.

These orders have been resisted up to now because of the strength of Canadian union sentiment for labor unity. But the pressure from AFL headquarters seems finally to have had effect in the reluctant decision of the executive council of the Trades and Labor Congress to obey William Green's splitting orders.

Vice President D. W. Morrison of the Trades and Labor Congress, who is also president of District 26, United Mine Workers of America, as the one CIO representative among the Congress executives, has upheld the CIO stand for unity throughout.

In opposing any split, he declared: "My stand is that of strict adherence to the decision of the recent convention of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress held at Niagara Falls, that there would be no division in the ranks of labor in Canada.

"The organization of which I have the honor of being an officer and a member, the United Mine Workers of America, stands for unity in the ranks of labor, not only in Canada but in the United States as well."

If the craft leaders finally succeed in splitting the labor movement in Canada, the CIO unions will still continue to stand and work for labor unity.

This they can do with a clear conscience, for the record shows beyond any shadow of doubt who are the splitters of the labor movement. The CIO has stood consistently for the labor unity which is also desired by most of the rank and file of the AFL. The disruptors of this unity are the AFL craft leaders who evidently believe that they can only continue to rule through division.

Something You Are Entitled to Know

The United States is still a democracy. The representatives who are elected to Congress are supposed to carry out the wishes of those who elect them.

If they fail to do so, the voters have the right at the next elections to choose other representatives who will be more responsive to their wishes.

But if the people have no means of knowing how their representatives vote on important issues, they are deprived of one of their essential democratic rights.

Few issues are of more general importance than the recent vote in Congress to cut $150,000,000 from the President's estimate of needed WPA funds. Yet a bloc of tory Democrats and Republicans succeeded by a maneuver in having an unrecorded vote on this issue.

This undemocratic dodge to prevent the people back home from knowing how each representative voted, is not going unchallenged by Labor's Non-Partisan League.

The League is compiling from newspaper sources, from direct observation from the gallery, and from checking with the Congressmen—a complete record of the votes cast.

You are entitled to write to your Congressman to inquire whether he voted for or against an adequate WPA appropriation. If you fail to get this information from him, write to Labor's Non-Partisan League, Earle Building, Washington, D. C.

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

The Politics of Human Misery

SNOW was falling in Washington and horror pictures like Dracula and Frankenstein were showing in local movies when Congress debated WPA appropriations.

Well-fed Congressmen, whose own jobs were assured for two years, calmly debated how many unemployed they should turn off the WPA rolls to starve in the dead of winter.

Senators got excited about whether the cut in appropriation they favored would cast out 500,000 unemployed, 1,000,000 or 1,500,000.

The act put on in Congress was more sinister in its implications than any of the horror movies.

The reactionary Democrats and Republicans who sneaked past the tellers in an unrecorded House vote to slash WPA funds, acted to create more prolonged misery for more helpless human beings than any of the fiends of fiction.

The Dracula of the movies was a well-dressed gentleman whose idea of a good meal was blood sucked from the veins of living victims.

But he at least picked on the plump and well-fed, and the limits of his personal appetite restricted the scope of his endeavors.

The victims of the WPA cuts, on the other hand, are the least-nourished and most unfortunate men, women and children of the nation, whose number is legion.

Reps. Jekyll and Hyde

The Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde of fiction found imitators in Congress who made him look like a single-track sissy.

The debate brought out many instances of Republican demagogues who won votes in the elections by attacking the low rates of WPA wages and promising to raise them.

Yet these same Republicans voted to slash the funds which made even these low wages possible.

They were joined by scores of reactionary Democrats whose pre-election lip-service to the New Deal has turned into a vicious attack on all that the New Deal has done for the unemployed.

These pre-election Jekylls turned into post-election Hydes without any of the physical contortions which the fictional character found necessary.

They simply concealed their perfidy from the voters by a parliamentary maneuver, to avoid going on record. The committee broke precedent by presenting the subject in such a way that a roll-call vote could not be had on the real issue of the amount of the appropriation.

Appeasing the Rich

The defense of those who voted to starve the unemployed is that such "economies" are necessary to restore confidence in business.

Chamberlain is generally criticized in this country for his policy of "appeasing" the Fascists by sacrificing to them the weaker democratic countries.

The American tories follow a similar policy of trying to appease the appetites of profiteers at the expense of the weakest and most helpless section of our population.

The indications are, however, that the appetites of neither Fascists nor big business are so easily appeased. They seem rather to grow with the eating.

A Caste System

One of the most shocking aspects of the debate on WPA is the tendency it revealed on the part of many of the tories to treat the poor and needy as a pariah and outlaw caste.

Amendments were actually proposed not only to cut off WPA relief but also to deprive WPA workers of the democratic rights which other citizens enjoy.

One amendment, offered by Rep. Schafer of Wisconsin, called for involuntary servitude and compulsory scabbing, by proposing that WPA work be denied to any worker who goes on strike against a private employer.

An amendment of Rep. Starnes of Alabama would have denied WPA work to any worker who belongs to a union or any other association engaging in political activities.

The amendment actually passed by the House, to withhold relief from anyone who seeks to influence the vote of a WPA worker, is in itself a denial of democratic rights to the unemployed. It could be interpreted to destroy the right of a WPA worker even to talk with his fellows on matter of common political interest.

Frankenstein-Creators

To throw huge numbers off WPA jobs is a threat to the wage standards of all who are employed in private industry.

The reduction in purchasing power decreed means less income for business and professional people. Each previous relief cut has resulted in business slump.

And the treatment of the unemployed as political pariahs strikes a blow at all our democratic liberties.

One horror movie the Congressmen should not have missed. That is Frankenstein. For by voting to starve and oppress the unemployed, they are themselves creating a monster of misery which will eventually turn on its creators.

WANT EXTENSION

New York—The Natl. Consumers League, in a statement issued by its secretary, Miss Mary Dublin, has written to Congress calling for an extension of the activities of the LaFollette civil liberties committee.

Miss Lewis Deplores Small Labor Voice At Lima Confab

WASHINGTON — Miss Kathryn Lewis, member of the United States delegation to the Pan-American Conference in Lima, Peru, has returned home more convinced than ever of the importance of labor representation at such international conferences.

Miss Lewis, who is executive assistant to her father, Pres. John L. Lewis of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, is the first CIO representative to be named by the President as delegate to a Pan-American Conference.

Although she was much pleased at the general achievements of the conference in promoting amity among the countries of both American continents, Miss Lewis deplored the small representation accorded to organized labor in the various delegations.

ONLY U. S., MEXICO

"The only countries which had delegates who were members of labor organizations were the United States and Mexico," she said.

"The conference did very little on labor questions, and I doubt that such conferences can be expected to do much more until there is more adequate labor representation among the delegations.

"To secure such representation, stronger labor organization must exist in the various countries. In some countries perhaps this result could be achieved if more emphasis were placed upon democratic institutions and democratic procedure."

ADDRESSED SEAMEN

Among the experiences of the trip which Miss Lewis remembered with the greatest pleasure, was a ship's meeting of the National Maritime Union, CIO, which she addressed on the S. S. Santa Maria on her way home.

The meeting was held on the ship's after deck, and she was impressed by the vitality and vigor of the members' discussion of union affairs.

The ship's crew was almost 100 per cent CIO, she noted with pride, all of the unlicensed personnel belonging to the NMU and the radio operators to the American Communications Association.

Miss Lewis joined with nearly all the other United States delegates in commenting on the excellent service and seamanship evidenced by CIO crews both on the S. S. Santa Clara, on which they went to Peru, and on the S. S. Santa Maria, on which they returned.

LABOR PROGRAM

Actions taken by the conference on labor matters included resolutions adopted on housing, on the migration of labor and immigration problems, and on pay provisions for workers with larger families.

But Miss Lewis considered that much more should have been done to help raise the terribly low wages and living standards of the workers in many countries.

"There are a number of beautiful labor codes on paper," she said, "but I am afraid their enforcement does not always live up to the promises they embody.

"Much has been said about the popular houses and restaurants run by the government in Peru, for instance, but after six years this program is still only getting under way, and in any case it is a mere drop in the bucket insofar as it affects the low wages and living standards in that country."

THREE ACHIEVEMENTS

Miss Lewis considered the three main achievements of the conference to be the resolution on reducing trade barriers, the declaration of American principles and the declaration on the solidarity of American countries. She also stressed the importance of the resolution calling for freedom of organization and expression of thought in countries where such freedom does not yet exist.

Paying a special tribute to Secretary Hull, head of the delegation, Miss Lewis declared that he had a "magnificent achievement" to his credit in promoting, strengthening and extending the foreign policy of the United States.

"That official representatives of 21 republics should be able to meet together in this fashion in troubled times like these, was heartening evidence of the amity existing between the American countries," she said.

She also noted that Daniel Tracy, AFL leader who was another delegate, had "contributed greatly to the work of the conference." His presence on the delegation, as well as that of Republican leader, Alfred Landon, she said, symbolized the unity of American labor and of the American people in relation to the country's foreign policy of defending democracy and promoting international good-will. Landon's intelligence and ability won praise from all the delegates, she added.

Miss Lewis was impressed by the evidences of foreign Fascist penetration in Latin America, which she saw on her trip. She considered that the conference performed an important function in uniting the American countries against such anti-democratic influences.

Warn of Changes In Unemployment Pay Bills

Washington — The CIO legislative committee is sending out to all affiliated unions copies of the CIO-recommended bill for amendments to state unemployment compensation laws.

In practically every state, changes are being proposed for these laws. In many states, employer groups and even state officials are advocating amendments which will limit benefits and fail to eliminate the red tape and delays that have blocked the speedy payment of unemployment compensation benefits.

CIO organizations are urged to take immediate action before it is too late in order to secure the necessary changes and oppose dangerous moves adverse to labor's interests.

Tells of Conference

Marine Engineers Point To Gains at Convention

WASHINGTON—New contracts, increased membership and complete satisfaction with affiliation to the CIO marked the past year's activities of the Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn., as reported at the annual convention meeting in this city.

According to the officers' report presented to the 34 delegates, 54 new and improved collective bargaining agreements were secured or renewed during the past 12 months, and membership gains were held despite a period of severe unemployment.

UNANIMOUS FOR CIO

These factors, plus the report by Delegate William J. Garrett on the Pittsburgh CIO convention of last November, prompted the unanimous vote for retention of CIO affiliation that was taken at the MEBA Convention.

The delegates, representing locals from the Atlantic, the Pacific, the Gulf, Great Lakes and inland waterways, heard Samuel J. Hogan, MEBA president, report on progress and urge extended organizing drives on both seagoing and inland vessels.

One of the principal struggles facing the Association, according to convention reports, is the fight to enforce compliance with the eight-hour day law for marine engineers. Shipowners, several delegates reported, are using many legal and semi-legal tricks in the attempt to evade this law.

LEWIS SPEAKS

John L. Lewis, president of the CIO, spoke to the delegates the third day of the convention, extending the support of the entire membership of the CIO and expressing satisfaction at their progress.

"Something had to be done for these workers. Something was done — and the results speak for themselves.

"America needs the CIO. It needs the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association. Our country is in danger, because of new forces in the world that are at work to change the relations between nations, because of the basic problems we have here in the United States."

Maritime Unions Plan Campaigns

Chicago—Campaigns to complete the organization of unorganized maritime workers and to combat anti-labor policies of the U. S. Maritime Commission featured the first meeting of the CIO Maritime Committee just concluded here.

The Committee, headed by Joseph Curran, president of the Natl. Maritime Union, was set up last month following a decision to unify all maritime organizing work passed at the CIO convention in Pittsburgh. John Brophy, CIO director represented the national office of the CIO.

The objective of the Committee, as stated by President John L. Lewis at the time, is "the coordination of present maritime union campaigns, presentation of a legislative program, and opposition to the present anti-union tactics of the U. S. Maritime Commission."

FIGHT FINK HALLS

One of the chief weapons the Maritime Commission has been using against the Natl. Maritime Union is the government hiring hall, designed, according to the Committee, to break down the system of union hiring halls established after much struggle by the NMU.

"The Commission, in its capacity as operator of vessels in private trade, dug up a statute, passed as far back as 1872, under which the government hiring halls were established," the Committee said.

"Since the marine strike of 1934, on the Pacific coast, union hiring halls have been recognized by Pacific coast employers and the Roosevelt administration as the proper function of the unions. The activities of these halls are a matter of public record, and have met with the consistent approval of all parties concerned."

CIO SUPPORTS DEMAND for Amalgamated Label On Clothing

The Constitutional Convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations unanimously adopted a resolution in support of the union label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

The resolution reads:—

"Resolved, that this Convention of the CIO go on record as urging all members of its affiliated organizations to demand the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America label on all men's and boys' apparel in daily wear and work clothing of all kinds and to refuse to buy articles of apparel not so labeled."

—ON—
Overalls, Work Clothes, Work Shirts

Neckties

Gloves

The Amalgamated label is a guarantee that the product was made by Amalgamated members who enjoy union standards of wages and hours, and that the product is of the best workmanship.

Make sure that the Amalgamated label is on the coat, on the pants, on the vest and on every article of men's and boys' wearing apparel.

JOE GIVES ED SOME REASONS WHY—

Workers Support The Wagner Act

JOE: So you want the Wagner Act amended?

JOE: How do you know that?

ED: I read it in the papers, of course.

JOE: Did you know that since the board started work it has averted nearly 600 strikes involving over 156,000 workers?

ED: No, that's the first time I heard that.

JOE: Did you know that although there were twice as many American workers organized in 1937 as there were in 1927, the time lost because of strikes was only up 8%. The point I'm making is that union membership was up 100%, but time lost by strikes was up only 8%. That's a pretty good showing. It's my idea that this was due to the work of the labor board.

ED: Well, all I know is what I read in the papers.

JOE: And here's something else you didn't read in the papers. There was less time lost because of strikes in the first eight months of 1938 than in the same period of any year since 1931.

ED: You mean there was less time lost than even during Hoover?

JOE: That's just what I mean. Labor is tending to use the peaceful methods of the labor board and other agencies instead of going on strike. Before the labor board was set up the only protection labor had was to go on strike. Now it feels able to protect its rights under the law. To sum it up, Ed, all this talk about the Wagner Act causing labor unrest is a lot of tripe.

THE BOSSES SAID "NUTS"

ED: But, by golly, there were a powerful lot of sit-down strikes back in 1936.

JOE: Sure there were. Don't you remember, the lawyers of the Liberty League told the employers that the Wagner Act was unconstitutional and they didn't need to obey it?

ED: Yeah, I remember that, all right. That's what my brother-in-law thought about prohibition till they threw him in the jug.

JOE: Well, we'll leave your brother-in-law out of this. But a lot of employers thought these high-priced lawyers knew what they were talking about, so they just said "Nuts" to their workers when they tried to bargain collectively. Naturally, there was plenty of trouble. But there was trouble because the employers would not obey the law.

ED: Well, maybe you're right, Joe. You got a lot of figures and facts there that make a powerful impression. But I got one question that'll put you up a stump.

JOE: What do you mean?

ED: Well, doesn't the law prohibit the employer from doing a lot of things, but it doesn't say anything about the worker doing anything wrong?

JOE: That's about right.

ED: Well, that's all I want to know. Anything that's one-sided is not for me. I believe in fair-play, by golly.

JOE: That's fine. So do I. Now, let me ask you a question. You don't object, do you, because the laws against robbery don't restrain the victim as well as the robber?

This dialogue, designed for use in labor radio broadcasts, was prepared by the publicity department of the United Rubber Workers of America, CIO.

ED: Why, if anybody tried to stick me up, Id—

JOE: Exactly. You feel you have the right to protect yourself against a robber. Now one more question. Do you think the law is one-sided when it compels building owners to obey the sanitary code, even if they don't like it?

ED: Well, if the law just gives the workers their rights, that's all right. But it doesn't stop there. It tells the employer how he's going to run his business.

JOE: The law simply says that an employer cannot interfere with the right of his workers to join any union they want. That's all the Wagner Act says.

ED: Well, I've been told different.

JOE: Don't take my word for it. Here is an official statement on what the Wagner Act really means. I'll read it to you:

"The statute goes no further than to safeguard the right of employes to organize and to select representatives of their own choosing for collective bargaining or other mutual protection without restraint or coercion by their employer. THAT IS A FUNDAMENTAL RIGHT. Employes have as clear a right to organize and select their representatives for lawful purposes as the respondent has to organize its business and to select its own agent or officers."

ED: Who said that?

JOE: Chief Justice Hughes. He said it when he delivered the opinion of the Supreme Court that the Wagner Act is constitutional.

ED: Well, I guess maybe you're right on that. But there's one thing that sticks in my craw, and that is taking away all the rights of the employer when he has to deal with the labor board.

JOE: How do you figure that out?

EMPLOYERS' PROTECTION

ED: Well, the union makes a charge against the boss, and then the labor board hauls him over the coals and he never has any opportunity to defend himself. The board collects the evidence against him and then it tries the case and then it sentences him. That isn't right.

JOE: Somebody's been kidding you, Ed. Let me explain what happens.

ED: I don't want any soft-soap, now. I want the goods.

JOE: OK, that's what I'll give you. Now, here's just what happens. When a union or a worker feels that the law is being violated a complaint is filed with the board. But that doesn't mean the board hauls the employer over the coals. No, sir. The board itself investigates the complaint before it takes any action whatever. Nearly half the complaints filed under the act are dismissed by the regional directors of the board without trial, on the grounds that they are not supported by the evidence.

ED: Is that a fact?

JOE: Yes, that's a fact. But, if the board finds there is evidence of violation, it holds an open hearing, at which the employer has a full opportunity to present his side of the case. If the evidence warrants, the board then issues an order. But this order is not enforcible.

ED: It isn't?

JOE: No. Before an order of the board becomes enforcible it must apply to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for an enforcement order. But, all along the line the employer has the right to appeal to the courts, and employers have been doing that right along. Nearly 20 cases have been passed upon by the Supreme Court already. And here's something to remember, Ed, in every case except two or three, the Supreme Court has upheld the board. That certainly indicates that the board is not biased or dictatorial.

THE AFL LEADERS

ED: Well, you got me there, all right. But, by golly, if the law is so all-fired fair, how come the AFL is against it?

JOE: You mean some leaders of the AFL are against it. Go out on the street and talk to any AFL member and see how he feels about it. Why, all kinds of city, state and local federations have gone on record against amendment of the Wagner Act.

ED: Well, maybe you're right at that. I can remember when the same AFL leaders said unemployment insurance was communistic. I wish they'd tell that to my brother-in-law when he collects his every week—

JOE: Yeah, I know your brother-in-law, but we're talking about the Wagner Act. The thing is that these AFL leaders don't like the CIO and they hate the labor board because it has treated CIO unions as genuine bona fide unions.

ED: Now you're just being prejudiced, Joe. Why, I read in the papers that the labor board is biased against the AFL.

JOE: Oh, yeah? Well, listen to this. Figures released by the board show that up to the end of last September the board had handled 49 cases involving disputes over craft and industrial unions. In 24 of the 49 cases the board adopted the AFL view. The board upheld the CIO in only 21 cases. In the other four, both sides won in part. That doesn't look like the board is prejudiced against the AFL, does it?

ED: Yeah, but how about the elections the board has conducted?

JOE: Well, it's true that the CIO has won 77% of its election contests with the AFL, but that is not because of the board's actions. Apparently the American workers, given freedom of choice, prefer the CIO. The labor board naturally does not dictate to workers what union they must join.

ED: That's OK with me. I believe in majority rule. But, listen, don't you think the board goes too far when it kicks out contracts that have already been made?

JOE: The board usually doesn't interfere with contracts at all. It doesn't tell either the employer or the union what kind of contracts they must sign. It only acts if there is evidence of a violation of the law in connection with the contract.

ED: Yeah, but they have kicked out AFL contracts, too.

JOE: That is because in some instances AFL unions have signed closed shop contracts with employers although most of the workers in the shop were not members of the AFL. The board has held this denies workers the right of free choice guaranteed them under the law. How would you like to be compelled to join a union against your will if a mere handful of people signed a closed shop contract with your employer?

ED: I would tell them to—

JOE: Skip it, Ed, you're on the radio. As a matter of fact, the AFL has profited by this power of the board. In at least 15 cases the board has invalidated company union contracts at the request of the AFL. And in at least one instance it kicked out a contract signed by the CIO.

ED: Well, if the board has been so fair, how come all the shooting?

JOE: Ed, that is a long, long story. In a nutshell, it's just like this: certain big employers in this country don't like unions. They don't like to pay decent wages. They don't want to cut down on speed-up.

ED: So what are you going to do about it?

JOE: We're going to tell Congress what the people really want. Main Street elected them, but Wall Street is telling them what to do. It's up to you and me and every other fair-minded citizen to get out our pens right now and shoot a postcard to our Congressman and Senators at Washington, D. C. Let's tell them the folks back home want NO TAMPERING WITH THE WAGNER ACT!

Here's One Way

Here's Another

U. S. Steel officials renew their contract with the CIO, early in 1938, following peaceful negotiations in accordance with the Wagner Act.

Board Backs CIO Union At Maytag

Washington — Thirteen members of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, who were fired by the Maytag Company of Newton, Iowa, for union activity have been ordered reinstated with back pay in report filed by a trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board.

The examiner also recommended that the company bargain with Local 1116, UERMW, as sole union representative for production workers.

The case grew out of a strike at the company's Newton plant last May, called in protest against a 10% wage cut which the management insisted must be included in a contract being negotiated at that time, following a consent election won by the CIO union by more than 80%.

Armstrong Cork Signs Contract

Pensacola, Fla.—The first victory in this section by District 50, United Mine Workers, was won when a contract was signed between Local 12122 and Armstrong Cork Co. of this city.

H. W. Prentis, Jr., president of this concern, has recently been active and loud as an officer in the reactionary National Association of Manufacturers, and this fact makes the signing of the agreement extremely important.

When District Fifty appeared in the city, a wage increase of 8% was put into effect by management. After a whirlwind campaign of three months, Representative N. B. Maxwell and the negotiating committee secured in the contract the following provisions:

Sole and exclusive bargaining rights; strong and detailed seniority rules; eight-hour day, 40-hour week, with time and one-half for overtime; vacations and holidays with pay; leave of absence; safety and health regulations; use of bulletin board; and arbitration provisions in case of disputes.

Injunction Granted!

Philadelphia. — Federal Judge Oliver B. Dickinson went off the deep end in district court here last week.

"The idea of a peaceful picket or peaceful picketing is a myth," he claimed, at the same time granting a preliminary injunction to the Tri-Plex Shoe Co. against striking members of the CIO shoe clerks' union.

The union has been conducting a strike against the company's 10 stores in the city since last autumn, charging that the firm was reducing its workers to a "state of peonage" by forcing them to sign individual contracts with the management.

CERTIFIED

New York—The American Communications Assn., CIO, has been certified by the National Labor Relations Board as sole collective bargaining agency for workers at RCA Communications in this city.

MORE SECURITY

Washington—Extension of social security laws was urged upon Congress in a special message from Pres. Roosevelt.

Union Athletes

Why a labor sports program? The CIO NEWS here tells of the success of New York City unions in developing athletic activity and competition. New York's program will be of interest to unions elsewhere which encourage sports activities among their members.

New York — There'll be a new kind of labor convention in this city on February 25 and 26.

Meeting in the headquarters of the Transport Workers Union will be representatives of scores of unions — CIO and AFL — whose only competition is on the basketball floor, in the swimming pool, on the baseball diamond or in the ice areans. For the Trade Union Athletic Association, which has been ploughing steadily ahead in recent years, it will be a big step towards the day when every union in New York City will have its own team in almost every branch of sports.

The TUAA was organized in the spring of '37. A lusty infant at the time of its birth, it has quickly grown to the point where sports experts in the nation's biggest city regard it as one of the outstanding outfits in New York.

That first summer the TUAA confined its activities to the diamond. Seven teams entered the baseball league, and the AFL Building Service Employes walked off with the pennant.

"We felt that this was a great beginning," Jack Roth, TUAA executive-secretary, recalls. That Roth was right was amply demonstrated when the call was sounded for a basketball league that winter. The number of teams was doubled, and 86 games were played.

It was the quintet representing the CIO Furrier's Joint Council that brought home the basketball bacon, with the electrical and radio workers trailing along in second place.

LOTS OF INTEREST

"Throughout that entire basketball season," Roth says, "challenges came into our office from the Cleveland Labor Athletic League, the Workers Sports Assn. of Montreal, the Philadelphia CIO Athletic League, and others. We decided to sponsor a national playoff. The Otis Elevator Workers, champions of the Cleveland league, and the Workers Sports Assn. team came to New York.

"Here at Textile High School, the SWOC played the Furriers, and the Montreal team played the meat cutters union. The furriers and the meat cutters won, before audiences that packed the galleries. The New York style of basketball still seemed the best in the country."

BIG GROWTH

By the spring of 1938, trade union athletics was definitely riding the crest of the wave. Despite entry fees of $25 for each team, 1040 players were doing their stuff—10 times as many as the previous year.

Games were played in public parks and school fields. Twilight games were played during the week and on Saturdays and Sundays all during the daylight hours. The elevator operators, who had won the 1937 championship, couldn't make the top floor with the hotter competition, and the cleaners and dyers union grabbed the pennant.

The baseball season was just an introduction to bigger things. More soccer teams were formed. A handball tournament, with more than 100 contestants, showed the fur workers running away for the pack again.

TRACK AND FIELD MEET

But, says Roth, "it was the track and field meet which took place on August 21, 1938, that captured the imagination of all sports fans.

"When we mentioned that we were going to run a track and field meet we were laughed at. We were told that the labor movement has no athletes, and that it would be a failure. We also had to break through barriers set up by the Amateur Athletic Union—barriers which have out-lawed the track and field meet and also the participants."

The number of union entries was more than 200—and, Roth notes with justifiable pride—"the records weren't bad for the first real trade union track and field meet held in America."

Goldberg of the Firemen's Union, for instance, did the mile in 4:40. Collins of the Building Service Employes topped the bar in the high jump at 6 feet two, while a hop of 18 feet 10½ inches gave Sippio of the furniture workers first place in the broad jump.

Right now the basketball league is near the half-way mark, with the furriers and the office workers leading their respective divisions. Playoffs are scheduled for the weekend of the convention next month.

WHY LABOR SPORTS

Why labor sports? Well, Roth points out, when workers were unorganized, anti-union employers used to maintain athletic leagues in their plants to forestall the boys from organizing. Now lots of workers have realized the necessity for maintaining a sports program to help build their union and to keep all the members interested in its welfare.

"The demands placed before us by numerous unions is so great that it becomes necessary for us to consolidate our gains in order that we may serve the labor movement better. We want to adopt a constitution, and pronounce championships within the trade union movement over the following sports: Baseball, basketball, track, swimming, ping-pong, boxing, wrestling, bowling, handball, soccer and ice-skating."

Any further information about the activities of the Trade Uunion Athletic Association may be obtained by writing to Jack Roth, executive secretary, 171 West 64th Street, New York City.

The Constitution Educational League, Inc., of New Haven, Conn., amid a fanfare of publicity, bestowed on the nation's leading red-baiter its "Americanism award for 1938."

The League has provided its Tory friends with loads of false information to be used in the fight against the CIO. One of its pamphlets, it has been charged, was sold in a 100,000-lot to Tom Girdler of Republic Steel, and large quantities were distributed to other haters of labor around the nation.

BACKED DOWN

The pamphlet offered a reward of $1000 to anyone proving a falsehood in its text. Labor Research Association of New York sent a registered leter to the outfit pointing out some 20 errors and asking for payment. So far, it has failed to collect.

At hearings of the LaFollette Senate Civil Liberties committee, testimony showed that the heads of the Constitution Educational League knew little about the constitution and even less about education.

'HEIL' FROM NAZIS

More support for the Dies witch-hunting expedition came from Fritz Kuhn, head of the German American Bund in the United States—the direct branch of Hitler's organization for spreading Nazi propaganda in other countries.

"Mr. Dies' wish (for more funds for the committee) should by all means be gratified," says a front page editorial in Deutscher Weckruf und Beobachter, Kuhn's newspaper.

The Dies Committee supposedly was commissioned to investigate Fascist as well as Communist activities, but its diatribes against the CIO and the New Deal, together with its light treatment of the Nazis, have apparently won it the support of the Hitlerites.

TEXAS CIO ANGERED

Resolutions endorsed by the Texas State Industrial Union Council, as well as local councils in Houston and Harris County, and three lodges of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, protested the committee's handling of its probe.

Accusing Dies of having but one purpose—"to smear progressive thinking and to curb and discredit organized labor," —the resolution said it might have used its funds to better advantage "had it seen fit to uncover the reastionary and sinister vigilante groups in Texas."

RAIL UNION'S ATTACK

The committee received another blow when President A. F. Whitney of the powerful independent Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen called upon Congress to refuse it any further funds.

In a letter addressed to Rep. Sabbath, new head of the potent House Rules Committee, Whitney said the railroad men "endorse Pres. Roosevelt's indictment of the unfair and un-American tactics employed by the committee throughout the course of its investigation and hearings." The Brotherhood, he added, "is unalterably opposed to the granting of any additional money to the disreputable Dies Committee."

Kress Strike

Hilo, Hawaii — Employes of the S. H. Kress store here are out on strike for recognition of their union, the United Retail Workers, and reinstatement of their president, Thomas Nakashima.

The union has asked the National Labor Relations Board to investigate the unfair labor practices of the Kress store.

Open Drive To Free Billings

San Francisco.—A new fight to win freedom for Warren K. Billings was started this week when George T. Davis, the labor's prisoner's attorney, filed application for pardon with the governor.

Mooney, meanwhile, was enjoying his first freedom in 22 years and throwing his weight behind labor's cause on the west coast. He took his first airplane ride to Los Angeles, where he appeared before a labor mass meeting on Jan. 15.

Previously he appeared at the state convention of Labor's Non-Partisan League in Sacramento. On Jan. 22 he is expected to address the annual meeting of the San Francisco-Oakland Newspaper Guild.

Two film offers have been forwarded to him, it was revealed here. Warner Brothers and Metro have suggested contracts, but Mooney has not indicated whether he is interested in the propositions.

District 50 Signs Flock of Pact Renewals

NEW YORK—The open season on contract renewals has just come to an end for Local Unions here affiliated with District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America in the paint, drug and chemical division.

The District Office is pointing with pride to unusual strides made in the new agreements and in mid-season wage reviews for which many contracts provide.

The high points are:

Glyco Chemical on a mid-year review of wages granted $1 and $2 increases. Valentine Paint Co. with plants in Brooklyn and Newark, and the Edward Smith Co. renewed a contract for a year and gave a $2 increase under strike threat. In Colonial Paint, a three-day strike won $1 increase immediately effective and an additional $1 increase on July 1st.

10% BONUS

A bonus equal to 10 per cent of the workers' salaries was given in the Gas Purifying Co. on a mid-year review of wages. Monroe-Sanders employes won a $3.50 increase which was the largest chalked up in any of the District 50 shops. Arnesto Paint Co. renewed its agreement, added two more holidays and 5c per hour increase for the lowest category of male workers.

Diamond Candle renewed its contract with the union in an atmosphere quite different from the long strike conducted last year to win collective bargaining rights. The closed shop and a $1 increase came with the new agreement in Sterisol Ampoule. American Steel Wool renewed a fine contract on the same terms.

Wilbert Extracts came through with a $1 increase and an additional holiday for the employes, while Barclay gave a $5 Christmas bonus, a $1 increase immediately effective and $1 at the end of August.

U. S. Gypsum Signs New Agreement

Chicago.—U. S. Gypsum officials concluded negotiations for a new one-year agreement with Local 13014 in its East Chicago plant with an expression of complete satisfaction on the conduct of labor relations over the past contract year.

The new contract recognizes the growth of understanding and cooperation between management and the Union. Simple recognition of the Union was replaced in the new contract with the granting of sole bargaining rights. Stronger seniority provisions and a better overtime arrangement were written into the new contract.

Men called back to work will receive a minimum of four hours' pay. If they work over two hours and forty minutes, however, they are to receive time and one-half. No hours are to be deducted from the regular work week because of such extra overtime.

Men of the Negotiating Committee who won the new agreement with the assistance of Field Representative Louis Weiner were: Ernest Brown, President of Local 13014; Harold Bundy, Hammond, Ind.; Otto Quick, Lansing, Ill.; Elbert Goucher, Black Oak, Ind.; A. Marley, Hammond, Ind.; and Joe Angerson, Calumet City, Ill.

Gov. Olson Names Union Leaders To Key Posts

Sacramento, Calif.—Gov. Culbert Olson has appointed two labor men to important positions in the state government.

Germain Bulcke, head of the San Francisco local of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, CIO, and J. F. Marias of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, have been named to the important Board of Harbor Commissioners.

Labor bills already introduced into the new session of the state legislature call for the passage of a "little" Wagner Act for California, prohibition of injunctions in labor disputes, and the outlawing of local anti-picketing ordinances. The last one is aimed at the vicious bill passed in Los Angeles in the fall, and at others adopted in a number of agricultural counties at the behest of large fruit and vegetable growers.

Attack Bill To Weaken Union

New York. — The Transport Workers Union, which has closed shop contracts covering more than 50,000 transit workers in greater New York, this week appealed to all organized labor to join in the fight against enactment in the state legislature of the Wicks Bill.

The bill, introduced by upstate Republican Senator Arthur H. Wicks, will deny employment on city-owned or operated transit lines to any who could not come within the regulations of the civil service law.

The bill would affect about 29,000 men and women now employed on the IRT and BMT subway, elevated and bus systems when those roads are merged with the city's Independent Subway System under the city ownership plan.

District 50 Certified In Nashua, N. H.

Nashua, N. H. — Certification by the Labor Board and a working agreement with management are the latest gains made by the Johns-Manville workers in this city.

As members of Local 13012, District Fifty, UMWA, they have overcome every obstacle in their path over a period of several months, including the company's insistence on a 10% wage cut.

Machinery has been set up to take care of any grievances that may arise in the plant. With these distinct gains, it is evident that a satisfactory long-term contract will result from further negotiations this spring.

Mooney Aids Guild Strikers

Tom Mooney hands a five-dollar bill to leaders of the San Francisco Newspaper Guild as a contribution to the defense fund being raised to help conduct the strike against the Hearst-owned Chicago Herald-Examiner and Evening American. The $5 was half the amount given Mooney by prison officials when he left San Quentin. The other $5 was donated to a strike of AFL retail employes in San Francisco.

TORIES CUT $875,000,000 WPA BILL BY ONE VOTE

CIO Seamen Win Praise for Rescue On High Seas

NEW YORK — A year ago members of the CIO National Maritime Union were the object of a giant smear campaign aimed at smashing their union by attempting to show "red" activities, general negligence on shipboard, and disregard for passengers.

Now, for the second time in a month, NMU crews are being praised for heroism on the high seas.

It was an all-union crew on the S. S. Esso Baytown, which rescued passengers on the ill-fated Imperial Airways clippership flying from Bermuda to New York.

Similarly, it was an all-union crew on the S. S. Schodak which saved the lives of 22 men and two women from the Norwegian steamship Smaragd in a howling mid-Atlantic gale only a few weeks previously.

In neither case was the fact that the rescue crews were composed of NMU men given recognition by the same Tory papers which last year had been giving front-page attention to the anti-union slanders of the late Sen. Royal S. Copeland and other stooges of the shipowners.

PRAISE FROM CURRAN

"The crew of the Esso Baytown," said Pres. Joseph Curran of the National Maritime Union, "has written a record to which the entire American people can point with pride.

"Union crews are, by virtue of being union men, efficient and the most capable on the American merchant marine.

"In the recent period, NMU crews have answered SOS calls on six occasions, saving many lives.

"The NMU is proud to salute these seamen who are carrying forward the internationally famous tradition of U. S. seamen, which runs back to the days of the clipper ships.

TIME FOR APOLOGY

"We believe, moreover, that this would be an appropriate time for those people in high office and certain newspapers which have maliciously slandered union seamen, to make a public apology and admit that they were wrong."

Recognizing the heroism of the Baytown crew, the New York City Council unanimously passed a resolution which declared that the sailors had "lived up to the best traditions of the sea."

Charge Shoe Firms Worst Chiselers

Washington, 1939 — Administrator Andrews at his press conference this week stated that among the worst violators of the wage-hour law, are the many shoe firms in New England, especially in and about Lewiston and Auburn, Maine.

He stated that as soon as investigations are completed, he would proceed to prosecute all violators.

Mooney Aids Maine Strikers

"Resurrection by anti-labor Maine industrialists of an ancient statute with which to railroad union leaders to prison has as its purpose the destruction of the labor movement in Maine.

"This time it has been used against the United Shoe Workers. If these tory industrialists succeed in this frame-up, they will use this law to wipe out the entire labor movement in Maine.

"Labor must rise up on its hind legs and protest and fight this vicious law and its corrupt use. I will do all in my power to help this case and call on every branch of the labor movement to rally in this struggle.

"My warmest fraternal greetings and salutations to our imprisoned union brothers."

Slap Hearst

Washington — Frederick H. Houck, chairman of the Baltimore News-Post unit of the American Newspaper Guild, discharged for union activity August 5, 1937, has been ordered reinstated with back pay by the National Labor Relations Board.

Amendment To Limit Firings Gain Support

WASHINGTON.—The McKellar amendment, which would have restored the President's demand for $875,000,000 to the WPA deficiency appropriation bill, was defeated by a 47 to 46 vote late last week.

Labor pressure during recent weeks cut into the conservative majority, and almost resulted in a rout of the Tory forces on Capitol Hill.

Though the $875,000,000 bill was defeated, the Senate, it was predicted, is sure to pass a bill limiting the firing of workers on WPA rolls to only five per cent of the number during February and March. As a result, the anti-New Deal victory which conservative forces had been hopefully predicting proved to be a dud.

The CIO battle against slicing of the WPA fund was led by Vice-President Sidney Hillman, who warned that "now is not the time to gamble on recovery." He called the $875,000,000 asked by Pres. Roosevelt the "absolute minimum necessary to sustain the current recovery."

Unemployment Director Ralph Hetzel, encouraged by labor's fight against the cuts, declared late last week that "the tide now seems to be turning in Congress."

Calling upon union members to let their Congressmen know of the opposition to carrying out Tory policies on the unemployed, he warned, "but the fight is not over and it will not be over until the appropriation of at least $875,000,000—probably the minimum to assure our continued recovery—is safely passed by both the Houses of Congress."

Sen. Borah of Idaho, veteran Republican, was one of those in the upper house who warned of the dangers that lie ahead if millions are to be deprived of their already meager incomes.

Additional evidence came in a statement issued by the Conference of Mayors, which pointed to the fact that not one of 104 large American cities would be able to handle the relief problem if hundreds of thousands are dropped from WPA.

Steel Local Active

Charleroi, Pa. – With a signed membership in the Steel Workers Organizing Committee of nearly 100 per cent, Local 1187 at the Allenport plant of the Pittsburgh Steel Company, announces it has concluded a most successful year. The plant employs about 2,000 men when working full time.

The local boasts of a football and a soccer team which won a number of games during 1938, and sponsors recreational activities to spread the spirit of union fellowship among its members. During the holidays, candy, oranges and popcorn were given to the children of all the Allenport plant employes.

These are seamen of the S. S. $500,000 Profit on $2.50 Weekly Wages

Pecan Sheller Gets No Exemption On Wage-Hour Law

WASHINGTON—Pecan nuts will be shelled and cleaned at human wages. Julius Seligman, whose company shells half the pecans in the country, has been denied an exemption from the Wages and Hours law, and will be required to pay the minimum rate of 25 cents per hour.

Seligman's company, located in San Antonio, Tex., has long been notorious for the starvation wages paid to the workers who created a $500,000 profit for the pecan king in a recent two-year period. Five and six cents per pound has been the usual rate, which makes a weekly wage as low as $2.50 for a worker to live on. A family of four or five—including children as young as 10 — could make $10 or $11 per week, in the good season.

CIO LED STRIKE

These conditions of near starvation for 10,000 American families were first exposed by the CIO whose Cannery and Agricultural Workers union led a long strike against Seligman's proposal to cut these already meager earnings by 20 per cent.

The strike was met with every kind of police and company violence, including tear gas, beatings and wholesale arrests and evictions. In spite of this the strike was successful in preventing the cut from going through, and the workers are now organized in a Cannery and Agricultural union local.

Seligman's application for an exemption was based on the pretext that he needed to employ "learners" at 15 cents an hour for a 90-day period for each worker. Testimony before the Wages and Hours investigator brought out some interesting evidence from the workers themselves.

"That is the only way the pickers can make over $3.00 or $4.00, with the help of other kin folks. In pecan shelling plants, where the old people work, say, like the old woman and old man, after school the children come out of school and they gather around these old people and help them after school."

BELOW THE LOWEST

And the investigator, summing up, added:

"For years they have been employed under shocking living and working conditions. Their meager wages were insufficient to meet the lowest standards of civilized life. WPA relief, church aid and private charity have had to bridge the gap between their slender earnings and starvation.

"The conditions prevailing in this part of the industry are precisely those which Congress stated, in Section 2, were to be eliminated by the Fair Labor Standards Act.

"Those conditions are: starvation wages, child labor, wretched housing and living conditions with attendant ill health, degradation and inefficiency, unsanitary working conditions, and dissatisfaction leading to labor disputes and strikes."

ASK AID FOR FARMERS

Yarkima, Wash. — (FP) — The United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers, CIO, is asking the Federal Warm Security Administration to build a labor camp for families here, similar to those already established in California.

Steel Union Wins Back Pay For 22 Men

Maywood, Ill. — A united and militant stand by steel workers, backed by quick action on the part of organizers of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee won reinstatement with back pay last week for 22 employes of Vulcan Mfg. Co. here. The men were fired last November, two days after holding their first meeting for the purpose of forming a local union.

Charges were immediately filed with the Labor Board by Organizers Harry Harper and John Riffe. Following an informal hearing, the Board ruled in favor of the men. The company, without waiting for a formal hearing, rehired the 22 men and paid them $800 in back pay. It also agreed to negotiate for a contract as soon as the union can show a majority in the plant.

That won't be long, say the enthusiastic members of the local. They predict a 100% union shop within a month.

CIO Statement On Auto Union

Following is the complete text of the statement issued by CIO Vice-Presidents Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman on the situation in the United Automobile Workers of America:

The Congress of Industrial Organizations is giving complete support and recognition to the International Executive Board of the United Automobile Workers of America and Mr. R. J. Thomas, the president of the organization.

Three basic principles have been consistently maintained by the CIO in its relationship with the UAWA, as one of its international affiliates:

1. Complete recognition of the independent autonomy of the UAWA.

2. The observance by the elected officers and members of the UAWA of its Constitution, and recognition of the supreme authority, between conventions, of the International Executive Board.

3. The complete observance by the UAWA of its contractual obligations with employers for the full protection of its members.

REACHED AGREEMENT

In the fall of 1938, a situation confronted the UAWA, because of disputes which had arisen within the organization, that threatened the existence of the union. President John L. Lewis, of the CIO, appointed Messrs. Sidney Hillman and Philip Murray as a committee to contact the officers and the international executive board of the union, for the purpose of investigating the situation.

As a result of conferences which were held in Detroit, an agreement was arrived at which was unanimously accepted by the executive board, the international officers of the union and Mr. Martin. Under this agreement, a joint committee, consisting of Mr. Martin and President R. J. Thomas, Sidney Hillman and Philip Murray, was established to settle such disputes as may be referred to the committee by the international executive board or the international president of the UAWA.

TWENTY-EIGHT CASES

From the date of the agreement, the only questions that have been passed upon by this joint committee have been such matters as were referred by Mr. Martin. The Committee solved 28 separate and distinct problems that were referred to it. The committee's reports were unanimously agreed to by its members, including Mr. Martin, and recommended to the international executive board for adoption. All of these reports were unanimously approved by the board.

Until a week or two ago, Mr. Martin has publicly praised the work which Messrs. Murray and Hillman have done as members of the co-ordinating committee. At the CIO convention in Pittsburgh, in November, 1938, Mr. Martin on several occasions publicly gave recognition to the accomplishment of Mr. Hillman and Mr. Murray in establishing peace within the ranks of the UAWA.

During this period of the operation of the co-ordinating committee, the United Automobile Workers of America has made remarkable progress in its efforts to establish its relations with employers on a firm foundation.

There have been fewer strikes and a greater appreciation on the part of the organization as to its responsibilities in the proper administration of its affairs. This has been directly attributable to the salutary effect which the representatives of the CIO had upon the organizational structure of the United Automobile Workers' International Union.

MARTIN FLOUTED RULES

Since the execution of the agreement between the UAWA and the CIO, Mr. Martin has flagrantly flouted the provisions of the constitution of the United Automobile Workers of America, and disobeyed the decisions of the international executive board. Mr. Martin has refused to accept the decisions of the board and has refused to participate in its meetings. Although joining in the recommendations of the co-ordinating committee, he has later refused to carry through the decisions of the international executive board in approving the reports submitted by the coordinating committee.

On Wednesday, January 11, and again on Thursday, January 12, Mr. Martin communicated with Mr. Hillman, requesting that Mr. Hillman and Mr. Murray come to Detroit to discuss the question of having the UAWA call a special convention. Pursuant to this request, Mr. Murray and Mr. Hillman arrived in Detroit, Monday, January 16.

Mr. Martin's position was that a special convention would have to be held to finally settle the outstanding disputes. His request was submitted to the executive board by Mr. Hillman and Mr. Murray. The international executive board thereupon called a special convention of the UAWA for March 20, which was the earliest date that the convention could be called under the provisions of the constitution, thereby meeting the request of Mr. Martin.

SUSPENDED FIFTEEN

Immediately thereafter, without any justification, Mr. Martin purported to suspend 15 members of the international executive board while the board was in session, in direct and flagrant violation of the constitution of the UAWA.

Through force and violence, Mr. Martin subsequently illegally took over the headquarters of the international organization and took away from the headquarters records of the international organization. Mr. Martin subsequently convened a small group, composed of four ex-members of the executive board and himself, establishing a dual organization, and purported to call a dual convention of his own.

SUSPEND MARTIN

The international executive board, acting within its constitutional authority, has suspended Mr. Martin and the four former members of the executive board who have thus participated in attempting to establish a dual organization to the United Automobile Workers of America.

Mr. Martin's activities are in complete defiance of every democratic principle enunciated in the constitution of the UAWA. his activities can only lend strength to the enemies of organized labor and to the reactionary employers.

The international executive board had no alternative to the action it has taken. The Congress of Industrial Organizations supports fully and completely the position of the international executive board. Dual unionism and arrogant defiance of the constitution of a labor union, with which Mr. Martin has definitely identified himself, cannot be tolerated.

Charge Nazis Keep Workers In Slavery

Paris—All armament factories in South Germany are working at high pressure with the right to change to another job forbidden except in special cases where official permission is given, according to information received by the Foreign Bureau of German Trade Unions here. The Bureau is connected with the International Federation of Trade Unions.

"The freedom of movement of the workers, especially skilled workers, has been completely done away with. They have to stick at work like slaves," the Bureau information service states.

Owing to the number of men called up for military service or for work on the Rhine fortification, girls and women are being increasingly employed to relieve the shortage, with the result that the accident rate has risen sharply since the women are inexperienced.

CIO Supports Auto Board, Pres. Thomas

WASHINGTON—Complete support for the international executive board of the United Automobile Workers and for the union's new president, R. J. Thomas, has been accorded by the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

A statement by Vice Presidents Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman fully approves the action of the board in suspending Homer Martin for repeated violations of the union constitution and for attempting to set up a dual organization.

Suspended with Martin are four members of the executive board who have also participated in the dual union attempt.

Murray and Hillman point out that in its relations with the UAW, the CIO has consistently adhered to the following principles:

1. Complete recognition of the independent autonomy of the UAW.

2. The observance by the elected officers and members of the UAW of its constitution, and recognition of the supreme authority, between conventions, of the international executive board.

3. The complete observance by the UAW of its contractual obligations with employers for the full protection of its members.

ON COMMITTEE

Murray and Hillman, together with Thomas and Martin, were appointed as members of a coordinating committee under the agreement to end factional strife in the union, which was unanimously accepted by the executive board, the international officers and Martin himself.

"Since the execution of the agreement between the UAW and the CIO, Martin has flagrantly flouted the provisions of the constitution of the United Automobile Workers of America, and disobeyed the decisions of the international executive board," the CIO representatives state.

FLOUTED DECISIONS

"Martin has refused to accept the decisions of the board and has refused to participate in its meetings. Although joining in the recommendations of the coordinating committee."

After the executive board had voted to call a special convention on March 20, Martin purported to suspend 15 members of the board while it was in session "in direct and flagrant violation of the constitution of the UAW." Through force and violence, the CIO statement declares, Martin illegally took over the headquarters of the union and took away its records. He then convened a small group of followers to establish a dual organization and purported to call a dual convention of his own.

Dies Gets Razz

Chicago — Delegates to the Religion and Labor Institute just ended here were not fooled by the un-American Martin Dies and his committee.

They took time in their deliberations to pass a sizzling resolution denouncing the Texas witch-hunter and demanding no more public money for his anti-labor crusade.

The resolution said "the Dies committee has permitted its investigation to serve as a national rostrum for any willing crackpot and malicious or irresponsible reactionary."

Senate Tory Bloc Checked In WPA Fight

WASHINGTON—Progressive forces throughout the United States once again delayed the plan of Congressional Tories to rush through a slash of $150,000,000 in the WPA deficiency appropriation.

The debate in the Senate contrasted with the previous contest in the House of Representatives, where conservative Democrats joined with Republicans to vote through the cut before labor forces had sufficient time to register their protest against the cuts.

But a deluge of wires and messages, as well as delegations from labor groups in nearby states, helped stiffen the progressives' stand. Leaders of the CIO, including Vice-Pres. Sidney Hillman, rank-and-file of the unions, and representatives of city mayors, showed the disaster which would follow a purge of the WPA rolls.

As a result, the Tory steamroller slowed down, and developments indicated that the tide was turning in the upper house.

Result

Harrisburg, Pa. — The number of Pennsylvanians on the dole has risen to a new 3-year peak of 772,921, the state department of public assistance reported this week.

Department officials attributed the increase largely to "the effects of December WPA curtailment." Eighteen thousand persons went on the dole in one week, more than half of them because of the loss of WPA jobs. Almost as many were forced to turn to relief because of wage cuts or firings in private industry, the figures showed.

FLOOD OF PROTESTS

SEES 'SUBTERFUGE'

Ralph Hetzel, CIO unemployment drector, saw this move on the part of the commititee as a "real victory for those who have been opposing WPA cuts."

Hetzel hastened to add, however, that the full appropriation of

The CIO position was further developed by Vice-Pres. Sidney Hillman, who said in a public statement that "now is not the time to gamble on recovery.

"There is no sign on the business horizon to indicate that either recovery or re-employment have gone far enough to

Oregon CIO Maps Fight On Picket Bill

PORTLAND, Ore.—A show-down fight against Oregon's new anti-picketing law and other progressive measures aimed to protect the rights of labor were included in the program drawn up at the CIO convention held here to form a state industrial union council.

Some 200 delegates from more than 50 CIO local unions and councils in Oregon, meeting in Harmony hall January 14-15, elected officers to head the Council for the coming year and went on record in favor of a number of clear-cut plans for meeting the challenge of labor-hating forces in the state which are trying to throttle trade unions.

John Brost, of Portland, former head of the longshoremen's union, was elected president of the new Oregon CIO Council. H. L. Proctor of Klamath Falls was named vice-president and Ralph Peoples, of Portland, was chosen secretary-treasurer.

FIGHT SUBTERFUGE

The convention went on record as vigorously opposed to Governor Charles A. Sprague's proposal to the legislature that the Oregon unemployment compensation act be amended. The Social Security Board has so far withheld certification of the act, following charges made by labor that the anti-labor initiative passed in November virtually outlaws trade unions and violates provisions of the unemployment compensation law.

The Governor proposed the amendment of the compensation law to exempt the social security program from the interpretation of a labor dispute as defined by the new anti-picketing act, while the CIO demands that the anti-picketing act be repealed.

SEEK PUBLIC RECORD

The delegates also voted to demand that the names of contributors sponsoring the anti-picketing bill campaign be made public as provided for under the corrupt practices act.

Among the outside speakers addressing the convention were Harry Bridges, West Coast CIO regional director and president of the longshoremen's union; Father Michael Mulcaire, head of the economics department at the University of Portland; the Rev. George Poor, of the University Park Methodist church, and State Senator Harry M. Kenin.

Hail Court Ruling In Hague Case

Washington — The decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia, affirming the injunction against the anti-union activities of Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City was described by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, as a "vindication of a hard-fought struggle for democracy in Jersey City."

"The decision of the Circuit Court upholding Judge Clark's injunction against Hague is a vindication of a hard-fought struggle for democracy in Jersey City," Pressman said.

"Hague's autocratic rule of Jersey City has been challenged by the working men and women of his community. Under the leadership of the CIO, they have organized as other citizens throughout the nation have done, to protect their democratic rights and to secure better living conditions through collective bargaining," he added.

Some weeks ago the Chicago Tribune, which calls itself "the world's greatest newspaper," carried an article sensationally headlined: "CIO Strangles San Francisco; Industries Die." The article "revealed" that because of labor strife, "the Chevrolet automobile assembly plant, employing 3,500 men, was moved to Los Angeles. Shortly afterward the Tribune published a note explaining that the Chevrolet plant had never been in San Francisco."

Poll of Churchmen Favors WPA, Unions

NEW YORK—The government should provide work for those unable to get jobs in private industry, members of the Congregational and Christian Churches maintained in a poll conducted by the Council for Social Action.

More than 30,000 members participated in the vote, conducted by one of the 10 largest Protestant groups in the country.

The church group found that its members also favor organization of labor into national unions, consumer cooperatives, extension of public ownership of utilities and further social control of our economic system.

The Attack Opens on the Wagner Act

After a year or more of preparation, the Congressional offensive against the Wagner Labor Relations Act has at last been launched.

Manufacturers' associations, chambers of commerce, tory politicians, reactionary newspapers long ago began firing the advance barrage of propaganda against the charter of labor's collective bargaining rights.

But now that the zero hour has struck, it is not the be-spatted cohorts of the Union League Club that leap from their arm-chairs to the attack.

Even the political brass hats of the tory army hold back, preferring to assail the air with martial oratory rather than to engage in personal combat.

Who then are the intrepid troops that lead the long-prepared attack?

They are officials arrayed in the uniform of labor who lead the assault on labor's act, and they bear on their escutcheons the initials "AFL."

* * * * *

The American Federation of Labor's amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act have been introduced in Congress by Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts.

They are hailed with delight by all the forces of reaction which have been seeking to discredit the National Labor Relations Board and to destroy the act which it administers.

The AFL amendments are designed to split up existing industrial unions by making craft unit elections obligatory.

They would curtail the power of the Labor Board to invalidate employer-imposed contracts.

They would grant employers greater power to determine when elections should be held, to influence their employes' votes, and in general to favor unions of their own rather than the workers' choice.

But these amendments, bad as they are, are pleasing to the forces of reaction chiefly because they open the way to still further assaults on the Wagner Act.

* * * * *

The CIO stands adamant against any amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act, because it has long recognized that reactionary capital is looking for any possible opening to deprive labor of the collective bargaining rights it has won under this act.

But the AFL leaders, blinded by factional spite, have fallen into reaction's trap. They are themselves providing the opening through which anti-union employers hope to follow up with more drastic revisions of the act.

An increasing number of AFL bodies throughout the country, however, are refusing thus to play reaction's game. They are joining with the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League in the growing popular demand that there be no tampering of any sort with an act which has brought such outstanding gains to labor.

Refuse To Pardon Maine Shoe Workers

Auburn, Me. — Despite a rising tide of protest against the continued imprisonment of nine organizers of the United Shoe Workers for engaging in a strike in the Lewiston-Auburn area in Maine, in the spring of 1937, Gov. Barrows and his council have refused to grant a petition for pardon filed in behalf of the nine.

This decision came shortly after a hearing before the Governor and his Council at which every witness asked for full unconditional pardon except the representative of a company union organized during the strike, who asked that the pardon be conditioned on a promise that the organizers leave the state of Maine and promise not to return.

Among those who appeared and urged the release of the organizers were Raymond Rogers and Sidney Grant, attorneys for the United Shoe Workers and a delegation representing business and labor interests in Massachusetts from which the majority of the organizers originated.

This refusal exhausts the last appeal in a long series of legal maneuvers to set aside or quash the decision which sentenced nine persons to serve five months in jail for "injury to the business" of one of the firms involved in labor difficulties by calling and participating in a strike against that firm.

A Break in the Dam

Looking Ahead

Dictators in Glass Houses

IF a drunk comes up and tells you you're drunk, it's no good trying to prove to him you're sober.

You can walk a chalk line without swaying, you can let him smell your breath, you can produce affidavits to prove that you are a lifelong teetotaler, but he'll still say you're drunk.

To the man who sways, all around seems swaying.

When Japan invaded China, she accused the Chinese of aggression. Hitler made similar charges against the Czechs.

When the AFL executive council split labor's ranks by driving out the CIO unions, William Green berated the CIO unions for "withdrawing" and called them splitters!

In the fury of factional controversy, it is common for the aggressor to accuse his victims of the very crimes of which he is himself most guilty.

You can't prove you're sober to a drunk. China can't convince Japan of her aggressions. And Green has yet to confess that it was he and his crowd who split the labor movement.

But still there is such a thing as the record. If you and the drunk land in the jug, the judge will be able to tell which is the sober one.

There are certain tests whereby world opinion may tell which nation is the aggressor.

And in labor controversy, there is a court of opinion which is the final arbiter and to which all factions make their appeal. That is the judgment of the millions of working people who make up the labor movement.

The CIO's Record

The CIO has been accused of almost everything.

Lawless employers have accused it of lawbreaking because it would not condone their lawlessness.

Anti-union industrialists, even as their gunmen shot down defenseless strikers, have accused it of violence.

Craft officials, driving the axe of division between union brothers, have accused it of splitting.

The CIO has not wasted much time trying to convince its enemies, who have hurled such false accusations like hand grenades without regard to their truth.

But it has guarded its true record of service to American workers as something precious; and this record has been upheld in the court of labor opinion.

Splitting Canadian Labor

Many books have been written about the recent history of labor and the rise of the CIO. Not one of these gives credence to the fantastic AFL versions of what caused the split between CIO and AFL. The record is too clear for any impartial investigator to ignore.

In Canada, a similar record is being written today. The CIO unions there, as in the United States, have fought to maintain a United labor movement. But now the splitters' axe of the AFL top leaders is being wielded to divide Canadian unions whose only wish is to remain united.

Splinter Dictators

Labor's enemies have battered in vain at the great industrial unions organized by the CIO. Foiled in their open attacks, they have for sometime now concentrated on attempts to cause internal dissension.

AFL leaders have aided such attempts by trying to break off splinter groups from such powerful unions as the United Mine Workers, the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, and the United Automobile Workers.

All of the CIO unions have their own democratic procedure, their trusted leaders, and the strength that comes to the workers from unity in a single organization.

But petty dictators set themselves up from time to time, representing little more than themselves and responsive only to the outside union-busting forces that egg them on. And it is these tinpot dictators who raise the cry of "dictatorship" against the CIO, one of the most truly democratic movements that have ever been known.

UAW Unity

The record of CIO dealings with the United Automobile Workers will show that it has been scrupulous in the extreme not to infringe the union's autonomy at any point, and that the most careful democratic procedure has been followed throughout.

Every step that has been taken by the CIO to aid the UAW in maintaining unity, has been taken at the request of and by agreement with the duly elected representatives of the union.

The recent peace plan was unanimously approved by every officer and executive board member of the union.

Yet the individual who has been suspended from office for violating this peace agreement, for defying the instructions of the duly elected executive board and for setting himself up as a would-be dictator, has the nerve today to fill the press with charges of "dictatorship" against the CIO!

Canadian CIO Heads Rap AFL Splitting

TORONTO, Canada—Following is the statement issued by 13 leaders of the CIO in Canada, attacking the split in labor's ranks forced by top leaders of the AFL:

We, the undersigned representatives of the CIO unions, deeply regret that the Executive of the Trades & Labor Congress of Canada has taken steps to suspend the CIO unions upon the arbitrary instruction of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor. This action, which is obviously not in the interests of the labor movement in our Dominion, violates the decision for unity enthusiastically approved by the 54th Convention of the Trades & Labor Congress of Canada.

We have done everything in our power to preserve the unity of the international trade union movement, realizing that any conflict in our ranks would serve only the interests of reactionary finance. The greatest degree of labor unity is essential for the improvement of our living standards, and the preservation of our democratic rights, which are today faced with increasing attacks from reactionary industrial and financial interests.

TORIES ENJOY LABOR CONFLICT

The growing organization and unity of labor is regarded by reaction as a threat to its special privileges. It is these reactionary interests who desire to see labor in conflict in order that they can promote their plans for undermining the trade union movement, the foundation of economic and political democracy in our Dominion.

It is because of these vital considerations, that we receive under protest, the decision of the Executive of the Trades & Labor Congress of Canada.

We have no quarrel with the membership of the American Federation of Labor in our Dominion. They have no quarrel with us. This was most clearly demonstrated by the resolution for unity adopted at the last Convention of the Trades & Labor Congress of Canada.

We have worked together in the closest harmony for the advancement of our common economic and legislative interests—and thus the interests of our nation.

MEMBERS WANT UNITY

The arbitrary action of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor in prevailing upon the officers of the Trades & Labour Congress of Canada to suspend our unions, will not for one moment affect that deep understanding and community of interests which animates the membership of the international trade union movement both in the AFL and the CIO in Canada.

We are mainly concerned with organizing the thousands of as yet unorganized workers in our Dominion, in order to help them obtain a greater measure of economic security and political democracy. We will, therefore, continue, in the future as in the past, to cooperate with our fellow-trade unionists toward this end.

We are fully confident that this spirit of cooperation which moves the membership of the international trade unions in our dominion, will in the near future re-unite us within our Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

Oklahoma CIO Unions Form Council

McALESTER, Okla.—Joining the growing list of CIO state councils, delegates to the Oklahoma CIO convention held here last week, set up the 27th state body affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

William W. Allen, Oklahoma City, a member of the Oil Workers International Union, was unanimously elected president of the New Oklahoma Industrial Union Council. Tom Bolen, Okmulgee, representative of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers, was named vice-president, and James Johnson, Heavener, of the United Mine Workers, was chosen secretary-treasurer.

Oklahoma CIO unions formerly were affiliated with a bi-state council, the Arkansas-Oklahoma industrial union council, but voted at a convention held last month in Fort Smith, Ark., to set up a separate state group.

FORM COMMITTEE

An executive committee was chosen at the convention composed of six representatives of international unions with locals affiliated to the council. Other members representing additional affiliated groups will be added later.

When Spending Stops Recession's Near

WASHINGTON — Prosperity depends upon government spending!

This fact, overlooked by Tory opponents of the President's call for an $875,000,000 WPA appropriation, has been clearly proved since the depression stock market crash of ten years ago.

Proof of the success of the government's spending policies was contained in CIO Pres. John L. Lewis' report to the CIO convention last autumn.

A chart accompanying the report shows government expenditures zooming upward early in 1934, in the middle of 1935 and at a similar time in 1936, and again during the first half of 1938.

In each case, the index of business activity followed closely the pattern set by Uncle Sam. Only a few months after government spending turned downward in 1936, business took a nose dive. Almost as soon as U. S. spending started again early last year, recovery from the "recession" commenced.

CIO leaders point out that a halt in WPA activity at this time would probably plunge business into a new depression, even before it had recovered from its last setback.

Protest Grows In Fight On WPA Cuts

justify reducing the WPA rolls at this time," he continued.

"The further progress of the current recovery movement depends very substantially upon the continued provision of adequate funds for WPA.

"Every known consideration indicates the necessity of an appropriation of at least a billion dollars for the next five months on WPA. Certainly the President's request for $875,000,000 is the absolute minimum necessary to sustain the present recovery."

CIO Supports Auto Union Board

tional authority, has suspended Martin and the four former members of the executive board who have thus participated in attempting to establish a dual organization in the United Automobile Workers of America," Murray and Hillman declare.

"Martin's activities are in complete defiance of every democratic principle enunciated in the constitution of the UAWA. His activities can only lend strength to the enemies of organized labor and to the reactionary employers."

All affiliates of the CIO have been notified, in a letter from Director John Brophy, to deal only with President R. J. Thomas, addressing communications to him and Secretary-Treasurer George Addes at the Fort Shelby Hotel, Detroit; and to give full support to President Thomas and the executive board of the UAW.

Charles Taft, noted liberal of Cincinnati, has been appointed by President R. J. Thomas as counsel for the UAW in its suit to restrain Martin from interfering with the affairs of the union.

A letter from Martin accusing John L. Lewis and the CIO of "dictatorial tactics" and purporting to resign from the CIO executive board, was promptly answered by Murray and Hillman in a statement which declared:

"Homer Martin's letter is further indication of the haphazard, irresponsible methods he has employed in his relations with the members of the UAW, with the officials of the CIO and with the automobile manufacturers. He reveals the same dictator-mania which was responsible for the contract violations which have occurred at times, and for the almost continuous bickering in the official family of the auto union.

"It should be clear that the UAW is not severing its relations with the CIO but only that Homer Martin is deserting both the UAW and the CIO. Of course, he cannot resign from the executive board of the CIO. He is no longer a member. Seventeen members of the UAW board, acting under their constitution, have suspended him from office and divorced him of the right to call himself a spokesman of the auto union.

"The loyalty of the auto workers to the CIO is not questioned. It has been shown again in recent days by the flood of resolutions and letters from auto workers and their local unions. All these manifestations agree that the responsibility for the auto union's difficulties lie at Martin's doorstep.

"Martin's letter is a collection of desperate distortions penned by a defeated man. Within a few months, Martin will be remembered only as a temporary impediment to the establishment of orderly and honest collective bargaining in the automobile industry."

90% Want Unity In Canada

By MIKE RYAN

Halifax, N. S.—Ninety per cent of Canadian workers want unity in their ranks and are opposed to the suspension by the executive council of the Trades and Labor Congress of CIO organizations.

This is the Canadian labor situation as seen by Silby Barrett, regional director of the CIO in Eastern Canada and also international board member of, the United Mine Workers, representing District 26.

The three members of the executive council who voted to suspend the CIO organizations broke their pledge to work for unity given to Canadian labor, Barrett said.

FORGET PLEDGES

He declared that the executive council members at the last Congress convention had pledged themselves to bring about unity in the ranks of labor but instead had become satellites of the AFL.

"It is a great pity," said Barrett, "to read of the action they have taken, and to me it looks as if these three officers (the three members of the executive council who voted for the suspension) are taking their dictation from William Green instead of acting as they were authorized to do at the recent convention.

"The United Mine Workers and steel workers whom I represent are opposed to their action, and I am confident that if the workers of Canada were given a referendum vote on the matter at least 90 per cent would vote against the stand taken by Messrs. Tallon, Bengough and Trepannier.

"It is indeed a sad state of affairs if we have to accept dictation from executive officers of the American Federation of Labor."

The will of the rank and file of unions was not considered when three AFL members of the executive council effected the temporary suspension of CIO organizations.

On the contrary, the council members defied a unity resolution passed by the last convention of the Congress which declared for harmony within the labor movement and went so far as to instruct the executive council to continue efforts to heal the breach between the CIO and AFL in the United States.

Negro Congress Urges Extension Of Civil Rights

Washington. — Protection of civil rights, extension of social and economic security, and world peace are the major aims in the legislative program of the National Negro Congress, released from here in the form of a circular letter to all Senators and Representatives.

Principal item in the civil rights program is passage of federal anti-lynching bill, supported last year by the CIO and other progressive groups, and blocked by a filibuster of southern Senators.

After that comes repeal of poll taxes that prevent millions of Negro citizens from voting in the south. The letter points out that such taxes and other disfranchising devices keep large sections of Southern white people as well as Negroes from the ballot boxes.

Strict federal laws to stop labor spying are also urged, as well as laws to stop anti-labor employers from inciting race hatred "for the purpose of preventing trade union organization of labor."

For economic and social security, the Negro Congress urges extension of present benefits, adequate federal relief appropriations, a national health program, and a federal farm program to guarantee decent income levels to all farmers regardless of race.

The Congress also opposed all amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act, in line with the CIO policy of preserving the Act against attempts to cripple it.

La Follette Committee Charges Employers, Thugs to Blame For Strike Violence

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON — The strikebreaking racket, which has brought wealth and power to "Stinkfoot" McVey, "Benny-the--fink" Gross and Pearl (his mother wanted a girl) Bergoff, received what may be its death blow as the Senate Civil Liberties Committee announced it would seek legislation prohibiting anti-labor employers from using agencies whose practises have made the fink business "notorious."

In a 202-page document, Sen. Robert LaFollette and Sen. Elbert Thomas placed the blame for much of the violence in American labor relations squarely on the shouulders of corporation executives who have not hesitated to employ underworld characters with known criminal records to attack peaceful, striking workers.

The report covers hearings of the committee conducted during the past three years. It lists 35 detective agencies and 150 strikebreakers who help form the grimy army of underworld thugs utilized by big business to fight unionism.

An appendix to the report "shows that a large group of persons exist that are available for strike work in all the large industrial sections of the country. In the business of strikebreaking, these men are known as finks.

"Some of the men that compose this group make strikebreaking their life work, moving from strike to strike, from San Francisco to New York and from Chicago to New Orleans.

CRIMINAL RECORDS

"A third of the men listed have criminal or arrest records. Their crimes include burglary, larceny, rape, assault and other types of violence. Many of these men are members of a strikebreaking fraternity, recruited by detective and industrial service agencies for the anti-labor employer.

"Typical examples are 'Chowderhead' Cohen, Sing Sing alumnus with four convictions for felonies; 'Boilermaker' Williams, veteran slugger and muscle man of the Railway Audit and Inspection Co., Inc., of Pittsburgh, Pa., and 'Whitey' Cronk, who has worked for virtually all the strikebreaking agencies in the country, from 'Blackjack' Jerome on the west coast to Pearl 'The Red Demon' Bergoff in the East.

NICE BOYS

FINKS CAUSE VIOLENCE

Use of commercial strikebreaking firms "tend to produce violence and disorder," the report found, most of it "attributed to the activities of professional strike followers and the employers who use them."

Once on the job, the detective agencies are interested in provoking and maintaining violence, the committee added, in order that employers will continue to see need to use the finks to protect them.

"No employer who has accepted the principle of collective bargaining in good faith can consider using such persons against his employes," the committee said. Pointing out that their purpose is to discredit bargaining, it charged that "through their acts of intimidation, coercion, and provocation, such persons violate the rights of free speech and free assembly and the freedom of association of employes."

VIOLATES U. S. POLICY

Use of finks, the report asserted, "violated the policy of labor relations enunciated by the Congress" of the United States.

Detective agencies offer employers their services not to keep peace or to protect property but simply "for the purpose of destroying unions and the process of collective bargaining, according to the committee.

"The strikebreaker, furnished as a part of strike service by most agencies, is, in most cases, not a qualified workman but an incompetent mercenary, posing as a workman for the purpose of breaking strikes. He usually receives compensation higher than that of the regular employes and is discharged after the strike

"The strikeguard furnished by most agencies is not a man trained and qualified for police and patrol duty. He is, for the most part, a specialized kind of ruffian, 'a regular fink', well versed in violence, often dishonest, and sometimes a gangster."

BIG PROFITS

Propaganda artists furnished by the detective agencies are little more than agents provocateurs or spies, the report charged. Profits of the agencies which turn the thugs loose in strike situations are "enormous, ranging from 25 per cent to 100 per cent."

In the summer of 1936, Remington-Rand paid out $145,000 for finks. RCA Manufacturing spent $156,000 to break a strike at its Camden, N. J., plant during the same year. Of $93,491.42 received by the Burns Agency for strikebreaking work during the walkout of building service employes in New York, more than $45,000 represented gross profits.

The National Corporation Service of Youngstown, Ohio, took in between $130,000 and $140,000 for strikebreaking activities in 1934, allowing the head of the rat agency to pay himself $26,000 for his year's work. The Burns Agency received $329,000 in the years 1933-36 for industrial guard services, more than twice as much as it received for espoinage work.

One humorous sidelight was uncovered by the Senators when they found that the finks complain that part of their $5 or $10 daily wage must be turned back to their bosses—"the nobles of the profession"—in the form of a kickback. They make up for it, however, through thievery.

According to one witness, "the strikeguards at the Willard Storage Battery strike in Cleveland walked off with storage batteries, which they sold at less than established prices . . ."

"The New York City elevator strike offered irresistible temptations. One Park Avenue apartment was looted by a strikebreaker of a mink coat and jewelry valued at $55,000."

Strikebreaking is closely tied up with espionage, with propaganda work, and with the purchase of industrial munitions, the report showed—all parts of a general plan to break strikes. Guards frequently provoke violence to convince the employers that more guards are necessary—all in order that the fink agency may prosper.

FINKS BRING DEATH

The report cited a number of illustrations to show where such "promotional" activities had resulted in injuries and even death to workers. Because of the probability of such incidents, detective agency bosses like to have their men deputized by the local law enforcement bodies in order that any murder or mayhem arising out of fink-inspired riots may be chalked up to "law and order."

Do employers know what they are letting themselves in for when they hire finks? Yes, replies the committee—"in recent years at least, employers have reasonable notice of the sort of men that will be supplied to them for strike duty by detective agencies.

"It should not cause an employer any surprise that the men recruited for him by a detective agency are of criminal or violent character, thieves, petty grafters or worse.

When Finks Work

U. S. May Probe Loss Of Rights

NEW YORK—U. S. Attorney-General Frank Murphy revealed that he is considering the establishment of a new division in the Department of Justice to handle cases involving the violation of civil liberties.

Murphy announced that members of his staff have been asked to "make an exhaustive study of the federal civil liberties statute, and the protection of the rights of the people thereunder.

"The study is being made," he added, "in order to determine whether the Department of Justice should have a unit of administration to effectively preserve civil liberties.

NEED FOR VIGILANCE

"It seems to me," Murphy said, "that where there is social unrest—and I have been through no scant amount of that myself for a long time, since 1930—it is there that we ought to be more anxious and vigilant about protecting the civil liberties of an insecure people."

In Washington, Murphy's office announced that the Federal Bureau of Investigation had been ordered to probe the eviction of Missouri sharecroppers from camps along U. S. highways 60 and 61. His action followed a request from the Southern Tenant Farmers Union, CIO.

WASHINGTON—Facts and figures on the working of the Wagner Labor Relations Act, and an analysis of proposed amendments sought by enemies of the Act are given in a new pamphlet, "Protect the National Labor Relations Act," put out by Labor's Non-Partisan League from headquarters here.

The pamphlet shows how every important amendment proposed would weaken the Act as an aid to collective bargaining, and how they are designed by anti-labor forces to change the Act from a law that promotes labor organization to one that could be used against the interests of the workers.

The first section of the pamphlet discusses the Act in detail, shows how it has been a great help to organized labor, and gives a brief record of why it was enacted, how Congress intended it to operate as a means of preventing and settling industrial strife, and how it has worked in this way.

MEETS CRITICISMS

The second section deals with criticisms that have been made of the Act, showing how untrue they are and how their real source comes from a desire to limit or handicap collective bargaining.

It takes up the familiar cry that the Act is "one-sided" against employers, pointing out that its function is to protect workers from unfair practices used by anti-union bosses, and to correct inequalities that in the past have given the employer all the advantages in fighting unionization.

It also gives the facts to answer the Tory complaint that the Act has increased industrial strife, citing figures to prove that the exact opposite is true.

Attacks on the Act and especially on the Board that administers it from top leaders of the AFL are answered, the pamphlet again citing figures to prove that the AFL has won more appropriate unit decisions than the CIO.

WRITE TO CONGRESS

Finally, the pamphlet urges that all workers and progressives should write to their Senators and Representatives urging that the Act be left unchanged.

"The responsibility for repelling this attack on the Wagner Act rests first of all upon the workers of America. They must take the leadership in defense of their Bill of Right," the pamphlet ends.

"The enemies of the Act can be kept at bay only if the workers and other progressive Americans are united in their demand that the Natl. Labor Relations Act shall not be amended."

FDR Asks Health Program

New Homes For Old

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing.

"Is public housing a threat to private enterprise?" Many business groups think that it is.

What's worse, many city councils — in Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Portland, Richmond, Providence and dozens of other places — have been convinced that it is. As a result, they have refused to set up local housing authorities and have stood stubbornly in the way of anything that would help provide good, low-rent housing for workers . . .

Actually, however, public housing is very far from being a threat to private enterprise. In fact, it is a very definite and unmistakable stimulus to private enterprise.

If business men don't always realize this, we should not be too impatient. We must realize that many business men just don't know the facts. We must teach them — and local governments also—the truth about housing.

LESSON FOR BUSINESSMEN

The first thing we must explain to them is that low-rent housing projects built by public housing authorities tap a market which private builders can't reach.

The rentals charged on USHA-aided projects range from $8 to $22 a month for an entire dwelling — depending upon the city. This means that the tenants will be families earning from about $500 to $1,100 or $1,200 a year—and rarely much more.

No private builder can build decent houses available to this income group. The private home construction industry is interested only in families earning $2000 a year or more.

Therefore, it's arrant nonsense for anyone to claim that low-rent housing projects might hurt the business of the private builder!

MORE CONTRACTS, MORE SALES

The second thing we must explain to business men is that public, low-rent housing means better business.

It means contracts for contractors. All projects financed by the United States Housing Authority are constructed by private contractors. The local housing authorities award all the contracts.

In addition, public housing projects invariably provide the spark for a real construction boom—at least in their immediate vicinity.

Public housing means additional orders for the companies which manufacture or process steel, brick, timber, cement, glass, electrical equipment, etc.

It means big sales of land. All project sites are bought and paid for at their real value.

It means higher realty values. Housing projects replace slum areas (which drag down realty values) with well-designed wholesome neighborhoods.

Hillman Sees Big Gains In '40

New York — Ten million workers will belong to the organized labor movement by the end of 1940, Sidney Hillman, CIO vice-president, predicted this week.

Hillman, who heads the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, was speaking to delegates of silk workers gathered here for a conference.

Pointing to a 3,500,000 growth in organized workers since 1935, he said that with growing signs of business recovery, labor will be able to increase its strength to the ten-million mark by the end of next year.

AGAINST WPA CUTS

Recalling that the 1938 recession was due principally to a drop in government expenditures, Hillman warned the delegates to protest to Congress against any cut in the WPA appropriation at this time.

"The proposed cut in WPA expenditures," he said, "will not only affect the million WPA workers who would be dropped from the rolls, but indirectly, thousands of workers in private industry because of the drop in purchasing power.

"There is only one way, properly, to curtail government expenditures. When private industry itself takes workers off the relief rolls, and not before. Certainly, no one proposes that the government continue to spend indefinitely, but private industry must do its share towards solving the problem of unemployment."

Murray Hails Steel Pay Ruling

By HOWARD McCARTNEY

Pittsburgh—The decision of the U. S. Government to set a 62½-cent minimum hourly wage on steel produced for federal contracts "can be regarded as a complete victory for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee," Chairman Philip Murray declared this week.

Pointing out that the decision "upholds the claims made by the SWOC," Murray said its effect will be to "remove certain definite inequitable wage differentials which give competitive advantages to a number of steel manufacturers who clung, through the years, to a low wage policy."

MEANS RAISES

Murray pointed out that Bethlehem Steel has been paying as low as 56½ cents an hour in some of its plants, and in the future will have to increase its minimum rate to the prevailing wage set by the SWOC and upheld by the government—62½ cents.

As a practical result of the award raising the basic labor rate, semi-skilled and skilled workers should receive similar increases on a proportionate basis.

ACTIVITY AT BIG STEEL

Meanwhile in mills of the U. S. Steel Corporation, a renewed drive is on to consolidate union forces, build the SWOC lodges and increase dues collections.

In Big Steel Mills in the Youngstown - Pittsburgh - Johnstown districts, the drive was started through monthly meetings of grievance committeemen, and through creation of an unofficial committee consisting of the chairman of each of the grievance committees from the 30 or more plants.

Five Shipping Firms Must Deal with CIO

Washington — Five San Francisco steamship companies have been ordered by the Labor Board to bargain collectively with the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, and to stop interfering with membership in this union of watchmen employed by them.

The five companies are the American - Hawaiian Steamship Co., Grace Line, McCormick Steamship Co., Matson Navigation Co., and Sudden & Christenson.

Highlights Of Health Message

"The health of the people is a public concern; ill health is a major cause of suffering, economic loss and dependency; good health is essential to the security and progress of the nation."

* * *

"The objective of a national health program is to make available in all parts of our country and for all groups of our people the scientific knowledge and skill at our command to prevent and care for sickness and disability; to safeguard mothers, infants and children, and to offset through social insurance the loss of earnings among workers who are temporarily or permanently disabled."

* * *

"We have reason to derive great satisfaction from the increase in the average length of life in our country and from the improvement in the average levels of health and well-being. Yet these improvements in the averages are cold comfort to the millions of our people whose security in health and survival is still as limited as was that of the nation as a whole fifty years ago."

Message To Congress Calls For 10 - Year Plan

WASHINGTON — Pres. Roosevelt this week set the ball rolling on a long-discussed federal health program aimed at cutting the ten-billion dollar yearly loss sustained by the nation through illness and disability.

The President forwarded to a Congress a summary of the report of the Interdepartmental Committee to Co-Ordinate Health and Welfare Activities, and called for the passage of legislation to fulfill the committee's request for an $850,000,000 yearly health program.

Senator Robert Wagner of New York will soon file a bill carrying out the committee's recommendations, he has announced. The whole program has the support of the CIO, which, at its Pittsburgh convention passed a resolution endorsing the committee's requests and calling for speedy enactment of its program. Miss Josephine Roche, chairman of the committee, was the sole guest speaker at the convention and her speech discussing the government's contemplated health program brought cheers from the delegates.

"On the average day of the year about 5,000,000 persons are disabled by disease," the report showed. "About half of these persons are permanently disabled. Nearly 2,000,000 permanently disabled are less than 65 years old."

"Sickness is "much more frequent and more severe and survival is more precarious among low-income families than among families in moderate or comfortable circumstances," the message warned. "Despite their greater need and the fact that they spend proportionately equal or greater amounts from their own incomes for medical care, low-income families receive far less care than those in better circumstances."

LISTS FIVE FACTORS

Five factors were cited as showing that Mr. and Mrs. America are in need of the benefits of the national health program:

"1. Services to prevent sickness are grossly insufficient for the nation as a whole.

2. Hospitals and other organized failities are too few, too small or wholly lacking in many communities, particularly in rural areas. The financial support of hospital services is meager and uncertain, especially the support of services for patients who cannot pay for the care they need.

3. One third of the population on relief or in the low-income brackets receives no medical service, or, inadequate service.

"4. A far larger part of the nation suffers from the economic burdens created by illness. The largest of these burdens arise from the variable costs of medical services, costs which can be budgeted by the large group as a whole but not by the individual family.

"5. Wage earners and their families need protection against loss of income during periods of temporary or permanent disability.

CIO Pledges Aid To Cuban Unions

HAVANA, Cuba—Full fraternal support to the progressive labor movement of Latin America was expressed by Joseph Kovner, CIO assistant counsel, who has been attending the Natl. Congress of Cuban Workers in this country.

"The CIO, representing the progressive organized labor movement in the U. S., will lend its fraternal support to the development of genuine labor movements among the workers of Latin America, and to the existence of democratic political institutions which are indispensable to the growth of genuine labor unions in any country," Kovner told the Congress delegates.

The Congress, first of its kind to be held legally in Cuba in several years, was called to establish a unified labor movement with full legal rights. At present labor does not have the right to form a national organization in industries other than railway and maritime. The right to strike is also denied.

FULL RIGHTS PROMISED

These rights will very soon be granted, the Cuban Secretary of Labor told the 1,000 delegates, in outlining the progress toward democracy that the Batista government intends to make in the next few months.

Commenting on this, Lazaro Pena, leader of the Cuban labor movement, said in the "declaration of Cuban labor;"

"The Congress will undoubtedly play an important role in the establishment of democracy in Cuba, and as such give an example to all of the workers of Latin America and the U. S.

"Up to now Cuba has been under a dictatorship. The Batista government has promised democratic reforms, but these will only become effective if this Congress accomplishes its objective."

MAP SOCIAL PROGRESS

In addition to the main aim of setting up a unified labor movement, the Cuban Congress is working for:

1. Improvement and extension of social legislation.
2. End of discrimination against all workers.
3. More representation of workers in the Constitutional Assembly.
4. Prevention of war and defeat of fascism.
5. A program of culture and education for workers.

Kovner pointed to the past record of American and other foreign capital in exploiting Latin American workers, and said that the CIO believed that "these conditions are intolerable, and the economic relations of the American countries must be based on the cardinal principle that decent standards of living for workers must be maintained and the exercise of civil liberties protected."

Hearst Empire Continues Decline; Chicago Strikers Get United Support

NEW YORK—William Randolph Hearst took a hop, skip and a jump down the road to eventual oblivion this week, as two more of his pubications went out of business.

The Pictorial Review, Hearst announced, would stop with its March issue, soon to be on the newsstands.

The Wisconsin News, scene of an American Newspaper Guild strike victory three years ago, was suddenly closed without previous warning.

Meanwhile, in Baltimore the National Labor Relations Board cracked down on the anti-labor policies of the Hearst-owned News-Post. It ordered the reinstatement of Fred Houck, fired for Guild activities in 1937, and the payment of $3,000 in back salary.

In Chicago, Hearst seemed intent on putting the Herald-Examiner and Evening American out of business the hard way, obstinately keeping up his losing fight with Guild strikers seeking protection of their jobs. With circulation and prestige melting daily, Hearst made a bid for public support by signing a contract with the "Newspaper Editorial Association," a fake AFL union which has been repudiated by AFL unions in the city. Leaders of the Typographical Union have pledged their support to the Guild strike, pointing out that a Guild victory will strengthen the position of all labor in the Windy City.

The strikers last week received words of encouragement from CIO leaders attending a maritime union conference in Chicago.

"You are striking to establish the right of self-organization by newspaper workers everywhere," they were told by John Brophy, CIO national director.

"In taking the stand for this right, you are on the battlefront. Hearst, lord of the press, insists his will must rule. You'll have to establish democracy by struggle. As people in all walks of life become more aware of the real issue, they are coming to your support. For you represent advancing civilization in industrial relations, while Hearst represents the autocratic way. You are carrying the banner of decency and reason."

Brophy was followed by Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union.

"Hearst and his ilk don't belong in a country like ours," Curran said. "Hearst and his ilk belong in a country like Hitler's. I pledge you the full support of ourselves and our allied unions to see that he lands there eventually. You're going to win this strike 100%."

"If Hearst doesn't yield," asserted John Green, head of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers," this struggle is going to break Mr. Hearst and you're the ones who are going to do it."

Circulation of the two papers has already been reduced by 195,000, according to strike leaders, while advertising lineage is in a nosedive. Some 283 firms have already pulled their ads, reducing advertising space in the paper by more than 200,000 lines over the same period a year ago.

In every large city throughout the nation, CIO and AFL groups are aiding the Chicago strikers. National advertisers in the struck papers are receiving protests from labor groups and are being urged to drop their space from them.

Sugar Workers Go CIO

Houston, Tex. — Organization of the sugar refinery workers, who are among the lowest paid in the South, has just been completed at Sugarland, Tex., 30 miles from Houston.

As a result, 98 per cent of the workers at the Imperial Sugar Refinery plants are now members of the CIO. The Imperial company owns and controls the town of Sugarland. The organizing of the employes was a remarkable achievement considering the obstacles.

Three years ago the American Federation of Labor attempted to organize the same workers but failed.

Quarry Union Gains

BARRE, Vt. — The Quarry Workers Intl. Union gained 13 new locals during 1938, the first year in which the 35-year-old organization had been affiliated with the CIO.

Substantial increases in membership have been reported by the union's national headquarters here. In addition to signing a number of contract renewals, agreements were reached with several companies which had previously maintained open-shop policies. None of the contracts provided for wage cuts, while in several cases, increases were obtained.

WON STRIKE

The union recently won a two-week strike in Anderson, Ind., signing a contract with the National Tile Corp. which won seniority rights and grievance machinery for 300 workers.

The international has just formed a women's auxiliary, provided for in an amendment to the constitution.

Oil Union Gets Pact In Texas

Port Arthur, Tex. — One hundred oil workers here, members of the CIO International Oil Workers Union, have won a contract with the Great Lakes Coal and Coke Co., covering wage increases, sole collective bargaining rights, and other benefits.

The increases range from five to 13 cents per hour, and are retroactive to January 1. In addition, the contract guarantees 14 days paid vacation, seven holidays, grievance adjustment machinery, and seniority rights. Men laid off get 180 extension of seniority.

The contract is the first to be won in the Sabine area, according to Homer Coffman, local president, and was negotiated by J. E. Crail, international representative, and a local committee.

Houston CIO Plans Big Program to Aid City's Unions

HOUSTON, Tex.—An elaborate program, both cultural and educational, which seeks to unify and strengthen the labor movement in this area, has been formulated by the Houston and Harris County CIO Councils.

Under joint sponsorship of the CIO and AFL, Houston for the first time arranged a "Labor Appreciation Day," featured by an all-star boxing card.

The project already has made rapid progress in bringing about a spirit of co-operation and fellowship between the two rival unions. City and county officials are participating and the day was to be officially proclaimed by Houston's mayor.

6,000 TICKETS

About 6,000 tickets were sold to the boxing event. The local fight promoter, Hugh Benbow, turned over his Olympiad to organized labor for the night and arranged to have the outstanding fighters in the Southwest carded.

Another project underway, and being sponsored by the Harris County CIO Council, is a "Labor Little Theater." The little theater movement is being backed by all of the liberal organizations in Houston and will be on a year-around basis.

New League Unit Formed In Vermont

Barre, Vt.—Delegates from the various unions and co-operative groups convened in Barre to set up a county unit of Labor's Non-Partisan League and elected the following officers: Chairman, John C. Lawson, Secretary and Treasurer of the Quarry Workers, CIO; Fred Fisher, Vice-Chairman of the Workers Alliance, James F. Christie, Quarry Workers; James Kidd, Granite Cutters (AFL).

Labor has, at long last, in this state, come to realize that in order to get much needed labor laws enacted by the legislature, in Montpelier assembled, it must unite on the political front as well as the economic front.

New York CIO Fights Bill To Hit Unions

New York — CIO unions representing 500,000 workers in New York state are urged to help the fight against the anti-labor Wicks bill now in the state senate, in a circular letter sent out by Allan S. Haywood, president of the N. Y. CIO Industrial Union Council.

The bill, Haywood explained, would put all transit workers in New York under civil service. "While on the surface this bill may appear harmless and to the uninformed even desirable," Haywood said, "it carries with it the most vicious anti-union implications."

Close to 30,000 transit workers would lose all seniority rights and many thousands would lose their jobs completely, Hayood explained, since civil service would not recognize the closed shop contracts and seniority rights the workers now have through their union, the CIO Transport Workers.

Bay State CIO Plans Convention

Boston, Mass. — An official call to the second annual convention of the Massachusetts Industrial Union Council, to be held in the Hotel Bridgway, Springfield, Mass., February 11-12, has been sent out to all CIO affiliates in the state.

A pre-convention mass meeting will be held Friday, February 10.

Recalling the obstacles overcome by the Council during the past year, the call, signed by President Michael F. Widman and Daniel J. Boyle, secretary-treasurer, states that "today we face a new situation when the organized labor movement will play a greater part than ever before in shaping the destinies of our Commonwealth and nation."

The convention will make plans "for a further consolidation of our work and an increase in our organization to meet our increased responsibilities," the call declares.

The Massachusetts CIO Council was set up at a convention held in November, 1937.

Amendments Would Help Fake Unions

WASHINGTON—Opening fire on the Wagner Act, the top leaders of the American Federation of Labor stepped in where the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers and the Chamber of Commerce feared to tread, offering a list of nine amendments which would rob labor of many of its gains during the last three years.

The AFL leaders' nine suggested amendments—introduced into the Senate by Sen. David I. Walsh of Massachusetts—would make possible a rapid growth in company unionism, by tying the hands of the National Labor Relations Board.

The amendments, if accepted, would make almost mandatory the designation of craft union units in Labor Board cases, dealing a severe blow to industrial unionism.

Meanwhile Pres. Whitney of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen placed his organization of several hundred thousand members squarely on record to protect the Wagner Act from reactionary raids.

Chairman J. Warren Madden of the NLRB, in a radio debate with Pres. Charles Hook of the Natl. Association of Manufacturers, pointed to the fact that the Act and the Board had strengthened democracy and extended industrial peace.

Lewis Asks LaGuardia For Confab

Washington. — John L. Lewis, CIO president, has asked Mayor La Guardia of New York for a conference with a special committee of New York CIO unions concerning the problems of labor relations in New York city transit.

Lewis' request was made in a wire to Mayor La Guardia, which read in part as follows:

"I have conferred with the representatives of the CIO Transport Workers Union, and I am impressed with the growing seriousness of this question and the increasing anxiety among the members of the Transport Workers Union because of the threat to their security."

The proposed Wicks bill in the New York Senate to put transit workers under civil service was cited as an example of the attack on conditions won by the union after long and difficult struggle.

MANY JOBS THREATENED

Under this bill, it was pointed out, many thousands of transit workers would lose their jobs because of arbitrary tests that would be imposed. At the same time, transit efficiency would suffer, since these men have proved their ability through many years of service on the various systems.

In addition, measures like the Wicks bill would rob the workers of all seniority rights, of pensions earned through long service, and of collective bargaining rights won through their CIO union.

DyersCouncil Backs CIO

West Warwick, R. I.—Support of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee and the CIO was voted unanimously by some 50 delegates who attended the meeting of the Dyers' Federation New England Council held here the latter part of January.

The delegates also backed unanimously the ousting of Francis Gorman, president of the United Textile Workers, and acknowleged George Baldanzi as president until a convention is called.

Bay State Unions For Wagner Act

Washington. — The twelve CIO Unions in Massachusetts affiliated with District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America rallied last week to support the Wagner Act against amendment.

They passed resolutions and sent telegrams to Senators Walsh and Lodge urging that they recognize the wishes of their constituents and defend the Wagner Act against amendment.

CERTIFY LOCAL

Washington—The Federation of Flat Glass Workers, CIO, will be the sole bargaining agency for about 3600 employes in a unit composed of seven plants of the Libbey - Owens - Ford Glass Co., Toledo, Ohio. The union was certified by the Labor Board after a comparison of union membership records and company payrolls disclosed that the CIO union represented 2,287 out of a total of 3,643 workers.

Name Mine Mill Union In Alaska

Washington — Workers at the Alaska Juneau Gold Mining Co. won a decisive victory when the National Labor Board certified Local 203 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, CIO, as sole collective bargaining agency at the mine.

The certification followed a recent secret ballot election which the local won, 521 to 332 for a joint committee of three AFL unions, locals of the Machinists, the Electrical Brotherhood, and a Federal local.

FOUGHT COERCION

The workers voted for the CIO in spite of a long campaign of coercion and intimidation by the company and the AFL, which acted the part of employer stooge in the attempt to defeat the CIO and avoid genuine collective bargaining.

Office employes and technical engineers were excluded from the certification order, though watchmen were included. Of the close to 1,000 workers voting, only 39 cast their ballots against any kind of union representation.

Washington — Nearly $145,000,000 was paid into the U. S. treasury as a result of the surtax on undistributed profits levied during the year 1936, according to the Treasury Dept.

Helped Prevent WPA Slash

Through demonstrations like this one in New York, organized workers and jobless led by the CIO held up a Tory plan to drop a million unemployed from the WPA rolls. As passed, the $725,000,000 appropriation bill limits firings to 5% during February and March, makes it possible for the President to seek additional funds in the spring.

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON—When you have a social problem of your own making that you can't solve, the thing to try is to take the victims and put them where they can't be seen and their protests can't be heard.

This is the system that generations of cotton planters have used on the sharecroppers. It worked for many years—until the sharecroppers started to organize in the CIO and to demand their rights as American citizens and human beings.

Now, thousands of them in the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers Union have determined to put a stop to this age-old habit of planters using their labor at starvation wages and then throwing them out into the fields and the roads when one form of exploitation becomes less profitable and another takes its place.

FIGHT STARVATION

The most effective demonstration yet staged against this regime of backbreaking work followed by eviction and starvation has just ended in the cotton section of south-east Missouri — the so-called "bootheel" of the state.

Early in January the planters began to send out the usual eviction notices to the croppers that had sweated in the cotton rows during the growing and picking season, whole families earning less than $1.00 for a day's work.

This year the number of evictions was unusually high. The planters wanted to evict the families as croppers so they could re-employ them as day laborers at 75 cents or less a day for 120 days' work. As croppers, they had to be given supplies to last them through the non-working season. As day laborers they could be fired when the season was over.

When a sharecropper family is evicted it has no place to go. Plantations in the area are closed. The croppers can't rent other farms because there aren't any farms and they haven't got money to rent with if there were. As far as the planters are concerned, the families, children and all, are just supposed to quietly disappear, the quicker the better.

But this year things were different in the bootheel of southeast Missouri. There were 21 locals of the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers in the area, under the leadership of O. H. Whitfield, Negro officer of the affiliated Southern Tenant Farmers Union.

NATIONAL SHAME

Whitfield rallied more than 1,000 of the croppers with their wives and children and led them to a 100 mile "camp" along Missouri Highway 61. Ninety per cent of them were union members, and they made what shelter they could out of old blankets draped over fences, warmed themselves at tin stoves and dead wood fires.

The weather was cold and wet and food was scarce. Spirit was good. The croppers elected committees, held meetings, listened to speakers, sang hymns and labor songs.

And they got into newspapers. For a week the leading papers in the country carried stories and pictures showing the desperation of 1,300 American people turned out into the winter without shelter and almost without food.

CIO GETS BUSY

Immediately the CIO got busy. The St. Louis Industrial Union Council came with trucks of food and clothing and materials for tents. The national office of the CIO and of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers got assurances of relief from WPA and Farm Security and other agencies. The White House heard about the situation. A Department of Justice investigation was promised.

This was more than the planters could stand. All the other years they'd been able to evict their croppers and nobody heard about it, much less did anything. Now the CIO was there and made the nation see what was going on, and got the federal government interested.

So with the help of state cops they loaded the families into trucks and took them off the highway and dumped them in fields along the levee. They threatened Whitfield's life and ran him out of the camp and even out of his income at La-Farge.

They let the croppers stay along the river for a few days and then because the country was still stirred up by the situation they broke up this camp—which the croppers called Homeless Junction — and dispersed them once again.

The CIO intends to see that these people aren't turned loose to starve when the planters are for the moment through with them, and it intends to see they get a chance to live like decent beings and American citizens.

At Confab

Pres. Jacob Baker, of the Federal Workers, CIO, who will be a leading figure at a 3-day conference of the Cooperative League of the U. S. at Racine, Wis., February 24. Many unions are sending delegates to the sessions.

Union Shoe List

Washington. — Workers and friends of labor can be sure of the shoes they buy now. The United Shoe Workers, CIO, has put out a list of union-made shoes with names of scores of brands carrying the CIO label.

Copies of the list can be secured from the United Shoe Workers of America, 917 15th, NW, Washington, D. C.

1,800 PROJECTS

Washington — WPA workers have completed 1,800 projects extending or improving sewerage systems between July 1 and Nov. 1, WPA Administrator Col. F. C. Harrington announced.

Canadian CIO To Launch Big Campaign

By WILLIAM THOMAS

TORONTO, Ont.—A nation-wide organizing drive to enroll thousands of new members under the CIO banner was forecast by Silby Barrett, regional director for eastern Canada, following a meeting of Canadian CIO leaders here at the end of the month, their first since their unions were suspended from the Trades and Labor Congress on orders of AFL heads.

After the meeting the following statement, termed as the declaration of policy, was issued by Barrett on behalf of all the CIO unions in the dominion:

"Our membership in Canada now totals 56,000. We have established a firm foundation in the basic industries, in which previously the workers had no protection through collective bargaining. We have contracts and union recognition protecting approximately 40,000 of our members.

"However, only 15 per cent of the workers in our dominion have a measure of economic security through trade union organization. The greatest bulk of the unorganized workers is yet to be found in the basic mass production industries. Notwithstanding the vicious slander and opposition of the vested interests, the CIO in Canada has become permanently established and recognized by the federal government as a beneficial force in our dominion.

HELPED ALL UNIONS

"Thanks to this organization of the unorganized, and the splendid cooperation which existed between the AFL craft unions and CIO industrial unions, thousands of workers were added to the AFL craft unions, such as milk drivers, bakers, garment, beverage workers, etc.

"The CIO unions in Canada respect the decision of the 54th convention of the Trades and Labor Congress which overwhelmingly voted to maintain unity of the CIO and AFL unions in its ranks. The suspension of the CIO unions violates this decision.

WILL SEEK UNITY

"We will, therefore, in our fight to uphold this decision for unity, not create an independent trade union center in opposition to the Trades and Labor Congress.

"We are confident that the membership of the AFL will continue to cooperate actively with our membership in promoting the legislative and economic interests of the people of our dominion. The CIO unions will continue to organize the greatest degree of support for the important social legislation which the Trades and Labor Congress is seeking for our people."

Maritime Union Asks Protection Against Foreign Interests

NEW YORK—President Roosevelt has been urged by the National Maritime Union to stop the inroads being made upon American shipping and maritime labor by foreign interests.

In a letter signed by Jerry King, NMU secretary-treasurer, the union told the President that if not checked the foreign inroads "will in time destroy American shipping and drive our merchant ships from the high seas."

One of the practices employed by foreign shipping interests harmful to the American seamen, the letter said, is to allow shipping concerns abroad to send foreign crews here with transit visas to replace other foreign crews who have been "dumped" for trying to improve their working conditions and wages up to American standards. This places American shipping interests at an unfair competitive disadvantage, the NMU maintains.

Another practice working against the interests of American seamen, the letter pointed out, is the chartering by American shippers of foreign cargo vessels to lower operating costs, some companies even laying up their own vessels to charter foreign ships.

Auto Workers Cold to Efforts To Split Union

By EDWARD LEVINSON

DETROIT—The United Automobile Workers Union advanced on all fronts this week to save the union from a destructive dual-union move led by former President Homer Martin.

Pressing its charges of a collusive company union conspiracy engaged in by Martin and the Ford Motor Company, R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW, filed formal charges with the National Labor Relations Board.

On a second legal front, Martin beat two retreats. An action begun by him to suppress the United Automobile Worker, official union organ, was withdrawn by Martin attorneys.

The second Martin retreat in the courts came when the Circuit Court convened to hear argument on an application of President Thomas and the UAW executive board for an order directing Martin to surrender the union office and records now being held by Martin strong-arm men.

Martin pleaded for a delay, which was granted. UAW attorneys did not insist too strongly on an immediate hearing, for the most important union property, The United Automobile Worker and its mailing list, is in the hands of the legitimate and legal union.

DEFEATS FOR MARTIN

Outside the courts, Martin sustained other serious defeats. The CIO, through vice-chairmen Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, announced that the CIO has recognized the constitutionally created executive board headed by President Thomas.

This action was followed by the receipt by President Thomas of telegrams of support from 42 pres-

Liberals Seek To Block Dies

WASHINGTON—Liberals on Capitol Hill, backed by the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League, this week marshalled their forces to prevent the granting of additional funds to the Dies "Un-American" Committee.

Dies is seeking $150,000 to continue its red-baiting orgy.

A statement by 150 prominent lawyers; a letter signed by Executive Vice-President E. L. Oliver of the League, a resolution submitted by Congressman Kent Keller of Illinois, and scores of protests from labor groups condemned the committee's activities and urged Congress to prevent it from continuing to function.

The House Rules Committee, holding hearings on the committee's petition for funds, was asked by Oliver to withhold action until after consideration of charges preferred against the committee's former chief investigator, Edward F. Sullivan of Boston.

Sullivan was exposed by the League last summer as having been closely linked with fascist organizations and was shown to have had a police record.

Though Dies had acknowledged the League evidence with a promise to give it "careful consideration," no investigation or public hearings were ever held. Sullivan was later dismissed by the committee.

The lawyers' statement, made public by Rep. Vito Marcantonio of New York, American Labor Party member, charged that Dies had shielded fascist and Nazi organizations, while at the same time branding political opponents of the Texan Congressman as "communists."

New Glass Contract Lifts Pay $150,000

CLEVELAND—A new contract providing for wage increases expected to total upwards of $150,000 a year was signed last week by the Federation of Flat Glass Workers, CIO, and five "independent" glass manufacturers.

At the same time agreements signed early in 1938 with the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. and Libby-Owens-Ford, the two major producers in the industry, were renewed pending a court decision on an enforcement order asked by the National Labor Relations Board against Pittsburgh Plate.

The Board recently certified the FFGW as sole collective bargaining agent for workers in all plants of the company. The firm, however, refused to accept the union as bargaining agent at its Crystal City, Mo., plant, which has been only recently organized.

END DIFFERENTIAL

Wage increases ranging from 1 cent to 8½ cents an hour are provided in the new contract with the independents, as the result of the elimination of wage differentials which had previously existed in the industry.

"We have been working toward elimination of wage differentials for years," said Irwin DeShetler, secretary of the union. "I know now that we have a definite basis to work on in future negotiations. We didn't get all we asked for, but I am satisfied."

The 52 delegates who attended the 11-day negotiation session were headed by President Paul W. Fuller, of the FFGW. The companies which signed the contract were: American Window Glass Co., Adamton Glass Co., Harding Glass Co., Schoy Glass Co., and the Rolland Glass Co.

'Outside Agitator'

San Francisco (FP) — The San Francisco Industrial Union Council, CIO, has protested to the U. S. State and Labor Departments against appointment of Capt. Fritz Weidmann as German Consul-general in San Francisco.

The council calls him "an undesirable alien."

Weidmann was mentioned frequently in the recent Nazi spy trials in New York. He is an intimate associate of Hitler and was his captain during the war.

Congress Passes WPA Bill; Limits Dismissals

WASHINGTON — Congress, after a fight which has consumed a majority of its time since the session opened early in January, this week sent the WPA deficiency appropriation to Pres. Roosevelt for his signature.

The bill provides $725,000,000 for WPA, at the same time limiting layoffs to 5% of the personnel until the end of March.

The nature of the bill makes it possible for the President to appeal to Congress for another $150,000,000 before July 1. Thus the Tory plan to "balance the budget" at the expense of the people who could least afford it, has failed to this extent.

Though this procedure makes it difficult for WPA administrative officials to do long-range planning for the future, it is a definite victory for labor and progressive forces who had raised strong objections to the dropping of a million people from the WPA rolls, as the original bill would have provided.

HETZEL STATEMENT

Ralph Hetzel, CIO unemployment director, pointed out that "the action of the Tory coalition in the senate in rejecting the President's request for WPA was greatly mitigated by the appropriations committee amendment, which prevents cuts in February and March.

"That amendment won over a number of the Senators who would otherwise have voted for the higher figure. That amendment in essence is recognition of the correctness of labor's request that WPA rolls not be cut.

CIO ASKED BILLION

The CIO had originally asked for a billion dollars appropriation. Pres. John L. Lewis, in setting the CIO demand last November, had predicted that that amount would be necessary to care for all the jobless in the nation.

The pressure from CIO unions in every section of the country was held largely responsible for the decision of Congress to refuse the Tory demand for a "purge" of the WPA payrolls.

Hearst Gunmen Steal, Destroy Guild Truck

Chicago. — Gangsterism, rampant during the early days of the nine-week-old strike of the Chicago Newspaper Guild against Hearst's Chicago Herald-Examiner and Evening American, flared anew this week when Hearst gunmen held up a garage attendant, stole the strikers' $1,750 sound truck and dumped it into the Chicago river.

Three men, Don Dispenza, attendant at the Downtown Parking Stations, Inc., garage, 205 W. Wacker Drive, reported to police, came into the garage about 10:30 p. m. and asked to use the washroom. While one menaced him with a pistol, the other two cut the telephone wires, then the three climbed into the sound truck and drove away.

Walter Gunia, 43, of 741 West Harrison St., junk dealer, told police that some time later he came upon three men on the lower level of Wacker Drive, between LaSalle and Clark Streets, attempting to push the sound truck into the river. When he remonstrated, he said, he was ordered to "mind his own business".

Coast Guardsmen located the sunken truck in 20 feet of water near the LaSalle Street Bridge. Recovered, Guild officials estimated damage at $500. The truck, they said, will be reconditioned and put back into service as soon as possible. Meanwhile, a rented truck is broadcasting the strikers' message.

Barred by a "conspiracy of silence" on the part of the metropolitan press and the major radio stations from preventing their side of the controversy, the strikers have used the trust to bring their story to the public. The Hearst management has made continued, but futile, efforts, to have the truck barred from Chicago streets.

BROPHY TO SPEAK

John Brophy, national director of the CIO, will speak at a mass meeting for the Guild strikers in Chicago February 17.

Wagner Act Menaced

Examination of the so-called AFL amendments to the Wagner labor relations act reveals that they are not only intended to break up CIO unions but also endanger all real collective bargaining, as originally contemplated by the act.

The amendments sponsored by the AFL leaders and introduced by Senator David I. Walsh do not even follow the lines laid down by the Houston AFL convention.

Two of the worst of them were never authorized by the convention. These are the amendments which would permit employers to call for elections at the time best suited to their anti-union strategy, and the amendment to allow employers to call upon the courts for subpoenas for the production of evidence.

The latter amendment would permit the courts to expose the most confidential union files to public view and inspection by the employer, without regard to time, place or circumstance.

Both of these amendments are dangerous to all unions and can benefit only union-fighting employers. Yet they have been introduced in Congress in the name of the AFL!

Even the most specifically anti-CIO amendment, requiring craft unit elections, is of such a character that it could be used to break up many AFL unions as well as those of the CIO.

Many AFL unions are organized on a plant basis, yet this so-called AFL amendment would automatically require the board to break up all plant units into a variety of craft divisions.

The rest of the amendments are similarly a menace to all genuine labor unionism. In general, they follow the line of allowing employers more opportunity to influence their employes' choice of organization, and to build up unions which will serve the bosses' purposes rather than those of the workers.

The whole Walsh bill is an outright attack on the rights of self-organization and collective bargaining embodied in the Wagner act. It is essentially an employers' program for crippling and defeating the purposes of the act.

The CIO will fight these amendments with every means at its disposal, and AFL unionists are also already demanding an explanation from their leaders as to how they came to sponsor such an anti-labor program.

The defense of the Wagner act against the Walsh bill and all other amendments is an issue on which all genuine labor unionists can unite. Every Senator and Congressman should be notified at once that labor is opposed to any and all such curtailments of its collective bargaining rights.

A Test Vote for Labor

The vote on the WPA appropriation has furnished a test of the attitude toward labor of every member of Congress.

At least a billion dollars was needed to continue WPA work for the unemployed on the previous basis.

But even the President's recommendation for $875,000,000 was voted down by both House and Senate.

In this issue of The CIO News there is printed a list of the Senators who voted for and against the $875,000,000 appropriation.

There is also printed a list of the Congressmen who voted for this sum and against cutting it to $725,000,000. As a record vote was avoided in the House, it has not been possible to print a complete list of Congressmen who voted for the cut.

Every voter is entitled to know why his representative voted to slash WPA.

Every Senator is on record on the subject, and if your Congressman is not on the list of those who voted for the $875,000,000 appropriation, you are entitled to write and find out why.

Labor votes played a big part in electing every member of Congress. And labor now has a test of what each member has done, or failed to do, for the unemployed.

The Front Guy!

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Un-American Activities

THE only serious criticism that can be leveled against the LaFollette civil liberties committee is that it didn't choose the right name and slogan.

It should have called itself the "Committee to Investigate Un-American Activities."

For many months now the LaFollette committee has been carefully and thoroughly doing the job of investigating and exposing the un-American activities that menace our democratic liberties.

Yet a mountebank like Congressmen Dies has been allowed to come along and promote un-American activities of the worst kind under cover of the name and slogan that by rights belong to the LaFollette committee.

Americanism

Civil liberties is just a fancy name for the rights and privileges which most Americans are ready to fight for, if you call them "Americanism."

When Dies goes on the radio and says he is protecting us against un-American activities, most of his listeners have a vague idea that he is preventing the coming in this country of conditions such as exist under foreign despotic governments.

That is to say, they don't want to be spied upon, bullied, beaten up and generally bossed around by any kind of tyrants. They want to be able to think, speak, worship, join unions and vote as they please, and they believe that the American constitution grants them these rights.

The LaFollette committee has done a real job of protecting these American rights. The Dies committee has lent every aid and comfort to the very forces that menace these rights.

Yet because Dies bellows about fighting un-American activities, members of Congress feel they can get away with giving his committee another lease of life while they turn thumbs down on the LaFollette committee.

A Kangaroo Court

Another idea that the general public has about Americanism is that it means even-handed justice and democratic procedure.

The LaFollette committee has been a model of such Americanism. Every accused person has been carefully substantiated, and the reports of the committee are as fair and as accurate as is humanly possible.

The Dies committee, on the other hand, has conducted a kind of kangaroo court. Labor spies, Fascists and every kind of crackpot have been granted a free forum to lie and slander to their heart's content.

Reputable citizens and organizations have been smeared with the most ridiculous charges without any opportunity to defend themselves.

Anti-Democratic

The LaFollette committee has carefully probed and exposed the un-American activities of labor espionage, vigilante violence and the other forces that would deprive us of our cherished democratic liberties.

The Dies committee has made such a weak pretense of investigating Fascism that it has amounted to a whitewash which has won the commendation of the Fascist leaders themselves.

Under the pretext of exposing Communism, it has devoted most of its time to attacking the very persons and movements that are doing most to uphold American democracy.

A Publicity Stunt

Actually the whole Dies "investigation" has been a gigantic and unscrupulous publicity stunt, designed to further the political conspiracy of the tory Democrats against the New Deal and progressive wing of the party.

Let any newspaper reader think back over the main impressions left in his mind by the publicity about the Dies committee.

He will recall that Frank Murphy was smeared with "red" charges just before elections; that the same kind of attack was launched against Governor Olson and his slate in California; that cabinet members were slandered and the New Deal administration pictured as honeycombed with radicals; and that the committee devoted much time to propaganda against the CIO.

Little or nothing will remain in his mind about the actual Fascists or other subversive elements whom the committee was supposed to investigate.

These main impressions are not accidental. They are exactly the kind of impressions which the reactionary interests behind the Dies circus intended to create in the public mind.

Which Committee?

The country badly needs such a watchdog to protect it against un-American activities as the LaFollette committee has proved to be. Congress should be urged to vote more funds so that its great work can be continued.

But the country certainly does not need a licensed reactionary clique to promote un-American activities under the specious pretext of investigating them.

If the Dies committee is continued, every member of Congress who votes for it should be called to task. And all true Americans should constitute themselves a committee of the whole to expose and combat the activities of the most un-American group that has ever been accorded Congressional sanction.

Defend The Wagner Act!

AFL Amendments Spell Danger for Workers, Aid Company Unions

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON—The nine amendments to the Wagner Act sponsored by the top leaders of the American Federation of Labor and introduced by Sen. David Walsh of Massachusetts, will destroy almost completely the value of the Act for American labor.

If the amendments should pass, anti-union corporations and that section of the AFL leadership which is moved only by blind hate of the CIO and industrial organization of the nation's workers, will get benefits. The workers in the AFL and the CIO alike will suffer.

These are the conclusions reached by the CIO legal department after study of the Walsh bill. The CIO will shortly issue a pamphlet attacking the amendments and demonstrating point by point how they would injure all bona fide unions and prepare the way for a giant gain in company unionism.

UNKNOWN TO MEMBERS

Among the nine amendments suggested by President Green of the AFL are proposals which were never discussed—let alone approved — by the federation's convention in Houston, Texas, last summer. Had they been offered to the convention delegates it is likely they would never have been sanctioned.

The amendments would, to all intents and purposes, prevent the National Labor Relations Board from ruling against the vast majority of company unions which have been fostered by anti-union employers.

Under the new definitions of a company union, only the most clumsy attempts to keep the workers out of bona fide labor organizations would be found objectionable. The more subtle methods which have been used by hundreds of employers would be approved.

Significantly, the amendment would guarantee the AFL the right to establish fake unions—as it had done many times in the past—in order to prevent the CIO from bringing the real gains of unionism to exploited workers.

If the Walsh Bill were enacted, it would be possible for these company-dominated unions to sign contracts with the management, and the Board, in nine cases out of ten, would be left powerless to take action to protect the interests of the workers.

CRAFT UNITS

Secondly, the bill, reflecting the hate of the CIO's accomplishments held by certain AFL leaders, is aimed directly at industrial unionism.

It would compel the National Labor Relations Board to certify each craft occupation as a separate bargaining unit — whether or not the workers involved desired to be separated from the majority.

The requests for craft elections might come from AFL leaders, from company union stooges or from the employer himself. But, in any case, the Board would be forced to smash the industrial bargaining unit.

If the AFL leadership has its way, the activities of the Board will be subject to review of the courts at every turn—a procedure required of no other government administrative body. This would delay action on important cases, and would place all the board's actions before slow, and frequently hostile, lower courts.

POWER FOR COURTS

The AFL amendments reflect the drive of Tory manufacturers to get the Labor Board completely tied up in the courts. Thus, the Board has fought long and successfully — with the support of organized labor—to prevent federal district courts from enjoining its activities. Yet, the AFL, through its proposals, would put district courts in full control of Board activities, allowing lower branches of the judiciary to interfere constantly.

STOOGE FOR BOSSES

Not content with asking amendments solely to help the fight against the CIO, the AFL bigwigs have seemingly stretched out a helping hand to all the employers who have been grumbling at the Wagner Act since it commenced to help workers organize.

One of these would allow employers to call for an NLRB election — a device which would be used to forestall organization of workers before it had fairly got started.

Demands that employers be allowed to go to the Courts for subpenas for evidence—thereby making it possible for them to delve into the private files of unions; that the Board be forced to make its files public; that employers' expenses on NLRB cases be paid by the Board; and that NLRB trial examiners be disqualified if employers think them biased—all these point to a deal between the AFL and Big Business.

The AFL leadership has always sought to justify its activities with the argument that it has been working in the interest of the workers. Its proposed amendments to the Wagner Act, however, expose Green and his supporters on the AFL executive council as players of the employers' game in their war against industrial unionism and the CIO.

Trainmen Support Wagner Act

CLEVELAND, Ohio—The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, largest of the railroad brotherhoods, is opposed to any and all amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act, President A. F. Whitney declared here.

Whitney made public a letter to Edward F. McGrady, in which he stated:

"In the Wall Street Journal of January 20, 1939, you are quoted as having told the members of the Bond Club of New York, that Congress will give serious consideration to the proposals of the American Federation of Labor for amendment of the Wagner Act, 'because they have been joined by all the railroad brotherhoods in this drive to change the act.'"

"For your information, the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen opposes any and all amendments to the National Labor Relations Act, because, the law as it now stands, is a good piece of legislation.

"The current efforts to correct the alleged 'one-sidedness' of the law are nothing more nor less than left-handed attempts to emasculate the provisions which guarantee genuine collective bargaining.

"Stability in labor relations will come when industrialists cease foisting company unions onto their employes and stop the vicious practice of hiring labor spys.

"Let them recognize that labor has a right to bargain collectively for fair wages and working conditions in organizations of labor's own choosing, just as the employers act through their chambers of commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers.

"No true friend of labor will seek to amend out of existence the Wagner Act."

Reports

19,176 CASES

Washington—Up to January 1, 1939, the Natl. Labor Relations Board states that it has handled 19,176 cases involving 4,284,608 workers.

Madden Defends Wagner Act As Aid to Democracy

WASHINGTON — The Wagner Labor Relations Act stands as a guarantee of American democracy in a world that has been turning away from freedom and toward fascist dictatorship, J. Warren Madden, Labor Board chairman, told a coast to coast audience in a radio debate here.

Madden was debating with Charles R. Hook, head of the anti-labor Natl. Association of Manufacturers, who presented a five point employers' program for amending the Act of existence.

CONFIRMS LIBERTY

The Act, Madden pointed out, for from infringing on American liberty as its enemies say, confirms the rights granted in our constitution to all people. Freedom of speech and assembly, he explained, depend on freedom to organize — which the Act puts into federal law.

"Indeed, the constitutional libetries of freedom of speech, press and assembly could not, in their aspects most important to working people, be enjoyed until this new liberty was created," he said.

Madden pointed to the record of 15,000 cases settled by the Labor Board interpretation of the Act, and a 50 per cent drop in strikes during 1938. Of the 15,000 cases, he said, 8,000 have been closed by agreement of both parties. About 2,500 have been dismissed by the Board as lacking in merit. Another 4,000 have been withdrawn by the unions involved, usually on advice of the Board's officers. About 1,000 have been settled by compliance with Board orders or reports.

This shows, Madden said, that the application of the Act has been fair to both sides of the disputes—which otherwise "would have resulted in strikes if there had been no other safety valve for these grievances."

WOULD CRIPPLE ACT

Hook, speaking for the Natl. Association of Manufacturers, outlined an anti-collective bargaining program of amendments that would make the Act useless as far as labor is concerned. His principal point was the usual one that the Act is "one-sided" — ignoring the fact that all laws designed to make a certain line of conduct illegal are "one-sided" to the person that wants to follow that line.

Madden closed his speech, estimated to have been heard by several million people, with a quotation from Professor Brooks of Williams College, who wrote:

"In the contemporary conflict between democracy and dictatorship, whether political or industrial, the Natl. Labor Relations Board is in the center of the struggle. Its influence and its power are wholly on the side of democracy."

The New WPA Appropriation

By RALPH HETZEL, Jr.
CIO Unemployment Director

WPA will not be cut in February. At least three million people are going be be employed. This is important news from an official letter to the CIO signed by David K. Niles, Assistant WPA Administrator in charge of employment.

"The 'no replacement' order that has been in effect for the past several months," Mr. Niles wrote, "has been rescinded and the states have now been notified that they may make replacements within the limitations of the budget authorizations." This letter is in reply to a request last week from the CIO that WPA be not cut.

This news illustrates what public pressure, led by labor, was able to do to stall off WPA cuts that were sought by reactionaries in Congress.

5 PER CENT CUTS

The final version of the appropriation bill has amendments that provide that WPA rolls shall not be cut more than 5 per cent below their present level in February and March. The significance of these amendments must not be forgotten. In substance they are an admission that the $725,000,000 appropriation is not enough.

Therefore they specifically end the Woodrum Amendment and allow the WPA Administrator to spend the money appropriated for the next five months as rapidly as he sees fit. In addition the Senate amendments contain a practical invitation to the President to ask for more money before the five months are out.

These amendments are actually an admission that the case stated by the CIO and by the Administration was correct and that there was no justification for cutting the WPA appropriation. The amendments were simply a device by which the conservative Democrats and Republicans would save their faces with their conservative friends and still ensure their constituents that they did not vote to cut WPA. Nevertheless those who voted against the $875,000,000 were registering a token vote against the WPA and the unemployed.

Under these amendments there is no reason why the Administration cannot, if it chooses, increase the WPA rolls for February and March and then ask for enough money to carry them at an increased rate to end the fiscal year, June 30.

SHOULD INCREASE ROLLS

It is now the job of the CIO to convince the Administration of the necessity of increasing the WPA rolls. The way is now open to meet the pressing need that exists in so many places throughout the nation.

There are a few important amendments to the law under which the WPA operates.

First, this new law has very strict provisions making it a serious crime to use the WPA for political purposes.

A blow was struck at aliens and even those who have taken out their first papers. The bill now contains an amendment which allows only citizens to receive benefits. Within 30 days all those on WPA must make an affidavit that they are United States citizens. This is a serious matter for those who have taken out their declarations of intention and who wish to become citizens but have not yet gone through the long process before receiving their final papers.

A rephrased and more severe provision was put in with regard to taking of private work. It reads as follows:

"No person in need who refuses a bona fide offer of private employment under reasonable working conditions which pays the prevailing wage for such work in the community where he resides and who is capable of doing such work shall be employed or retained in employment on work projects under the funds appropriated in the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938 or this joint resolution for the period such private employment would be available: Provided, that any person who takes such private employment shall at the expiration thereof be entitled to immediate resumption of his previous employment status with the Works Progress Administration if he is still in need and if he has lost the private employment through no fault of his own."

As soon as this provision has been made clear by interpretation by the WPA, more information will be provided in this column indicating just what it means to the unemployed.

RELIEF FOR AGED

Some relief was provided for old people and for women with dependent children who have been recently thrown off WPA. The new bill says that no requirement of eligibility for employment shall be effective which prevents the employment of persons 65 years of age or over or women with dependent children.

Martin's Split Efforts Failing

idents, secretaries or executive boards of CIO international and national unions.

Martin has been completely isolated by the labor movement. Not a single CIO union, and for that matter, no AFL organization has indicated the slightest sympathy for Martin's effort to constitute himself and five of the 24-man UAW executive board as the auto union.

PHONEY CONFERENCE

To give an appearance of some support, Martin and his group last Sunday convened a conference of so-called representatives of auto workers. No list of the organizations attending was read.

A careful tally by newspapermen of the telegrams actually read at the meeting showed there were 24 of them, most of them from individuals or from paper locals which have been suspended from the UAW for non-payment of per capita.

MOTION ON CIO

The most significant incident of the Martin session was the reception accorded a motion to "withdraw" from the CIO. Those present immediately squelched the motion.

The effect on Martin was immediately noticeable. Whereas last week he issued a venomous attack on the CIO and its officers, after the action at Sunday's meeting he drew in his horns and pretended new interest in CIO affiliation.

NLRB CHARGES

The labor board charges, which have produced a sensation here, are based on the sworn affidavits of Percy Llewellyn, president, and Paul Ste. Marie, secretary of the Ford UAW local.

Both declared that Martin offered Ford release from labor board discrimination and personal injury cases filed against the company by Ford workers, if Harry Bennett, head of the Ford Service department, would give him "verbal, personal recognition."

Martin proposed that Bennett would have to reinstate only those fired workers who pledged personal allegiance to Martin. The conspiracy also contemplated that after Bennett gave Martin "recognition" there were to be no grievance boards of shop stewards.

Having used Martin to stir up dissention in the UAW, Bennett has left the country for a vacation in South America. The auto workers are saying, "Martin's only friend has run out on him."

TO NAME DELEGATES

Within the next fortnight, UAW locals will start electing delegates to the convention to be held in Cleveland starting March 27.

Even at this early date it is obvious that more than 95 per cent of the organized auto workers will be represented at Cleveland. The auto workers are turning their eyes toward Cleveland where, they vow, a rejuvenated, harmonious and invincible auto union, cleansed of its betrayers will take the field.

How Senators Voted On WPA Bill

WASHINGTON—The following senators voted in favor of the $875,000,000 WPA deficiency appropriation asked by President Roosevelt and backed by the CIO.

Big Locals In Auto Back CIO

Detroit—Overwhelming support by the members of the United Automobile Workers for the executive board and Acting President R. J. Thomas is shown by the list of big locals which have already made known their stand at membership meetings or by board action.

By the end of January, local unions representing more than 200,000 members had already notified President Thomas of their support and that they would pay per capita tax to the board. Advances and loans of over $30,000 had been received, with more coming in daily in dues.

NUMBER THOUSANDS

Among the big locals which have already taken their stand for the CIO and the UAW board are the West Side Local in Detroit, with 30,000 members; Briggs Local, 23,000; Dodge, 22,000; Hudson, 12,000; all but one of the California locals, 20,000; Indiana locals, 25,000; Chrysler, 10,000; Toledo Locals 12 and 14, 10,900; Tool and Die Locals, 12,000; Plymouth, 8,000; Buick, at Flint, 8,000, and many others in New York, Atlanta, St. Louis, Canada, Saginaw, Flint, Bay City and other auto centers.

"This still but a partial list of those supporting the CIO and the international executive board," Thomas said. "More support is coming in every day. I have listed only those locals whose stand is definite. Many others which are pro-CIO have not yet had a chance to act."

Canadian Auto Locals Hit Martin

Toronto, Ont.—At its first meeting of the new year, the regional council of the United Automobile Workers' Union reaffirmed its loyalty to the CIO and its principles. The meeting was held in St. Catharines.

PLAN MEETING

New York — A Washington's birthday conference of teachers in workers' education will be held Feb. 18-19, at the Affiliated Schools for Workers, 302 East 35th St., New York City.

Support the Auto Workers

The United Automobile Workers of America is now engaged in efforts to set its house in order which deserve the sympathy and support of the whole labor movement.

The rapidity of this union's growth broke all records. The message of the CIO was what the auto workers were waiting for. Under the inspiration and leadership of the CIO, the UAW added hundreds of thousands of members to its ranks in a few months.

The auto workers owe much to the CIO, and the CIO owes much to the auto workers. The whole movement has rejoiced at the successes of this young giant of a union, and has sympathized with its efforts to grapple with the internal problems that sometimes come with rapid growth.

The UAW has proved too strong for its outside attackers. Its worst enemy has been internal dissension. But even this has not affected the solid base of the union, in the desire for unity of the rank and file and their loyalty to the CIO.

Now the whole situation has been clarified by the actions of a faithless and irresponsible leader who has separated himself from the union. The international executive board has taken charge, an acting president has been selected, and a convention has been called.

The whole membership is rallying to the board and to Acting President R. J. Thomas, whose authority under the UAW constitution has been fully recognized by the CIO.

But outside anti-labor forces are lending aid to all attempts to split the union. So the auto workers need the support of the whole labor movement until these attempts have been defeated.

The assurances of solidarity and support which have been sent to President Thomas and the executive board by all the unions of the CIO prove that the UAW can depend upon the assistance and friendship of the whole movement of which it is so important a part.

Seamen Rap Martin

Baltimore.—CIO seamen of the National Maritime Union here are unqualifiedly on record in support of President R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers and opposed to attempts of Homer Martin, former president, to split the UAW.

They went on record at a meeting of Baltimore port officers this week, stating:

"We reaffirm our unwavering loyalty to the CIO and its great leader John L. Lewis and express our fullest confidence in their policies and the steps they are taking to unite the auto union and to root out the influence of Henry Ford and his allies."

Labor and the Law

By Lee Pressman
CIO General Counsel

The New Attorney-General

Frank Murphy, former governor of Michigan, now United States Attorney General, easily merits labor's award for the public official who has done the most to solve industrial disputes with reason and courage.

Even his enemies have had to recognize his qualities of character and understanding. Except for a few incoherent reactionaries, everyone, including the heads of the automobile corporations, have praised him for his handling of the 1937 automobile strikes.

The loss felt when Murphy was not re-elected governor of Michigan is now being replaced by his splendid work as Attorney General.

The Department of Justice, which he heads, plays a very important part in federal policy. The Attorney General is the prosecuting arm of the government, he represents the various government agencies when they come before the courts, and he also advises the President on the interpretation of laws.

OLD REPUTATION

Until the advent of the New Deal, organized labor had known of the powers of the Attorney General through prosecutions against labor unions for carrying on boycotts and alleged violations of the anti-trust laws.

Indeed, the use of injunctions in labor disputes was first inaugurated by the Attorney General under President Cleveland in the famous Debs case. At that time, the 1894 strike of the railroad workers was smashed and Debs sent to jail for violation of an injunction brought against the strikers by the Attorney General. This case set an example for government by injunctions in labor disputes which was followed by anti-union employers throughout the country for the next 50 years.

This policy of the Department of Justice is being radically changed by Attorney General Murphy.

PROBES JUDGES

Attorney General Murphy is now conducting an investigation into the behavior of federal judges. His disclosures have resulted in the forced resignation of Judge Manton, a notorious reactionary on the federal Court of Appeals in New York.

Characteristic of Mr. Murphy's belief that human liberties deserve as much legal protection as property rights is his announcement that he is investigating the possibility of setting up a special division in the Department of Justice to enforce the civil rights statutes which protect civil liberties. This will mean that the Department of Justice will enforce long neglected civil rights statutes in a systematic way.

Attorney General Murphy has already demonstrated that he will take vigorous and speedy measures to protect civil liberties by his announcement, upon the request of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union, affiliated with the CIO, that he will investigate the eviction of the Missouri sharecroppers from camps along the United States highways in that state.

The policy of the Department of Justice under Frank Murphy can best be described by his own firm declaration that "we ought to be more anxious and vigilant about protecting the civil liberties of an insecure people."

News Guild Questions 'The Impartial Press'

NEW YORK—Reporting in the nation's newspapers of the radio debate between Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes and Publisher Frank Gannett furnished proof of the New Dealer's contention that the nation's press is directly or indirectly influenced by big business.

This was the charge made by The Guild Reporter, official organ of the American Newspaper Guild, CIO, whose "Free Press" section has for months been making accusations similar to those of Ickes in his speech at Town Hall Jan. 12.

A check-up made by the Guild showed t[illegible] newspapers favored Gann[illegible] in [illegible] tio in their handling of the stories, with many of the papers giving the story headlines designed to prejudice the reader against Secretary Ickes.

SEC. ICKES

Interestingly enough, two of the papers published by Gannett gave long stories about Gannett's rebuttal of Ickes' charges, without once mentioning the fact that the Secretary had participated in the debate. Gannett had roared a blustering denial when Ickes, during the course of the argument, had accused the conservative publisher of just such tactics.

'LITTLE SURPRISE'

"Secretary Ickes' facts of life about newspapers brought out in his debate with Gannett, occasioned little if any surprise among workers in the industry, much as we enjoyed hearing them laid before such a vast audience," commented the Guild Reporter.

"Despite the papers' ranting, every experienced newspaperman can cite additional evidence of the same kind."

POWER COMPANY LOAN

Those who heard the debate on the radio recall that one of the chief points at issue was whether a loan of several million dollars made to Gannett by the International Paper and Power Co., or its subsidiary, the International Paper Co., had influenced editorial opinion in the publications.

Gannett maintained that it was merely a business arrangement connected with the purchase of newsprint for his papers. A search by the Guild Reporter showed that Editor & Publisher, newspaper trade paper, had failed to differentiate between the power company and its subsidiary at the time of the loan in 1929.

"If the papers had investigated they could not only have established that Gannett had borrowed the money and paid it back just as the Federal Trade Commission was about to expose him, but also they could have revealed that Gannett had made himself liable to five years in the penitentiary and a $2,000 fine for failing to list the paper company's ownership of his bonds in his annual post office statement."

TOBACCO STORY

Though publishers denied that a story about the harmful effects of tobacco had been played down lest large cigarette advertisers be enraged, a check of New York papers showed that it "was suppressed by 75 per cent of the press and buried by 25 per cent."

In New York, the conservative Herald-Tribune ridiculed Ickes for his use of the incident. A check by Federated Press, labor news service, showed that the Herald-Tribune itself had not carried the story. Pressed for a reason, Wilbur Forrest, official of the paper, claimed he had been "scooped"—an impossibility since the story was sent out on Associated Press wires.

INSULT TO ICKES

How the public feels about the situation was demonstrated when the New York World-Telegram, owned by the erstwhile "liberal" Scripps-Howard chain, devoted an editorial to ridiculing Ickes' assertions.

Entitled, "Old Ick — He's A Card," the piece said that Ickes' speech had a tang "the same as a livery stable on a frosty morning."

"So great was the reader indignation," the Guild Reporter noted, "that on Jan. 17, the World-Telegram was obliged to print seven letters to the editor attacking the paper. It ran six more the next day in the first edition, but then took them out afterwards, making over the editorial page to do so. The tone of the letters was that Ickes had pinched the World-Telegram's tenderest corn."

Chicago AFL Seeks Muzzle On Sec. Ickes

Washington (FP)—Assurances that Sec. of Interior Harold L. Ickes would say nothing about the contract recently signed between the AFL and the Chicago Herald-Examiner and American, Hearst papers, were asked of the Natl. Lawyers Guild by John Fitzpatrick, head of the Chicago Federation of Labor, as a condition to broadcasting Ickes' forthcoming speech over the federation's radio station, WFCL, it was learned here.

Members of the American Newspaper Guild on the papers have been out on strike for three months. Recently the federation's newly-chartered Chicago Editorial Association signed a contract with the Hearst management.

Local Lawyers Guild officials offered the speech to WCFL, and were told by Fitzpatrick that the federation's officials would have to see the speech first. The Guild, with Ickes' approval, declared it would not be a party to such censorship.

FIGHT BILL

New York — The full strength and resources of 700,000 CIO members in New York state will be thrown into the campaign to kill the Wicks bill, announces Allan S. Haywood, president of the New York Industrial Union Council.

5,000 Families to Quit Slums Each Month Under U. S. Program

WASHINGTON—By midsummer of this year, 5,000 low-income families each month will be moving out of the slums into bright, new apartments constructed under the program of the United States Housing Administration, Nathan Straus, its chief, announced in his annual report this week.

The exodus out of the blighted areas which dot the nation's cities will continue until some 165,000 new homes have been constructed through United States loans. Almost 10,000 of these have already been built, and during 1939 construction will be started on between 75,000 and 80,000 additional dwellings.

Practically all USHA funds have now been committed to building projects, Strauss noted. Loans to city housing authorities under contract now total $320,986,000, to be spent on 140 low-rent housing projects in 75 communities in 22 states, the District of Columbia and Hawaii. "Earmarked" for projects in 123 other communities is a slightly larger sum.

WAGNER FILES BILL

Senator Robert Wagner has already filed a bill in Congress which would permit the government agency to borrow and lend $800,000,000 more to continue its slum-clearance work.

In addition to providing better living quarters for a large section of the population, USHA will have created almost three-quarters of a million "man-hours" of work, Administrator Strauss estimated. It's spending is being felt in such industries as glass, lumber, electrical fixtures and cement, where jobs are being created as a result of the housing purchases.

PROVEN SUCCESS

Through its first year's experience, the report explained, it has been shown "that public housing can be and is being produced as economically as private housing; that rents can be and are being reduced to the point where slum dwellers alone will be served, thus avoiding any possibility of competition with decent private housing."

Because of the small direct cost to the government, Strauss said, public housing "is one of the most economical and at the same time one of the most durable forms of public improvement."

BACK STRIKE

New York — Wholehearted support to the strike of the Building Service Employes Union here was pledged by the Furriers' Joint Council in behalf of its 13,000 members. The Council is affiliated to the Intl. Fur Workers Union, CIO.

"New Homes For Old"

Slums are coming down, new homes like this are being erected as the U. S. Housing Administration program enters its second year. Administrator Straus' first annual report noted that low-cost housing, under government sponsorship, is a proven fact.

Cuban Labor Meets In Convention

CIO Ready to Fight Fascism, Cubans Told

HAVANA, Cuba—A salute from the CIO closed the convention of the Confederation of Cuban Workers at the final mass meeting of the convention in this city.

Joseph Kovner, fraternal delegate from the CIO to the convention, gave the closing greeting in the name of President John L. Lewis and the 4,000,000 members of the CIO to an audience of 15,000 Cuban workers jammed in Havana's largest hall.

Support for the cause of workers' organization throughout the western hemisphere was pledged by the CIO delegate.

"The CIO is pledged to the support of the workers of this hemisphere, and is conscious of the solidarity of the workers of the world," Kovner said. "We know of the menace of fascism, a menace not only to workers, but to all of the spiritual and cultural values of our democratic civilization."

SAME STRUGGLE

Kovner pointed out that workers in Cuba had to struggle for their democratic rights against the same corporations that tried to suppress workers in the United States.

"The struggle is the same, whether it be for the welfare of the masses of the United States, Cuba, Mexico or any other country. In each country the forces of enlightenment and democracy are on one side, and opposed to them are forces of darkness and fascist dictatorship," he said.

"The iron miners of Oriente and the iron workers of Minnesota and Pittsburgh both face the same employer. The sugar workers and the electrical workers in the U. S. and Cuba both know they are opposed by the same interests in their struggle for social security."

FOR NATIONAL BODY

Under the leadership of Lazaro Pena, a new Confederation of Cuban Workers (CTC) was organized during the convention, with a membership of some 800,000 in a dozen nation affiliates. Principal unions are those in sugar, tobacco, maritime, tourist (hotel workers, chauffeurs, etc.)) and railways.

The new Confederation was created after long years of terror against all attempts of the workers to organize. Until the advent of the progressive labor movements in the United States and Mexico, in the CIO and the Confederation of Mexican Workers, the movement in Cuba was perforce underground.

Chief note of the convention, according to Kovner, was the unity and enthusiasm displayed in building a national Cuban labor movement. The movement is firmly based on the democratic, anti-fascist feeling of the Cuban people, he pointed out, and on the feeling of solidarity with the workers of the U. S. and of Latin America.

Latin-American Workers To Meet In New Mexico

ALBUKUERQUE, N. M.—Backed by hundreds of labor, civic and church leaders, a congress of Mexican and Spanish American peoples of the United States will be held here March 24-26.

Two international presidents of CIO unions are among the signers of the call for the Congress, H. C. Fremming of the Oil Workers International Union and Donald Henderson, United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers. Both unions have many Latin-Americans among their members, some 40,000 belonging to the UCAPAW alone.

Commenting on the Congress, Henderson said: "The majority of Mexican and Spanish American people in this country are employed in agriculture. Their welfare is therefore a definite concern and responsibility of our union."

TO DISCUSS PROBLEMS

Discussion during the three-day sessions will center around the main problems of the 2,000,000 Mexican and Spanish Americans now living in this country, as they affect workers, farmers, and other groups. Low wage levels, restrictive employment, education and discrimination are among the subjects to be taken up.

STRIKE SOLID

Newark, N. J. — A strike at the Celluloid Corp. here went into its second week, defying company back-to-work movements designed to start production.

'Pass-The-Biscuits' O'Daniel Names Company Unionist To Labor Job

AUSTIN, Tex.—Leaders of organized labor in Texas are planning a state-wide fight against the confirmation of Joe Kunschik, member of a company union, as new state labor commissioner.

Kunschik, 29-year-old employe of the Austin branch of the Southwestern Bell Co., is a member of the recently formed Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. Workers Union Association. He was appointed recently by Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel, the flour salesman who won the election with a campaign of hillbilly music.

Local 23, Oil Workers International Union, CIO, was among the unions sending the governor wires of protests on his action.

Reason for the appointment was stated by a columnist in a local paper as being more than friendship between the governor and the company unionist.

"It is a well figured out plan of business interests to get in a triple-edged shot at the CIO, the AFL and the railway brotherhoods," the story said.

Guild Gets Pact At Newsweek

New York — Contracts signed in New York with the Brooklyn Eagle and Newsweek magazine bring the number of new agreements negotiated by the American Newspaper Guild, CIO, since the new year up to four.

The Akron Beacon-Journal and the Detroit Times, a Hearst paper, are the other two publications signed up in January.

The contract with the Brooklyn Eagle, covering 445 editorial and commercial employes, replaces a limited recognition contract won in 1937 by a 16 weeks' strike. The new agreement provides for a 40-hour, five-day week, overtime pay, and guarantees greater job security. The no-pay-cut provision is continued.

80 PER CENT GET INCREASES

The Newsweek pact, granting pay increases ranging from $3 to $25 a week for 80 per cent of the staff, covers 55 editorial employes. It also includes the 40-hour, five-day week and other Guild clauses.

Typo Members Rap Leaders, Aid Drive

Chicago — In a blaze of oratorical fireworks, members of the Chicago Typographical Union — second largest unit of the International organization — overruled attempts of their own executive board to line the union up with William Randolph Hearst in his fight against the American Newspaper Guild at the Chicago Evening American and Herald-Examiner.

About a thousand members of Local 16 of the ITU, an AFL affiliate, attended the meeting. Veteran members of the union said that not in years had such booing been heard as greeted Sec-Treas. Harry B. Schaudt when he spoke in favor of supporting Hearst against the Guild strikers.

The Hearst management has taken the position that since it has contracts with printing trade unions, it is merely resisting a CIO attack on AFL jurisdiction.

The widespread support which the Guild has received from members of a number of AFL locals, in Chicago and elsewhere, has been indication that the actions of a few AFL leaders are being repudiated by the rank and file.

CIO SPEEDS DRIVE TO SAVE WAGNER ACT

Catholics Urged To Join CIO

Philadelphia—"Not only is it every Catholic's privilege to join the CIO, but it is every Catholic's duty to join his union."

This counsel was given by Richard L. G. Deverall, editor of The Christian Front and professor of Sociology at the Augustinian Seminary of Villanova, Pa., at a meeting sponsored here by local 46 of the State, County and Municipal Workers, CIO.

"The CIO was organized to raise wages, lower hours, and improve working and living conditions," Deverall said. "For the first time in America it took in all workers, including Negroes and the unskilled."

Quoting Pope Leo XIII as saying, "Most appropriate are these working men's associations," Deverall pointed out that the Catholic Church has always emphasized the right and duty of workers to join unions.

3c a Meal

Scottsbluff, Neb.—(FP)—"After we paid our expenses we had only 3.3c a meal for food during the rest of the year," J. A. Ramirez, Grand Island sugar beet field worker told U. S. Dept. of Agriculture officials who are conducting a hearing here to determine fair and reasonable wages for field workers.

F. J. Martinez of Sheridan, Wyoming, organizer for the CIO cannery and agricultural workers union, sought approval for a contract asking $26 an acre on a 12-ton crop, with additional payment for topping in excess of 12 tons.

Alaskan Workers Ask Protection For Wagner Act

JUNEAU, Alaska — The territorial legislature, now in session, will be asked by Alaskan labor to memorialize the U. S. Congress to refrain from passing amendments to the Wagner Act.

Labor will also press for repeal of the territory's criminal syndicalism law, for the establishment of a state mine inspector's office, and the passage of a workmen's compensation act.

Voorhis–New Deal Supporter–Appointed To Dies Committee

WASHINGTON.—Tory members of the House of Representatives were taken by surprise when Speaker Bankhead named Rep. Jerry Voorhis, ardent New Dealer and friend of labor, to fill the vacancy on the Dies Committee.

Voorhis, who was one of the 35 House members who had voted against continuance of the committee, had described the Dies activities as "undemocratic and un-American."

Named to replace Rep. Mosier, defeated in last year's election contest, Voorhis is expected to act as a check-rein on the committee, and to serve as the mouthpiece for liberals and progressives.

Vote On Funds For Board Is Big Victory

WASHINGTON.—The CIO this week stepped up the speed of its campaign to prevent the passage of crippling amendments to the Wagner Act.

In Congress the National Labor Relations Board won a major victory when its appropriation bill was passed by the House of Representatives without a cut in funds for the next fiscal year.

Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, described the House vote as "a first round in labor's fight," and said that "labor's vigilance" was responsible for checking "the enemies of collective bargaining in a back-handed attempt to cripple the Act."

A concerted drive to prevent passage of Senate Bill 1,000—introduced by Sen. David Walsh of Massachusetts—was started in every CIO local throughout the United States. Reports from AFL and railway unions indicated that many of them, too, would resist the bill, which is sponsored by President Wm. Green, of the American Federation of Labor.

The Walsh-Green amendments are aimed at smashing industrial unions and would open wide the door to company unionism.

An analysis of the AFL amendments, showing how they would injure all workers and all bona fide unions, was presented in a new pamphlet issued by the CIO legal department. "The Wagner Act Threatened with Destruction!" is the title of the booklet, which will receive wide distribution.

In Massachusetts the state's CIO Council, which met in Springfield this week-end, withdrew its invitation to Sen. Walsh to address the meeting, and invited in his place Sen. Robert Wagner of New York. The council's president, Michael Widman, Jr., charged that Walsh had deserted labor's camp for that of the reactionaries.

Steel Union Lodges Flay Wagner Act Foes

Chicago. — All lodges of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in the Calumet area have gone on record against amending the Wagner Act, Nicholas Fontecchio, SWOC district director, announced here.

The resolution pointed out that "for many years the largest majority of employers in the U. S. have denied their employes the right to organize into labor organizations and deal with them collectively." In addition, the statement charged, these anti-labor bosses have "maintained gunmen rule and spy systems" to fight their workers.

Had these employers abided by the law, it adds, industrial peace would have come to the nation, but instead these employers "have grossly violated the law and wrongfully attack the National Labor Relations Board for its administration."

Aluminum Union Plans National Pact

New Kensington, Pa. — Proposals for a national contract with the Mellon Aluminum Co. of America are being discussed by six locals of the Aluminum Workers of America.

In a call sent out last week, Sec.-Treas. George Hobaugh urged locals in New Kensington, Detroit, Alcoa, Tenn., Edgewater, N. J., Badin, N. C., and Massena, N. Y., to draw up their demands for the projected contract.

Similar discussions were under way in 1937, but the company requested Labor Board certifications of the various locals. Since then, three of the locals have won certification, while a run-off election at Alcoa is expected to result in an AWA victory.

There is little opposition to the union in Badin; a "big swing" to the CIO affiliate is seen at Edgewater; and a trend away from the AFL union in upper New York State is anticipated as the result of that organization's failure in negotiations.

Maritime Union Asks Pay Raise On 240 Tankers

NEW YORK—Wage increases of $10 to $20 a month for unlicensed seamen on some 240 tanker ships will be asked by the National Maritime Union in a proposed contract renewal with a number of oil companies now under an agreement expiring March 31.

Delegates from tanker ships will hold a conference here opening Feb. 15, for the purpose of drawing up the new contract to be submitted to the companies later this month. Frederick N. Myers, chairman of the Atlantic district committee said that demands for wage increases and other improvements in the contract are being sent in by tanker crews for inclusion in the proposed draft.

All the companies involved have granted leaves to delegates to the conference, Myers said. Each delegate is to be financed by the crew he represents.

8,000 MEMBERS

Out of 285 tankers operating out of Atlantic and Gulf ports, about 240 manned by some 8,000 seamen, are under contract with the NMU. The majority of the tankers covered are owned by Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., Standard Oil Co., of New Jersey; Gulf Refining Co., Tidewater Oil Co., Sinclair Navigation Co., C. D. Mallory, Pennsylvania Shipping Co., National Bulk Oil Carriers, Pan American Petroleum & Transportation Co., and Kellogg Steamship Co.

In addition to general wage increases, the proposed demands include a $125 war bonus for each crew member on a ship sailing in any war zone; an increase in the overtime rate from 75 to 85 cents an hour; adequate ventilation in crew quarters and other improvements in living conditions aboard ship.

Curran

Transit Union Pushes Fight On Wicks Bill

New York—Some 29,000 members of the Transport Workers Union, CIO, were summoned to special mass meetings to be held throughout the week in protest against "the threatened loss of jobs, seniority and pension rights and genuine collective bargaining" which the union declares would result if the proposed Wicks bill now pending in the state legislature is passed.

Austin Hogan, president of the TWU of Greater New York, who issued the call, branded the bill as anti-union and declared its enactment would "pervert the principles of civil service to rob thousands of New York City transit workers of their jobs."

GOP to Blame For Prison Strike-Moone'

San Francisco — The hunger strike at San Quentin prison was due to a 50% cut in the prisoners' food rations during the last three years, Tom Mooney declared here.

"My heart goes out to them because I know for a fact that the food in San Quentin is not sufficient to preserve good health," he said. "I know, because I lived in that hotel for 22 years."

Mooney said that he had warned the newly-appointed member of the state parole board that trouble was brewing at the prison.

INTOLERABLE

"I knew the conditions were intolerable and I conveyed the information to the incoming administration." Mooney added.

"Merriam and Republican party holdovers are responsible for this condition. They have starved state institutions by their niggardly budget policies dictated by the financial interests of California, who do not want to pay taxes, a situation which the new administration is prepared to remedy with the assistance of the people."

Seamen Win $5,700 From Finks

Philadelphia — The William J. Burns Detective Agency, leading purveyor of finks and strikebreakers, is out $5,700.

A Philadelphia court upheld damage suits filed by two maritime union members which were based on charges that they had suffered gun wounds at the hands of Burns' agents during a 1936 strike.

The two seamen, Ely Haiman and Ernest Orr, said they were shot when they tried to stop a carload of strike breakers from entering the pier of the Moore & McCormick Co., steamship operators. Orr told the court that a leg wound had prevented him from doing further work.

Wages Up $150,000 InNewPact

New York—Contracts, providing for wage increases of close to $150,000 were signed this week by two New York locals of the United Retail & Wholesale Employes, CIO.

Two months of negotiations with the United Cigar Stores were climaxed by the contract signed by Local 906, covering 603 employes in 175 stores in the metropolitan area. The union named as sole bargaining agency after it had won more than 90 per cent of the votes in a state labor board poll, won the closed shop, provision for sick leaves and time and a half for overtime.

864 Affected

The other agreement was reached by Local 1199 with the United Cigar-Whelan Stores Corp., and affected 864 workers in the company's 60 drug stores in New York City, Long Island and adjoining counties.

The agreement is the first signed with a large national drug chain and establishes higher wages and better working conditions than in any other chain. Pay raises, the closed shop, free health service and vacations with pay are stipulated in the contract.

Sign CIO Pact, Board Orders Meat Packer

Cedar Rapids, Ia. — CIO Packinghouse Workers have won a double victory in the Wilson plant here. They have secured a Labor Board decision certifying their local as sole collective bargaining agent and ordering the company to sign a contract with Local 51, PWOC.

Testimony at the Board hearing proved that the CIO union had an overwhelming majority of the workers, so much, that even Wilson attorneys admitted it.

The Board also found that the company had recognized the union and dealt with it on wages and conditions, though refusing to sign a contract. On this basis the Board report said:

"The respondent (company) has arbitrarily refused to enter into and sign any written agreement with the union, and thereby has refused to bargain in good faith."

Murphy Sets Up Federal Civil Liberties Unit

WASHINGTON — Attorney-General Frank Murphy this week established a new civil liberties unit in the Department of Justice, with Henry A. Schweinhaut who was active in the Harlan County, Kentucky, and Jersey City cases, as its head.

In his order setting up the new unit, Murphy announced that its function will be to "make a study of the provisions of the constitution of the U. S. and acts of Congress relating to civil rights with reference to present conditions, to make appropriate recommendations in respect thereto, and to direct, supervise, and conduct prosecutions of violations of the provisions of the constitution or acts of Congress guaranteeing civil rights to individuals."

TO PROTECT RIGHTS

In a democracy, Murphy commented, "an important function of the law enforcement branch of government is the aggressive protection of the fundamental rights inherent in a free people.

"In America these guarantees are contained in express provisions of the constitution and in acts of Congress. It is the purpose of the Department of Justice to pursue a program of vigilant action in the prosecution of the infringement of these rights."

MAY NEED NEW LAWS

Murphy warned, however, that new civil liberties legislation may be needed to allow his department to function satisfactorily.

In the Harlan case, it is recalled, the attorney-general was forced to build his case around an 1872 statute which made it a crime to "conspire" to deprive people of their constitutional rights. Government lawyers frequently find it difficult to "prove" a conspiracy to the satisfaction of the court.

The attorney-general's action in establishing the new unit won the praise of labor and progressive organizations. The CIO convention, it is recalled, had gone on record for the formation of a permanent government body to protect civil liberties and human rights.

Murphy has been lauded for the "new broom" which he is wielding in the Department of Justice. His actions designed to speed court handling of cases at law and to improve the quality of the judiciary are expected to have widespread beneficial effects.

New Orleans Trucking Firms Agree to Poll By Labor Board

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Two dozen trucking and drayage firms here, faced with the exposure of their corrupt tie-up with AFL officials, police, and other city officials to break the CIO, have agreed to an election to determine the union their employes desire to represent them.

Hearings on charges of unfair labor practices filed with the National Labor Relations by the Transport Workers Union, a CIO teamsters' local, ended after the second day, when the union and the employers both agreed to the terms of a stipulation drawn up subject to approval by the NLRB.

Under the terms agreed upon, an election is to be held not later than 45 days after the stipulation is approved by the Board, at which all employes of the companies involved named on one or more payrolls during any week from May 21 to June 21, 1938, shall be eligible to vote, exclusive of those discharged for cause or who resigned voluntarily.

HITS AFL CLOSED SHOP

Furthermore the Board is to order the companies to stop discouraging membership in the CIO local by discharge or discrimination against union members, and to cease giving effect to the closed shop contract signed with Teamsters Local 270, AFL, which recognizes the AFL union as sole bargaining agency.

The CIO claims that this contract was signed by collusion between AFL officials and the companies without regard to the wishes of the workers covered.

The NLRB hearings on the case opened on December 12, under Attorney Arthur Donovan, trial examiner, with enough evidence and material on hand proving the illegal conduct of the companies, to continue the hearings for a month or longer.

But at the close of the second day, the companies, evidently fearful of what further hearings would disclose, asked for a conference with CIO representatives B. Halling and Bob Robertson.

Office Union Starts Health Program

New York — The United Office & Professional Workers, New York Joint Board, last week launched a plan to cut the high cost of sickness for the union's 16,000 members in this city.

One hundred dentists and physicians will cooperate with the union in the one-year project. Any member of the union will be able to select a doctor or dentist from the group.

Fees for office calls to the doctor will be $1.50 for the first visit and $1 for following visits. For home visits, a $2 fee will be charged. While no arrangement for hospitalization is included in the plan, members have been advised to join a 3c-a-day project sponsored by New York institutions.

Complete records of the 12-month experiment will be preserved, so that representatives of the UOPWA will have statistics available when it draws up their legislative program next year.

A mass meeting announcing the plan has been called by Miss Anne Berenholz of the union's New York Council. She said Robert S. Wagner, Jr., New York State assemblyman, Allan S. Haywood, CIO regional director, Langdon S. Post.

Draftsmen for Fair Buildings Get CIO Pact

New York — CIO architectural draftsmen, working under union contracts, are designing some of the major buildings at the New York's World Fair. With the signing of a "model contract" with Pomerance and Breines, big architectural firm, members of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians will be employed on the Brazilian, Swedish, Soviet Union and Spanish pavilions at the fair.

The agreement, running one year, puts the majority of the designers on a salary scale of $70 a week, time and a half pay for overtime, a day's vacation for each month of employment and arbitration of disputes.

Negotiations are now in progress, Philip Salaf, field representative for FAECT declared, with employer architects working on the plans for large-scale housing projects in New York City.

CIO Supports Demand For More WPA Funds

WASHINGTON — The action of President Roosevelt in asking Congress for more WPA funds will help prevent suffering among the jobless, Ralph Hetzel, CIO unemployment director, said this week.

Less than a fortnight after conservative Democrats and Republicans had started to gloat over their success in cutting the WPA deficiency appropriation to $725,000,000, the President declared that an "emergency" existed and asked for another $150,000,000 to prevent the dropping of a million people from the work relief rolls.

Prompt action on the President's request, Hetzel said, "will do much to allay a rising tide of depression among the unemployed who are faced with a two-thirds cut of the WPA under the present provision.

"Numerous reports coming to the CIO from all over the country recently have indicated that already many needy people have been turned off the WPA. Women with dependent children and aged people have been among the first to suffer."

GREAT ANXIETY

The concern which has been registered throughout the country at the probability of a major cut in WPA within the next five months "has exceeded the expectation even of those who knew the desperate need which would be caused by such a cut," Hetzel said.

"This concern has spread through a great part of the business community. More and more business men realize that continued recovery is dependent upon an adequate works program."

Roosevelt told Congress he would have refused to sign the appropriation bill had it not contained the provision limiting dismissals to 5 per cent. He added, however, that the need for WPA funds is so overwhelming that, after conferences with WPA executives, "it has been determined to hold the rolls at the present figure of 3,000,000 persons during these two months."

Furniture Union Meets For Convention After Year of Progress

ROCKFORD, Ill.—Delegates to the first national convention of the United Furniture Workers, which opens here February 13, are arriving in the city from furniture centers scattered across the country from Vermont to California.

Grown from 18,000 to 36,000 members since its affiliation with the CIO a year ago, the UFW is now the dominant labor union in the furniture industry. Its original 36 locals have been increased to 76, and wages and working conditions have been improved in a a number of centers.

PROTECTS THOUSANDS

Local 76 in New York, composed of skilled upholsterers has over 2,000 members under closed shop agreements, while Local 76-B has won contracts covering most of its 2,500 members who are employed in the general furniture industry.

In other parts of the East, Midwest, South and Pacific Coast areas, thousands of furniture workers are now enrolled in locals of the UFW. One of the largest is Local 707 in Rockford which has more than 2,400 working under contract in 13 large plants manufacturing furniture and allied products.

A permanent constitution will be adopted by the convention and general policies formulated to guide the CIO union in its activities.

The UFW was established in November, 1937, at a conference in Washington attended by the executive board of the AFL Upholsterers' Intl. Union and delegates from AFL, CIO and independent local unions. It has been governed by an executive board headed by President Morris Muster, former vice-president of the AFL Upholsterers'.

Other members are secretary-treasurer Emil Costello, president of the Wisconsin CIO Council; Max Perlow, New York; George Bucher, Philadelphia; Joseph D. Persily, Indianapolis, and Joseph E. Proudman, Jamestown, N. Y.

Pres. Morris Muster of the United Furniture Workers, who presides at the CIO union's first annual convention in Rockford, Ill. The UFW, organized in November, 1937, has won many gains in all parts of the United States and Canada.

Map Fight In Behalf Of Labor Man

San Francisco.—The San Francisco Industrial Union Council and the State CIO Council will fight "to the limit" any attempt by the State Senate rules committee to refuse recommendation of the appointment of Germain Bulcke to the San Francisco Harbor Board.

Governor Olson named Bulcke, who is president of the ILWU in San Francisco, as one of the board of three. Immediately the employers dashed into the fight with a law saying no "stevedore" could be on the board.

Nation's Workers Rush To Defend Wagner Act From Amendment

CIO Hails Vote In House

Washington.—The House of Representatives last week gave its O.K. to the appropriation bill for the National Labor Relations Board, approving almost unanimously a committee report which gave the Board a quarter-million dollar increase over its last year's budget.

PRESSMAN STATEMENT

Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, hailed the House vote as a "first round in labor's fight to preserve the Wagner Act.

"Labor's vigilance has checked the enemies of collective bargaining in a back-handed attempt to cripple the Wagner Act through cutting the appropriations of the Labor Relations Board," Pressman said.

"Reactionaries in Congress and outside had hoped to snipe at the Act either through cutting Board funds or attaching riders to the bill. Both attempts were decisively beaten back.

"The fight to preserve the Act itself from crippling amendments getting under way. CIO and AFL unions, and progressive groups throughout the country are enlisting for a major struggle. Labor is determined to preserve the Act from any and all attempts to amend it."

House Votes Extention For Dies Group

Washington — Martin Dies will carry on.

The Texas red-baiter won a one-year extension for his committee from a House of Representatives operating under gag rule, which limited arguments against the committee to only 13 minutes.

Every Republican voted for continuance of the committee's activities. Veteran observers were surprised that so many of the Democrats helped to support the committee, which may be a noisy anti-New Deal factor in the 1940 election.

VOTE AGAINST DIES

Only 35 liberal Congressmen voted against Dies. Those who opposed continuance of the committee were:

Boland, Dunn, McGranery, Myers, Sacks, and Bradley, Pa.; Byrns, Tenn.; Casey, Mass.; Coffee, Fallgren, and Hill, Wash.; Ford, Geyer, Havenner, Izac, and Voorhis, Calif.; Fries, Keller, McKeough, Mitchell, and Sabath, Ill.; Larrabee, Schulte, Ind.; Murdock and Robinson, Utah; Scrugham, Nev.; Shanley, Conn.; Shannon, M., Sirovich, and Marcantonio, N. Y.; Tenerowicz, Mich.; and Vincent, Ky.

Magnuson of Washington and Hook of Michigan voted "present," thereby not committing themselves on the motion.

Bay State CIO Raps Sen. Walsh

Boston — Sen. David Walsh didn't appear before the Massachusettes CIO Industrial Union Council second annual convention in Springfield this week-end.

Invited to address the meeting, Walsh was invited to stay away when Bay State CIO leaders learned of his action in sponsoring amendments designed to kill the Wagner Act.

NO LONGER A 'FRIEND'

"We do not want you at our convention," the council wrote to Walsh, "and we regret very much at this time to class you among the few enemies of labor, when we had considered you labor's friends."

The letter predicted that "industrial strife, such as strikes, can be expected if the Wagner Act is amended as you propose.

"We know labor throughout Massachusetts will realize that you have failed to give them the proper consideration in the protection of one of the best laws under which labor has enjoyed real industrial democracy. Labor has made great strides in the past two years, exercising its rights under this act as now written."

INVITE WAGNER

The council invited Sen. Robert Wagner of New York to appear in place of the Massachusetts senator.

Walsh replied in a letter to the council's executive body that he has not yet decided how he will vote on the amendments which he himself is sponsoring.

Michael Widman, Jr., CIO regional director in New England, said the Massachusetts council would soon present its views on the Wagner Act to Walsh.

Union Votes Show Unity In Canada

Toronto, Ont. — Unity continues to guide the Canadian labor movement despite the suspension of CIO unions from the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

Two of Canada's largest trades and labor councils (central labor bodies) — those in Montreal and Toronto—elected CIO union members to their executive boards.

Lewis Announces Drive

Washington—John L. Lewis, CIO president, this week announced the launching of a nation-wide campaign to defeat the amendments to the Natl. Labor Relations Act proposed by William Green and introduced in Senate Bill 1000 by Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts.

Opening gun in the campaign to save the Act for labor was fired with the publication of a new pamphlet prepared by the CIO legal dept. entitled, "The Wagner Act Threatened With Destruction!"

The pamphlet analyzes the nine proposed amendments in the Green-Walsh bill and describes them as designed to "foster company unionism and shackle American labor to the courts."

BROAD CAMPAIGN MAPPED

At the same time, letters are being sent to all CIO affiliates and regional officers urging them to mobilize all forces to save the Act. Mass meetings, radio broadcasts, delegations to Congress, and every other means will be used to register labor's opposition to emasculation of the Act, Lewis announced.

Special efforts will be made to reach AFL unions, many of which are far from agreeing with William Green in his drive against the Act. A serious threat to all genuine labor unions, AFL as well as CIO, is seen in the amendments.

The new CIO pamphlet charges that the Walsh-Green amendments "go far beyond anything authorized or favored by the Houston convention of the AFL."

ANALYZE AMENDMENTS

First on the list is the amendment redefining company unions which would allow employers to interfere with unions and favor one as against another—in other words, removing the checks on employers now contained in the Act.

The proposed amendments would also allow company union contracts to stand, taking away the Board's present power to invalidate them. Contracts signed with unions in collusion with employers would also be allowed to

NEW YORK—A demand that the private detective license of the William J. Burns Agency be denied renewal was filed with Abraham Wechsler, state director of licenses, by the Workers Defense League this week.

A similar plea, made by the League and the CIO a few months ago resulted in the Railway Audit & Inspection Co. being banned from further activity in the Empire State.

The League charged that "under the guise and protection of a previously issued license," the Burns outfit had engaged "in unlawful acts and practices and violated the rights of workers guaranteed by the state and federal constitutions and state and federal law."

Standard Oil, Remington Rand, and Lord & Taylor, big Fifth Avenue department store, were listed as firms which have used the agency for strikebreaking or espionage work.

It's Up to Congress

The members of Congress who voted to slash the WPA appropriation to $725,000,000 have advanced all sorts of excuses to indignant people back home who have called them to task.

They have claimed that the slash would not result in serious layoffs; that improvement in private employment would absorb the jobless; that the provision against more than a 5% layoff would prevent serious suffering; and all sorts of other arguments.

Having voted the cut and attempted to square their own consciences with such arguments, they thought they could consider the issue closed and wash their hands of further responsibility for the unemployed.

But now with his special relief message, President Roosevelt has again made it clear to the whole country that Congress cannot dodge the responsibility for wholesale layoffs of WPA workers which must follow if adequate funds are not voted.

The President has stated clearly and positively that under the present appropriation either 1,000,000 persons will have to be abruptly cut off the WPA rolls on April 1, or else between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 will have to be cut off in a series of gradual layoffs this spring.

When the dependents of the WPA workers are also taken into consideration, this means that from six to eight million Americans face extreme distress in the near future unless Congress speedily votes an additional $150,000,000 for WPA.

The fate of all these millions of Americans now rests in the hands of Congress. No smug excuses will any longer avail against the cold and cruel facts which the President has presented.

If protestations of concern for the unemployed are sincere, the members of Congress will at once vote the needed $150,000,000. If they fail to do so, they will stand convicted of being willing to let millions of Americans suffer dire want by being deprived of WPA employment.

The CIO does not consider that even this additional $150,000,000 will provide enough WPA jobs for the unemployed. But it is a minimum appropriation which must be voted at once, and CIO unions and members will join with the President in hammering this demand home to Congress.

It's up to Congress now, and don't let your Senator or Congressman overlook this fact!

One Up for Labor

The overwhelming defeat in the House of the attempt to cripple the Wagner act by cutting the appropriation of the National Labor Relations Board, is a resounding victory for labor.

It means that labor has won the first round in its fight to defend the Wagner act. It should lend courage to every worker and every progressive in continuing the fight against the further attacks which are in store.

Even the most reactionary Congressmen dared not incur labor's wrath by destroying the Labor Board at one full swoop. But what they will do, if labor is not on guard, is to vote for deceptive amendments which would cripple the effectiveness of the Wagner act.

It is therefore doubly necessary hereafter for labor to be vigilant against any and all amendments to the labor act.

If the nature of these amendments is carefully exposed in every case, if labor voters are organized to make their wishes known to Congress, this first-round triumph can be followed by success in all succeeding rounds—until the final knockout blow is delivered to the whole campaign to destroy the charter of labor's collective bargaining rights.

Pins Blame On Bosses

Washington—Responsibility for forgery of ballots used in the election of officers of the colossal Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., was pinned on executives of the company in a statement issued here by President Lewis Merrill of the United Office and Professional Workers.

The monopoly investigating committee had found that agents were practically forced to sign the ballots for the election of the officials of the nation's second largest insurance firm.

"The agents are not the culprits," he said. "They are the victims of a vicious system which management has refused to correct.

"This was merely one of the numerous abuses which led to organization of the men into a union."

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Wrong-Way Green Takes Off Again

WHEN Douglas Corrigan flew off to Ireland, he thought he was flying to California—or so he said.

William Green has sponsored a bill to destroy the Wagner Labor Relations Act, and he seeks to kid the world that he is trying to strengthen the act.

One could almost believe Wrong-Way Corrigan. But not Wrong-Way Green—not if one has read the Walsh bill which he sponsors.

CIO leaders have not always expected the best from Green. They were prepared for some pretty dirty amendments designed to harm their unions.

But they were frankly flabbergasted when they read the text of the bill which Green said Senator Walsh had introduced on behalf of the AFL.

No anti-labor manufacturers' association could have devised a worse attack on the fundamental purposes of the Wagner act than is embodied in the Walsh-Green bill.

It is not only aimed to destroy the CIO unions, but it hits directly at all genuine labor unionism.

What the Bill Would Do

(1) That the amendments in it go far beyond anything authorized or favored by the Houston AFL convention.

(2) That they would deprive workers of protection against company unions, by permitting employers to interfere with the organizations of their employes and favor one union against another.

(3) That they would destroy every collective bargaining unit larger than a single craft.

(4) That they would subject the decisions of the Labor Board to review by the courts at every turn, thus hampering and delaying any effective enforcement of the law.

(5) That they include many other provisions that can aid only anti-union employers, enabling them to have elections when it suits their strategy, to subpoena the most confidential union documents and to disqualify Board examiners whom they do not like.

Not Like Railway Act

It has been claimed that some of these amendments would make the Wagner Act like the Railway Labor Act. But examination shows that this is not the case.

The Railway Act repeatedly and specifically safeguards the rail unions against any interference whatever from employers.

The Railway Act, covering an industry in which craft unions have long predominated, permits the majority of any craft to have their craft designated as a bargaining unit. But the craft divisions are very broad and the Mediation Board still has some leeway to determine the unit.

The Walsh-Green bill would allow the Board no discretion and would automatically make the craft unit the appropriate unit, regardless of the wishes of the workers in the plant or even in the craft itself.

Compulsory Craftism

These compulsory craft unit provisions are already causing revolt within the AFL itself.

Many AFL unions have long been organized on a plant basis. They would be in just as great danger of being broken up into 57 varieties of disunion as would the industrial unions of the CIO.

Employers who value orderly labor relations would also stand to lose from the forced division of their employers which the Walsh-Green bill proposes.

Instead of being able to bargain with a single responsible union representing all their employes, they would have to deal separately with multitude of tiny craft groups.

Defend the Wagner Act

There is hardly a worker in the United States to whom the Wagner act has not brought greater freedom. It has meant freedom to organize without being fired. It has meant freedom to choose the kind of union he wants, without employer interference. It has meant freedom for his union to get the most it can for him through collective bargaining.

Before the Wagner Act, the scales of economic power were greatly weighted on the employer's side to the disadvantage of the worker. The act has brought a little fairer balance by making the workers as free to organize as are the employers.

It is amazing that the worst scheme yet devised to deprive American workers of the benefits of this act should be advanced in the name of men who claim to be leaders of labor.

But it will be still more amazing if the working people of America allow Green—and the anti-union bosses whose favor he seeks to curry through the Wash bill—to get away with this conspiracy.

Every unionist should study the threats to labor in the Walsh-Green bill, and then sound the alarm—to his fellow workers and to Congress!

Your WPA Job

By Ralph Hetzel, Jr.
CIO Unemployment Director

The Administration Speaks Up

President Roosevelt has just sent a most important message to Congress. He asked for an additional $150,000,000 for the WPA during the rest of the fiscal year. He said further that WPA would not be reduced from 3,000,000 during February and March.

The President clearly placed the responsibility for WPA cuts on the doorstep of Congress. He approved the appropriation of $725,000,000, $150,000,000 less than he had asked in January—but, he said: "I would have withheld my approval of this legislation on the ground of its inadequacy to meet human need and I would have immediately asked for a larger sum if it had not been for the provision that there shall not be a reduction of more than 5 per cent of the number of employes on Works Progress projects prior to April 1, 1939."

This was the provision forced upon Congress by public protest.

TWO COURSES

The President said further that under the resolution passed by Congress there were only two courses open to the Administration.

"The first is to reduce the rolls abruptly by 1,000,000 persons on the first of April and provide an average employment of 2,000,000 persons during the ensuing three months. This would result in throwing this very large number of persons out of employment suddenly. Such a number cannot possibly be absorbed by private industry in time to prevent extreme distress.

OTHER METHOD

"The second alternative is to commence a week-by-week reduction on April 1 and to carry this reduction though to June 30. Even on the assumption that all reserves which under proper governmental procedure should be maintained, were completely expended by June 30, such reduction would require that employment by the end of June will be reduced to a figure well below 1,500,000 persons.

"In other words the program of present employment would be slashed considerably more than one-half within a period of three months."

HARRINGTON SPEAKS

Last week Administrator Harrington made his first public address.

In it he laid down policies which he would follow for the WPA. He indicated that he would follow in general the policy established by Hopkins. He said several things of special interest:

"Let me say that, although the construction part of the program has always been the largest part of it, I am well aware that there are many capable people on the relief rolls who are not construction workers but white-collar workers. And for these white-collar workers there will continue to be due provision made, within the limits of our funds.

"There is, in particular, no reason to fear that workers in the field of the arts will be neglected. These workers, though a very small proportion of our total employment, have as musicians, artists, actors and writers, made a large and significant contribution to public needs, which is deeply appreciated. The Works Progress Administration is proud of having had the opportunity to place their abilities and training at the service of the public.

NO POLITICS

"We want these (WPA) jobs to go without any partisan bloc or political coercion to the people who really need them, the people that Congress intended to have such emergency employment.

"The right of jobless men and women to public employment is a right which is just being established in America. For its preservation as an element of future public policy, I want to urge that it is now and henceforth up to every WPA worker to put in a good day's work for his day's pay—just as good a day's work as he can, whatever his rate of pay may be."

ECCLES SPEECH

A third public official spoke up strongly for the unemployed when Marriner S. Eccles, Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, concluded a recent radio speech by saying:

"We did not hesitate to have the government borrow billions of dollars to protect this country against a foreign enemy during the World War. In one year alone we created a deficit of $13,000,000,000, as much as the entire cash deficit of the government during the past five years. We are again proposing to spend billions for preparedness. Yet at the same time, many are quibbling about $150,000,000 necessary to help protect our human resources.

CREDIT FOR HUMANS

"The danger for the future of democracy comes from within as well as from without. The leadership of this country, both in government and in business, must realize that if the American liberal tradition is to be preserved, then, for the millions of our citizens, the right to work must also be preserved."

Hearst Strikers Resist Gangsters, Lawsuits; Brophy to Address Meet

CHICAGO.—Members of AFL unions, railway brotherhoods and independent organizations joined forces with the Chicago CIO this week to protest the drastic labor injunction issued by Superior Court Judge G. C. Niemeyer against Chicago Newspaper Guildsmen on the Hearst-owned Evening American Herald-Examiner.

Apparently designed to demoralize the successful 10-week strike, the temporary writ restrains the strikers from virtually everything but breathing, Guild leaders charged. Nevertheless, strike activities continued as usual.

The writ prohibits "intimidation or coercion" of advertisers, subscribers, scabs, and bans the picketing of advertising. It also limits the picketing at the plant to two strikers at each entrance.

Meanwhile, Jonathan Eddy, American Newspaper Guild executive vice-president, summoned representatives from all Hearst units throughout the country to meet here March 1 to map coordinated action in the strike.

Evidence that the Guild's spirit is still strong was seen in the mass meeting scheduled for a hall seating almost 4,000 people. John Brophy, CIO national director who was to address the gathering, commented:

BROPHY SPEECH

"We in the CIO know Hearst, and we know his like-minded colleagues, the Tom Girdlers and Henry Fords and Ernest Weirs of American industry. We know them as enemies of labor and enemies of democracy and of everything that stands for freedom and decency in our country.

"Only two things have motivated Hearst — the desire for money and the lust for power. He has used a great chain of newspapers, magazines, radio stations, and other enormously lucrative properties, to gratify these two desires.

"The fight against Hearst and every other anti-labor, anti-democratic, anti-American employer will go on to victory. The forces of decency and progress have never yet lost a decisive battle in this country."

Hearst thugs and Hearst lawyers accounted for the new battles on the Guild, with the work about evenly divided between the two.

After stealing a Guild sound truck from its garage and dumping it in the Chicago River — with damages amounting to $500—the Hearst goons chose Joe Ingrassia, diminutive copyboy, for their latest beating.

He was struck viciously in the nose by one, George Roth, who had walked into the middle of the picket line to make the attack. Police rushed into the fray, escorting the gangster back to the Hearst building and arresting his victim on a disorderly conduct charge.

$50,000 SUIT

Turning to the law, Hearst management filed a $50,000 damage suit against the Chicago Guild, some of its officers and a number of citizens who have supported the strike.

In the suit the publisher finally admitted that the Guild has cut into his advertising income and circulation.

STEVENS' COMMENT

"Fifty thousand dollars! Who —us? That's only the salary of one of the droves of 'executives' maintained by Hearst papers which declare they have to fire $16-a-week copyboys to make both ends meet."

Launch Drive To Protect Wagner Act

This is described as one of the worst features of the Walsh-Green bill, which would destroy the Act and "destroy with it all the benefits which members of the CIO and the AFL alike have enjoyed under its protection."

Prompted by "blind hatred" of the CIO, the pamphlet explains, Green proposes to allow splinter craft union representation anywhere it is demanded.

Under this proposal, it points out, craft certification must be granted at the request of one employe, of the employer or even of many company unions.

CRAFT UNITS

Mere requests would force the Board to divide the plant up into crafts — even though there were no unions claiming jurisdiction over the units involved.

Another serious threat to organization of any kind is contained in the proposal to allow employers to call elections at will. Under this scheme, an employer could call a snap election the minute an organizer appeared in his plant, and then declare with full legal backing that his workers didn't want to be organized.

Copies can be obtained from the national CIO office, 1106 Connecticut Avenue, N. W. Washington, D. C. Prices are three cents each, $1.50 for 100, $6 for 500, $11 per 1,000.

Hearst Work

Members of the Chicago Newspaper Guild look on as their $1750 sound truck is pulled out of the Chicago River, where it had been dumped by Hearst gunmen who stole it from a garage. The truck, which will be repaired immediately, was used to tell the Windy City about the Guild's strike against the Hearst-owned American and Herald-Examiner.

French Labor Paper Hails Success of CIO

Washington — The CIO's Pittsburgh convention was "an important date in the history of the workers of America, and perhaps even in the history of workers throughout the entire world," comments Syndicats, official organ of the French labor movement.

The paper devoted two columns of its space to a description of the meeting. The industrial unionism of the CIO receives great respect from the French workers, most of whose unions are industrial in form.

"One things appears certain," the Syndicat's story comments, "the American workers' movement will not abandon organization through industrial unions. It has found great advantages in them . . . Labor unity is dependent, not merely on an end to personal conflicts, but rather on a greater comprehension on the part of the old AFL of the evolution of the modern world."

Auto Locals Back CIO, Rap Martin

Vast Majority Of Members Hit Disrupters

By EDWARD LEVINSON

DETROIT.—The auto workers of the nation have made their decision.

UAW local unions with a total membership of 237,585 have voted:

1. To stand by UAW and the CIO.

2. To send delegates to the official convention to be held in Cleveland starting March 27.

The huge total, representing an overwhelming majority of the UAW membership, took their decisions in membership meetings and through duly elected executive boards. Enthusiasm for the UAW-CIO and the Cleveland convention ran high at all meetings.

On Sunday alone, locals with a total membership of 74,200 voted to send delegates to Cleveland. Where spokesmen of dual unionism appeared, they were given a hearing—and a handful of votes.

The decisions of the 237,585 members came from 92 UAW locals. These were the decisions reported up to Wednesday evening, February 8. Most of the other locals were still to meet.

Four locals are reported to have decided to attend a dual union session in Detroit, but they have not informed UAW headquarters of their decision.

MARTIN IN RETREAT

Facing extermination by the tidal wave of support for the official Cleveland convention, sponsors of the Detroit gathering were considering abandoning their venture. The spokesmen for the dual unionists on Tuesday pleaded for a referendum after both conventions.

These are some of the locals which have voted for the UAW-CIO and the Cleveland convention in the last seven days:

LOCALS ON RECORD

GM, California, 2200 members; GM, Atlanta, Ga., 1,500; Studebaker, Ind., 6,200; Bendix, Ind., 3,600; Briggs, Detroit, 23,000; West Side, Detroit, 30,000; Chrysler, Detroit, 13,000; Plymouth, Detroit, 8,000; Dodge, Detroit, 22,000; Budd Wheel, Detroit, 2,200; Buick, Flint, 8,000; Seamen Body, Milwaukee, 4,000; GM, Cleveland, 6,000; White Motors, Cleveland, 3,500.

When the returns of the week were tallied, it was found that every large Detroit Local, that all Cleveland Locals, that every local in Canada, and virtually all in Indiana and California had gone down the line against disruption and for the Cleveland convention.

International headquarters in the Fort Shelby Hotel meanwhile directed a large corp of UAW organizers, backed by CIO leaders, in their activities to win the locals which have not yet voted.

Summing up the situation to date, President Thomas on Friday issued this statement to UAW members:

"The auto workers have again made history. Faced by a barrage of unscrupulous baiting and misleading propaganda, they have kept their feet on the ground. They have refused to lend themselves to help split the UAW.

SUPPORT DEMOCRACY

"I urge all members whose locals have not acted, and those who have been misled by the appeals of a disruptionist, to consider carefully their future action.

"On the one-side, we have an individual who would split the UAW and turn it against the CIO. He would rob the auto union of all its contacts with the labor movement. On the other side, is a legal democratic convention of the UAW where its members may take hold of their union and rebuild it on firm, progressive lines."

Ask Probe Of Ford, Martin

Detroit — The executive board of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, has gone on record asking for continuance of the La-Follette committee, at the same time requesting an investigation into "collusion between Homer Martin and the Ford Motor Co.

The resolution noted that at one time the committee had started a probe of Ford practices, but the "refusal of Homer Martin to cooperate with the investigators made it impossible for them to complete their work."

RAP AMENDMENTS

New York — Amendments proposed by the AFL leaders and big business to alter the Wagner Act are "either unnecessary or dangerous to the fundamental purposes of the act," the American Civil Liberties Union announced after a study of the suggested changes.

Murray, Hillman Flay Martin As 'Irresponsible'

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON—Homer Martin's record is one of repeated repudiation of promises and "chaotic, irresponsible dealings with the membership," CIO Vice-Presidents Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman declared this week in a letter addressed to the members of the United Automobile Workers.

"We have reluctantly been forced to the conclusion that Martin does not care for the continued existence of an automobile union unless he can exercise his dictator-mania in running the organization," the two veteran CIO leaders said.

"His chaotic, irresponsible dealings with his membership, with the UAW board and with the CIO are not merely temporary lapses from reason. They are the natural expressions of a man whose ruthless ambition drives him to wreck what he cannot rule."

REPORT CITES FACTS

The charges are backed up with a long recital of facts to show how the former head of the UAW broke down every effort to bring unity to the automobile workers.

After reciting the help given by the CIO to the creation of the first powerful union in the automobile industry, Hillman and Murray recalled that the "co-ordinating committee of the UAW and the CIO was created at the request of Homer Martin. The entire executive board of the UAW voted approval."

SUPPORTED COMMITTEE

Martin, who in his present desperation is accusing the CIO of "dictatorship" in the union's troubled affairs, said last September:

"During the past week, an agreement was reached between the UAW and the representatives of the CIO that recognizes once and for all the autonomy of our union. The UAW stands today, as throughout its history, as an autonomous union."

The keynote of the committee's work, the CIO vice-presidents declare, "was the elimination of factionalism" in the organization. In doing so, they show, the committee acted against all political factions which were using the union for their own purposes, and allowed no favoritism.

The committee's recommendations were accepted at the auto union's board meeting in Pittsburgh Nov. 19-20. Martin, addressing the board, asserted that "we have come a long way in reaching an understanding," and highly praised the work of Murray, Hillman and the CIO.

Yet, on Dec. 31, Martin suddenly reversed himself and attacked the coordinating committee as taking away the union's autonomy.

'CONTRADICTIONS'

Martin's "violent contradictions, his back-tracking, and back-biting in the public press and over the radio are hard to understand," the vice-president's letter says. "We find it even more difficult to make sense out of his actions."

Ford's executive, Harry Bennett, and Martin had been conducting secret negotiations. When the union's executive board—the highest body in the organization, according to the UAW constitution—attempted to learn what Martin had been discussing with Ford, he refused to divulge his secrets.

Said Hillman and Murray: "He remained away from a board meeting . . . While the board was in session, he asked the CIO members of the co-ordinating committee to come to Detroit.

"At first, we insisted that the board and Martin attempt to settle their own problems. But Martin insisted. He called one of us by long distance telephone.

AT MARTIN'S REQUEST

"We went to Detroit at his request. Soon after, he denounced us for doing so.

"Martin demanded a special convention. We urged the board to grant that request. It complied, and Martin was instructed to call a convention at the first legal date under the UAW constitution.

"But, after the authority was granted, Martin refused to issue the call. When the board itself called a convention to be held in Cleveland on March 27, Martin turned about and summoned a group to meet in a rump, dual-union convention in Detroit."

The letter concludes with an appeal to the auto workers to "turn away from the disrupters and the dual unionists. The CIO will be behind you."

Blast Martin

CIO Vice-Presidents Philip Murray (left) and Sidney Hillman (right), who in an open letter to the membership of the United Automobile Workers showed proof of Homer Martin's double crosses. They charged him with attempting to split the union rather than give up his aims at dictatorship.

Sees Nazi 'Labor Front' Enslaving Workers

"Strikes are forbidden.

"The workers are no longer free to move from town to town, plant to plant, even job to job.

"A man may change his situation only if the change fits into the aims of the regime. No employer is permitted to hire any employe without the explicit consent of the official labor exchange.

"According to a decree of February, 1937, 'the individual's ambition or desires are subservient to the state's interests.' "

This is the picture of Adolph Hitler's widely touted "Labor Front" painted in the February issue of the Survey Graphic Magazine. The issue, titled "Calling America," contains articles by a score of prominent writers and describes the challenge to American democracy from the dictator nations.

The article, written by Arthur Feiler, tells of the demise of the powerful German labor movement at the hands of the Nazi Party, and the substitution of the Labor Front.

KILLS FREEDOM

That organization, Feiler says, "in plan and in activities, is the very negation of freedom. It is a creation of the National Socialist Party, not of labor.

"It's function is the 'guidance of man'—molding its millions of members to Nazi patterns by incessant propaganda. It's membership, even larger than that of the trade unions, was swiftly enrolled under pressure of the dictatorial party, which could answer every refusal to join up by the refusal of a job.

"The means of compulsion are simple: no job, no relief, no bread for the obstinate. During the September, 1938, crisis, tens of thousands of workers were requisitioned from industry, and without even time to say good-bye to their wives and children, they were loaded into special trains and sent to work on the fortifications along Germany's western frontier."

Collective bargaining has been replaced by government decrees. Workers are forbidden to ask higher wages, employers prohibiting higher pay than the government permits.

Hourly wage rates have been kept rigid—but prices have risen, so that the workers' purchasing power has been cut since Hitler came into power in 1933. At the same time, the old 48-hour work-week is being increasingly supplanted by the 60-hour week.

UNDERGROUND FIGHT

Though the armaments program has, to a certain extent, absorbed some of Germany's unemployed, the German people, "and particularly German labor, have experienced the real meaning of Fascist security, the price that it exacts," Feiler charges.

"For the most part, German labor has been silenced, browbeaten into despairing submission, shorn of hope by the destruction of freedom. . . Others have not yielded. They continue to fight for their old beliefs, and that the fight must be kept underground makes it no less heroic."

New Homes For Old

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing.

By THOMAS HUMPHRIES

"There are no slums in this town!"

"Oh yes, there are slums in New York!" they declare. "There are slums in many cities. But in our city? The idea! We have no slums!"

A few years ago it was hard to answer this argument. There were not many cities where housing surveys had been made. There were not many facts and figures to show how bad housing conditions really were.

WE HAVE THE FACTS

But today we have the facts and figures. We have them in a neat volume recently published by the WPA; "Urban Housing."

During the years of 1934, 1935, and 1936 WPA workers went from door to door making Real Property Inventories in 204 cities and towns. From time to time the results were published separately. The figures on 64 cities were presented in separate bulletins. And just a few weeks ago "Urban Housing"—which presents complete figures on housing in 140 cities—came off the press.

VALUABLE INFORMATION

Eight million homes were covered in the WPA's 204 surveys. And of this number only 40 per cent were considered in good condition!

More than 15 per cent had no private flush toilets. About 20 per cent were without private bath or shower. More than 16 per cent were either in need of major repairs or absolutely unfit for human habitation.

Interesting regional differences are brought out. In Southeastern cities, for instance more than 40 per cent of the dwellings lack private baths, 32 per cent have no private indoor toilets, and 25 per cent have no gas or electric lighting.

HOW ABOUT YOUR CITY?

Do you live in Akron? If you do, you can look up Akron in the index of "Urban Housing," turn to the proper page and find out that over 45 per cent of the dwellings in Akron are unfit for use or need major repairs.

Do you live in Kansas City? Thumb the pages of "Urban Housing" and you'll find that practically half the dwellings in your city have no private indoor toilet or private bath.

Do you live in Bethlehem, Pa? Look up Bethlehem in "Urban Housing" and you'll discover that 1 out of every 4 homes in Bethlehem has no hot water.

GET A COPY

A copy of "Urban Housing" belongs in the office of every CIO international union, and industrial union council. A copy belongs in the home of every CIO'er who is interested in housing.

"Urban Housing" is easy to get. Merely write to the Division of Social Research, WPA, Washington, and they will send you a copy. Enclose no money. The book is free.

To get figures on the 64 cities which are not included in "Urban Housing," write to the Government Printing Office, enclose 10 cents and ask for the Real Property Inventory pamphlet on the city in which you are interested.

Texas Unions Unite; Charge Dictatorship O'Daniel's Goal

HOUSTON, Texas—Rapid-fire development of anti-labor events in this state has inspired quick action in the formation of joint committees of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the American Federation of Labor and the railway brotherhoods, to protect the workers' rights in Texas.

Less than a month ago, the Texas State Industrial Council, the Harris county and city councils, inaugurated a "labor unity" movement which aimed at joint action by the three big legitimate unions in legislative matters which would benefit labor generally.

Actions detrimental to labor unions by Texas' new governor, W. Lee O'Daniel, the hill-billy flour merchant and stooge of "Big Business" interests, have moulded the three groups closer together than ever before.

SEE DANGER AHEAD

Labor leaders have come to consider that Governor O'Daniel is attempting to set up an "industrial dictatorship" regime at the State Capitol, and its initial aim is to make Texas a company union state.

By putting Kunschick, a minor clerk for the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, into the Labor Commissioner's office, Governor O'Daniel was seen as paving the way for a concerted company union drive to destroy all bonafide unions.

The confirmation of Kunschick was high-handed and without regard to thousands of protests against the appointment.

RED-BAITING

The committee hearings were veiled in secrecy and were not open to the public. The hearings were branded as un-American and undemocratic.

B. J. Schafer, vice-president of the Oil Workers' International, who appeared before the Senate committee, as a delegate from the CIO, has charged several of the nominations committee members with being a part of "red-baiting tribunal."

"Instead of getting down to the Kunschick issue, the committee cros--examined me on how I voted, whether I voted a straight ticket, and whether I had ever voted the Communist ticket," he charged.

P. F. Kennedy, executive secretary of the State CIO council, gave warning that Governor O'Daniel is attempting to wreck organized labor.

"He is proving himself to be incapable and incompetent for a high office. His every action thus far has been detrimental to the welfare of the working people. He is working hand in hand with the oil and sulphur corporations to unload the taxation burden on the working people, and in effect will set up an industrial dictatorship."

Tells All

The life of a burlesque girl isn't all it's cracked up to be, Gypsy Rose Lee, who ought to know, told members of the Department Store Employes Union, CIO, at a big New York meeting. She told of improved conditions, however, since members of the shows joined a union.

Start Parley To End Long Guild Strike

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—Negotiations between publishers of the three strike-bound dailies and the Newspaper Guild opened here during the week towards arriving at a contract to end the 20-week-old walkout which has kept the dailies closed tight since October 3rd of last year.

The jurisdictional squabble back of which the publishers stalled has been eliminated with the announcement that the AFL Office Workers' Union—organized 19 days after the strike—had voted to disband and its membership join the Guild. The CIO Guild now has a 95 per cent majority in all plants.

The Office Workers' Union at the same time withdrew its Labor Board petition seeking jurisdiction settled, as did the Newspaper Guild withdraw three charges against the publishers for unfair labor practices. This was done to wipe out all existing "legalisms" over which the publishers have haggled for months.

NEGOTIATIONS

Counter - propositions between publishers and Guild have already been exchanged, and three-man Guild executive board committees are conducting separate negotiations with each of the publishers. Joint negotiations in the past have proven to be stumbling blocks towards quick progress.

Meanwhile, the Sunday Independent, which signed a Guild contract November 29, 1938, has doubled its circulation and boosted its advertising revenue in the past three weeks since the printers' union decided to reverse a previous stand and return to work.

Textile Union Holds First State Confab In South Carolina

GREENVILLE, S. C.—At the first state-wide conference of CIO textile unions in South Carolina, more than 400 local union officials and key members of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee from some 45 textile centers heard reports of the big gains made in recent months.

George Baldanzi, acting president of the CIO textile unions in his speech to the conference scored Francis J. Gorman, deposed president, for his attempt to form a dual AFL union.

"The textile workers of the South are aware of the fact that the AFL, after 54 years' failure, could point to no substantial gains for the textile workers in the form of higher wages or better working conditions," he said.

Referring to a recent announcement by George Googe, AFL general organizer, that the AFL was opening a campaign to organize the textile workers into AFL unions on a ten-year plan, Baldanzi cried:

"If the AFL could not organize the workers on a 54-year plan, there is little hope that it will be successful in building any worthwhile national union in ten short years." Delegates stood and roared their approval.

LAWRENCE PRESIDES

Roy Lawrence, TWOC regional director in the South, presided at the meeting, opening the session with a short talk on the gains made since the TWOC started its southern organizing drive.

More than 300,000 textile workers have been brought under contract, while 150,000 union members are awaiting the signing of agreements with their plants, and thousands of others have signed membership cards.

The conference unanimously pledged its allegiance to the TWOC in its efforts to bring all unorganized textile workers in the state into the CIO, and warned the AFL that the TWOC would militantly resist any efforts to destroy the unions it has formed.

New Film Shows Slavery in South

New York — Slavery 1939 style is the theme of "Boy Slaves," a movie produced by RKO-Radio, which deals with forced labor in the turpentine camps of the South.

One of the few pictures to come out of Hollywood with a plot woven about the conflicts of working class life in America, the film tells the story of a group of homeless boys of the road who are arrested and farmed out by officers of the law to work in a turpentine camp.

Under the gun and lash of the overseer, they are forced to labor from dawn to dark behind a barbed wire fence, portraying the fact that in America, too, there are concentration camps.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who saw the picture recently, commended it highly in her newspaper column.

CIO Pact Ends Bus Strike Threat

New York—The signing of a closed shop contract between the Transport Workers Union, CIO, and the East Side Omnibus and Comprehensive Omnibus Corporations, averted a strike of 400 bus drivers which threatened to tie-up surface transportation lines throughout the mid-town and lower east side sections of the city.

Pay increases ranging from 8 to 18 per cent, two weeks paid vacations, seven days sick leave with pay, and adjustment of present working rules are included in the contract which is retroactive to January 1, 1939, and is to run until January 1, 1941.

Associated Farmers Charged With Evasion Of Oregon Law

Portland, Oreg. (FP)—Officers of the Associated Farmers of Oregon, Inc., anti-labor group which fronted for business and finance in putting over Oregon's anti-labor law in the November election, faces indictment by the Marion County grand jury on charges of violating the corrupt practices act by concealing the sources of campaign contributions.

More than $32,000 of the reported contributions filed with the secretary of state were listed as having come from the Oregon Business Council, an entirely fictitious and non-existing organization. Repeated requests from Sec. of State Earl Snell for an itemization of that huge sum were ignored by Howard L. Shoemaker of Hood River, president, and other officers of the outfit.

Atty. Gen. I. H. Van Winkle and Snell have filed a complaint with the grand jury and have asked for indictments. The Oregon Commonwealth Federation, the State CIO Industrial Union Council and the federation of labor had urged that this action be taken.

HOLD HEARINGS

Washington. — Hearings were held before the National Labor Relations Board here last week on the application of the Aluminum Workers of America, CIO, for a run-off election among the workers of the Aluminum Co. of America at the Alcoa, Tenn. plant. Three unions, the CIO local, an AFL local and an independent union competed at the election held some weeks ago, none receiving a majority at that time.

Tobacco Workers Press Fight on Lorillard

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio—A renewed drive to win labor support for its fight with P. Lorillard & Co., cigar, cigarette and tobacco producers, has been launched by Pioneer Tobacco Workers local industrial union 55.

Unique posters, designed with the cooperation of the CIO office in Cincinnati, will be sent to union councils in all states and principal cities, will inform workers that the company's products including Old Gold cigarettes, are on the "unfair list."

The multi-million dollar firm was placed on the list during the course of a month-long strike last October, which was terminated only when strike-breaking Gov. Davey called out the national guard and threatened bloodshed if the thousand workers continued their walkout.

REFUSE TO BARGAIN

The dispute was a climax to 16 months' refusal on the part of the company management to bargain collectively with its employes. Efforts of U. S. Department of Labor mediators and the National Labor Relations Board to change the company's attitude were unsuccessful.

An indication that the company recognizes the union's strength was seen when it offered a week's vacation with pay to every employe with a year's service. This had been proposed in the contract offered by the union almost two years ago.

The company produces Old Gold, Sensation, Murad, and Tally-Ho cigarettes; Union Leader and Briggs pipe tobacco; Beechnut chewing tobacco, Climax plug, and a number of other products.

Draws Up Program At Confab

Washington.—Social security for seamen, protection of union hiring halls, revision of ancient mutiny laws, the eight-hour day and licensing of radio operators are principal items on the legislative program announced by Atlantic coast representatives of the National Maritime Union, CIO.

The program was drawn up at a conference of port agents of the NMU on the Atlantic coast and members of the District Committee of the NMU, held in Washington, and was presented in resolutions passed by the delegates.

SUPPORT HIRING HALLS

The resolution on social security urged Congress to pass a bill to include seamen under unemployment compensation and old age benefits, pointing out that many thousands of seamen were unemployed and completely without protection from unemployment and old age.

On protection of hiring halls, the conference condemned the practice of private shipowners who lease ships from the U. S. Maritime Commission of refusing to hire through union halls. These halls were described by the conference as operating "to the satisfaction of the unions and the employers, and as a means of alleviating and distributing as fairly as possible the present heavy burden of unemployment among American seamen."

HIT "MUTINY" LAWS

This resolution also pointed out that seamen should be ensured the benefits of the National Labor Relations Act and the right to choose their own collective bargaining agent without interference from shipowners or the U. S. Maritime Commission.

On revision of old "mutiny" statutes, the conference demanded revisions to ensure seamen against reprisals for strikes occurring while ships are at anchor in safe harbors. The conference voted full support for the bills introduced by Rep. William I. Sirovich which would accomplish these needed changes.

Plates and Crowns Scab-Made; Union Pickets Dentist

NEW YORK—Members of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians are fighting for the right to picket a dentist who is purchasing dental plates, crowns and other similar materials at a shop whose employes have been locked out.

Officials of the CIO union maintain that a dentist who has his clients' mechanical dental work manufactured in a dental laboratory is merely selling a product to his patients and that the union therefore has a right to acquaint the public with the facts.

The shop involved in the lockout — Dental Arts Laboratories, Inc. — opened its fight on the FAECT last October, a few weeks before the expiration of its first union contract. Before the agreement, its employes received as little as $6 for a 60- and 70-hour work week.

The State Labor Mediation Board, after a four-week hearing, recommended arbitration, but the employer refused to accept the suggestion.

Ask Probe of Tories, Bridges Challenges Frisco Bosses

SAN FRANCISCO.—The head of the tightly-knit San Francisco Employers Council has been challenged by Harry Bridges, CIO west coast director, to join him in a plea for more funds for the LaFollette Committee.

The challenge was Bridges' answer to a speech by Almon E. Roth, in which the employers' leader had various complaints to make against union labor.

"The LaFollette committee has already declared that the shipowners have undercover agents in our ranks. If that committee is granted sufficient funds to hold its scheduled hearings in San Francisco, it will prove beyond the shadow of a doubt that these charges are correct.

"I challenge Mr. Roth right now to join us in urging the Senate to grant the LaFollette Committee sufficient funds to complete their work in California. That committee, in its first report, states clearly and gives ample evidence to show that peaceful industrial relations are impossible so long as the employer has a single spy or disrupter in the union.

"Poor wages, bad conditions of work, and employer disruption through under-cover agents are the basis of all so-called 'Labor trouble.' As long as those things exist the trouble is bound to follow."

Learning Early

These Kenosha, Wis. tots are learning early that picketing gets results. They reached for their placards when members of the city school board closed their school, forcing them to walk many extra blocks to their classes.

New York — "Labor Learns Through Action" is to be the subject of the annual Washington's Birthday conference of teachers in workers' education which will be held at the headquarters of the Affiliated Schools for Workers, 302 East 35 Street, New York City, February 18-19.

In announcing the conference, Miss Eleanor Coit, director of the AFS, said: "In line with modern trends, workers' education has stepped out of the academic atmosphere of the past into the active world of reality, becoming a vital part of the union itself."

Bethlehem Fake Union Killed By Labor Board

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—Two more company unions today were headed for the dump-heap, following an order issued by the National Labor Relations Board against the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp. yards in Boston and Fore River, Mass.

The company is a subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Corp., and its chief executive is Eugene Grace, who holds a similar position with the Little Steel firm.

The Board's order directed the firm to stop financial support to the long-established employe representation plans operating in the two plants, and to withdraw recognition from them.

NAMED AS AGENTS

Local 25 of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers in Boston was named sole barganiing agent in the yard there, and the company was directed to start collective bargaining with the CIO, signing a contract if an agreement is reached.

The Board ordered an election to be held at the Fore River plant to determine if Local 5 of the IUMSWA should be the sole collective bargaining agency there.

Some 4,000 workers are employed in the big Fore River yards, located just a few miles south of Boston.

The company's plan of employe representation was "furnished and installed in its entirety by the management," the Board order declared.

PLAN 'VITAL' TO GRACE

It quoted a statement made by Pres. Grace of the company in 1933, when he said that, "at its inception I stated that our plan would be made an integral part of our business. That this has been done is evidenced by the important place it has come to occupy in our current affairs.

"The Plan has become vital in the administration of our business."

Biggest Housing Project To Be 'Union-Designed'

New York, Feb. 18.—America's largest housing project will be union designed and union engineered, the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, CIO, revealed today.

The union has just won an agreement covering architects, engineers and draftsmen working on the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co's new project for New York's upper Bronx.

The project, which will eventually house 12,000 families, cost close to $100,000,000 and will require several years to complete.

Nationwide Fight Against Amendments

(See Other Stories on Pages 3, 5 and 7)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18 — The campaign to protect the Wagner Act from crippling amendments offered by leaders of the AFL and other Tory groups, went ahead at full speed this week.

On Capitol Hill, Congressmen privately spoke of great numbers of communications against changing the law, with one western Senator quoted as having received only three letters to amend the bill. AFL and CIO unions alike are fighting to save the law which has given labor its greatest benefits.

The American Newspaper Guild, in a survey of the situation, found that 13 AFL international unions have already gone on record to support the Act, while countless state and city bodies and local unions have taken similar action.

Other major developments of the week:

1. Msgr. Haas, one of the nation's leading Catholics, urged all Catholics to support the Wagner Act and to fight against amendments aimed to cripple it.

2. The National Lawyers Guild, representing over 5,000 lawyers, went on record against amendments.

3. Before fighting the Act, employers should realize the benefits which it has brought to employers as well as to workers, CIO Sec. James B. Carey declared.

4. The Act has averted scores of strikes and saved thousands of man-hours of work, commented Pres. Sherman Dalrymple of the United Rubber Workers.

5. The fight against the Act, both in the political arena and in factories throughout the country, is "dangerous" to labor, Pres. Reid Robinson of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers warned members of his organization.

6. More than 125,000 maritime workers will work actively against crippling the Act, Pres. Joseph Curran of the National Maritime Union predicted in New York City.

7. Sen. David Walsh of Massachusetts, who sponsored the AFL amendments in Congress (Senate Bill 1000) was warned that the 55,000 CIO members in the Bay State will fight his efforts to smash industrial unionism, Pres. James Nelson of District 50 of the United Mine Workers said in a letter to the Massachusetts legislator.

8. Louis Waldman, prominent New York attorney and counsel for a number of important AFL unions, warned Pres. Green of the AFL that the executive council's proposed amendments "carry with them great danger to the labor movement."

Strikers Answer Hearst

Once again striking members of the Chicago Newspaper Guild march through the city's loop district to tell the public about their strike and shout defiance to Hearst's gangster and legal strikebreaking tactics. Circulation and advertising in the American and Herald-Examiner have dropped sharply.

AFL Heads Join War On New Deal Policies

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 18—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor, winding up its annual sun-bath session here, was on record today as sharply opposed to the New Deal's spending and relief policies.

A similar blast against the New Deal was howled down, it is recalled, at the federation's convention in Houston, Tex., last autumn.

The message referred to the government's relief expenditures as merely a "temporary" device and echoed big business's continued campaign against "fear, a lack of confidence and distrust in governmental, social, and economic procedure."

AGAINST PROFITS TAX

Pres. Green added his bit to the statement during a press conference shortly afterward. He said: "There has been strong complaint against the excess profits tax for one thing. We believe its repeal would help."

The council's manifesto asserted that if recovery is to be won, "we must turn to private industry for the solution. It should and must serve the nation. Our national interests require that private industry be accorded the widest opportunity to do so . . . Obviously the next step must be the establishment of credit and the will and purpose on the part of the owners of industry to risk, invest, build and construct."

How closely the AFL executive council's leaders are linked with big business is seen in the fact that business leaders have called for destruction or nullification of the New Deal program in order that they may regain the confidence which the AFL leadership sees as necessary.

Four Fruit Packers In Arizona Sign With CIO Union

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18 — Four of the largest fruit and vegetable sheds in Yuma Valley, Arizona, have signed agreements with Local 78, United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers providing for sole bargaining rights and a 10% wage increase.

The employers who have conducted a bitter fight against the union for four years finally recognizing they had lost when the CIO union recently won Labor Board elections in 30 packing sheds in the Yuma and Salt River Valley areas of Arizona.

The agreements also provide for a minimum wage of 60c an hour, equal wages for men and women, time and a half for Sunday and holiday work, pay for waiting time and abolition of the speed-up.

35 POLLS SLATED

Packing shed workers are now migrating to Imperial Valley, California. Some 35 elections have been scheduled to be held there by the Natl. Labor Relations Board. The union is confident of victory in the elections and expects to win signed contracts in this hot-bed of Associated Farmer vigilantism.

The famous lettuce strikes of 1934 were staged in the Imperial Valley. The union has made steady progress there ever since the strike, conducting a campaign against anti-union firms with "hot lettuce" posters.

Labor representatives feel that with the progressive administration in California now in control under the newly elected Gov. Olson, civil liberties of workers will be protected by law for the first time.

Minnesota Dicks Try Come-back

St. Paul, Minn., Feb 18 — Detective agencies whose licenses were revoked by former Gov. Benson are trying to stage a comeback in Minnesota. The Detective agency has already applied for readmission and the Pinkerton agency is expected to follow suit if the Burns license is granted.

The Twin Cities Newspaper Guild went on record as opposed to any renewal of licenses to any "private detective agency whose anti-labor bias has been revealed by the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee."

AFL and CIO Fight Tory Measure

New York, Feb. 18.—Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor in New York State are joining with the CIO in fighting the Wicks transit labor bill, the legislative department of the Transport Workers Union revealed today.

The TWU contends that the bill, under the pretext of extending civil service, would rob half of the present 29,000 employes on two New York subway and streetcar systems of their jobs, and deprive all the workers involved of seniority and pension benefits, as well as the collective bargaining rights which they have won through the union.

Teamsters, bakery workers, typographical and printing press workers, painters, restaurant employes, sleeping car porters and dining car employes—all of them organized in AFL unions — have gone on record against the bill, the TWU report said.

200 ORGANIZATIONS

"We have received duplicates of resolutions condemning the Wicks bill adopted by more than 200 different organizations in the State, exclusive of the 400 CIO and AFL locals which have already gone on record in opposition to the Wicks Bill," said Austin Hogan, president of the union in New York.

Fifty thousand signatures have already been placed on petitions against the bill, Hogan added.

If successful in passing the bill in the Empire State, anti-laborites may try similar campaigns elsewhere, CIO leaders predicted.

MOONEY ILL

San Francisco. — Tom Mooney, very ill with gall bladder trouble, has been forced to cancel all engagements on the West Coast. After a rest, he will undergo an operation.

Firm Drops Gyp Stock Scheme

Washington, Feb. 18.—Workers at the Associated Gas and Electric system found out today that they won't have to buy securities from the company at prices far above the market rate.

They learned of this when the company, after many complaints from the union, District 50 of the United Mine Workers, notified the Securities Exchange Commission that employes would no longer be required to buy bonds from the company's subsidiary, the Utilities Employes Securities Co.

CHECK-OFF USED

The company had used a 10 per cent check-off on payrolls to force money out of its workers for a weakening financial structure, the CIO union charged. The bonds were sold to workers at prices ranging to 50 per cent above the open market levels.

District 50's 400 members in the System led the fight to end this species of high-jacking, both with the company and before the Securities Exchange Commission of the U. S. Government.

Ask Injunction Against Pay Law Breaker

New York, Feb. 18 — The Wage-Hour Administration of the Department of Labor has filed a civil action in federal district court here charging a Georgia shirt firm with violating the fair labor standards act.

Irving Levy, wage-hour lawyer, sought an injunction from the court to prevent the Trueworth Manufacturing Co. from continuing a policy of paying piece rate wages which net the firm's employes as little as 8c an hour.

Criminal action may be taken against the firm at a later date, Levy said. Under the wage-hour statute, a violator faces a maximum fine of $10,000 and six months' prison term. In addition, employes may file suit for double the amount of wages due them, receiving court costs in addition to the back pay if it wins the case.

Goodyear Tries New Tricks Against Union

AKRON, Ohio, Feb. 18—Petty tricks to keep from dealing with the Goodyear local of the United Rubber Workers, are still being played on the employes at the plant here by company officials, the CIO charges. Latest of the tricks is the posting of a series of "general practice sheets" on matters taken up during unsuccessful negotiations between the union and the company for a contract.

Negotiations for an agreement were ended last month when the company, after stalling along for months, finally announced that it had decided not to sign a contract "at this time".

POSTED LETTERS

Later, however, it began posting letters containing matters covered in the proposed contract with the wording slightly changed.

Rumors began to be spread around the plant that the union had accepted these sheets as written, and certain foremen were reported to have taunted workers by telling them that was what their union got for them.

FILES PROTEST

In a letter of protest to the company, the union charged that the procedure of posting the notices after refusing to sign an agreement by collective bargaining was an unfair labor practice and that the subject would be submitted to the union "for appropriate action".

The local has already filed charges of violation of the Wagner Act with the National Labor Relations Board, and field examiners have been conducting an investigation in Akron which is expected to be followed by a formal hearing on the charges.

Jersey Senator Rapped On Vote For WPA Cut

PATERSON, N. J., Feb. 18—Sen. Warren Barbour of New Jersey today had an opportunity to think over the cost of voting against the interests of the workers who elected him to office last November when he was opposed by a Hague lieutenant.

The Republican Senator was in receipt of a letter from the state's Labor's Non-Partisan League protesting his vote against Pres. Roosevelt's $875,000,000 WPA proposals.

Barbour, a Republican, was asked by Leo Perlis, LNPL state organizer, to be "independent enough to support all measures of benefit to the people. — even if they may have originated with Pres. Roosevelt and his New Deal associates."

ASK FUTURE SUPPORT

Perlis added, "I hope you will realize the needs of the people by supporting Pres. Roosevelt's request for the immediate restoration of $150,000,000 for the WPA, by supporting the $3,230,000 appropriation for the National Labor Relations Board and by voting against any amendment to the National Labor Relations Act.

"For the sake of security and democracy, I urge you to dis-affiliate yourself from the anti-New Deal-at-any-price movement and to be independent enough to support all measures of benefit to the people."

Plan Labor Seminars

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 18—Three traveling economic seminars in 1939 for ministers, teachers and other civic leaders has been announced by the National Religion and Labor Foundation here.

Seminar 1, opening in Washington, D. C., July 5 for four days of conferences with business, labor and government leaders will proceed by way of Greenbelt and Arthurdale to Harland County, Ky., closing with a visit to the Delta Cooperative Farm at Rochdale, Miss.

Members of Seminar 2 will travel to the Pacific Northwest, visiting Yellowstone Park, Butte. Spokane, Grand Coulee, Seattle, Portland and Bonneville. The third group will open with a five day program in New York City followed by a ten-day trip to New England industrial centers.

Survey Shows AFL Unions Back Wagner Act

(See Other Stories About Drive to Defend the Wagner Act on Page 5)

NEW YORK, Feb. 18—AFL leaders, international unions and state and city bodies are far out of line with William Green's plan to cripple the Wagner Act through amendments such as those proposed in his name by Senator Walsh of Massachusetts.

A recent count, up to date as of Feb. 15, shows 13 international unions, seven state federations and 12 city and district bodies on record in favor of the Act as it stands or in support of the Labor Board.

The count was made by The Guild Reporter, official organ of the American Newspaper Guild, CIO, and quotes convention resolutions, editorials in union papers, and statements by union leaders, opposing changes in the Act or praising it and the Board.

HIGHLIGHTS

The Guild Reporter was only able to give highlights of its survey, since it could not find room to list hundreds of AFL local unions opposed to tinkering with the Act. The list as printed in the Guild paper includes:

American Federation of Teachers, 22,100. (Convention resolution, 1938.)

Intl. Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers, 22,500. (Statement of Vice-Pres. Fromkin.)

Brick and Clay Workers, 5,000. (Statement of Pres. Kasten.)

City and district bodies include Waukesha, Wis.; Cascade, Mont.; Salt Lake City; Dubuque, Ia.; Omaha, Neb.; Detroit and Wayne Co.; Fall River, Mass.; Cincinnati, Denver, Omaha-Council Bluffs Railway and Motor Coach Division, St. Louis, (editorial in AFL paper), and Memphis, (statement of Pres. Loring.)

Mexican Labor Hits AFL Plan

Mexico City, Mexico, Feb. 18— Attempts of William Green and Matthew Woll to revive the discredited Pan-American Federation of Labor were denounced by Lombardo Toledano, leader of the Mexican Confederation of Labor (CTM), as evidence that Green and Woll are in the service of anti-labor, anti-Mexican financial interests.

Toledano sharply criticized Green and Woll in a statement issued to the press in this city when he heard of their proposal.

"These same leaders of the AFL, with the aid of great imperialist trusts, are trying to revive the Pan-American Federation, which had a brief existence 15 years ago and which was always regarded with profound distrust by the workers of the continent," he said.

UNITY, NOT DIVISION

"The Confederation of Latin-American Workers (organized about a year ago at a convention attended by CIO President John L. Lewis) came into being not to divide the workers of the continent, as Green and Woll assert, but to unite workers of the same conditions for the first time in history.

"I know the workers will laugh — as I laughed yesterday — on learning of their statement."

Utility Union Wins In West

Los Angeles, Feb. 18. — A smashing victory was won by the Utility Workers Organizing Committee at a Labor Board election held here among the 1,500 production employes of the Southern California Gas Co.

The vote was 779 to 420 in favor of UWOC Local 132.

Workers flocked to the poll, disregarding the campaign conducted against the election by the company, which sent letters to the homes of the employes telling them that the utility firm did not come under the Wagner Act and did not have to live up to the results of the election.

The last letter sent out in a final feeble attempt to stem the tide said "the CIO loses nothing" if "you vote 'no'."

'AMERICAN WAY'

During its campaign the union told the workers: "When you vote 'yes' you vote for the principle of dealing with the company on matters of wages, hours and working conditions in the good old-fashioned American way of democratic majority rule".

The union's election drive was conducted by the Local's executive and shop stewards committees, headed by President James L. Daugherty and Verne Kennedy, UWOC international representative.

Furniture Union Reports Big Growth In Year; Muster Hails Wagner Act

ROCKFORD, Ill., Feb. 18 — In little more than a year the United Furniture Workers of America, CIO international union, has increased its membership from a few thousand to more than 37,000, President Morris Muster told delegates from locals in 47 furniture centers throughout the country attending the first constitutional convention of the union in session here.

At a mass meeting held in Lyran hall at the close of the first day's session, CIO Director John Brophy, speaking to more than 1200 persons, defended the CIO as a "truly American organization".

Relating the sensational gains made by the industrial union movement, Brophy said:

STRENGTH WILL GROW

"Our very success has caused our enemies to attack us with all their power. But despite their unfounded charges that we are 'reds,' we shall continue to advance. We shall continue to organize the unorganized until every worker in the land has the benefits and protection of collective bargaining.

"What our antagonists mean when they say we are 'reds' is that we are an energetic organization, one that is getting results."

MUSTER RAPS GREEN

Other speakers at the convention vigorously defended the Wagner Act, rebuking AFL President William Green for his attacks on the Act. President Muster declared that "Green's sorry attempt to gain an advance for the AFL has been pounced upon with glee by the national Chamber of Commerce which has gladly joined hands with him in attacking the National Labor Relations Board.

"I am certain that Bill Green will have no difficulty in finding friends among directors of great corporations in the United States to join him in attacking labor's Magna Charta."

In his report to the convention, Muster warned the delegates that unemployment still remains one of the union's biggest problems, and advised them to take an active part in trying to solve unemployment problems in their communities.

He praised Local 707 of Rockford, the second largest union in the UFWA, for its activities along this line.

Bay State CIO Attacks Sen. Walsh

Springfield—Bay State Convention. — In a mass meeting before the convention sessions opened, CIO Secretary James Carey and Director John Brophy accused Sen. David Walsh of Massachusetts of aiding reactionaries to defeat labor. The Bay State's senior senator introduced the bill containing the crippling Wagner Act amendments advocated by some of the AFL top leaders.

"A soft-headed labor leader and a week-kneed senator can be just as dangerous as a hard-hearted employer," Carey warned the delegates.

WARN WALSH

"Senator Walsh must withdraw those amendments or you in his home state must see to it that Walsh doesn't go back to the Senate.

"If you ever saw an instance where a labor union fired the president of a company because he had joined the National Association of Manufacturers, we'd say that an amendment to the act should be presented to correct such a situation."

BROPHY SEES DEAL

Brophy said that a frontal attack of misrepresentation and propaganda against the CIO having failed, anti-labor employers were now trying to accomplish the same ends with different means—namely, amending the Wagner Act.

"All indications point to an out-and-out deal between sponsors of this bill and the forces of reaction." Brophy charged. "Senator Walsh may be unaware of the implications of the amendments, but I can't see what motivated Bill Green unless he has grown so blinded by spite that he will injure his own followers in order to injure the CIO."

Surprise

Washington got a surprise and a laugh when liberal Jerry Voorhis, California New Deal congressman, was appointed to fill the vacancy on the Dies Committee. A strong critic of the committee's activities, he is expected to get in Dies' hair.

Stenos Strut

Shell Signs CIO Pact In West

San Francisco, Feb. 18—Thirty-five hundred employes of the Shell Oil Co. in the state of California today looked forward to working under their first union agreement.

A state-wide contract negotiated by the Oil Workers International Union, CIO, awaited expected ratification by the six participating locals before going into effect.

Pres. Harvey Fremming and O. A. Knight, Fred Phillips and J. C. Coulter, representatives of the international union, led the workers' bargaining group. Shell workers in Hammond, Ind., and Houston, Tex., are already working under contract

Detective stories, tales of violence and murder, accounts of battles and dramatic clashes between opposing forces, epics of human bravery and high endeavor—these are among the most popular of reading matter, according to most book and magazine surveys.

In real life, such stories usually rate the front page of most newspapers. But when the drama of current events of this character has social significance, it seems that the sensation-mongers of the press avoid it.

No documents could be more compelling in their human interest, more full of true stories of plots and espionage, of violence and bloodshed, of brave struggles against oppression, than the reports now being issued by the LaFollette-Thomas Senate civil liberties committee.

Yet the press is not full of features and burning editorials on these sensational exposures. The radio and movies all but ignore them. The halls of Congress do not ring with speeches demanding the righting of the wrongs which they reveal.

On the contrary, there is a conspiracy on the part of the forces of reaction to keep silent on the great work which this committee has done, and to let it die for lack of attention.

All the more reason therefore why labor people and all progressives who value our liberties should take it upon themselves to campaign for the continuance of the Senate civil liberties committee, and for the passage of the legislation which it will recommend.

The CIO has sent out a message to all it members, urging that they do all they can to call attention to the splendid service rendered by this committee, and that they get in touch with their Senators for two purposes:

(1) To obtain the passage of such legislation as the LaFollette committee may recommend to control strikebreaking agencies, regulate private police and the traffic in arms, gas and munitions, and protect civil liberties; and

(2) To insure that adequate funds be appropriated so that the committee may complete its present work and go on into new fields where much yet remains to be done.

Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. The Senate civil liberties committee has been vigilant for us; let us be vigilant for it.

Gas and Clubs Instead of Bread

The refusal of Congress to vote the extra $150,000,000 necessary to prevent the removal from WPA rolls of hundreds of thousands of unemployed, is already bearing fruit in preparations to gas and club the jobless who will thus be denied a living.

According to the Washington Post, instruction in use of tear gas and formation of special anti-riot squads has been begun by the police in the nation's capital "with a view to preparing for possible demonstrations protesting the recent slash in WPA funds."

More than 70 top-ranking police officers, it is reported, were summoned by their chief to a conference where "detailed orders were given on the use of tear gas as well as a gas inducing nausea."

While Congress has bucked against voting $150,000,000 to preserve the livelihood of millions of Americans, it shows no similar hesitation about voting many times that amount for war purposes. For airplanes alone for the Army Air Corps as much as $376,000,000 was voted almost unanimously last week.

A similar preference for taking life rather than saving it is also indicated by the current police preparations.

How long is Congress going to continue to be willing that taxpayers' money should be spent to gas and club the unemployed, rather than to remove the causes of mass protest by voting adequate funds to provide jobs for the jobless?

RubberStrike End Is Near

Los Angeles, Feb. 18 — Settlement of the strike of 500 workers at the B. F. Goodrich plant here is reported to be near. Negotiations between Local 43, United Rubber Workers, and the management has resulted in the company's agreeing to re-work its schedule towards retaining the four six-hour shifts in departments where it previously functioned.

The workers went on strike when the management arbitrarily announced that the four six-hour shifts would be changed to three of eight hours each.

The Decoy

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Appeasing The Wolves

WHEN wolves pursued the traveler of olden times, a tactic sometimes pursued was for the driver to throw overboard one of his pals, to appease the wolves.

Neville Chamberlain has brought this tactic up to date in Europe with his policy of appeasing the Fascist powers by giving them a few democracies to devour.

But it is in the United States that some of the latest refinements have been added to the tactic of appeasement. Here we have politicians and even some alleged labor leaders who not only throw loved ones to the wolves, but try yelping like the wolf-pack themselves.

Jackass Tactics

When the Republicans come down like a wolf on the fold, for instance, we have recently seen many of the Democratic sheep in Congress trooping out to join in the foray.

Democratic party leaders, in a recent caucus, had some harsh words to say about the way tory Democrats get into the Republican procession every time an attack is launched on the New Deal.

These tory sons of the jackass seem to think it smart to appease the G.O.P. opposition by sacrificing to it the interests of the unemployed, labor and liberal voters who placed their party in power.

More than that, they try to make their braying sound even more elephantine than the trumpeting of the opposing party.

It is natural, though not exactly social, for hungry wolves to howl for blood. The Republicans might have been expected to launch every possible attack on WPA, the Wagner Labor Relations Act and other phases of the New Deal program.

But what can be said for Democratic members of Congress who vote to slash WPA; who join in the hue and cry against the Wagner Act; and who troop down the aisle after the Republicans to vote for a Dies committee whose main purpose so far seems to have been to smear the Democratic administration and progressive Democratic candidates?

Dessert for Anti-Unionists

The latest, but not the least devout, of the disciples of appeasement are some of the leaders of the AFL.

The successes of labor organization in recent years, which have nearly doubled the country's union membership, have caused an extreme reaction on the part of die-hard anti-union industrialists and political reactionaries generally.

This reaction has taken the form of an intense campaign against the Wagner Act, under whose protection for the right to organize labor has made its most outstanding gains.

To appease these wolves of anti-labor reaction, William Green and some of his associated top leaders of the AFL have bravely decided to sacrifice even unto the last of their loved ones.

In the Walsh amendments to the Wagner Act, which they sponsor, they first of all throw overboard the decisions of the Houston AFL convention. The amendments then propose to sacrifice one by one the interests of both CIO and AFL unions, by depriving them of most of the protection for bona fide unionism which the present act embodies.

Finally, to show the generosity of their spirit of appeasement, the Green-Walsh amendments throw to the anti-union wolves all the trimmings of a good meal, in the form of extra concessions which will be palatable only to labor-fighting bosses.

The Final Touch

The recent executive council meeting of the AFL, however, has added the final touch to the whole policy of wolf-appeasement. It has adopted a statement which says in effect, "Our hearts bleed for the wolves, their philosophy is correct, and their need is great; we demand relief for them."

It may be remembered that Matthew Woll and John P. Frey, at the last AFL convention, brought in a report which called the New Deal "socialistic" and smote it hip and thigh. The general purport of this statement appeared to be that the New Deal had coddled the poor too much at the expense of the rich, and that the first thing necessary was to restore the confidence of the wealthy. The Frey-Woll report was indignantly rejected by the convention.

Nothing daunted, the council has now adopted a statement which implies that the chief trouble with the country is not low wages and purchasing power and inadequate unemployment relief, but the "psychology" which has been created in the rich by New Deal social legislation and federal spending on behalf of the jobless.

To emphasize his ideas about restoring "confidence" to big business, Green added this explanation to the council's statement: "There has been strong complaint about the excess profits tax for one thing. We believe its repeal would help."

Stand Up and Fight

Most of the above-mentioned ideas for appeasing the wolves of reaction do not have a great appeal to the loved ones whose part is to be sacrificed to them. AFL unions, for instance, have been among the first to protest against the union-destroying Walsh-Green amendments.

To run with the hare and hunt with the hounds is not easy. Most of the labor and progressive forces do not intend to do either. Their idea is to stand up and fight for the Wagner Act, for adequate WPA funds and for progressive New Deal laws generally. And if there is to be any running done, let the other side do it.

Defend The Wagner Act

Act Brings Peace, Says Pressman

Washington, Feb. 18. — "The Wagner Act was necessary because the peace and order of our American system demanded it," Lee Pressman, general counsel of the CIO, told a radio audience over station WRC here today.

Pressman's speech, in which he defended the Act from plans of Bill Green and anti-union employers to destroy it, opened the campaign organized by the Washington Industrial Union Council in defense of the Labor Act.

"Trade union organization is an orderly and peaceful way of adjusting economic and social problems," he said. "It demands an orderly and peaceful recognition on the part of employers. It takes two sides to bargain collectively.

"The Act must not be amended out of existence. Changes now would open the door to industrial disputes, to discrimination against workers for joining unions, to all the unfair labor practices that the Act was designed to correct."

District 50 Head Raps Sen. Walsh

Washington, Feb. 18—The workers in Massachusetts' gas and coke industries "condemn" amendments to the Wagner Act, President James Nelson of District 50, United Mine Workers, wrote to Senator David Walsh, who sponsored the AFL leadership's craft and company union proposals.

Nelson, a resident of the Bay State, said he spoke for 5,000 members of his union there, told Walsh that if the AFL were to have its way, the workers would be divided among a number of craft organizations.

CRAFT CONFUSION

"No sane management wants to negotiate 20 separate contracts with 20 separate crafts once a year," Nelson wrote. "In Massachusetts the management in the gas and coke plants have clearly demonstrated their approval of industrial unionism by renewing contracts with District 50 unions.

An Amended Wagner Act Would Mean:

1. Attacks on industrial unions.
2. Growth of company unions.
3. Long delay in the courts.

Msgr. Haas Asks Catholics Aid Wagner Act

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Feb. 18—Catholics "in particular" should defend the Wagner Act, Msgr. Francis J. Haas, leading Catholic educator, told an audience at Our Lady of the Elms College here.

"In view of the fact that the law is designed to protect the natural right to organize, and, as Leo XIII insists, the government 'must protect natural rights, not destroy them,' Catholics in particular should rise to the defense of the law as a necessary use of government power," he said.

Msgr. Haas hit out at enemies of the Wagner Act, whom he accused of being responsible for "dishonest propaganda which has been unleashed against the Wagner Act."

At the same time he praised the work of the Natl. Labor Relations Board, saying: "It has worked honestly, and I venture to say that it has worked longer hours than any other public agency."

Enemies of the Act, he added, were certain powerful employers who were unwilling to see their workers organize for the protection of their living standards and the comfort of their families.

Lauds Act

Pres. Sherman Dalrymple of the United Rubber Workers.

Act Averted Many Strikes-Dalrymple

Washington, Feb. 18 — Pres. Sherman Dalrymple of the United Rubber Workers declared today that "it would be detrimental to already established labor relations to make any changes in the Wagner Act at this time."

The United Rubber Workers, he added, had made "many settlements of discrimination cases that would have resulted in serious labor disputes had it not been for the National Labor Relations Board.

"The number of working hours saved for our members would run into thousands, thanks to the Wagner Act," Dalrymple asserted. "We have used the Board extensively to prevent strikes."

The majority of the AFL rank and file in Akron, Ohio, where the URW has much of its strength, "are definitely opposed to tampering with the Act," he said.

Employers Should Realize Act's Benefits - - Carey

NEW YORK, Feb. 18—Employers who have profited from the Wagner Labor Relations Act were urged by James B. Carey, secretary of the CIO and president of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers to speak up in defense of the Act against attempts to cripple it by amendments.

Carey, speaking on a radio hook-up Wednesday, pointed out that employers had profited from the industrial peace brought about by the Act, and asked them if they were willing to go back to the days when strikes for union recognition were a common occurrence.

"The Labor Board, in administering the Wagner Act, has prevented many hundreds of strikes over union recognition that would have taken place if the Act hadn't been in operation," he said.

EVERYBODY WINS

"The advantages of this are obvious to all. Workers get the right to organize in unions of their own choice, without interference from employers. Collective bargaining becomes possible on the basis of equality between the two sides. Industrial peace is the result — which benefits workers, employers and the public.

"Realistic employers know this," he added. "They have seen the benefits of the Act in their own plants. They know that it is profitable to deal with stable labor organizations on the basis of recognition. They know that it takes two to bargain collectively."

Strikes for union recognition would become common if the Act is amended to allow anti-union employers to dodge this responsibility, he said. "Would American employers enjoy this?" Carey asked. "I think not. I think they would very soon wish the Act had been left alone, so they could bargain again on equal terms with unions really representing their workers."

Metal Miners Oppose All Changes In Law

DENVER, Colo., Feb. 18 — Locals of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers are joining in the parade of CIO unions fighting attacks on the Wagner Act.

The editorial in the union's edition of The CIO NEWS notes a number of resolutions opposing changes in the Act, and repeats the warning that labor at this time must oppose any or all attempts to amend it.

Sees Danger

Pres. Reid Robinson of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, who sees "danger" in amendments to the Wagner Act.

Resolutions stating that the local opposes changes "unless they are beneficial to labor" open a dangerous crack for skilled reactionaries to slip through, it declares.

"The fight to preserve the Wagner Act as it is at present will be severe enough," the editorial says. "An amendment that is considered beneficial to labor would only serve to give enemies of the Act a chance to substitute their own line of amendments."

'DANGEROUS'

"The attack upon the Wagner Act in Congress is dangerous and so is the manner in which many of the industrialists are trying to nullify its effect in industry."

Save Wagner Act, Lawyers Demand

CHICAGO, Feb. 18 — Opponents of amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act today had the support of the 5,000 members of the National Lawyers Guild.

Meeting in convention the attorneys went on record to lend their strength to preserving the Wagner Act from reactionary attacks. At the same time the convention passed a number of progressive resolutions — including one calling for continuance of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee headed by Sen. LaFollette of Wisconsin.

Van A. Bittner, chairman of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee and midwest director of the CIO steel union, told convention delegates of the need for unity between workers and farmers.

FARM LABOR UNITY

"The CIO recognizes that there is a strong community of interest between industrial workers and farmers," Bittner declared. "With strong, powerful organizations of farmers working together with organized industrial unions, we can solve our problems to the mutual satisfaction of both groups."

Bittner pointed out that the "condition of the southern tenant farmers is a menace, not only to themselves, but also to all workers in our country. Permanent prosperity of our nation depends upon maintaining the economic power of both farmers and workers."

Girdler and Green

"You are all familiar with the political attacks, the unsound tax policies, the vicious labor legislation and the equally vicious administration of that legislation. These are but a few of the developments which have helped to choke off the investment of private capital in productive enterprise."—Girdler, president of Republic Steel Corp.

"We must turn to private industry for the solution . . . Fear, a lack of confidence and distrust in governmental social and economic procedures should be removed. A political and economic state of mind should be created which would enable all financiers and owners and management of industry to face the future with confidence.—AFL Executive Council.

LaFollette Committee Raps Private Cops

Blames Girdler for Violence During Steel Strike; To Ask Legislation

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—Private police systems should be used for the protection of plant and property—and not for espionage and unwarranted attacks on workers—the LaFollette Committee reported to the U. S. Senate this week in a document which blasted the policies of Harlan County, Ky., coal operators, and Tom Girdler, head of the Republic Steel Corp.

On the basis of its findings, the Committee, headed by Senators Robert LaFollette and Thomas Elbert, announced it will recommend legislation "to restrict and eradicate, if possible, the dangers that threaten the civil liberties of large bodies of American workingmen as a result of the injection of police methods into the delicate relationship between workers and management."

Where private police systems are used to fight unionism, the the Senators charged, they serve to:

1. "Abridge and violate the civil liberties of workers and other individuals;"

2. "Violate the rights of labor guaranteed by federal statutes;"

3 "Result in riot and bloodshed, causing loss of life and injury to persons and property;"

'CREATE BITTERNESS'

"The ruthless and brutal activities of armed private guards to prevent union organization "gives unfair competitive advantage" to the companies employing them, the report said, in addition to creating bitterness between labor and management, leading to strikes and disrupting commerce.

Further, the committee asserted, the "use of private deputies in an anti-union campaign is inimical to the maintenance of orderly representative government.

"It leads to (a) private usurpation of public authority; (b) corruption of public officials; (c) oppression of large groups of citizens under the authority of the State; and (d) perversion of representative government."

WOULD BAR SPYING

Legislative remedies, the committee declared, "should be designed to prohibit labor espionage and the rough shadowing, coercion and intimidation of workers in ordinary times, and to restrict company police to company property during times of strikes."

The committee's bill, the report indicated, would "prohibit the employment as armed guards of persons who have previous criminal records showing a tendency toward violence or the dangerous use of deadly weapons."

RAP 'ARMIES'

It is an "indefensible position" for people to think that privately-paid armed guards may take the place of public police, the committee said.

"The use of private police as an agency of labor policy must be viewed . . . primarily as an attempt to impose upon labor a selfish private interest by means of private armies," the report added.

"As such it is a betrayal of expressed policies of employer groups, a frustration of national labor policy, and a violation of the rights of American citizens to exercise their civil liberties for their common welfare."

BLAME GIRDLER

Turning its attention to Republic Steel, the committee minced no words in charging that Tom Girdler, outspoken foe of the CIO, was directly responsible for the reign of terror conducted by his company's police and thugs.

Though Girdler, in public statements and newspaper advertisements, had claimed that his workers were free to organize, without coercion from the company, the committee said that captains of the Republic police who appeared at its hearings "either were not informed or, if informed, did not pay attention to the company's professed labor policies."

ALIQUIPPA ALUMNI

Girdler's underlings, it noted, came with him from Aliquippa, Pa., when he switched from Jones & Laughlin to the newly-created Republic Steel Corp., in 1930. These "Aliquippa alumni" did carry on "espionage and rough shadowing," the Senators asserted.

"This committee," the report said, "is not convinced therefore, that these long-trusted subordinates of Mr. Girdler assumed the responsibility of spending thousands upon thousands of dollars of corporate funds in carrying on activities which violate national labor policy, and which negate the word of the corporation's own statements with respect to labor policy without clearance from the highest executive of the company."

POLICE BROKE STRIKE

The committee reviewed testimony heard in Washington last summer about company-provoked violence at the Berger Manufacturing Co., in Canton, Ohio, and described the strike in 1935 as broken by the "brutal attacks of Republic guards, by the activities of spies, and by a back-to-work vote in which Berger employes were not allowed to participate."

During the Little Steel strike in 1936, it was revealed, Girdler increased his police force "from 290 to as high as 390, in order to expand its labor-espionage and 'rough-shadowing' activities."

Expenses for the espionage and shadowing were handled through "blind vouchers" so that the exact outlays of money are difficult to trace.

HARLAN IMPROVES

The situation in Harlan county —once known as "bloody Harlan" —has changed for the better as a result of the committee's probe, the activities of the National Labor Relations Board, the U. S. government's criminal case against Harlan coal operators, and the signing of a contract with the United Mine Workers.

George Titler, secretary-treasurer of District 19 of the UMW, sent a message to the committee early last month, the report disclosed, which thanked the Senate group "for bringing peace to Harlan County," a "direct result of your efforts."

Harlan Gives Big Welcome To Kentucky CIO

HARLAN, Ky., Feb. 18—Harlan County, scene of countless bloody attacks on union members, played genial host this week to its first labor convention — the annual convention of the Kentucky CIO Industrial Union Council.

In the very hotel where 12 representatives of the United Mine Workers had been surrounded by armed deputies — and freed only when the state militia was sent in — some 300 delegates spent two days of discussion about the progress of the state's labor movement.

PEACE IN HARLAN

Peace indeed has come to Harlan — this was the theme of many of the speeches at the convention. Delegates had their picture taken on the steps of the county courthouse. The mayor and chief of police greeted the labor representatives.

Among the delegates were a number of police from the company mine towns in their uniforms. Since the change took place in Harlan, these men have become active members of the mine workers' union.

"It is most significant that this convention is being held here in Harlan," Smethurst said. He told how the CIO in other sections of the country had helped to extend civil liberties and bring about industrial democracy.

SUPPORT WAGNER ACT

The delegates acted on a number of important issues. They called for defeat of amendments to the Wagner Act, commended Atty. General Frank Murphy for his action in creating a civil liberties division in the Department of Justice, and urged him to send agents into Harlan when the present contract expires in April.

All present officers were reelected.

Brass Workers Vote For CIO Metal Union

IRVINGTON, N. J. — CIO workers at the Phoenix Brass Fittings Corp. here have just won a real victory against tremendous odds, in piling up a Labor Board election victory after more than a month's strike.

The workers, members of Local 462 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, CIO, won after maintaining a 24-hour picket line under all sorts of adverse weather conditions, carefully watched by New Jersey cops and annoyed by an AFL organizer who tried to stick his nose into places where it wasn't wanted.

BENEFITS WON

Jess Gonzalez, board member of the Smelter Workers international, announced further benefits won by the local, including seniority rights, a work week of not less than 24 hours, and machinery for grievance adjustment. These points were in the agreement for the election, and were assured if the workers won—as they have.

When the AFL agent appeared, workers told him promptly that the best way he could help, if he really wanted to, was to keep his nose out of business that didn't concern him.

Negotiations for the formal contract are getting under way this week, Gonzalez said.

New Book Tells Drama Of Seamen

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

Washington, Feb. 18. — Seamen have always been favorite subjects for story and song. In the past it was their adventures and hardships before the mast that provided dramatic material for innumerable writers and stirred the yearning of youth for adventure.

Many believe that with the passing of the old schooner, the drama of the sailor's life also passed away, and that on our modern steamships he leads as prosaic a life as any worker in mill or factory.

DRAMA OF UNIONS

Anyone who knows something of the struggle of modern seamen to improve their lot by organization knows that this is not true.

The highlights of this truly dramatic story have been sketched in an illustrated booklet published by the National Maritime Union, the CIO organization built up by seamen of the Atlantic coast. It is a well done job.

END OF SERFDOM

'Serfdom was abolished on land after the beginning of the so-called modern era, when it became economically unprofitable. It was not abolished on the sea until the seamen themselves banded together and gradually forced their governments to legislate it out of existence."

With this brief introduction, the booklet, called "Two Years", launches with no wasted words into an account of the seamen's struggles to unionize. The story is traced from the earliest attempts in the middle of the last century, which ended in failure, down to the triumphant establishment of the National Maritime Union in May 1937. At the present time the NMU has a membership of more than 50,000, most of whom are working under union contracts.

U. S. Probe of Insurance Proves Union's Charges of Coercion, Anti-Labor Activities

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—Investigation of giant insurance companies by the Monopoly Committee is turning up anti-union and anti-social practices long known by the CIO union in this field, Lewis Merrill, president of the United Office and Professional Workers, said after attending hearings here this week.

"Investigation into the labor policies of the life insurance companies is an exceedingly appropriate function for the Monopoly Committee in its study of the insurance industry," Merrill said.

Merrill compared questionable business habits of the large companies, such as Metropolitan, John Hancock and others, to their labor policies, pointing out that their directors are "using other people's money to control other people's lives."

LABOR FIGHTERS

This is done, Merrill explained, by the companies' lavish use of policy-holders' funds to fight the organization of their workers. This determined fight against labor's rights began more than a year and a half ago, when the Office and Professional Workers wrote to Metropolitan demanding recognition for Local 30, Industrial Insurance Agents Union. Leon Berney, general organizer, presented the demand.

The company's reply was a threatening letter to its 2,800 employes, promising instant dismissal to all agents by substituting direct contact between policy holders and the home office.

Ten months ago, the company was ordered by the N. Y. State Labor Relations Board to recognize the union after it won an election and after Board certification. At the same time the Board issued a complaint against the company for "intimidation, firing of agents for union membership, and fostering a company union."

LEGAL TRICKERY

The company has tried every kind of legal delay and trickery to avoid carrying out Labor Board orders, Merrill said, and has to date refused to recognize the union chosen by its workers. In addition to fighting Board orders, Merrill added, "not for one minute has the company desisted from its organized opposition to the union."

The case will go to the U. S. Supreme Court, Merrill said, where the union will finally win its legal victory. Even after that, however, the union expects that Metropolitan will try to stall—as it stalls on the issue of control of policy-holders' money by the policy-holders themselves.

The insurance industry is one of the most important in the country, Merrill pointed out, in urging the Monopoly Committee to pay full attention to its labor policies along with its business habits.

"Only the railroads and steel carry a larger payroll than the insurance companies," he said. "The life insurance division alone employs more than 250,000 people, 92,000 of whom are in the agency force.

"They are by far the largest reservoir of capital for investment purposes, and as such have tremendous power in the economic life of the country."

CONTROL BY A FEW

This power is in control of a few men in key executive positions, he explained, which makes it possible for them to keep a close grip on the affairs of the company and to use its resources to fight labor.

Nominally control of these companies is supposed to be in the hands of the policy-holders, but through trickery and outright forgery of voting proxies (brought out at Monoply Committee hearings) they are able to keep everything in their own hands.

"The rights insurance policy-holders possess are carefully hidden from them by the small clique of self-perpetuating groups now in control," Merrill said.

"A thorough inquiry into this would reveal that funds have been used in ways calculated to strengthen the most reactionary sections of American political life, and the same reactionary ends which determine the character of their investment policies likewise determine their anti-labor attitude."

The majority of their policy-holders are opposed to anti-union practices, he pointed out, and restoration of the control they are now supposed to have over the companies would bring a quick change in their labor-fighting tactics.

Wagner Act Changes Risky Says AFL Lawyer

Washington.—Amendments proposed to the National Labor Relations Act by the American Federation of Labor "carry with them great danger to the labor movement," Louis Waldman, attorney for a number of AFL unions, declared in a letter written Pres. William Green of the AFL.

Waldman is counsel for Local 3 of the Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers in New York, locals of the Amalgamated Butcher Workmen, and the Cap and Millinery Department of the United Hat, Cap & Millinery Workers.

The proposed amendments "would not establish the 'fair and equitable administration of the labor act by the National Labor Relations Board'," he wrote to Green.

Waldman added that his conclusions were not based on any "partisan considerations." "My whole concern in this matter is that of serving the best interest of organized labor. My conclusions are based on many years of experience with the labor movement in and outside of court."

Marine Group Hails Act As Aid to Peace

New York, Feb. 18. — CIO unions in the maritime industry added their protests against crippling amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act late this week, with a statement from Joseph Curran, chairman of the CIO Maritime Committee and president of the Natl. Maritime Union.

Speaking in the name of eight CIO maritime organizations with over 130,000 members, Curran praised the Act as a force for peace in the industry and attacked the proposed Burke and Walsh amendments as a device "for destroying militant labor unions."

"The Wagner Act has been an instrument for peace in the shipping industry," Curran said. "Collective bargaining elections held under the Labor Board have resulted in contracts covering more than 30,000 seamen, nearly as many longshoremen, and several thousand shipbuilding and other maritime workers.

WRITTEN BY THE NAM

"All the amendments sound as if they had been written by the Natl. Association of Manufacturers," he added. "We are told that the Act protects workers but does not protect employers.

"Well, naturally it protects workers. That is what it is for—because the workers had no other protection. The employers have plenty of protection already."

Resume Joint Parleys in Guild Strike

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Feb. 18—To hold published stalling down to a minimum, joint negotiations were again resumed by the Newspaper Guild with owners of the city's three strike-bound dailies Monday, in an attempt to reach a contract ending the 21-week-old walkout which began last October 1.

Joint parleys were brought about by John Kmetz, international board member of the United Mine Workers.

SQUELCH RUMOR

Merger "propaganda," planted with the wire services to stampede the Guild into accepting a substandard contract, was squelched at the first session by Col. E. G. Smith, publisher of the strike-bound Times-Leader, who said there was no basis for the stories.

Morris Watson, international vice president, is heading Guild negotiators.

Meanwhile, the strikers are supplying the newspaperless public with a 20-minute newscasts each night at their own expense.

Discuss Ship Yard Pact

Bath, Me., Feb 18. — Terms of a proposed agreement with Local 4, Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, were submitted to the Bath Iron Works here by National President John Green in accordance with an understanding reached earlier at a conference with company officials.

Insurance Board Shuns Union

New York, Feb. 18.—CIO workers in the State Insurance Fund here are putting up a stiff fight for recognition of their union, Local 45 of the State, County and Municipal Workers, it was learned today.

Plenty of opposition is coming from Major Muller, executive director of the State Fund, the union reports. Major Muller, union men say, "has embarked on a vigorous anti-union campaign in a deliberate effort to crack down on the employes and to break up Local 45."

APPEAL HIGHER UP

Refusing to meet with grievance committees, trying to put in a speed-up, and surrounding union men with spies are only part of the Major's general anti-labor drive, the local explains.

To meet this, the local has appealed to the State Deputy Industrial Commissioner, who backed up Muller to the extent of refusing to even meet with a union committee. The local intends to take the fight still further by appealing to the state Industrial Commissioner, and to the whole of organized labor in New York State.

Auto Workers' Voting Shows Wish For Unity

DETROIT, Feb. 18 — The tide in the United Automobile Workers has definitely turned towards the CIO.

These were the developments in one of most momentous weeks in the history of the UAW:

1. The number of UAW members voting to send delegates to the Cleveland convention jumped to 280,341, an overwhelming majority. Most of the other locals have not yet acted.

2. The dual unionists supporting Homer Martin lost many major locals—Packard, with 10,000 members, started to turn away from them. Others like Dodge, Hudson, Bohn Aluminum, and Chevrolet Forge, as well as spring and fibre locals, pledged their loyalty to the UAW and the CIO.

3. The Wisconsin district, the only remaining region in doubt, came out for the CIO and the Cleveland convention. The J. I. Case local at Racine, together with Nash, Allis-Chalmers, and Seaman Body locals, all took the same stand.

4. A revolt of the rank-and-file against the Martin disrupters, swept through Flint and Pontiac, Mich., with large Buick and Yellow Cab locals voting for the UAW-CIO.

MARTIN IN RETREAT

Martin and his group of followers, distressed by the almost unanimous action of the automobile workers in refusing to endorse his splitting, anti-CIO program, did a merry hop, skip and jump to win votes for himself. The one-time college track star broad-jumped to a new position in which he declared himself in favor of affiliation of the CIO—recent utterances to the contrary notwithstanding.

Then, in an effort to halt the swing towards the Cleveland convention—where his misrule will finally be buried — Martin proposed a referendum of the membership between himself and Acting Pres. R. J. Thomas.

THOMAS STATEMENT

"Martin's talk about a referendum is pure hypocrisy," Pres. Thomas charged. "The UAW constitution makes no provision for a referendum."

Thomas recalled Martin's use of strong-arm methods to choke off discussion inside the union—for which he "now stands condemned by the membership.

"He faces a trial. Suddenly, he turns about, and says let's have a vote. What if Al Capone, before he was placed on trial as a racketeer, said, 'Let's have a referendum.' He would be laughed out of court. . . "

The Cleveland convention is "the highest tribunal of the UAW," Thomas concluded. "That is why Martin was afraid to attend."

PAY DUES TO UNION

In Detroit a tally of the votes in the large local showed 90% of them voting for the Cleveland convention. Following the vote in Dodge, dues amounting to more than $24,000 were turned over to Sec.-Treas. George Addes. A check from Toledo Local 12 for $8,242 arrived the same day.

The week also gave increasing evidence that the rift which Martin had created was rapidly fading into the background. Lansing's Reo and Old locals were given new charters and launched in constructive work.

In most other cities, wherever the locals had disposed of the issue of dual unionism, they turned their attention to two things: building the union and winning better contracts, and planning and discussing programs for presentation at the Cleveland convention.

Firm Signs Pact, Ends Long Strike

Chicago, Feb. 18.—A five weeks' strike against the Wilson-Jones Co. here ended with victory for the United Loose Leaf and Blank Book Workers, when the firm signed an agreement with the CIO union.

The strike started January 10, after the company had refused to arbitrate for a peaceful settlement on an equal footing, following the discharge of the union's officers in the company's plant at Elizabeth, N. J.

Two union members were later assaulted and beaten by company stooges and foremen of the Elizabeth plant.

WILL REHIRE TWO

Under the terms of the settlement, the two discharged officers will be reinstated with back pay and without loss of seniority rights. They will also be paid their regular wages during the period of arbitration.

Workers Vote 84% for CIO

Redding, Calif., Feb. 18. — Employes of the United Concrete & Pipe Co. were on record with an 84 per cent vote today to be represented by the CIO.

The workers chose the Shasta Tunnel & Construction Workers Local 260, affiliated with the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, as their sole collective bargaining agency. They are employed on two railroad relocation tunnels near here.

BOARD TO MEET

New York.—The general executive board of the United Office & Professional Workers will meet in Chicago March 13.

Federal Workers School Starts New Study

Washington, Feb. 18. — A "Social science workshop" — one of three now operating in the United States is today in session at the United Federal Workers School here.

The course will help students to translate facts about wages, hours and working conditions into posters, maps, charts, graphs and signs.

The school presents an array of courses ranging from folk dancing to union adiministration and the national income.

Armour Workers Vote CIO

Denver, Col., Feb. 18—The CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee rolled up another in its long string of Labor Board victories, winning at the Armour Co. plant here by a 205-134 vote. All but two of those eligible to vote cast their ballots.

The PWOC has already been certified at key Armour plants throughout the country, and is pressing the company's management for collective bargaining discussions leading to a signed contract.

With Gloves!

Los Angeles, Feb. 18 — A CIO AFL boxing match has been booked as the special feature for a union affair at the East Side Arena here. Pete (Gashouse) Bishonden of the CIO Utility Workers Local 132 will scrap it out with Denny Moore of the Hodcarriers, AFL. Matchmaker Tom O'Grady said it was the first time that labor in the west had entered the boxing game.

The affair has been endorsed by L. H. Michener, secretary of the CIO Council and other labor leaders both CIO and AFL.

AMERICAN WAY?

Indianapolis, Ind. — Supporters of a little wage-hour law for Indiana have found examples of wages of two and three quarters cents an hour in Indianapolis and 126-hour week in Richmond.

Hillman Urges Confab To Seek Rise In Income

DES MOINES, Ia., Feb. 18—Sidney Hillman, vice-president of the CIO and president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, sounded a call today for a national conference of labor, agriculture, industry and government for the reconstruction of American economic life.

Speaking at the third annual Natl. Farm Institute at the Fort Des Moines hotel, Hillman urged farmers to unite with industrial workers so that both may secure a fair share of the national income.

"The farmers of America seek the answer to one thing," he said. 'Agricultural income declined, never to recover, from 16 billions in 1919 to nine billions in 1921, and never again rose above 11 billions.

"The farmer's share in the national income dropped from 18 per cent in 1919 and 15 per cent in 1920 to nine per cent in 1928. Why did it fall, and how can it be recovered?"

LABOR'S SHARE MEAGRE

At the same time, Hillman pointed out, "Labor's share in the fruits of national prosperity in the twenties was also meagre. While from 1923 to 1929 industrial output increased by 29 per cent, real wages advanced only 4.5 per cent.

"Our national economy failed to distribute to the two great customers of industry the purchasing power necessary to buy back the product of its expanded plant."

Quoting U. S. figures to show that an enormous potential demand for farm products existed, and could become effective if purchasing power were high enough, Hillman declared:

"We have at home a vast untapped market capable of absorbing all our agriculture and industry can produce.

"The Department of Agriculture estimates that to provide an adequate diet for our population, would require a 40 per cent increase in farm production; the sowing of another 32 per cent acreage of corn, increasing our cow herd by 68 per cent, hogs by 69 per cent and similar increases in other farm products.

"Dietary deficiencies are equalled by the need for clothes and housing which if met, would tax the capacity of our existing industrial plants."

URGES COOPERATION

Hillman pointed out that an equitable share for all in the national income would only be secured mutual trust and cooperation between farmers and workers, as well as government and industry.

This, he explained, is the democratic and American way of solving a national problem of increasing difficulty.

"Every responsible leader of labor, agriculture and industry as well as the overwhelming majority of the American people reject the alien contention that the problem of want can be solved only by abondoning our heritage of freedom and democracy," he concluded.

"At this critical hour, the heavy burden falls upon us in America to prove to the world and to history that democracy can offer a constructive and progressive solution of the problems of our contemporary society."

Co-op Meeting To Discuss Workers' Needs

Racine, Wis. — Organized labor in the middle west, faced with the problem of cutting the cost of living, will send representatives here Feb. 24, 25 and 26 to discuss the possibilities of increasing their buying power by organizing as consumers.

Racine workers have taken the lead in organizing one of the most successful city cooperatives in the United States.

Delegates will not only discuss ways of cutting the cost of living, but will also visit the cooperative grocery, meat market, gas stations, coal yard, appliance shop and credit union to see at first hand the results of consumer action.

The conference is being called under the auspices of the Cooperative League of the U. S. A. Speakers will include Pres. Jacob Baker of the CIO United Federal Workers, Pres. Ohl of the Wisconsin Federation of Labor and E. R. Bowen, executive secretary of the cooperative organization.

Ask Farmer-Worker Unity

Omaha, Nebr. — (FP)—Closer cooperation between organized farmers and organized labor in Nebraska was urged by AFL and CIO leaders speaking before the annual Farmers Union convention here.

Roy M. Brewer, head of the Nebraska Federation of Labor, joined with Don Harris of Des Moines, Ia., president of the Iowa-Nebraska Industrial Union Council in declaring a profitable market cannot be created for farm products unless "labor is paid a high enough wage to enable it to maintain an American standard of living.

Harris, who is also director of the CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, called for unity of farmers and workers against trust and monopolies "setting prices at both ends — for what farmer sells and what labor receives."

Loafers?

UNIONS PUSH CAMPAIGN TO DEFEND WAGNER ACT

Cut WPA?

NEW YORK, Feb. 25—(FP).—In a desperate attempt to feed her family of four, Mary Cusack, wife of a WPA laborer and mother of two small children, tried to hold up a subway station with a small toy pistol.

Cusack, who was a member of the Cement Finishers & Plasterers Union, AFL, for seven years, had to drop out because he couldn't pay dues and has been employed by WPA for about a year. When he returned home on Feb. 14 with a 1-day check for $3.98 with his next check due on Feb. 28, his wife broke down.

While Cusack was asleep, his wife walked to the nearby subway station. After Cusack was notified of his wife's arrest, he said:

"Mary had no intention of stealing anything. Maybe she didn't know the right way, but she didn't mean to steal, and that hold-up attempt was her way of bringing attention to her plight."

Denver CIO, AFL Unite to Fight For Wagner Act

DENVER, Colo., Feb. 25.—CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers here are going to town in defense of the Wagner Act. They have joined with AFL locals and other progressive groups to set up a Denver Committee for the Defense of the Wagner Act together with the city Trades and Labor Assembly and Grace Community Church.

John M. Sherwood, international secretary of the union, spoke for Denver CIO workers, pointing out the dangers to all organized labor and all progressives if the act is amended and calling for united action in its defense.

THREE-POINT PROGRAM

Sherwood presented the committee with a three-point program for saving the act, outlined on these bases:

1. No amendments to the act of any kind.

2. No changes in the personnel of the Natl. Labor Relations Board that administers the act.

3. Adequate appropriations to allow the Labor Board to carry out its work speedily and efficiently.

Strong support for the committee and the three-point program came from Wesley Johnson, Intl. Typographical Union, who spoke for Denver's AFL workers in defense of the act that, as he pointed out, has benefitted the AFL as much as it has the CIO.

DEFENSE AGAINST FASCISM

Aaron W. Warner, regional director for the Board, spoke at the first meeting on "Labor's Right to Organize," explaining how the Labor Act made effective the democratic rights of workers to organize in unions of their own choice.

Speaking for Grace Community Church, Ray. N. Studt declared that the Wagner Act, backed by a militant and progressive labor movement, was "the first line of defense against fascist forces in the United States."

The newly formed committee will take on the job of involving all labor and other progressive forces in Denver in a militant campaign to save the Wagner Act from emasculation.

San Francisco Tory Group Folds Up

San Francisco, Feb. 25. — Unmourned and unsung, one of the nation's most bitterly anti-labor organizations, the San Francisco Industrial Association, has passed out of existence.

After 18 years of trying to break the strength of labor, the organization died a complete failure with unions in the Golden Gate city stronger than ever before.

Its successor is the Employers Council, which professes to deal with labor rather than to break it.

USED SPIES

The Association had led the employers' attack against the maritime unions in 1934, and again in 1936 and 1937. Found by the La-Follette committee to have maintained an elaborate spy system, it spread "ghost town" propaganda against the unions and accused them of ruining the city.

CIO leaders held significant the remarks of Almon E. Roth, president of the new Employers Council, who told a management conference in Chicago recently that San Francisco "is far ahead of most of the cities of this country in its progress toward stability in labor relations."

"FENCES SOLID"

A CIO spokesman expressed the hope that the new organization "will recognize the unions and collective bargaining as things here to stay . . . but we have no illusions. We face the new group not only with the hope of better relations but with the determination to keep our fences solid."

CIO, AFL Locals Uniting Against Tory Attack

(See Stories Pages Five and Six)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 — The workers throughout the United States are uniting against Tory attacks on the Wagner Act.

Despite the action of some reactionary leaders of the American Federation of Labor, members of AFL unions are determined to save Labor's "Magna Charta" from destruction, reports reaching Washington reveal.

By the time the various bills calling for amendments to the Act come up for Congressional hearing, labor will be prepared with a strong united front to ward off the industrialists' stabs at the Act, it was predicted here.

New developments this week include:

1. Formation of an AFL-CIO committee in Denver, Colo., pledged to fight against any amendments.

2. Action of a five-county AFL conference in California, which refused to follow the war declared by Pres. William Green on the Act, and called for no changes.

3. A sharp letter written by Pres. Whitney of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen (independent) to Green, denying that the nation's railway workers will follow the AFL craft leaders tory crusade.

4. Stands in favor of the Act as it now exists, taken by CIO councils in Philadelphia, Trenton, N. J., and other major cities.

5. Revelation that amendment of the Act would cut to a dribble the flow of checks paid out to workers under Labor Board orders during the last three years—estimated at over one million dollars.

Oil Workers On the Job!

Fort Worth, Tex., Feb. 25—CIO oil workers here, members of Local 208 of the Oil Workers Intl. Union, have been doing their duty in the defense of the Wagner Act.

The local reports in the latest issue of the international's edition of THE CIO NEWS that every one of its members has sent post-cards to their Congressmen and Senators demanding that the Act be left alone, and opposing any and all amendments.

Desert Auto Union Disrupters

Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, welcomes Charles E. Madden (left)and Loren Houser of the union's executive board after they withdrew from Homer Martin's rump movement. Only three of the 24 board members are still in the ex-president's camp, while almost all the union's membership has gone on record to support the CIO.

Baby, 1 Day Old, Proud of Card In CIO Union

New York, Feb. 25. — Baby Tieman, week-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Tieman, today celebrated the seventh-day anniversary of his initiation into the CIO, and proclaimed to all who would listen that he is still the youngest union member in the nation.

His father, a member of the City Hospitals Local 128 of the State, County & Municipal Workers, and an employe at Harlem Hospital, paid the tot's initiation and dues as soon as he made his debut at Bellevue Hospital here.

Tieman explained that his baby could not yet sign his name to the membership application, but union officials gave him permission to sign for him.

Allies Desert Martin, Back CIO Auto Union

DETROIT, Feb. 25.—Homer Martin, repudiated automobile workers' president, took more set-backs this week in his attempt to split the workers in the industry away from the CIO and to herd them into a phoney union of his own.

Two more members of the UAWA international executive board left him and declared their support for the CIO and acting President R. J. Thomas—leaving him with three board members out of a total of 25.

John L. Lewis, president of the CIO, re-affirmed full CIO support for the UAW, its officers, and the legal convention called by the board for March 27 in Cleveland.

James B. Carey, CIO secretary, published a letter warning the auto worker and the public against Martin's attempt to put out a fake "United Automobile Worker", an imitation of the official organ of the UAW.

Locals of the UAW continued to pile up support for the International and the legal convention of March 27.

REPUDIATE MARTIN

The two board members, Loren Houser and Charles Madden, lined up against Martin in a joint statement which read in part:

"The Cleveland convention on March 27 of the UAW is the only convention which has been called in accordance with the constitution of the UAW.

"It was called in compliance with a request from Homer Martin. It was voted by 22 members of the international executive board. We were present at the board meeting when the Cleveland convention was called. We joined the others in voting for it.

"The calling of a convention for March 4 in Detroit has no standing under the constitution of the UAW because the board has already called the Cleveland convention. The calling of the March 4 convention is also illegal under the laws of the UAW because Martin has illegally suspended 15 board members. All his subsequent acts therefore also have the stamp of illegality."

FULL CIO SUPPORT

President Lewis's letter to R. J. Thomas, acting UAW head, reaffirms the stand taken by CIO Vice-President Hillman and Murray in supporting the Cleveland convention. The letter follows in full:

"As you know, Vice-Presidents Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman on behalf of the CIO have recently issued a letter to the members of the UAW definitely expressing the support of the CIO to the International Executive Board of the UAW and Acting-President R. J. Thomas and Secretary-Treasurer George Addes, in regard to the action which you have taken in calling the Cleveland convention for March 27.

LEGAL CONVENTION

"Your International Executive Board, pursuant to the terms of the constitution, has called a legal convention for March 27 to be held at Cleveland. The United Automobile Workers of America, as an autonomous international union controls and administers its own internal affairs pursuant to its constitution.

"Therefore, in answer to your specific questions, I beg to advise you that:

"1. The CIO and its affiliated national and international unions have already given and will continue to give full support to you, your associate international officers and the International Executive Board of the UAW, and

"2. The UAW has been chartered by the CIO and, under no circumstances, will any other organization which purports to intrude upon the jurisdiction of the UAW receive any charter from or be recognized by the CIO."

Carey's letter to Acting-President Thomas pointed out that Martin's attempt to publish a bogus "United Automobile Worker" was a trick that ought not to be allowed to fool anyone.

"I know that imitation is the sincerest form of flattery," Carey wrote, "but the imitation which Homer Martin is publishing is such a crude job that it shouldn't fool any auto worker.

"On one hand he has gone to court declaring the UAW is not affiliated with the CIO. But in his sheet he claims affiliation. The members of the UAW will know how to deal with such double-crossing.

"Meanwhile, I want to urge the UAW members to brand the bogus sheet for what it is. The only 'United Automobile Worker' which is authorized to claim affiliation with the CIO is the paper in which this letter appears. Accept no substitutes."

The score to date leaves Martin with little or nothing to go on in his attempts to destroy the United Automobile Workers. The executive board, with three exceptions, has left him. The CIO has put its full support behind the officers and the members of the union in their struggle to re-establish democracy in the international.

Ask Passage of $150,000,000 WPA Bill

Washington, Feb. 25—Enactment of President Roosevelt's request for an additional $150,000,000 appropriation for WPA was called for at a conference of leaders of United Federal Workers locals from seven eastern cities.

The conference, headed by Pres. Jacob Baker, was made up of delegates from New York, Philadelphia, Washington and four West Virginia cities. Resolutions called for no reduction in the WPA payroll and extension of civil service to all supervisory and administrative workers on WPA.

Sign Contract Or Face Trouble, Local Tells Armour

CHICAGO, Feb. 25. — The management of Armour & Co., largest of the nation's meat packers, was considering the blunt advice of Local 347, Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, to sign a union contract—or be responsible for "serious strife."

The letter, signed by the local's executive board, was sent to D. W. King, general superintendent of the company.

Pointing out that "you know full well" that the union has a majority of the members in the Armour plants, and has gained substantially since its Labor Board election victory last October, the letter offered this challenge:

"If you still choose to disregard the word of the Labor Board . . . if you are even unwilling to take our membership records as evidence of our majority, then we offer you this: you name the morning and come down to 43rd St. and Packers Ave., and we will march by you—all of the workers of Armour's who want you to sign a contract with the CIO.

"That should be conclusive enough proof."

The union's statement referred to Pres. Robert Cabell's declaration to the company's stockholders that he hoped to be able to clear up the labor situation during the year, that it's easy to accomplish.

EASILY FIXED

"Were the company to show half the reasonable attitude of cooperation that we employes express, Armuor's labor situation would long ago have been cleared up," the letter stated.

"Mr. King, the door is open to a peaceful settlement of the situation in Armour's. The whole matter is in your hands.

"The choice between peace and difficulty is yours to make."

The PWOC only last week won another round in its campaign for an Armour contract when workers at the Denver plant won a Labor Board poll by a 205-134 vote over an AFL union. The AFL figure was swelled by several straw bosses and clerks whom the company classed as "production employes" at the last minute, in the hope of defeating the CIO affiliate.

New York CIO Calls Confab On Wicks Bill, Wagner Act

NEW YORK, Feb. 24. — Urgent warning of dangers to all New York state labor is stressed in a call to an emergency conference on legislation sent out by the state Industrial Union Council here.

The call, signed by Allan S. Haywood, council head, and Gustave Strebel, secretary-treasurer, picks out the Wicks bill and the Walsh amendments to the Wagner Act as the principal threats to labor today.

The Wicks bill, designed to slap New York transit workers into civil service, would destroy gains won by the CIO Transport Workers Union by robbing the men of seniority, pay increases and other benefits gained after long union struggle, the letter declares.

DIRECT ATTACK

"The Walsh amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act now before the U. S. Senate represent a direct attack on all labor, CIO and AFL," Haywood's letter continues.

"Should Senator Walsh succeed in getting through these amendments, labor could readily be smashed."

The emergency conference was scheduled for Friday of this week, and will include presidents, secretaries and legislative chairmen of all CIO locals, joint boards and internationals in New York.

TO FIGHT CHANGES

New York—Led by Allan Haywood, CIO director, and Pres. Abram Flaxer of the State, County and Municipal Workers, 3,000 civil service union members will go to Albany to protest changes in the law that will cut wages.

Auto Local Backs CIO

Anderson, Ind., Feb. 25 — Local 146 of the United Automobile Workers has rescinded a former action and cast its lot with the official CIO union led by President R. J. Thomas.

The union's resolution accused Homer Martin of calling a dual convention, and voted to send delegates to the official convention in Cleveland on March 27. The action followed speeches by Samuel Sponseller and John Donald, CIO representatives.

Bank Crash — 1939 Style

Depositors in the closed Title Guarantee & Trust Co. in Jersey City line up to receive full payment on their deposits, up to $5,000—because of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., New Deal agency. Many are wondering how big shots in Jersey City got a secret tipoff which allowed them to withdraw about a million dollars from the bank a few hours before it closed up. Mayor Frank Hague is on the institution's board of directors.

Wages Up $160,000 In Shipyard Pact

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 25. — Wage increases amounting to $160,000 a year and improved conditions were won for more than 1,000 shipyard workers here last week when the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, CIO, signed a one-year contract with the Maryland Drydock Co., one of Baltimore's biggest repair yards.

The agreement is the outcome of a Natl. Labor Relations Board election won last December by the CIO shipbuilding union over the AFL by a huge majority. Previously, the yard had an agreement with the Baltimore Metal Trades Council, AFL, but 90 per cent of the workers went over to the CIO union.

The new contract provides for a reclassification of wages which gives the employes a pay increase averaging 11 per cent. Other benefits include a 40-hour week, time and a half and double time for overtime work, annual vacations with pay for all regular employes, equal division of work and seniority rights.

John Green, national president of the IUMSW, hailed the new agreement as the best collective bargaining contract won in the ship repair industry and significant of the rapid advance of the CIO shipyard union in yards throughout the country.

Elect Muster President Of Furniture Union

Jack Hochstadt of Boston was chosen secretary-treasurer, and four vice-presidents representing the four regions of the furniture industry were elected by the delegates. The vice-presidents are: Max Perlow of New York, representing the East; Walter Stewart of Rockford, Ill., for the Mid-West; Davis Spears of Fort Smith, Ark., for the South, and Ernest Marsh of Los Angeles, for the West.

Muster has been provisional president of the union since its formation. Emil Costello, provisional secretary-treasurer, withdrew his nomination for re-election because of the pressure of other activity in Wisconsin, where he is a member of the Legislature.

ADOPT CONSTITUTION

Outstanding business of the convention was the adoption of a constitution under which the CIO furniture workers can develop its organizational activities and provide for its rapidly growing membership.

Only little more than a year old, the UFW has increased its enrollment from 18,000 to 36,000 since its affiliation with the CIO in November, 1937.

Provisions were made for enlarging the executive board to about 21 members, including the president, secretary and four vice presidents. Ten of the board members will represent each of the ten districts of the union, and five or six will represent each of the separate branches of the industry.

Miners' Wage Parley Opens On March 14th

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—March will be a busy month in the affairs of the United Mine Workers as the deadline draws near for the renewal of agreements with both bituminous and anthracite operators.

Beginning March 14, representatives of the United Mine Workers and the bituminous coal operators will meet in joint conferences to negotiate a contract covering wages, hours and working conditions in the industry to replace the present Appalachian agreement which expires March 31.

POLICY COMMITTEE

Preceding the joint meetings, the international policy committee of the union will open conferences March 9, to draw up the points to be submitted and the policy to be followed in the negotiations. Pres. John L. Lewis will be chairman of these meetings which will be attended by representatives from all the union's bituminous districts.

On March 21, the Anthracite Tri-District convention will open, also in New York, to formulate wage demands to be presented to the joint conference with representatives of the anthracite operators for inclusion in the new agreement. The present anthracite contract expires April 30.

300 DELEGATES

Some 300 delegates representing more than 100,000 members in the three anthracite districts, one, seven and nine, in eastern Pennsylvania, will attend the convention.

UMW representatives at the joint bituminous conferences will be limited to those from districts covered by the Appalachian contract now in effect. After the terms of the new agreement are reached, each outlying district will hold separate district conferences with its operators to negotiate contracts, based upon the terms of the Appalachian agreement.

President John L. Lewis, who will lead negotiators of the United Mine Workers in parleys with coal operators next month.

Textile Union Ending 'Crisis' Pay Cuts

New York, Feb. 25—A 5 per cent general pay increase for 800 workers at Liberty Throwing Co. plants in two Pennsylvania towns was announced here today by Emil Rieve, director of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee.

The increase marks the first step in the union's campaign to restore silk and rayon wages to pre-recession levels, the CIO textile leader said, and is in line with the industry's steady business improvement.

ENTITLED TO RAISES

Workers who had suffered pay cuts when the industry nose-dived early last year are entitled to restoration of their wages, he added.

CIO Leader Hits Ban On Negro

Washington, Feb. 26 — John Brophy, national director of the CIO, joined with union leaders and progressive groups here in condemning the action of the Washington Board of Education in refusing a hall to Marion Anderson, Negro singer.

"It is an outrageous example of bigotry on the part of our school board officials," Brophy said. "As a citizen of Washington and as a member of the Labor movement I am amazed and indignant."

Miss Anderson, who has been praised by Toscanini as "the greatest living singer" was denied use of a public school hall for a concert after the notoriously reactionary DAR had refused the use of its auditorium.

Hearst Thugs Attack 17 In Chicago

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—Hearst gangsters went on a new rampage this week.

As a result, 17 persons, including striking members of the Chicago Newspaper Guild and curious bystanders, were injured—two of them so seriously they required hospital treatment.

Three of the thugs, and two Guildsmen, were arrested. All were later released by a city court judge.

The sluggers, armed with iron pipe, blackjacks, crank handles and other similar weapons, charged into a crowd watching the Guild's picket line from across the street.

BLOODY WOUNDS

Arthur Graviss, striking circulation branch manager, was released from the same hospital after seven stitches had been taken in his head.

John Malone, organizer for the CIO International Woodworkers of America, was smashed across the face with a rubber hose filled with lead shot. Malone was a spectator.

LED BY HEARSTLINGS

The thugs were led into the crowd by Edward Woods, general counsel for the two struck newspapers—the American and the Herald-Examiner, and by Walter Parker, Hearst circulation boss in Chicago.

Immediately after the bloody attack, H. R. Seller, representative of the American Newspaper Guild, said he would ask Sen. Robert LaFollette and Atty.-Gen. Frank Murphy to investigate.

Seller said:

"Never in the history of the American Newspaper Guild has there been such a daring and brutal display of viciousness as was witnessed in Chicago Saturday.

"Innocent citizens were beaten into unconsciousness because they dared to express even a slight interest in the Guild's strike against the Hearst newspapers. The mere fact that they even stopped to observe a picket line, and were attacked while they stood across the street from the Hearst plant shows how far barbarism will carry these newspapers.

"No citizen of Chicago or the United States will let this incident pass without protest. If Hearst continues such tactics, he may as well quit publishing in Chicago. Decent people want none of a paper which is tainted with blood."

TALK TO KELLY

Mayor Edward Kelly, seeking renomination as Democratic candidate in Chicago's primaries, and Police Commissioner Allman pledged "aboslute neutraltiy" by the police in the future, and admitted that the Guild's hands have been "amazingly clean" in the entire dispute.

The delegation turned over to Kelly and the commissioner the numbers of the policemen who had refused to arrest sluggers pointed out to them.

Textile Labor Protests Ruling on Basic Pay For Woolen Industry

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—With labor's four representatives dissenting, the wool industry committee recommended to Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews that he establish a 36c-an-hour minimum pay rate for workers in the industry.

The union members of the committee, representing the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, asked that a 40c rate be established—the highest minimum possible under the terms of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

FIRST COMMITTEE

The committee is the first appointed by Andrews which has submitted definite proposals to the administrators. Under the terms of the law, Andrews need not accept the committee's recommendations, which supposedly are based on the highest figure possible without cutting employment.

If Andrews accepts the recommendation, he will order public hearings, and then, order the minimum wage for the industry, basing his order both on the industry committee's findings and the testimony at the public hearing.

READY TO PROSECUTE

Meanwhile, the criminal section of the Fair Labor Standards Act seemed due for its first test in Boston, where a grand jury brought in an indictment charging Brown's Contract Stitching Co., Inc., with violation of the act.

The indictment was handed out at the request of the Department of Justice, which is empowered to handle the wage-hour division's criminal proceedings. The Justice attorneys had charged the company with "falsification" of its records.

The wage-hour division has filed a number of civil suits against violators in various parts of the nation, with many of them being settled by consent decrees in which the firms agree to abide by the act.

Some People Like Green!

Washington — Some people are pleased with William Green's attack on the New Deal—but they don't belong to unions!

A weekly business dope sheet sent to thousands of employers around the country notes that the AFL declaration sounds as though it came from a chamber of commerce. The statement, says this businessman's newsletter, very closely follows industry's attitude.

CIO In Bay State Shows Strength

By VAL BURATI

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 25 — The CIO unions of Massachusetts, in membership 150,000 strong and reporting a broadening scope of activities, girded for an uncompromising defense of the Wagner Act at the second annual convention here. They served notice they will tolerate no tampering with labor legislation.

A week prior to the convention Senator David I. Walsh (D., Mass.) in behalf of the American Federation of Labor and other reactionary interests filed amendments to the NLRB. The CIO promptly withdrew its invitation to Walsh to address the convention.

WALSH UNDER FIRE

He protested that sponsorship of the amendments did not necessarily mean he would vote for them. The quick action of the CIO here therefore had the effect of weakening the bills for amendments by forcing their sponsor to admit a doubt about them.

Walsh was attacked by speakers and resolutions. His position as a candidate for re-election in 1940 has been shaken inasmuch as he has needed the open support of labor in the past to supplement secret support from the vested interests.

SUPPORT CIO STAND

The CIO's position on the Wagner Act was bolstered by an address given by Msgr. Francis J. Haas of Catholic University at Our Lady of The Elms College in the suburbs of Springfield the same night CIO director John Brophy and national secretary James Carey were denouncing enemies of the act at the pre-convention rally.

Michael F. Widman, Jr., UMW, was re-elected president and Daniel Boyle, Leather Workers Association, secretary-treasurer. A resolution regretted the death of Pope Pius XI, as a "brother in arms."

Hitler, Mikado, Duce Rapped In Store Pact

New York, Feb. 25. — Bosses and workers in Parker's department store here were today agreed to boycott all fascist-made merchandise.

The store signed a contract with the Department Store Employes Union, CIO, which prohibits the management from buying or selling any products of Italy, Germany or Japan. The store also agreed not to discriminate in the hiring of any employe on the basis of race, color or creed.

Well-Earned Vacations

Millions of working people never knew what it was to have a real vacation before the last couple of years.

Yet before the CIO came along, few if any industrial workers could take a vacation except when they were unemployed, laid off or quit their jobs. As soon as they took time off for a vacation, their wages ceased. And how much of a vacation can anyone have without money?

To the CIO belongs the credit for winning paid vacations for American industrial workers. The right to have rest and recreation without any more financial worry than when working, is now written into hundreds of CIO contracts covering hundreds of thousands of workers.

The latest CIO union to win paid vacations is the Aluminum Workers of America. After two years of negotiations with the Aluminum Company of America, the union can proudly announce that the company has granted vacations with pay under a plan which involves more than 18,000 employes.

No people earn and deserve real vacations more than the men and women who do the hard work of the world in industry. They have always had them coming. But they never got them until the CIO began the organization of powerful industrial unions.

Congratulations, AWA! It took a strong union to win vacations; it'll take a strong union to keep them, and to win many other benefits which the workers have coming to them.

A Revealing Pamphlet

The Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation is seriously worried by the strength of the strike of the Oil Workers International Union at Tulsa, Okla.

Its worry is revealed in a propaganda pamphlet which it has gotten out about the strike. This is full of misrepresentation about the causes of the strike, which was really caused by the company's arbitrary anti-union attitude.

The pamphlet is much more revealing than the company thinks. Its efforts to instigate a back-to-work movement are testimony to the solid character of the strike.

Its claims that members of AFL craft unions are scabbing furnish the best possible argument for industrial unionism as represented by the Oil Workers International Union. The crafts are too weak to affect the outcome of the strike, but such union scabbery will convince every intelligent oil worker that craft division hurts his interests; and that if the oil workers are to win their just demands they need the strength that comes from unity in one strong industrial union.

Finally, a great part of the pamphlet is devoted to expressing concern over the fact that the whole CIO has been advised that the corporation's products are unfair, and that its D-X stations are being picketed.

This shows how worried the company is over the solidarity of the whole CIO with the striking oil workers. It is a reminder to all labor people and all friends of labor to keep up and extend their support of the oil workers and to remember that D-X Gasoline and Diamond 760 motor oils are unfair.

Labor's power is multiplied many times, if we continue to act on the basis that an injury to one union is the concern of all.

U. S. Officials See Danger In Tory Fight on Act

Washington—Executives of all administrative agencies of the New Deal are alarmed by the reactionary attack on the National Labor Relations Board.

The Federal Trade Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Securities and Exchange Commission see definite danger to themselves if Tory opponents of the NLRB succeed in the fight to "separate" its judicial and prosecution functions.

If that line of attack succeeds against the Labor Board, foes of the other agencies will soon be singing the same hymn of hate against SEC or FTC or ICC.

Little reconized is the fact that the Labor Board's activities, as established under the Wagner Act, are directly modeled on those of the Federal Trade Commission.

Setting Them Up

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Storm Over AFL

FEW issues have caused more excitement in labor ranks than the present campaign against the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

To millions of workers who have had a brief taste of freedom and democracy in industry, it seems that the fruits of this freedom are to be snatched from their lips.

They know that higher wages, shorter hours, vacations with pay and many other benefits have come to them through union organization. And they know the important part the Wagner act has played in making them free to organize.

The excitement is by no means confined to CIO ranks. AFL members have also made great gains under the act, and they are equally aroused by any threat against it.

These amendments are so close to everything that the big business enemies of the act have been demanding, that Green has everywhere been hailed as the bosses' best friend.

To emphasize this pro-employer and anti-union stand in regard to the Wagner Act, the AFL Executive Council adopted a statement attacking the New Deal which business dopesheets have hailed as reading "like a chamber of commerce resolution."

All of this has fallen like a bombshell on the membership of the AFL and caused widespread consternation.

Council Division

Members of the Executive Council itself protested sharply against the Walsh-Green amendments. The amendments were endorsed only by a majority of two, it is reported, though a later unanimous vote was taken to preserve an appearance of unity before the outside world.

The compulsory craft unit amendment caused the most trouble in the council. No matter how much some of them hate the CIO and would use any stick to beat it, many AFL leaders also know that compulsory craft division would destroy their own unions where they are organized on a plant basis.

Reports of the National Labor Relations Board show that since the inception of the act, AFL unions have requested or agreed to some form of industrial unit in 173 cases, as compared to 84 cases in which they requested craft units.

There are limits to what AFL leaders will do even to spite the CIO. And it remains to be seen how many of them will actually work for amendments that will undermine their own unions.

Members Aroused

If division is sharp in the executive council it is far sharper throughout the AFL generally. Many international unions, state federations and other AFL bodies are already on record in support of the Wagner Act and against such amendments as Green proposes.

As for the rank and file, CIO headquarters have been swamped with communications from AFL members expressing their indignation and disgust at Green's treachery to labor. "Judas" is one of the mildest of the names he is called for leading the attack on the Wagner Act.

The whole CIO membership is more aroused over this than over any previous legislative campaign. And significantly, in city after city and state after state, AFL unions are uniting with CIO unions in committees and other activities to defend the Wagner Act.

Unwittingly, Green is thus furthering the very labor unity which he has previously done so much to destroy. For defense of the Wagner Act is one issue on which all bona fide unionists, regardless of affiliation, can most readily unite.

Another Maneuver?

This revolt within the AFL is already having its effect. There are rumors that the AFL leaders may withdraw the hated Walsh amendments, and try to achieve the same results by more roundabout methods.

According to these rumors, Green may move instead to repeal the present Wagner act and to re-enact it with a new five-member National Labor Relations Board and with some but not all of the changes at present embodied in the Walsh amendments.

Compulsory craft division would still be included under this proposal. So would changes to prevent the Board from nullifying contracts which are the fruit of collusion with employers against the wishes of the majority of the workers.

An attempt would then be made to have a new Board appointed which would be packed against industrial unionism, and through which Green would seek to get other results aimed at in[illegible] Walsh amendments.

Don't Weaken

One of the purposes of the reports which have been put out on such a possible change of tactics is to allay the storm of opposition which has been aroused by the Walsh amendments.

But labor people and other friends of the Wagner Act will be foolish indeed if they allow their opposition to weaken on this account. The Walsh amendments are still before Congress and there is danger of their adoption if an even more strenuous fight is not put up against them. And in any case the proposed substitute would be fully as dangerous to labor.

Defend The Wagner Act

Railway Men Like Act As Is, Green Informed

CLEVELAND, Feb. 25.—The Wagner Act is emphatically the business of the Railroad Trainmen, A. F. Whitney, Brotherhood president, has told William Green of the AFL, and the Brotherhood will continue to defend it against all attempts at crippling amendments.

President Green got this information from Whitney in response to a letter criticizing the Brotherhood for its interest in the Act and making veiled threats of Executive Council action against the trainmen.

Green's threats were prompted by a letter of Whitney to Ed. McGrady of RCA, in which Whitney contradicted McGrady's statement that all the railroad brotherhoods were in favor of amending the Wagner Act.

VITALLY CONCERNED

In his reply, Whitney repudiated Green on every point. "In the first place," he said, "we represent workers who come under the terms of the Natl. Labor Relations Act; and secondly, we consider it a vital part of our business to be concerned with legislation that so vitally affects the welfare of working men and women that you once declared it to be 'Labor's Magna Charta.'"

Whitney's reply to Green made his position on the Act very clear, and stated the reasons for opposition to changes.

"Briefly, my position on the question of amendments to the Wagner Labor Act is this: That Act has freed working men and women from past tyrannical trespasses upon labor's legal and moral rights. Employers are no longer free, by the use of spies and lying propaganda, to destroy labor's democratic rights to organize.

"A believer in democracy and fairness might well deplore the necessity is real, and ever since its enactment those wrong-doers against whom the Act was directed have tried by fair means and foul to render it futile and barren of effect."

REGRETS DIFFERENCES

Answering Green's accusing remarks that the AFL had supported the Railway Labor Act, and therefore the Trainmen should automatically support everything the AFL Executive Council proposes, Whitney wrote:

"It is appropriate here to point out, however, that in 1934 when this Brotherhood was putting up a staunch fight to prevent an open-shop provision in amendments to the Railway Labor Act, we had no support from the AFL, although that fact did not persuade me to say that the AFL 'was in direct opposition to the legislative policies' of the Brotherhood of Trainmen.

"I regret that it sometimes becomes necessary for us to differ on legislative policies, but I assure you that we propose to continue to fight proposals that threaten the destruction of labor's Magna Charta by exposing it to its enemies through the process of opening it up to amendments."

Jersey Council May Invite Sen. Wagner

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 25. — The Central Jersey Industrial Union Council may invite Sen. Robert Wagner to a mass meeting planned to show labor's stand in defense of the law which bears the veteran New York liberal's name.

Pres. Clarence Martin, in announcing the Council's aims, said:

"I expect, and each worker in industrial plants expects, that all of the laboring class of America will resist to the last ditch any effort to change this law.

"For the entire period of American history labor has had the short end of a 75-25 deal. With the protection of this law, we can at last wage an even fight for the welfare of labor."

Philly CIO Fears Strike From Changes

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 25— Under the terms of the proposed amendments to the Wagner Act, employers can by trickery legally defeat the aims of unionization, and place one union in the position of fighting another, the CIO Council here declared in a recent statement.

With the Labor Act facing attacks on two fronts, since the AFL has joined hands with anti-labor employers, the Council warned that collective bargaining and wage and hour regulations are jeopardized.

What Are You Doing?

Now is the time for every true unionist to come to the help of his union, and to defend the conditions which his union has won for him and his family.

The Wagner labor relations act, which is the charter of our union rights, is in danger. Are you doing all you can to defend it?

* * *

Ask yourself these questions:

1. Have you written to your Congressman and Senators telling them you are opposed to all amendments to the Wagner Act?

2. Has your union adopted a resolution to this effect and let Congress and the whole world know about it?

3. Have you circulated the pamphlets and leaflets of the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League about the Wagner Act to everyone within reach?

4. Have you helped to organize committees and mass meetings in defense of the Wagner Act?

5. What steps are you taking to draw AFL and fraternal organizations into our common fight, and to show them that their interests are also threatened by the present campaign against the Wagner Act?

* * *

If you can't give a satisfactory answer to these questions, it's time to get busy until you can.

The Wagner Act protects YOU. It's up to you to protect it NOW!

Labor's League Prints Pamphlet On Act

Washington, Feb. 25.—Using the slogan, "Stop Congress from cutting wages!" Labor's Non-Partisan League has put the reasons why workers should oppose all attempts to amend the Wagner Act into a short, snappy leaflet designed for general distribution.

"Your Senators and Congressmen in Washington are being asked to cut your wages," the leaflet reads. "They have already slashed the WPA relief appropriation, in spite of President Roosevelt's plea for the millions of unemployed. Congress now intends to deal with the employed workers. Your turn is next."

The leaflet praises the Wagner Act as an aid in raising wages through legalizing the workers' right to join unions, and warns against indifference on the part of workers and progressives to this attack on living standards.

"If you want lower wages and longer hours, then all you have to do is to sit still and say nothing. But if you want to protect your wages and working conditions, you'll have to get busy," it says.

"Labor is being savagely attacked in Washington. Will you defend yourself?"

Steel Lodges Support Act

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 25 — Tampering with the Wagner Labor Act that might jeopardize its effectiveness was condemned by presidents of 29 Steel Workers Organizing Committee lodges meeting here.

The union leaders commended the Act, and praised the National Labor Relations Board for its administration of the law.

Discuss Farm-Labor Problems

Locals In AFL Join Drive

SAN MATEO, Calif., Feb. 25.—Official representatives of AFL unions in five California counties were on record today to preserve the Wagner Act from the amendments offered by the federation's executive council.

The representatives, numbering 80 in all, were attending the Five Counties Legislative Conference, provision for which was made at the annual convention of the state's federation of labor.

SUPPORT NEW DEAL

Locals in San Mateo, Santa Clara, San Benito, Monterey and Santa Cruz counties sent delegates to the meeting. E. J. Davis, business agent of the Santa Clara County Central Labor Council, presided.

Other actions taken by the group called for support of Gov. Olson's New Deal program—Pres. William Green of the AFL had endorsed Olson's Tory opponent—and for resumption of unity negotiations between AFL and CIO.

AFL Members In Opposition To Green

Washington — Letters reaching The CIO NEWS from members of AFL unions indicate wide distrust of the policies of Pres. Green and the executive council.

An AFL worker from Brooklyn sent a copy of the following telegram, which had been sent to Green during the AFL council's annual session at Miami, Fla.

"Judas betrayed Christ for several pieces of genuine silver. How much less than a counterfeit continental will you accept to smash the NLRB and sell the epochal gains of labor under Roosevelt to Girdler, Rand, Weir, Ford, Burke of Nebraska and Hoffman of Michigan?

"May the National Association of Manufacturers reward you deservingly."

STEAMFITTERS FOR ACT

An AFL steamfitter from Oakland, Calif., declares that "not more than 10% of all AFL trades locals are in favor of William Green's proposed amendments to the Wagner Act."

"Common complaint among the AFL's membership," he adds, is that "William Green has never consulted the federation's membership before assuming an opinion for the membership's majority on any issue.

"AFL members in my particular local consistently refuse to sanction any proposal — of which there have been several — that may be classified or interpreted as indicating strife between themselves and members of the CIO."

Millions Paid Out Under Wagner Act

See Amendments As Bar to Big Cash Payments to Workers

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—John Doe, a typical American worker, was fired for union activity.

A few weeks or a few months later he got his job back, and all the wages he lost.

Checks for $100; for $500; for $1,000; even for $5,000—these have been pouring in a steady stream to John Does in every section of the country—to CIO steel and maritime workers; to AFL carpenters and truck drivers; to railway trainmen.

These checks, needless to say, are a direct result of the Wagner Act and the National Labor Relations Board.

The total amount paid out by anti-union employers who have been forced to toe the line of the federal labor law is difficult to estimate. Some put the figure at a million dollars. Others believe that these workers have received two million, or even more.

But one thing is certain—if the Wagner Act is amended so that the National Labor Relations Board gets tied up in the delays and red tape of our court system, that stream of funds for union workers will dry up while the ink is still wet on the printer's copy of the amended bill.

Who will suffer? AFL and CIO and railway brotherhood members, and workers who try to organize the open shop plants in which they are employed.

$551,183.88 PAID OUT

A hasty check on cases in which the courts have taken action to enforce the NLRB's orders show a total of $551,183.88 paid out to workers.

Another $108,612.70 was paid out by firms which complied with Labor Board orders before court action was necessary.

That is, a total of $551,183.88 paid out to workers under direct orders of the Labor Board itself.

SCORES OF SETTLEMENTS

But an even greater amount went into workers' savings accounts as the result of activities of regional directors of the NLRB, who have brought about settlement of cases before formal Board action was necessary.

A recent sampling of cases so handled — only 744 cases were included in the sample—showed that $271,123.08 had been paid out.

AFL MEMBERS BENEFITTED

Interestingly enough, a majority of the cases affected AFL unions, though more CIO members were involved than AFL workers. Of the total amount thus paid out, $175,000 went to CIO people and $95,000 to AFL unionists.

Some of the amounts involved in these "back pay" cases have been truly staggering. Workers in the Tennessee Coal & Iron Railroad Co. plant in Alabama received more than $100,000. The Carlisle Lumber case, involving 147 workers, resulted in the payment of $200,000.

LOTS OF CASH

Two hundred fifty three employes of the National Tea Co. in Chicago received $51,000. Forty members of the AFL carpenters union in Arkansas were paid $25,000 by the Crosset Lumber Co.

Borden's Milk Co. in New York City had to write checks for $35,000 to member of the AFL's Brotherhood of Teamsters. Five workers at the Consolidated Edison Co. in New York — their case went to the Supreme Court — will have received about $5,000.

FIGHT AGAINST WORKERS

Clear evidence that the top leadership of the AFL is acting against the interests of its own membership can be found in the history of the back pay cases.

The Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; Matthew Woll's photo-engravers; the paper and sulphite workers; Big Bill Hutcheson's carpenter's; the Brotherhood of Teamsters; the Intl. Association of Machinists and the brick and clay workers — all of them have won major benefits through the operations of the National Labor Relations Board.

MEMBERS OPPOSE CHANGES

Obviously, all workers, regardless of their union affiliation, are going to be holding the bag if the AFL-Chamber of Commerce united front destroys the Wagner Act.

In the AFL as well as in the CIO, thousands of workers are preparing to fight this reactionary bloc which uses fancy language to conceal selfish hositility to the organization of the unorganized in industrial unions.

Just a Sample—

How the Wagner Act Aids Labor

Following are a few of the back pay awards made by the National Labor Relations Board:

Affiliation	Union	Place	Amount
AFL	Teamsters	Boston	$ 850
AFL	Teamsters	New York	35,000
CIO	Rubber	Philadelphia	7,560
AFL	Machinists	Erie, Pa.	1,612
AFL	Machinists	Pittsburgh	9,689
AFL	Paper	Cincinnati	8,000
CIO	Smelter	Michigan	13,500
CIO	Tea Workers	Chicago	51,000
CIO	Metal Miners	Duluth	33,000
AFL	Brick & Clay	Ohio	7,000
CIO	Carpenters	Arkansas	25,000
CIO	Newspaper	Seattle	32,997
CIO	Technicians	Chicago	7,945

Proof of the Pudding

Just a few of the hundreds of checks which have poured out to American workers as a result of National Labor Relations Board orders or agreements. At top: certified check for over $3,000 sent to the National Maritime Union for a group of tank seamen on the Great Lakes. At right: checks sent by the Consolidated Edison Co. to six employes following Supreme Court action upholding an NLRB decision.

Your WPA Job

By Ralph Hetzel, Jr.
CIO Unemployment Director

The attack on WPA by Congressional Tories takes several forms.

There are very few Congressmen or Senators who dare openly to advocate abolition of WPA. They know that their constituents would not stand for an open attack. So the attacks take the form of, for example, cuts in appropriations, crippling amendments attached to appropriations bills, bills pretending to reform the WPA but actually destroying it, and so on. All manner of back-room devices are being used.

FEAR THE PUBLIC

The most serious attack at the present time is the refusal of the House Appropriations Committee to consider the President's request for an additional $150,000,000 to continue the WPA on a more adequate basis until the end of June.

This device has the same purpose as the maneuver in the House to prevent a record vote on the President's original request of $875,000,000 — it saves Congressmen from the necessity of facing the issue publicly. The Tories are afraid that if they are forced to act in the open most Congressmen would not dare to refuse the added appropriation.

"REFORMING" WPA

A second, and more subtle, form of attack is exemplified in the Woodrum Bill to "reform" the WPA.

This Bill seeks to set up State work relief administrations and would return the whole program to the states. The amounts proposed under this bill would be so inadequate that the effect would be, destroy the WPA and to force the States to return most of the people now on WPA, to direct relief.

Another type of "reform" that is being proposed would provide merely for a construction type of works program. Such a program in itself is inadequate to take care of all of the needy unemployed who have been engaged in the present program and would destroy many of the most valuable features of the WPA.

CIO's PROGRAM

The CIO has stated its belief in the necessity for a unified and expanded public works program and has given the principles upon which it believes such a program should be founded. It might be well to restate them here:

"The Congress should authorize a program of public works for a period of not less than two years. Such a program should be large enough to provide jobs to all unemployed who are able and willing to work.

"Such a program should be administered under one direction and should include such work as is now being done under both the WPA & PWA.

"The prinicples upon which such a program should be operated are as follows:

FOUR PRINCIPLES

"(1) All workers should be employed on work suited to their needs and skills.

"(2) Projects should be socially necessary and productive. For example, housing slum clearance, flood control, building of schools and hospitals, health measures, cultural and white collar projects, and vocational training.

"(3) Jobs should be given to those who need jobs, without requiring honest, decent, unemployed workers to degrade themselves as paupers. Those working short time in industry should be given at least enough supplemental work to bring their income up to an American standard.

"(4) The funds for this program should be so appropriated as to make possible the meeting of current needs wherever and whenever they arise."

EMBARRASSED

Virginians please note: Robert Allen and Drew Pearson reported in their newspaper column last week that Senator Glass, of Virginia, remarked testily during the recent Senate Appropriations hearings which slashed WPA funds, that: "In my opinion the fact that a man is on WPA is prima facie evidence that he is incompetent."

Even the Republican members of the Committee protested against the remark and within half an hour after the record appeared Senator Glass hastily recalled copies and expunged the remark before any of his "incompetent" Virginia constituents could see it.

NEW HOMES FOR OLD

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing.

By THOMAS HUMPHRIES

A new Wagner-Steagall Housing Bill is before Congress! The bill provides for an additional $800,000,000 to be loaned to local housing authorities by the United States Housing Authority.

Since the USHA's first $800,000,000 has already been gobbled up by some 75 cities and towns, the need for more funds is pressing. Scores upon scores of communities have not yet been able to receive a cent of housing funds from the USHA. Those which were quick enough to get a little money haven't hardly enough.

The passage of this bill is of vital importance to the CIO and the entire labor movement.

CIO AT BAT

For a while it seemed that there would be no slum clearance and low-rent housing whatsoever in Reading. The bankers with investments in Reading's slums did a beautiful job of string-pulling. Practically every business group in town lodged a protest with the Reading Council against signing a contract for USHA funds.

Then labor got on the job. The CIO, in cooperation with the local AFL unions and the Workers Alliance, jammed the Council chambers and presented unbeatable arguments in favor of getting USHA housing projects.

It was a merry fight and a long one, but in the end labor was victorious. . . .

BATTLE AT BETHLEHEM

Having knocked out a winning home run at Reading, the CIO is now going to bat in the important steel town of Bethlehem.

Last year the Bethlehem Housing Authority secured an earmarking for $1,000,000 from the USHA. Strangely enough, however, nothing was done to draw up plans and get this promised million.

If the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and Regional CIO Director John Edelman hadn't been on the job, City Council and the Bethlehem Housing Authority might have let this million slip right through their fingers.

But luckily they were on the job. A labor delegation—representing all labor groups in Bethlehem—called upon the Mayor. Meetings were held. Plans have been laid for a city-wide housing conference on March 4th.

If this conference is a success—as it undoubtedly will be—the slums will soon be disappearing in Bethlehem and new, well-built, well-ventilated and healthy housing projects will be rising from the ground.

LEAGUE IS BUSY

In South Bend, Indiana, for instance, the League is trying to have a housing authority created. In McKeesport a city-wide meeting has been called for March 3 to consider housing and other civic matters.

Housing activity by the League is especially valuable. To quote "Labor's Program for Better Housing" (issued by the CIO):

"Housing is a prime political issue. . . . A well-worked out housing plank will often be of great asistance in electing union men to office. . . . A labor candidate who has a good housing record will better be able to win the valuable support of professional people and progressive business men."

Hospital Drive Gets Public Aid

New York, Feb. 25—The campaign for higher wages for city hospital workers in New York, being conducted by Local 128 of the State, County and Municipal Workers, won support from prominent figures in the city's life today.

Rev. John Haynes Holmes, Rep. Vito Marcantonio, City Councilmen Louis Hollander and Michael Quill, and former State Assemblyman Nathaniel Minkoff, all promised to aid the union's drive.

Rev. Holmes praised the union for its decision to bar strikes as a weapon in its drive, pointing out that "your work is a public service, closely related to critical aspects of life and death, and emphasizes the intelligence and noble spirit of your action. I congratulate you all."

Plan Steel Meeting In Nova Scotia

By MIKE RYAN

Amherst, N. S., Feb. 25 — A conference of representatives of all steelworkers in Canada will be held here March 3, it was decided at a meeting held in Sydney recently when Sydney and Trenton steelworkers met with Silby Barrett, Regional Director of the Steelworkers Organization Committee.

The conference will be in an effort to procure closer unity of Canadian steelworkers without disturbing international affiliations.

TO ORGANIZE STEEL

The meeting will attempt to organize Canadian steel unions, all of which will be notified of the forthcoming conference, to further Canadian autonomy without infringing on, as in the case of the Sydney and Trenton workers, the function of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Regional Director Barrett said he would invite Philip Murray, chairman of the Steelworkers Organization Committee, to act as chairman of the Amherst meeting.

Present at the Sydney gathering when decision to call the conference was reached were the executive of the Sydney Lodge of the Steelworkers Organization Committee headed by President Carl Neville and President Hugh Ryan and Recording Secretary Alex Neal of the Trenton Lodge.

Freedom of Press No License For Slander, Lewis Says

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — "The CIO believes that freedom of the press does not mean license for publishers to bias the news against the common people," Pres. John L. Lewis declares in a Symposium on Freedom of the Press, issued by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The booklet contains statements by 120 "representative Americans" which were written for the paper when it published its sixtieth anniversary edition last December.

Most of the discussion in the symposium was based on a message from Pres. Roosevelt, who warned that if the business-office counting room is to edit a newspaper, that paper cannot then "be edited in the interests of the general public."

Sidney Hillman, CIO vice-president and head of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers ,also has a piece in the discussion. "The time has come," Hillman writes, "when we must give consideration to means for assuring the existence of a press that is free in the economic as well as in the legal sense."

LEWIS'S STATEMENT

Lewis's statement in full:

"The CIO is firmly on record for the freedom of the press, which we regard as the cornerstone of democracy.

"The CIO and the working people generally believe that integrity of the news is essential to the real freedom of the press. This has been recognized and stated again and again by the American Newspaper Guild, representing the organized working newspaper men.

SLANDER CAMPAIGN

"Recently, however, the CIO has been subjected to misrepresentation and calumny in much of the public press. This has caused deep resentment among our membership throughout the country. Our people feel that the bias thus shown recently in the press reflects industrial connections of the policy-making groups which control the press and which have frequently displayed an anti-labor attitude.

"The CIO believes that freedom of the press does not mean license for publishers to bias the news against the common people. The CIO believes that freedom of the press does not mean immunity from the law of the land which gives the right of collective bargaining free from interference by employers. The CIO believes that freedom of the press does not mean the right to serve only those interests which can pay for large advertisements.

LABOR'S OWN PRESS

"The CIO believes that freedom of the press involves the right of all opinions to be fairly expressed — the right of the majority opinion to appear in the agencies of public information as the majority opinion.

"There is a growing conviction among labor and progressive forces in America that it is necessary for the common people to develop a press of their own—a press which can really express the aims and aspirations of the great majority of the people in this democracy."

Metal Miners Win Victory In Tennessee

Ducktown, Tenn., Feb. 25—CIO workers in the Copper Basin here have won a major victory in a long struggle with the Tennessee Copper Co., which with its predecessor opposed union organization of the workers over a period of years.

The victory came with Labor Board certification of the CIO International Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers as representative of a majority of all employes in the Copperhill plant.

Before this, the employers in the Ducktown basin had used almost every trick in the bag against union organization, including wholesale firings of union members.

The company has agreed to accept the Board decision, and organizing drives are going ahead in the area with renewed impetus.

AUTO CONVENTION

Cleveland—The convention of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, will meet at the Hotel Hollenden here on March 27, according to an announcement by Board Members Reisinger and Miley, in charge of arrangements.

DuPont Program Hails Pinkertons; Forgets About Finks and Spies!

NEW YORK, Feb. 25. (FP)—Radio listeners from coast to coast were shocked to hear a dramatization of Allan Pinkerton on the duPont program, Cavalcade of America.

Since Pinkertons were first used to break a miners' strike in Illinois in 1866, workers everywhere have hated the "murderous Pinkerton men." DuPont interests control General Motors, which hired Pinkertons to try to break the United Automobile Workers and paid the "Pinks" more than $400,000 from 1934 to 1936.

Of all the immigrants to America boasted the duPont announcer, none contributed more to our country than Allan Pinkerton. The radio play chronicled Allan's supposed exploits up to 1861—when a Pinkerton man was said to have saved Abraham Lincoln's life—and carefully ended there, five years before Allan made strikebreaking his profession.

EVERYTHING BUT

A humorous slant on this program was afforded by a radio executive of Barton, Batton, Durstine & Osborn, advertising agency which handles the duPont account and is responsible for the Pinkerton script. "In the Cavalcade of America series we dramatize the life of some persons famous in American history," he said. "And in order not to offend any of the radio audience, we never mention anything to do with war, peace, class struggle, labor or religion."

The duPont-sponsored program omitted the fact that in recent years Pinkertons have spied for many big companies, including General Motors, Libbey-Owens-Ford, Montgomery Ward, Bethlehem Steel, Campbell Soup, Continental can and Curtis Publishing; and the Pinkerton slogan is "85 years under four generations of one family—an important business auxiliary."

FIGHT TORY BILL

Madison, Wis., Feb. 25—CIO and AFL unionists joined here to fight a bill claimed by its Tory backers as a means of winning prosperity, but actually designed to cut wage standards.

Labor School Ends Biggest Session

Monteagle, Tenn., Feb. 25. — Student workers from ten national and international unions, six of them CIO organizations, concluded their course at the Highlander Folk School as the annual winter term for resident students drew to a close here last week. It was the largest resident session in the history of the school, 27 students completing the term.

All active members of the labor movement, they came from nine southern states extending from Virginia to Texas. Six were presidents of their locals and eight others held various union offices.

TWOC SENT SEVEN

Two CIO unions, the Textile Workers Organizing Committee and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, had the largest representations, with seven students coming from TWOC and five from the ACW.

Other CIO unions represented were the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, the United Cannery, Agriculture, Packing & Allied Workers, United Rubber Workers, and Intl. Oil Workers.

Million Kids Get Lunches From WPA

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—If you were a hungry kid back in your school days you will read between these lines with an understanding heart.

When you read that more than 1,000,000 children have been fed by the WPA school lunch project, you will see, not statistics, but a million pale little faces brightening at the sight of bowls of steaming soup or dishes of meat and vegetable stew.

When you read that on every school day since 1935 an average of 700,000 meals have been served to some 10,000 public and parochial schools of the country by men and women who are themselves in need, you will know the full import of that statement.

130,000,000 MEALS

Over 130,000,000 meals have been served to date to school children by the WPA. They have added strength-giving weight and vitality to undernourished bodies. They have sharpened wits grown dull from hunger.

They have increased class attendance as well as the general scholastic standing of the recipients. They have assisted in the development of good food habits which will last a lifetime.

The meals have been accompanied by training in table manners, essential to the proper social development of the child. They are not only carefully prepared, but are correctly served by the WPA aides who use the lunch room as a demonstration center.

"Seconds" are always forthcoming, for the children served are badly in need of nourishment. For many of them, the school lunch is the only hot meal they get. For some, it is the only thing in their day that can properly be called a "meal" at all.

FOR NEEDIEST

Since it is impossible to serve all the children in school with free lunches under this program, the neediest ones are selected — those whose weight is below par, who live in remote rural homes, or whose parents are known to be jobless or destitute.

The urgent need for school lunches was first made known by teachers who found in malnutrition an explanation of classroom failure—teachers who understood that a child's mind cannot absorb facts when his body is crying out for nourishment.

Through Parent-Teacher Associations and local Boards of Education the aid of the Works Progress Administration was obtained in setting up school lunch projects in almost every state in the Union. These projects have provided jobs for 12,000 needy women, most of them economic heads of their families.

SCIENTIFIC SUPERVISION

Supervisors trained in home economics and dietetics arrange menus, designed to overcome diet deficiencies at home. The typical lunch consists of meat and vegetable soup, or stew, bread and butter, and milk or cocoa. Sometimes a cooked desert or fruit is added.

Teachers in all schools where the WPA operates lunch projects report improvements in general health and gains in weight. In some schools, gains in weight have amounted to from two to five pounds a month per child—an eloquent commentary upon the condition of the children before these lunches came into their lives.

South Carolina, one of the states hardest hit by the depression, has the largest program, with the exception of New York State, where New York City alone serves about 87,000 lunches a day. During 1937, South Carolina served an average of 77,000 children daily in 2,300 schools.

Tennessee and West Virginia maintain extensive programs, and many other states are serving from ten to fifty thousand children a day.

WPA funds allocated for the projects are used to pay wages. Local funds are provided for food and equipment.

Kentucky CIO Asks G-Men For Harlan

Harlan, Ky., Feb. 25—Officials of the Kentucky Industrial Union Council, which had its convention here last week, today forwarded to the Department of Justice a request that it station several agents in the county to gather information for the department's new civil liberties bureau.

The requests was signed by the presidents of three districts of the United Mine Workers—William Turnblazer of Dist. 19, Ed Morgan of Dist. 23 and Sam Caddy of Dist. 30.

HAVE INFORMATION

The resolution noted that "certain information has reached us that an attempt will be made by certain ill-responsible people to deny the coal miners and their representatives their civil liberties in Harlan County.

"We are in possession of certain information that we deem valuable with reference to our civil liberties," it added. The data is to be turned over to Henry A. Schweinhaut at the earliest possible moment.

FILE CHARGES

San Francisco—Charges of discrimination against union members have been filed with the Labor Board against the American Can Co. here by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Boss Sees Gains From Dealing With Unions

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 25—Here's a boss who says: "We played ball with the unions and it worked to our advantage."

The Paraffine Co., makers of Pabco products, has just graduated 25 union men from their school on labor relations, taught by University of California instructors hired by the company. The school has the unions' o. k.

For two years the firm has had contract with 18 unions, both CIO and AFL, without one hour's trouble. H. W. von-Morpurgo, company official, said: "Some employers tell us we're foolish for building up what they call our worst enemy. But we don't look at it that way."

Hot Food For Hungry Tots

South Carolina school children get hot lunches at their school, thanks to WPA, which has been serving 77,000 children in 2,300 schools in that state alone. Tory Congressmen would like to end this kind of "boondoggling."

Aluminum Union Wins Quick Strike

Edgewater, N. J., Feb. 25.—Angered at an attempt of the Aluminum Co. of America to put over a new stagger system at its big plant here which would have changed the working schedule to inconvenient shifts, some 700 employes staged a stay-in strike which ended in victory after 39 hours.

The company announced that it would withdraw the stagger system for a month, pending negotiations.

Refusal of the company to meet a voluntary strikers committee forced the workers to turn to Local 16, Aluminum Workers of America, for aid. The CIO union took the matter to the Natl. Labor Relations Board at once, and conferences between representatives of the AWA and the company was arranged.

TO SEEK PACT

As a result of the negotiations an agreement was reached calling for an attempt at settlement within four weeks. If the dispute is not settled by then, the issue is to be submitted to arbitration.

Union representatives at the negotiations were AWA President N. A. Zonarich, Vice-President W. B. Gravatt, Louis Petrigni, organizer, and James Bellamo, shop steward.

At the close of a mass meeting held after the strike was won, a long line of former members of the "Independent" union joined the AWA. President Zonarich hailed the strike as "a grand victory for the workers."

Woodworkers OK Peace Offer In California

WESTWOOD, Calif., Feb. 25.—Governor Olson's proposal for settling the labor dispute at the big plant of the Red River Lumber Co. by an immediate restoration of the 17½% wage cut made last July, reinstatement of some 25 CIO workers driven out of Westwood by vigilantes, and a Labor Board election within 30 days, has been accepted by the CIO union here, an affiliate of the Intl. Woodworkers of America.

AFL representatives, however, said at the conference where the proposal was made that they would not accept it without a vote of their membership, which is now being taken.

EMPLOYERS SNUB ORDER

As for the employers, they have not yet agreed to restoration of the 17½ per cent cut, and CIO workers say they have shown no signs of complying with the Natl. Labor Relation Board's order made in October to cease interfering with the CIO Woodworkers.

In accepting the proposal, the CIO union made it plain that it agreed to the election within 30 days, only if the other terms were first put into effect.

The Board had previously stated that it would not hold an election before 60 days because a fair poll could not be held in the vigilante atmosphere prevailing in Westwood. The AFL and the company had demanded an immediate election.

Fake Union Must Return Back 'Dues'

Washington, Feb. 25.—The Mt. Vernon, Ill., Car Manufacturing Co. must discontinue its closed shop contract with an AFL-chartered company union and return to the workers all money taken from the workers under a check-off clause of the void contract, the National Labor Relations Board has ruled.

At the same time, the company was ordered to stop discouraging membership in the CIO Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers, and to reinstate with "remedial wages" 76 men who had been fired for union activities.

The company evaded bargaining with the CIO affiliate, even when that union obviously had a majority of the plant's several hundred workers in its membership, the Board added.

CIO AND AFL TO CONFER AT PRESIDENT'S REQUEST

Labor Stalls War On Wagner Act

Hearings Postponed In Senate

Washington, Mar. 4. — Sen. Elbert Thomas, chairman of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, announced that hearings on the Wagner Act amendments, scheduled for March 10, have been postponed indefinitely.

He said the postponement resulted from Pres. Roosevelt's unity plea to the CIO and the AFL.

Meanwhile, Sen. David Walsh, sponsor of the AFL's proposed amendments, admitted to the general executive board of the United Shoe Workers that he had scarcely read the Senate Bill (1000) which bears his name.

UNCERTAIN

He confessed that he has not yet made up his mind to support changes in the Act, and said that a large number of AFL unions have written him protests against amendments.

1. Opposition to the amendments from two AFL international unions — the Intl. Assn. of Machnists and the Pattern Makers League — both of which wrote sharp letters to Pres. William Green condemning his actions.

CITY GROUPS

2. Letters from the president of the AFL's city legislative committee in Cheyenne, Wyoming, to Senators Burke and Walsh, attacking their amendment proposals.

3. Support for the Act as it now stands from powerful AFL unions in the state of Washington, including carpenters, building service employes, typographical workers and machinists.

STEP TO FASCISM

4. A warning from Pres. Reid Robinson of the CIO mine, mill, and smelter workers that the amendments are the "first outward attempt toward controlled labor as practiced under a fascist state."

Study Labor Laws In Rhode Island

Providence, R. I., Mar. 4. — A committee composed of CIO directors and officials of a number of CIO unions in Rhode Island interviewed Gov. William H. Vanderbilt last week on legislation for the benefit of the state's workers. Joseph Mayo, state CIO director headed the group.

To Discuss Unity

American Woolen Co. Signs With Textile Union

LAWRENCE, Mass., Mar. 4. — All workers in three of the largest mills of the American Woolen Co. in New England are covered by a contract signed last week establishing the Textile Workers Organizing Committee as sole bargaining agency.

The agreement was reached with the huge concern, known in union circles as the U. S. Steel corporation of the textile industry, after prolonged negotiations following TWOC election victories in the plants. It will be effective until Feb. 1, 1940, Emil Rieve, TWOC executive director announced.

The CIO union considers the contract the outstanding victory won since it was formed less than two years ago. Provisions include a 40-hour week for all productive workers, a share-work plan and maintenance of present wage scales which are among the highest in the woolen and worsted industry. Other important woolen companies are expected to fall in line.

The American Woolen plants involved are: Wood & Ayer Mills, Lawrence, Mass.; Sawyer Mill, Dover, N. H., and Anderson Mill, Skowhegan, Me.

Lewis, Murray, Hillman Will Speak for CIO

(See Story on Page Three)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4.—Spokesmen of both the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor are expected to meet together within the coming week, in response to the call issued by President Roosevelt.

The CIO will be represented by its three leading officers, President John L. Lewis and Vice Presidents Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman.

The AFL committee will consist of Harry C. Bates of the Bricklayers, Matthew Woll of the Photo-Engravers and T. J. Rickert of the United Garment Workers.

CONFERENCES SOON

President Roosevelt was away inspecting the Navy when his letters to Lewis and Pres. William Green of the AFL were made public.

But Secretary of Labor Perkins, upon being informed of the acceptance by both sides of Roosevelt's proposal, announced that she would confer with the President immediately upon his return, and probably call both committees together within a week.

One result of the approaching peace negotiations has been postponement of Senate committee hearings on proposed amendments to the Wagner labor relations act. Senator Elbert Thomas announced the postponement on the grounds that labor controversy on this subject should not be allowed to interfere with the peace discussions.

Charge Army Air Corps Seeks to Evade Pay Law

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4.—All U. S. Senators were warned today of the dangers to organized labor in the proposed exemptions of Army Air Corps purchases from the Walsh-Healey Act and the Bacon-Davis Act. The warning was sent in a letter to each Senator from Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel.

The exemption, Pressman said, was carried in a rider to H. R. 3791 which says:

"Provided that for the purposes of this Act, educational orders shall not be considered as contracts for public work or works or for the manufacture of materials, supplies, articles and equipment."

CHARGES ATTEMPTED EVASION

Pressman charged the War and Navy Departments "have been constantly attempting to evade the provisions of this legislation which was enacted by Congress for the protection of labor.

"Certainly it is a minimum request on the part of labor that in regard to the huge appropriations that are now being enacted for national defense that the legislation that has heretofore been passed by Congress for the protection of labor should not be set aside in regard to such appropriations."

Brophy Hails Election Of Pope Pius XII

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4. — Hailing the election of the new Pope Pius XII, John Brophy, CIO director, described him as a worthy successor to Pope Pius XI. Brophy said:

"It was my good fortune to attend a luncheon in the National Press Club in Washington in 1936 at which the then Cardinal Pacelli spoke on world peace. I was impressed by his personality and his knowledge of American affairs.

"In the election of Cardinal Pacelli as Pope, we can expect a continuation of the great traditions of the Papacy. As Papal Secretary of State, he was associated with the great Pontiff, Pius XI, who not only condemned racialism but emphasized the dignity of the individual and vigorously defended the rights of labor in his encyclicals on labor.

New Steel Pacts Bring Major Benefits

By HOWARD J. McCARTNEY

PITTSBURGH, Mar. 4.—Contracts negotiated and signed in the last few weeks by the CIO's Steel Workers Organizing Committee have resulted in major victories for the steel union. In most cases substantial improvements were written into old contracts. Outstanding among this group are:

United States Sanitary Manufacturing Company, of Monaca, Pa., where among other gains, the SWOC won wage increases, shorter hours in some departments, sole bargaining rights and strengthening of seniority clauses.

Valley Steel Casting Company, of Bay City, Mich., where the SWOC was able to block a threatened wage cut, won a check-off system and sole bargaining rights, and improved general working conditions under the new contract.

The new contract signed at U. S. Sanitary Manufacturing Company is recognized in the Beaver Valley as one of the steel union's major achievements in this district. The agreement was signed on the eve of a threatened strike.

The first agreement between the company and union embodied a clause entitling either party to reopen negotiations after serving formal notice. Written into the pact was also a clause stating that the union had the right to demand a wage increase any time one of the firm's competitors granted a raise.

IMPROVEMENTS

Officials of the company served notice on the union that it wished to reopen negotiations looking toward abolishment of the wage clause, but after lengthy negotiations between company and union officials several improvements were made on the agreement:

After a Labor Board case last year the U. S. Sanitary Manufacturing Company was forced to pay back wages totaling $1,280 to five SWOC members, who, it was proved, had been discharged for union activities.

ENDS LONG FIGHT

The contract signed with Valley Steel Casting Co. culminates a long and bitter struggle by the lodge to maintain its status in the mill. Last fall the members of the lodge were faced with a drastic wage reduction when the company served notice that such a step was necessary if the firm was to remain in business.

The lodge immediately called a special meeting and, with co-operation of national SWOC officials, plans were mapped on ways and means to circumvent the wage cut.

Twelve Fired To Get $2000 In Back Pay

Chester, Pa., March 4.—Twelve workers fired a year ago and reinstated six months later at the Marcus Hook plant of the American Viscose Corp., English-owned rayon textile concern, are to receive more than $2,000 in back wages, according to a decision made by Dr. Willard Hotchkiss, impartial arbitrator.

The men who were discharged in violation of their seniority rights under the agreement between the Textile Workers Organizing Committee and Viscose, were given their jobs back last October after a hearing before Dr. Hotchkiss. The union, however, continued to force the issue of back pay lost before the men won their reinstatement.

Labor, New Deal Win At Chicago

Chicago, Mar. 4 — Backed by an almost solid CIO-AFL vote, the New Deal won its first important election contest of 1939 as Mayor Edward F. Kelly won renomination in the Democratic primaries here.

By an almost 2-1 vote, Kelly swept over the hopes of Thomas Courtney, state attorney, who had the backing of Col. Frank Knox, Republican candidate for vice-president in 1936 and publisher of the Chicago Daily News.

ELECTION CERTAIN

Kelly's election is considered almost a sure thing. He will be opposed by a conservative Republican, Dwight Green, whose sole claim to fame is based on his prosecution of Al Capone several years ago.

Labor's Non-Partisan League played an active part during the campaign, with many of its endorsed candidates winning city council seats.

PWOC HELPS

The packinghouse workers, according to Henry Johnson, assistant national director of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, "played a major role in the defeat of the labor-hating candidate for mayor, Thomas J. Courtney."

Johnson added that it was "apparent to all the working people of the city, and especially clear to the packinghouse workers, that the forces of reaction were hard at work to destroy Pres. Roosevelt's support from this key center of the middle west, and to push into public office a city administration that would be anti-New Deal, anti-labor."

SUPPORTED PROJECTS

Kelly campaigned on a straight New Deal program. He endorsed the federal administration's WPA, housing, and social security programs, attacked amendments to the Wagner Act, and promised full cooperation with future New Deal policies.

Negro Unionists Condemn Martin

Detroit, Mar. 4 — Negro unionists here have unanimously condemned the splitting tactics of Homer Martin, former president of the United Automobile Workers, and pledged full support to Pres. R. J. Thomas and the Executive Board.

The action was taken at a meeting of the Detroit Council of the Natl. Negro Congress, whose trade union members are largely Negro auto workers. Tracy Doll, UAWA Board member, spoke, stressing the democracy of the CIO and the fact that it had organized thousands of Negro workers on a basis of equality with its white members.

Curran Asks Maritime Unity

NEW YORK, Mar. 4. — A joint conference to promote national unity among all marine unions, CIO, AFL and independent was proposed last week by Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, in letters sent to the heads of six organizations.

Declaring that "unity is absolutely essential to combat the constant threat of anti-labor legislation and the vicious attacks of the solidly organized shipowners," Curran suggested that a unity conference be held sometime in March or April.

STRENGTH IN UNITY

"All seamen on all coasts," Curran said, "recognize that it will be absolutely necessary, if we are to protect our gains when agreements expire in September, for all officials in the maritime unions to realize that only in unity is there strength and protection for the membership."

Letters proposing the conference were sent to: Masters, Mates & Pilots and Sailors Union of the Pacific, AFL; Marine, Cooks & Stewards of the Pacific, Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, and American Communications Association, CIO; and Marine Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders & Wipers, independent.

Negotiate to End Rubber Strike In Ontario

KITCHENER, Ont., Mar. 4.—Negotiations have been opened to settle the strike of 1,300 employes of the Dominion Tire and the Merchants Rubber companies here who are seeking a written agreement with a 5c wage increase, seniority rights and regulation of hours. The strikers belong to Local 67 and 80, United Rubber Workers of America.

Some 500 Dominion employes went on strike Feb. 8, followed by about 800 Merchant workers on Feb. 13, when the companies suddenly broke off negotiations after stalling for six weeks.

The two concerns are part of the Dominion Rubber System which is the Canadian subsidiary of the U. S. Rubber Co.

COPY U. S. TORIES

Taking a leaf from the manual of anti-union industrialists in the United States, the companies have used every means possible to split the ranks of the strikers and to turn the community against them, closely following the infamous "Mohawk Valley" strike-breaking formula originated by Remington-Rand in New York several years ago to break an AFL strike.

A back-to-work committee was set up, falsely claiming to represent 70 per cent of the employes, which threatened to break up the picket line, and a flood of anti-union propaganda was released in the press. The companies also threatened to move their plants to Quebec where wages are lower and trade unions are throttled by Premier Duplessis' padlock law.

EXPOSED BOSS AGENTS

The URWA locals fought back by exposing the company agents, making nightly radio broadcasts, holding public meetings and parades, issuing handbills and running advertisements in the press.

Quick response to 3000 letters sent to all local unions in Canada brought in many cash donations and pledges of support from both AFL and CIO locals. The international office of the URWA also sent financial support.

The union was represented at the negotiations by Alfred Mustin, Harry James, John Tillger and Sam Poag, assisted by Canadian representative N. H. Eagle and Organizer Joe MacKenzie. A. C. Jeannette of the Ontario Department of Labor is acting as mediator.

Pay Raised $75,000 On Boston Papers

Boston, Mar. 4.—More than 300 employes on the Boston Herald and Traveler will receive pay raises—amounting to about $75,000—as the result of a new contract signed by the Boston Newspaper Guild.

The pact, the third negotiated by the Guild and the powerful publishing corporation, is the first one which covers both editorial and commercial department workers.

The five-day, 40-hour week now covers all employes of the corporation, the Guild announced, while the new minimum pay rates are the highest yet won in New England.

Heads of many editorial and commercial departments will get at least $70 weekly under the agreement, while copy readers and rewrite men will receive $60 and experienced reporters $55.

U. S. Official Asks For Release Of Kentucky Miners

NEW YORK, Mar. 4. (FP)—Brien McMahon, U. S. attorney general, has urged Gov. A. B. Chandler of Kentucky to pardon the four Harlan union miners now serving life terms for alleged participation in the Battle of Evarts, May 5, 1931, the Kentucky Miners Defense has announced.

McMahon, who prosecuted the Harlan conspiracy cases last summer, took this almost unprecedented action in the form of a letter to Chandler in which he admitted that his recommendation was "somewhat unusual."

KNOWS WITNESSES

During the Harlan trial last summer, McMahon wrote, he examined the records of the Evarts miners' trial.

"I then became aware that many of the personalities who testified against the men who were defendants in our case whose reputation for lawlessness and violence in the community was well-known," he said.

"Frankly, I would not believe many of them under oath.

"It is my considered judgment and opinion that the deputy sheriffs themselves provoked the Battle of Evarts and that they were responsible for the troubles which occurred."

AFL groups and the Kentucky CIO Industrial Union Council have gone on record requesting the pardoning of the four veteran miners.

Parleys in 3rd Week To End Long Guild Strike

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Mar. 4—After a three-day recess granted publishers of this city's three strike-bound dailies, conferences were resumed by the striking Newspaper Guild Wednesday with the understanding publishers would withdraw ridiculous counter-offers and offer something substantial towards settlement of the 22-week-old strike.

Parleys during the past three weeks have produced nothing definite towards settlement, as publishers have shied away from conferences, sending in their second and third string teams in an attempt to wear the Guild down.

They have also stalled because state Unemployment checks due Guildsmen have stopped, the 13-week period ending recently, and hope the Guild can be starved into taking a sub-standard pact.

ACW STRIKES

Los Angeles, Mar. 4.—In protest against low wages and deplorable working conditions, 175 employes of the Wardrobe Linen Supply & Laundry Co., are on strike here. They belong to the Laundry Division of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Lewis Backs U. S. Aid To Education

Washington, Mar. 4.—Full support for Senate Bill 1305 for Federal aid to education was announced by John L. Lewis, President of the CIO, in a statement presented to the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

"Organized labor has always been the spearhead in the movement for public education, open on equal terms to all," Lewis said. "It is not fair to the citizens of any one state that their children should be allowed to enter the life of the nation lacking the educational opportunity of those of another state."

REQUESTED BY LABOR

The President's Advisory Committee on Education, which prepared the bill, has its origin in requests of organized labor, and labor representatives worked on the Committee during the preparation of its report, he pointed out.

"I therefore urge on behalf of the members of the CIO that Congress here and now establish the sound principles embodied in the bill providing Federal aid for education," he said in conclusion.

See Wagner Act Amended By Court Ruling

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4.—The U. S. Supreme Court has amended the Wagner Act.

This was the interpretation placed on the decision handed down this week against the National Labor Relations Board in the case of the Fansteel Metallurgical Co. of North Chicago, Ill.

The court is back at its old trick of following the election trends as it sees them, in the opinion of many observers who have studied the 5-2 decision.

By placing workers who have violated one law or another in the course of a labor dispute outside the realm of the Wagner Act, the court has practically written a blank check for provocateurs and employer-sponsored labor spies in future labor disputes, it is predicted.

UPHELD ON TWO POINTS

Though refusing to uphold a Board order that the Fansteel management re-instate workers who were fired during the course of a strike for recognition in February, 1937, the court did give its O.K. to order that it cease recognition of a company union and desist from intimidating its employes from joining Lodge 66 of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, CIO affiliate.

The court majority took the position that the use of the sitdown strike barred the workers from benefits of the Wagner Act.

The minority opinion—supported by Justices Reed and Black—struck squarely at the heart of the majority ruling.

Court Turns Down AFL Attack

Washington, Mar. 4—An AFL flank attack on the CIO's west coast longshoremen's union ended in failure in the U. S. circuit court of appeals here.

The court refused an AFL request to set aside a Labor Board order certifying the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union as sole collective bargaining agency for all longshoremen on the Pacific coast.

FIRST OF KIND

The Board order, made several months ago, attracted wide attention, since it was the first bargaining unit certified on a geographical basis. Shortly afterward the union signed contracts with some 200 shipping concerns operating in 31 west coast ports.

The circuit court told the AFL that the Wagner Act provides for no court appeals from Labor Board certifications unless the employer refuses to bargain collectively.

CIO--AFL Unity Negotiations Start March 7

WASHINGTON.—Negotiations for peace between the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor will begin Tuesday, March 7, following appointment of committees by both organizations in compliance with President Roosevelt's request.

The meetings, called by Sec. of Labor Frances Perkins, will be held in the White House.

"Complying with the request contained in your letter of February 23, I advise that the committee to represent the Congress of Industrial Organizations will consist of Mr. Philip Murray, Mr. Sidney Hillman and the undersigned."

President William Green announced that the AFL committee would consist of Harry C. Bates, president of the Bricklayers Union; Matthew Woll, vice-president of the Photo-Engravers Union, and Daniel J. Tobin, president of the Teamsters Union.

Tobin later declined the appointment, stating that the pressure of work on union wage contracts made it "absolutely and utterly impossible" for him to serve on the committee. Green thereupon announced that Thomas A. Rickert, president of the United Garment Workers, would take Tobin's place.

GREEN'S STATEMENT

AFL acceptance of President Roosevelt's proposal was accompanied by a statement by Green, in which he declared:

"The preservation of the structure of the AFL and the preservation of its democratic principles are of transcendent importance and cannot be compromised or be made the subject of negotiation. That fact will be kept constantly in mind in all negotiations which may be initiated and carried on."

Green also stated that the "economic and political philosophy" of the AFL could not be compromised and expressed the opinion that the problem was now more difficult of solution than it was at the time of the last negotiations a year and a half ago.

Upon hearing of the acceptance by both sides of the President's proposal, Secretary of Labor Perkins announced that she would call the negotiating committees into session within a week, after she had consulted with President Roosevelt upon his return from his cruise with the Navy.

CIO BOARD CONSULTED

All members of the executive board of the CIO were consulted on the composition of the CIO committee and all replies expressed approval of Lewis, Murray and Hillman as representatives of the whole movement in the negotiations.

Lewis as president of the United Mine Workers, Murray as chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, and Hillman as

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4.—Establishment of new minimum pay rates for steel producers filling government contracts of $10,000 or more went into effect March 1 on orders of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

Efforts of Bethlehem Steel Corp., largest firm affected by the regulations, to halt the action resulted in failure at the federal district court here.

LIMITED TO THREE

Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel and attorney for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, pointed out to the court that such an order would mean a difference to some 60,000 steel workers in the Philadelphia area alone. As a result, Judge Bailey limited application of the order to only three of the firms, which are planning bids on navy contracts, and gave them a restraining order expiring March 6.

At that time application for a temporary injunction will be made, provided the companies win the U. S. contracts. Workers in the three firms' plants are protected, meanwhile, by a $25,000 bond ordered by the district court —the difference in amount between present pay scales and these set by Miss Perkins.

WALSH-HEALEY ACT

The Labor Department order is based on the Walsh-Healey Act, passed about two years ago, which allows the Public Contracts Board to bar large contracts to companies failing to meet certain set fair labor standards.

At public hearings last summer the SWOC showed that its basic pay rate of 62½c an hour was the prevailing rate in the large "northeastern" section of the country, in which an overwhelming majority of the nation's steel is produced.

The Dept. of Labor upheld the SWOC's contentions, at the same time setting somewhat lower figures in other areas where a small amount of steel is manufactured.

New Frame-up In Los Angeles; 150 on Trial

Los Angeles, Mar. 4.—Trial of 15 members and officers of the Chrysler local, affiliated with the United Automobile Workers, on trumped up charges of "extortion" was scheduled to open here this week.

The UAW local accuses the fascist Southern Californians, Inc., the Neutral Thousands and other labor-hating elements of being behind the frame-up, "timed to coincide with the climax of the drive to repeal the local anti-picketing ordinance."

SEE LONG PLANNING

Although the indictment of the men came like a bolt from the blue, union spokesmen say that it was undoubtedly planned several months ago.

The 15 members are accused in the indictment of "conspiracy" to commit "extortion" in the collection of dues from Chrysler employes under "threats of violence," in connection with an organizational drive by Local 230 of the UAW to make Chrysler a 100 per cent union shop.

WITHOUT PRECEDENT

The Deputy District Attorney is said to have admitted that the indictments are without precedent, as they are not based on any actual violence.

Full support to the 15 workers, now out on bail, was pledged at a crowded meeting held at Maywood American Legion hall, presided over by Dick Coleman, West Coast UAW representative. Attorneys Gallasher, Wirin and Johnson spoke on the legal aspects of the case.

Senate Committee Postpones Hearings On Wagner Act

Senator Elbert Thomas of Utah, head of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, made the announcement The hearings were originally scheduled to start March 10.

The Senator said it would be "most unfortunate" to hold the hearings at this time in view of President Roosevelt's peace messages to President John L. Lewis of the CIO and President William Green of the AFL.

No hearings have been scheduled by the House Labor Committee, headed by Congresswoman Mary Norton of New Jersey.

Representing Mr. Hearst

This charming fellow is a Hearst goon in action. With auto crack handle in his right hand, he charged into a group of spectators watching members of the Newspaper Guild picket the Hearst building in Chicago. Result: 17 were injured, two seriously.

Remington Signs CIO Contract

New York, Mar. 4.—Remington-Rand, union smashing concern which invented the infamous Mohawk Valley formula for breaking strikes, has signed an agreement here with Local 1237, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, CIO, covering typewriter repair men.

Terms of the contract include shortening of the work week, vacations with pay, and a provision that wages are not to be cut without consultation with the union.

The Issue Is Not CIO Vs. AFL

Defense of the Wagner Labor Relations Act against amendment is not really such a controversial issue as between CIO and AFL, as the act's enemies would have it appear.

A great part of the rank and file of the AFL has given fully as much evidence of being opposed to all amendments of the act, including the Walsh amendments, as is the CIO.

The Walsh amendments have been sponsored by President William Green and other top officials of the AFL. But even in the higher officialdom of the Federation there are many who see the dangers to all labor in the proposed amendments.

Opposition to the Walsh amendments is by no means confined to such AFL elements as may be considered as friendly or least hostile to the CIO. On the contrary, some of the most anti-CIO officials of the AFL are among the strongest opponents of the amendments.

Letters written by President George Q. Lynch of the Pattern Makers League and by Vice President F. D. Laudemann of the International Association of Machinists, for instance, have recently found their way into the daily press.

Both of these AFL leaders make no attempt to conceal their hostility to the CIO. But at the same time they object vigorously to most of the Walsh amendments.

They point out that these amendments would strengthen company unions, give employers many weapons against genuine unions, bring in the courts to the disadvantage of labor, result in endless delays and conflicts, and generally weaken the whole Wagner Act.

The real issue in regard to the Wagner Act is not AFL versus CIO. It is between labor and all other defenders of the act, on the one side, and the enemies of genuine collective bargaining on the other side.

Keep Up the Fight

Senator Elbert D. Thomas, chairman of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, has announced postponement of the hearings on amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act, which were first set for March 10.

Decision to postpone the hearings, he said, was made on account of the forthcoming negotiations between CIO and AFL, called for by Pres. Roosevelt and agreed to by both labor organizations.

A postponement is no more than a postponement. It does not mean that the dangers to the Wagner Act from the various proposed amendments are any less threatening.

It is still fully as necessary as it has ever been to keep up the fight against any and all amendments to the charter of labor's union rights—and to let Congress know how you stand.

50-50 Liberty

Mayor Hague has done one service to his country. By denying to the citizens of Jersey City nearly every liberty on which he could lay his hands, he has helped to make the rest of the country more liberty-conscious.

Liberty is one of those things you appreciate most when you lose it or are in serious danger of losing it. So when Hague tried to clamp down on the rights of free speech and free assemblage and labor's right to organize, he gave the whole country a jolt.

Now comes another jolt. A survey of most of the bigger cities, just completed by the American Civil Liberties Union, reveals that Hague has many close rivals. It shows that no city in the United States achieves more than a 50 per cent observance of the civil rights presumably guaranteed its citizens.

Free speech fares pretty well, except in Jersey City, Memphis and Little Rock, according to the survey. But the right of public assembly is "the most universally disregarded." Picketing stands next to public assembly as to the right most frequently interfered with. Many restrictions on the freedom of labor unions to operate are noted.

Labor, in other words, is one of the groups whose rights and liberties are most often infringed. But labor is also one of the greatest forces working to make this a country of not 50 per cent, but 100 per cent liberty.

Continuation of the Senate civil liberties committee is one immediate step in this direction on which all labor and other 100-per centers should concentrate. This committee's work has been well begun, but it is only half done, you should remind your Senator.

Uneven Scales

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

The Fansteel Decision

Mr. Dooley's ideas about the Supreme Court following the election returns are not supported by the Court's decision in the Fansteel case.

For if the justices really studied the election results, they would find no mandate whatever for such a sweeping attack on labor's rights and the Wagner act as is embodied in their Fansteel decision.

Instead of following the last election's returns, the majority of the Court seem to have been more intent on preparing a campaign document for the next elections.

Through the Hedge

The Supreme Court shares in some of the "divinity" that is supposed to hedge a king. And part of the Court's protective hedge is the legal verbiage that usually makes it so hard for the man in the street to figure out what it is all about.

But in the case of the Fansteel decision, there is a thin patch in the hedge through which the passer-by can get a good look into the hallowed precincts.

There is vigor if not passion in the language with which the more reactionary justices lead off their attack. And the dissenting opinion of Justices Reed and Black is a remarkably clear and brief expression of the issue which almost any layman can understand.

The Real Issue

Contrary to the impression created by newspaper headlines, Justices Reed and Black state that the real issue is not the legality or illegality of the sitdown strike.

"The issue, while important, is narrow," they declare. "Can an employe, on strike or let out by an unfair labor practice, be discharged, finally, by an employer so as to be ineligible for reinstatement under the act?"

They state further: "Disapproval of a sit-down does not logically compel the acceptance of the theory that an employer has the power to bar his striking employe from the protection of the Labor Act."

The majority of the Court took the opposite point of view. They held that, regardless of an employer's illegal actions in provoking a strike, he can deprive employes of the protection of the Wagner act by discharging them for participating in a sitdown strike or even handing cigarettes to sit-downers.

Under the Court's decision, according to Reed and Black, conduct on the part of strikers from "nose-thumbing to sabotage" can "give fair occasion for discharge on grounds other than those prohibited by the Labor Act." Such discharged employes then become ineligible for reinstatement under the act, the Court holds.

License to Provoke

In its administration of the Wagner Act, the Labor Board has held that punishment for illegal acts on the part of strikers is a matter for peace officers and the courts; and that this is separate and distinct from the workers' right to organize and bargain collectively which it is its duty to protect.

In point of fact, a number of the Fansteel strikers were fined and given jail sentences on the grounds of disobeying a court order to vacate the premises.

But the Supreme Court's decision gives the employer an additional power to punish strikers. It permits him, by discharging them for acts which he may himself provoke by his unfair labor practices, to deprive them of the protection to which they are entitled under the Wagner Act.

Under this interpretation, the anti-union employer will be encouraged to use labor spies and other forms of provocation to make strikers commit some even minor illegal act. For then he can discharge such strikers and, no matter how flagrant his own illegal unfair practices, he will be relieved of the obligation to reinstate these workers when the board finds against him.

Unfair Practices

In the Fansteel case, the Court does not dispute the Labor Board's contention that it was the company's unfair labor practices that led to the strike.

The Board found that the Fansteel company had promoted a company union, had refused to bargain with the real union, had employed a labor spy, had isolated the union president from his fellow workers, and had been guilty of other violations of the Labor Act.

The Court does not become excited about these illegalities on the part of the company which caused the whole trouble. On the contrary, it seeks to protect such law-breaking companies from one of the consequences of illegal actions.

But the majority decision waxes positively violent in the language with which it denounces alleged violations by the employes of the property rights of their law-breaking employer.

Human vs. Property Rights

The Fansteel decision is another skirmish in the long struggle between human rights and property rights.

In this case workers who allegedly violate property rights are doubly punished; while employers who violate the human rights of their employes are exempted from most of their punishment and let off with little more than a tap on the wrist.

The Fansteel decision has been described as in effect an amendment of the Wagner Act, passed by court action rather than by a democratic vote of Congress. It should serve to make labor increasingly vigilant against other and even worse amendments that threaten.

Shoe Union Board Calls On Walsh, Condemns His Bill

Senator Interviewed

Washington, Mar. 4 — Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, sponsor of the AFL's crippling changes in the Wagner Act, was hard put to defend his amendments this week when the general executive board of the United Shoe Workers of America, CIO, called upon him to urge withdrawal of the amendments.

The union delegation, led by National Director Powers Hapgood and Sec.-Treas. James J. Mitchell, told the Senator that the union's 50,000 members — a large proportion of them from Walsh's home state of Massachusetts — were solidly opposed to the proposed amendments, and looked upon their introduction into the Senate as an act unfriendly to the CIO and American workers.

HASN'T READ BILL

Walsh admitted to the group that he had not yet thoroughly read his amendment bill (S.1000) and has made no decision on his vote when and if the bill comes up before the Senate at this session of Congress.

Though he had offered the amendments — proposed by the AFL's top leadership — the veteran Bay State Senator revealed that almost all the communications he has received have attacked the amendments. A large number of these communications, he said, had come from AFL unions.

GETS MANY LETTERS

Walsh appeared shaken by the fact that his bill had the opposition not only of the CIO but of the rank and file and much of the leadership of the AFL itself. He was told that the amendments stand as a barrier to the AFL-CIO peace sought by the administration.

The delegation later conferred with Congressman Lawrence Connery of Massachusetts, who pledged his support to the basic aims of the Wagner Act, and promised to fight any amendments which would destroy the purposes of the Act.

Protects Low Paid Workers

Washington, Mar. 4. — Pointing out that to amend the Wagner Act would set the clock back, the general executive board of the United Shoe Workers today called upon Sen. David I. Walsh to withdraw his proposed changes to the labor law.

$800 ANNUAL PAY

The resolution pointed out that the average annual income of the nation's 300,000 shoe workers is less than $800, and that collective bargaining under the protection of the Wagner Act has "provided a means for increasing the wages and improving the working conditions of thousands of workers."

Runaway shops, as well as "spies bribery, coercion, tear gas, strong arm squads of thugs and pug-uglies and a variety of nefarious methods" have confronted the union in its organizing campaigns, the declaration showed.

WHOLESALE VIOLATIONS

Full benefits of the Act have been prevented because of "wholesale and planned violations" by employers, by collusion between bosses and "certain purported labor organizations," together with the "actions of certain judges in our courts."

Senator Walsh's bill, the USWA board said, would "legalize the practices herein set forth as hampering the opportunity of workers to organize into unions of their own choosing."

D. C. Unions Busy, Too

Washington, Mar. 4.—Following the example of Denver, Colo., and other cities, labor and progressive groups here have formed a city-wide committee to defend the Wagner Act.

The committee is composed of representatives of CIO and AFL unions, the League of Women Shoppers, the Lawyers Guild, the League for Peace and Democracy, and others.

They plan a campaign to educate all sections of the people of Washington of the dangers to the Act, and to bring pressure on Congressmen and Senators against amendments.

Protests

Powers Hapgood, national director of the United Shoe Workers, who headed a union delegation which asked Sen. David Walsh of Massachusetts to withdraw his amendments to the Wagner Act.

Northwest AFL, CIO For Act

Seattle, Mar. 4. — Thousands of AFL workers in Washington are on record emphatically opposed to amendment of the Wagner Act.

Led by the state Machinists Council, with 10,000 members, the biggest Carpenters local in the state, and the 6,000 strong Building Service workers, they are pouring their protests against changes into the offices of their Senators and Congressmen.

Other AFL unions joining with CIO and railroad workers in the fight to save the Act include three big locals of the Pulp and Paper workers, the Hod Carriers and the Typographical Union.

Several of them took action to preserve the Act shortly after AFL President Green wrote to them asking for support for the Walsh amendments.

Cheyenne Labor Raps Walsh, Burke

Cheyenne, Wyo., Mar. 4. — AFL unions in Cheyenne are opposed to both Senator Burke and Senator Walsh in their attempt to amend the Wagner Act out of existence.

This news comes from A. L. Buck, secretary of the Cheyenne Federation of Teachers and head of the Central Labor Union (AFL) Legislative Committee.

OPPOSED TO BOTH

Buck wrote to Rep. Schwartz of his district, saying: "The Cheyenne Teachers Union is emphatically opposed to both the Burke and the Walsh bills.

"After a study of both, it was felt that the primary purpose was to emasculate the powers of the Board rather than to provide any fundamental solution to the problem of labor and capital, and it would be a loss to labor to lose the right to self-organization and collective bargaining as guaranteed by the Wagner Act."

SUPPORT MINERS

Minneapolis, Minn., Mar. 4. — Support for the Iron Range miners in their demand that new leases be refused to mining companies unless they comply with the principles of collective bargaining was voted by the Henepin County CIO Industrial Union Council.

Two Major AFL Unions Hit War On Wagner Act

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4.—Two more leaders of major AFL internationals have come out against Pres. William Green's attempts to mangle the Wagner Act through amendments. Both men, Vice-President F. D. Laudemann of the Intl. Assn. of Machinists and Pres. George Q. Lynch of the Pattern Makers warned that Green's proposed changes would destroy the Act, seriously damage their unions, promote company unionism, and result in interminable court delays.

Pres. Lynch put his finger on the mistake the AFL would make in pushing for amendments in a letter to Green:

"The most eloquent spokesman for the employers' interest is Senator Burke. He has endorsed the AFL amendments wholeheartedly. His only added suggestion is more amendments. He realizes the importance of permitting employers to express preferences," he wrote.

"We may assume that such statements of preference will be for the AFL. If we face realities, however, we must know from past experience that they will eventually be for company unions."

OPPOSES AMENDMENTS

"So far as our League is concerned, we will oppose any amendments giving broader powers to the employer to pactice intimidation so long as he remains outside the limits of physical and economic coercion."

Both President Lynch and Vice-President Laudemann show their concern over the proposal to turn Board decisions over to the courts for review at every turn.

"We are opposed to conferring upon courts the right to supersede, beyond present limitations, the powers and prerogatives of the NLRB," Lynch wrote to Green. "The records of courts in labor matters supply us with no reason to desire their interference in employer-employe relationships."

In conclusion, Lynch nails Green's pretense that his amendments were fully endorsed by the AFL convention at Houston, pointing out that some were submitted to the Executive Council for further consideration — which is a different matter.

DISPUTES FREY

Laudemann, writing to John P. Frey, head of the Metal Trades Department of the AFL, examines the proposed amendments and repeats Lynch's warning of their dangers to the AFL.

"Provision after provision of the amendments gives jurisdiction over cases to the District Courts and tremendously widens the opportunity of the courts to intervene in labor disputes," he wrote.

"These courts will not abide by the niceties of the law limiting their power, but will grasp every one of the many opportunities granted them in the proposed amendments to extend their jurisdiction over labor disputes and representation cases."

THE BOSSES' CHOICE

Laudemann is also concerned with the amendment that would allow bosses to express their preference for one kind of union over another.

"This gives the employer an opportunity to express his disfavor of labor organizations or his favoritism towards independent unions we will have no opportunity to prove any company unions," he told Frey.

Power of the employers to send strawbosses and other supervisors to use propaganda against unions is also seen as a serious threat to the AFL in Laudemann's letter.

Methodist Church Group Defends Act

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4.—Church groups in the U. S. are aware of the dangers to democracy in the present attempts to destroy the Wagner Act and are joining with labor in the struggle to preserve it as a contribution to industrial peace and democracy.

Latest group to lend its support to the defense of the Act is the influential Methodist Federation for Social Service, headed by Bishop Francis J. McConnell and Dr. Harry F. Ward of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

ACT A MILESTONE

"The Wagner Act is a milestone in the progress of American democracy," the Federation says in its monthly bulletin, "Social Questions". "It marks the establishment of democratic control over industrial relations. If that control is impaired by crippling amendments the development of economic democracy is halted.

OPEN-SHOP WAILS

"The criticism of the Act has come mainly from the same open-shop forces that fought the law's enactment and tried desperately to block appropriations for its enforcement," the Federation adds.

"The Walsh bill proposes amendments to the Act that would enable it to serve the interests of business rather than of labor, of suppression of labor unions rather than of their development.

CIO SUPPORTS DEMAND for Amalgamated Label On Clothing

The Constitutional Convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations unanimously adopted a resolution in support of the union label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

The resolution reads:—

"Resolved, that this Convention of the CIO go on record as urging all members of its affiliated organizations to demand the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America label on all men's and boys' apparel in daily wear and work clothing of all kinds and to refuse to buy articles of apparel not so labeled."

Make sure that the Amalgamated label is on the coat, on the pants, on the vest and on every article of men's and boys' wearing apparel.

Civil Rights 50% Honored, Survey Shows

NEW YORK, Mar. 6.—The Bill of Rights is observed as much in the breach as in the observance, the American Civil Liberties Union announced following its annual survey of civil rights throughout the nation.

No city in the country achieves more than a 50% observance of civil liberties, the report asserted, while in many more the percentage was considerably lower.

In order of their general excellence, the 13 largest cities rated as follows in the ACLU score sheet:

Very good: New York, Cleveland, St. Louis.

Good: San Francisco, Milwaukee, Pittsburgh.

Fair: Buffalo, Philadelphia, Baltimore.

Poor: Chicago, Boston.

Very poor: Detroit, Los Angeles.

FREE SPEECH

On the question of free speech, all 13 of the largest metropolitan centers and most of the other cities of over 10,000 population rated as "good". Outstanding among those in this group listed as bad were Jersey City; Memphis, Tenn. and Little Rock, Ark.

"The right of free speech apparently suffers less assault than any others, and, as seems always to have been the case, the closely related right of public assembly is the most universally disregarded."

Geography, economics and politics seem to offer little guidance to the state of civil liberties in any particular city, the report noted.

DEPENDS ON PEOPLE

"Regardless of constitutions, charters, legislatures, courts, laws and decisions both federal and state, civil rights in a community stand just about as local forces themselves maintain them," the civil liberties union commented.

Generally, the survey shows, "conditions are probably better in the Northwest than in other sections of the country—but not much better. A greater respect for the Bill of Rights, by and large, exists in the largest cities of the country as well as the smallest, but it is worse in the middle-size cities."

PICKET RIGHTS FLOUTED

Picketing stands next to public assembly as the civil right most frequently flouted, the report declared.

All 13 of the largest cities claim to give adequate freedom for picketing, "despite the record to the contrary in certain cities such as Chicago and Los Angeles," it said. In cities of the smaller population groups, picketing conditions are worse on the whole.

RIGHTS OF NEGROES

"The rights of Negroes are more commonly violated than those of any other race or class, but violations are a matter of local practice and less commonly a legal discrimination (except in the deep South," the Union said.

The survey was conducted by a committee of the ACLU. Its findings were based on questionaires sent to leading city officials and to correspondents of the ACLU. Replies covered 332 cities with a population of 36,000,000 people.

$1,500 Fine For Pay Chiseler

Boston, Mar. 4. — Brown's Contract Stitching Corp. and its boss, Nathan Brown, were out $1,500 today for having violated the federal wage-hour act.

The company, the first to be prosecuted under the new law, filed a plea of guilty in federal district court, thereby giving the wage-hour administration a clear-cut victory in its enforcement battle.

PAYS BACK WAGES

Brown admitted having paid his employes less than the required 25c an hour rate in his Lawrence plant. The 50 workers involved in the case received some $700 in back wages—the difference between their pay and what the act requires.

"This is significant because it indicates that violators of the law will not face simply paying fines," declared Thomas Elliott, New England regional director of the Dept. of Labor's wage-hour division.

"The law is destined to help the underpaid workers, and to assure them of justice.

"Inspectors are at present engaged in investigating some of the 200 complaints received in this office since it opened last fall.

"I am hopeful that, as a result of the conviction of the Brown Co., employers who have been disregarding the law will be more careful to comply and that the number of complaints will consequently be reduced."

In Washington, Administrator Elmer F. Andrews commented that while the wage-hour division has established a policy of cooperating with employers to insure compliance with the statutes, it is ready to prosecute any "deliberate violations of the Act."

"As I have stated in the past," he said, "this act has teeth in it."

CIO Local Wins Poll In New York

New York, Mar. 4 — An AFL attempt to break the closed shop contract between United Photographic Employes, CIO local industrial union 415, and the Pavelle Laboratories, Inc., ended in a State Labor Relations Board defeat.

The CIO union won the election hands down, with the AFL union receiving only 18 of the 44 votes cast. Several foremen circulated petitions for the poll several months ago.

The union, according to Pres. Patrick A. McDonough, is now preparing to commence negotiations for a new contract with the industry associations covering 62 shops.

Don't Like Nazis

See Wagner Act Changed By Courts

"Disapproval of a sitdown does not logically compel the acceptance of the theory that an employer has the power to bar his striking employe from the protection of the Act," declared the minority opinion.

"As now construed by the court, the employer may discharge any striker with or without cause, so long as the discharge is not used to interfere with self-organization or collective bargaining.

"NOSE-THUMBING"

"Friction easily engendered by labor strife may readily give rise to conduct, from nose-thumbing to sabotage, which will give fair occasion for discharge on grounds other than those prohibited by the Labor Act."

Declaring that though both management and labor had "erred grievously in their conduct" during the strike, the minority suggested that the wisest course would be to restore their former status to both sides in the case. That would mean re-instatement of the employes fired after the strike began.

NO INTERFERENCE

The minority decision also certified the right of the NLRB to collect and weigh evidence, adding that the "courts certainly should not interfere with the normal action of administrative bodies in such circumstances."

Unless the majority of the court reverses its decision in some future case—a common practice—future Labor Board cases may be determined by a broken window or a slugging engineered by company spies in the ranks of the workers.

The courts could then point to the Fansteel decision, decide that the strikers had "used violence" and bar them from the benefits of the Wagner Act.

OVERLOOKED BACKGROUND

In rendering its decision, the majority of the justices practically brushed aside the unfair labor practices of the company which had goaded the Fansteel employes into striking—the employment of labor spies, the refusal to bargain with the union, the isolation of the local union president from his fellow employes, and the discharge of the strikers.

The National Labor Relations Board, in its argument before the high tribunal, held no brief for the legality of the sitdown strike, but took the position that any damages due the company as result could be gained through application of the various state property and criminal laws.

BOARD'S ARGUMENTS

The Board presented a threefold case to the court:

1. That the strike was caused by an unfair labor practice, and thereby furnished the NLRB the justification for demanding re-instatement of the workers.

2. That the discharges, which came the day the strike started after the workers refused to quit the plant, were a violation of the Wagner Act on the part of the company, and did not affect the workers' status as employes of the companies.

3. That the reinstatement order of the Board in order to "effectuate the policies" of the Wagner Act, was justified.

Skipping over these arguments, the court held that the workers' conduct "manifestly gave good cause for their discharge." Justification of the sitdown strike would "be to put a premium on resort to force instead of legal remedies and to subvert the principles of law and order which lie at the foundations of society."

TWO OTHER CASES

The Supreme Court over-ruled the Labor Board in two other less important cases, in both instances by five to two decisions.

Dissents

Supreme Court Justice Stanley Reed, who, with Justice Hugo Black, offered sharp dissents to the majority rulings in three National Labor Relations Board cases this week.

Miss Lewis Sails For Uruguay

Washington, Mar. 4—Miss Kathryn Lewis, daughter of CIO President John L. Lewis, sailed for Montivideo, Uruguay, last week to attend sessions of the International Congress of Democracies, which opens there March 20.

She will represent Labor's Non-Partisan League at the conference, which will bring together delegates of pro-democratic forces from both hemispheres.

Labor Unity Negotiations Start Tuesday

president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and chairman of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee also represent directly some of the largest and most powerful unions of the CIO.

The AFL committee members come from comparatively small affiliates of the Federation.

HEARINGS POSTPONED

One of the first-fruits of the peace proposal was an announcement by Senator Elbert D. Thomas, chairman of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, that hearings on proposed amendments to the Wagner labor relations act, which had been set for March 10, would be postponed.

"I am sure that I bespeak the sentiments of the entire Education and Labor Committee and I trust of the Senate," Senator Thomas said, "when I say that it is the earnest wish of all that the movement initiated by our President may prove successful.

"The negotiations would undoubtedly be carried on at the same time as our hearings. This I am sure will be deemed unfortunate by all. Therefore I should like to give notice that I shall postpone these hearings until some future date."

LETTERS TO LEADERS

The President made his proposal to bring CIO and AFL together in almost identical letters addressed to Lewis and Green respectively.

He declared that he was asking both sides to appoint committees to negotiate terms of peace for four reasons:

"First, because it is right;

"Second, because the responsible officers from both groups seem to me to be ready and capable of making a negotiated and just peace;

"Third, because your membership ardently desire peace and unity for the better ordering of their responsible life in the trade unions and in their communities; and

"Fourth, because the government of the United States and the people of America believe it to be a wise and almost necessary step for the further development of the cooperation between free men in a democratic society such as ours."

CERTIFIED

Washington, Mar. 4—Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, Local 12119 has been certified by the Labor Board as sole bargaining agency for employes of the American Cyanamid & Chemical Corp., Joliet, Ill. The union belongs to District 50, United Mine Workers, CIO.

Consumers' Groups Quit World Fair, Blast Whalen

By ALEXANDER L. CROSBY

NEW YORK, Mar. 4 (FP) — Just two months before the opening date, the New York World's Fair has found itself with a dandy Consumer Interests Building and enough written protests against its commercial exploitation of the consumer to make a fair-sized exhibit.

The protests were signed by more than a score of experts representing consumer groups, labor unions, cooperatives, federal agencies, universities and scientific foundations. All the signers had served as members of the fair corporation's advisory committee on consumer interests.

The fair corporation has lost not only its non-commercial advisors, but also half of its non-commercial consumer exhibits. Donald E. Montgomery, consumers' counsel of the Department of Agriculture and a former member of the committee, said that his bureau had cancelled plans for an exhibit.

CONSUMERS UNION REMAINS

Only one bona fide consumer exhibit remains, the display by Consumers Union of the U. S. But Prof. Colston E. Warne of Amherst College, head of CU, has resigned from the committee.

The seceding experts were led by Miss Ruth Ayres, delegate of the American Association of University Women to the Consumer-Retail Council. Miss Ayres revealed that the committee had earnestly tried to interest Pres. Grover A. Whalen of the fair corporation in carrying out the announced plans for an educational exhibit.

"During the fall we tried to get the fair officials to do something which would be of real benefit to consumers," she said. "But our letters were not even answered."

RESIGNS FROM FAIR

Last week the committee members sent their resignations to Whalen.

"We are forced to the conclusion that the purpose of the committee as you see it is solely to advertise the fair to consumers and others and to promote the commercial interests of persons enjoying the confidence of the corporation . . . The overwhelming preponderance of exhibits at the fair will be commercially sponsored without benefit of the consumer advice and opinion which this committee was orginally set up to make available to them . . .

"For these reasons we believe that continued participation by us in the work of the committee will serve no good purpose. On the contrary, the use of our names may lead consumers to the false conclusion that representation has been accorded their interests in the planning and execution of exhibits."

Texas CIO, AFL Fight Sales Tax

Austin, Tex., Mar. 4. — Delegates from CIO and AFL unions will work together against the sales tax plan proposed for the state of Texas by Gov. W. Lee ('Pass the Biscuits') O'Daniel.

P. F. Kennedy, executive secretary of the Texas State Industrial Union Council, announced that CIO and AFL groups will share the time and the expense of a radio program to fight the tax.

Earlier, Kennedy called for O'Daniel's impeachment "unless he changes his policies" and announced that the organization would seek 200,000 signatures for recall petitions.

O'Daniel alienated labor's affections early in his term of office by naming a 29-year-old company unionist from the offices of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. to be state labor commissioner.

CIO Wins 31 More Elections

Washington, Mar. 4.—CIO unions won 31 elections in various parts of the country in recent weeks, according to figures released this week by the Natl. Labor Relations Board. Largest of these was the poll conducted among employes of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Corp., won by the American Communications Assn. by a vote of 6,506 to 1,469.

UTILITY WORKERS

Next in size were two elections won by the Utility Workers Organizing Committee, at the Consumers Power Co., Jackson, Mich., by a vote of 1,164 to 1,072, and at the Southern California Gas Co., Los Angeles, by a vote of 779 to 420.

Among other large elections were two won by the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, one at the Alaska Juneau Gold Mining Co., by a vote of 521 to 332, the other at the American Metal Co. of New Mexico, by a vote of 327 to 287.

A number of the polls were in western states.

WOODWORKERS WIN 3

In the State of Washington, the International Wood Workers won three elections by votes ranging from 323 to 152, while the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee won two polls, one in Denver, the other in Kansas City.

Five elections were won in Arizona by locals of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers.

Outstanding elections won by CIO unions in southern states include: Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Greensboro, N. C. carried a poll at the Blue Bell Globe Mfg. Co., 239 to 138.

Textile Workers Organizing Committee won elections at Burlington, N. C., Griffin, Ga., and Baltimore, Md.

United Mine Workers, won an election at the Barker Straight Creek Coal Co., in Kentucky, Oil Workers Intl. Union, at the Shell Petroleum Corp., Houston, Tex.

'Liberty' Retracts Libel on CIO Union Organizer; Pays $500

QUINCY, Mass., Mar. 4.—Lucien Koch, organizer for the CIO shipbuilding workers, won a libel suit against "Liberty" magazine recently for a scurrilous article printed about him more than two years ago. McFadden Publications, Inc., owners of the magazine, retracted the story and paid Koch $500 to settle the suit.

Written by Nolen Buloch under the title of "Rah, Rah, Russia," the lurid article purported to be a first-hand account of activities at Commonwealth College, labor school in Mena, Arkansas, at the time Koch was head of the school. He is now New England director for the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, and has worked for the CIO union in the Fore River area for the past two years.

Commenting on the suit he won, Koch revealed that before settling the publishing firm went to considerable expense to send investigators to Arkansas in an attempt to "get something on him."

Two other libel suits based on the same article are still pending, Koch disclosed, one against "Iron Age," steel trade paper which used excerpts from the "Liberty" story in an attack on him called "Mr. Koch Comes to Town." The other is against two company union officials at Fore River who distributed copies of the "Liberty" article.

Labor's League Forms Branch In Georgia

ATLANTA, Mar. 4.—Labor's Non-Partisan League of Georgia, formed at a state-wide meeting here, has mapped out a campaign to help liberalize politics in the south and give millions of workers a chance to express themselves at the ballot box.

Representatives of CIO and AFL unions in the state worked together to form the state league branch.. They named John S. Martin, regional director of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, as chairman.

G. F. Finley of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen is vice-chairman; John Manrey of the International Typographical Union, executive secretary, and G. R. Hathaway of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, treasurer. Representatives of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee and other important unions are represented on the executive board.

FOR WPA FUNDS

The league called for adoption of President Roosevelt's request for a WPA appropriation of $150,000,000, condemned the poll tax and went on record against the sales tax.

E. L. Oliver, LNPL national executive secretary, was guest speaker at the meeting.

"We are finding a continual line-up of northern Republicans and southern Congressional representatives who call themselves Democrats, but who are voting against us," Oliver said.

LABOR MUST FIGHT

"The reason we have been licked for the last 30 or 35 years is because the other fellow had the organization and then supervised the counting of the ballots. We must do honestly what they have been doing by any means.

"Politicians realize that resolutions adopted by organized labor do not elect them. Labor must determine which are the candidates favorable to it, and then must exercise their right to vote."

Salmon Week Tribute To CIO Union

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 25 — "Canned Salmon Week," which started yesterday and will run through to March 4, is hailed by the Fishermen's Union of the Pacific, CIO, as a tribute to the 25,000 union men and women workers of the west coast annually employed in the industry.

The industry is graphically described in a release sent out by the union to coincide with the opening of the "week," which points out that scores of industries are involved in supplying the materials for salmon canning—all of them employing numbers of organized workers.

"Hundreds of tons of tin plate, thousands of board feet of lumber, tons of coated paper for labels, millions of fibre board cases, tons of salt to say nothing of the vast amounts of fishing gear and grocery supplies, all are needed each year to produce the annual six to eight million cases of the American pack," the union says.

A UNION LABOR JOB

According to the union, all branches of the industry are organized. "From the fishermen who take this delicious product from the cold clear northern sea through to the labellers who attach bright labels to the canned product, union labor performs all the tasks," the union adds.

"All branches of this leading northwest industry, which brings the 'King of the Sea' to millions of dinner tables throughout the world, are unionized. Union labor, represented by members of the CIO and the AFL, both work side by side, to make a living for their families."

The union closes its statement with an analysis of the dietetic values found in canned salmon, and tells the housewife "who watches the food value of her menus," that "canned salmon is a frequent answer to the problem of what to serve."

Declaration of Independence

Murray Hails CIO As 'American Institution'

Denies Auto Union Losing Autonomy, Raps Disrupters

DETROIT, Mar. 4.—"The CIO will continue to be an American institution," Vice-President Philip Murray declared in a radio broadcast during the course of which he answered the slanders spouted almost nightly by Homer Martin, former head of the United Automobile Workers.

"The CIO is exactly what its affiliated unions make it," Murray explained. "One such affiliate of great importance to the CIO is the United Automobile Workers. And of equal importance to the United Automobile Workers is the CIO.

"The CIO has never yet been asked for help by one of its affiliates and found wanting. It is no secret that the United Automobile Workers have frequently sought the counsel and help of the CIO. So have many other affiliates.

"I make reference to that point simply because there are those who would like to have you believe the CIO is intruding itself into the present situation in the auto union."

DON'T FALL FOR HOKUM

The American working man's "resourcefulness and keenness" are a source of "never-ending amazement to me," Murray continued. In Detroit, within a month's time, the UAW membership has "quickly cut through the hokum" and is rapidly putting its "house in order in preparation for the final settlement" of the union's problems at its March 27 convention in Cleveland, he declared.

The CIO vice-president said the "autonomy issue" raised by Martin is "simply the dying gasp of a disrupter and deserves little consideration."

PLEDGES CIO AID

"Let me pledge to you, the membership, here tonight my personal help, the help of John L. Lewis, the help of Sidney Hillman and the CIO executive board to prevent any attempt that might be made to take the UAW's autonomy away from the rank and file," Murray continued.

He denied that the CIO is aligned with communism or any other "ism" in the current dispute in the auto union. "We found factionalism to be a major problem," he said. "Its complete elimination was absolutely necessary.

"We certainly condemned the practices of all subversive and political influences injecting their factional war cries into the councils of the UAW . . . We named specific instances and specific solutions. That was our policy then. That is our policy today."

Amendments Seen As Step To Fascism

Denver, Colo., Mar. 4.—Proposed amendments to the Wagner Act present to American workers "the first outward attempt toward controlled labor as practiced under a fascist state," Reid Robinson, president of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, declares.

Discussing the Walsh and Burke proposals in the current issue of the MM and SW CIO NEWS, Pres. Robinson warns that the attack on the Act is coming from sources "dangerous to the future welfare of the labor movement and to the general good of all people in the United States."

Robinson makes a detailed analysis of the proposed changes, and comes to the conclusion that they would "deprive the workers of the benefits of the Act to such an extent that we would be better off without it, if they are passed.

URGES DEFENSE ON ALL

"Workers should eat, sleep, live and talk opposition to any amendment to the Wagner Act, until such time as all amendments are defeated and the Act is left untouched," he concludes.

Mine Workers' Charges Upheld By Labor Board

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4.—Charges of unfair labor practices filed by the United Mine Workers, District 23, against the Operators' Association, employer organization composed of some 19 coal mining companies, and four of its member operators, were upheld in an order issued last week by the National Labor Relations Board.

The Association's headquarters are in Madisonville, Kentucky.

The Board ordered the operators to withdraw all recognition from the Independent Miners Union of Western Kentucky, and to cease interfering with the collective bargaining rights of its employes.

The four member operators of the Association included in the Board's order are: Williams Coal Co., Mannington, Ky.; Reineck Coal Mining Co., Grapevine Coal Co., and Sixth Vein Coal Corp., Madisonville, Ky.

GUARDS SHOT PICKETS

Various acts of interference with union organization at the mines of the four member operators cited by the Board revealed that during a strike at the Sixth Vein mine in 1936, armed guards fired on the picket line, and that the mine superintendent appeared on the scene carrying a machine gun. Previously a photographer took pictures of the picket line.

The so-called "Independent," the Board disclosed, was organized in 1933 by a former mine foremen and four other agents at the instigation of the Association shortly after the UMWA extended its organizing activities to western Kentucky following passage of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

FAKE UNION DUES

Since August, 1933, the Board reported, the Association and the Independent "entered into successive agreements relating to wages and working conditions at the mines of member operators.

"These agreements, so the evidence showed, were enforced as closed shop contracts." Dues for the stooge union were checked off the miners' pay.

The Board ordered the companies to refund all sums so checked off to its employes, and also ordered them to re-instate a number of workers fired at various times during strikes or lockouts, with remedial wages in certain individual cases.

The Grapevine Coal Co. was ordered to bargain upon request with the UMWA.

Rossi Cigars Placed On Unfair List

Oakland, Cal., Mar. 4—Rossi cigars, smoked largely by workers, have been declared unfair to organized labor by the CIO tobacco workers local here now on strike against the firm.

Charging that the Rossi Cigar Co., violated its agreement with the local and forced many of its employes to leave the union by threatening to fire them or their relatives, the CIO Tobacco Workers is asking all CIO members throughout the country, who smoke cigars to refuse to buy any of the four Rossi brands.

RENEGED ON PACT

Following a lockout and strike in February last year, the Rossi factory employes, practically all of whom are Italian women, were 100 per cent organized, and an agreement was won improving working conditions and raising pay.

But after signing the contract, the company started a campaign of disruption and intimidation against the workers, frequently threatening to shut down and using "pets" to spread false stories against the union.

USE COERCION

Some of the women who have relatives working in the Italian controlled Bank of America where the owner of the Rossi concern has influence, were told that unless they dropped the union their relatives would be fired from the bank.

A minority of the workers stood firm against these threats and went out on strike. Charges have been filed with the National Labor Relations Board in the name of the Tobacco Workers local industrial union 771.

Martin Goons Exposed; Use Fake Papers

Detroit, Mar. 4.—Failing in his efforts to swing the membership of the United Automobile Workers into his disruptive camp, former president Homer Martin has resorted to the use of goons and hoodlums to break up union meetings.

Search of a half-dozen of the goons showed that they carried forged union dues receipts and "I'm for Homer Martin" buttons. The receipts and the buttons were given them, it was revealed, at Martin's headquarters.

NEVER BELONGED

The majority of them have never belonged to the UAW. Picked up on the streets or in city lodging houses, they are paid 50c an hour for their union-busting activities and given meals and cigarettes.

Emmett Hyde, one of the Martin disrupters, swore that he had been getting 50c an hour for handing out leaflets and literature.

"I was supposed to yell and holler and break up the meeting in Hamtramck," he said. "It was the Chevrolet (Forge) meeting. I never was a member of the UAW."

Martin's technique has been to send his paid retainers into the local meetings with their forged receipts books. At some point during the meeting, when things go against the Martin faction, the leader calls out, "All good union men follow me out."

Hips—A Labor Dispute

Phyllis Hirsh, model, proves to all interested parties that here her hips are a perfect size 14, despite her ex-employer's story that she was fired for being one size too long. Demonstration took place in the offices of the New York State Labor Relations Board, where Miss Hirsh filed charges against the company, Shipman & Baker. She says her firing was caused by activity in the independent Professional Models Union. Jonas Ellis, the girl's lawyer, is shown above giving the evidence the once-over.

League Names Manning

Washington, Mar. 4.—E. L. Oliver, executive vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, announced this week the appointment of Frank Manning as regional director of the League for New England.

Philly Shoe Men's Strike In 6th Month

Philadelphia, Mar. 4—On strike for six months, employes of ten Philadelphia Tri-Plex Shoe Stores, subsidiary of the Spencer Shoe Corporation, are maintaining their picket lines intact in spite of 25 arrests and a campaign of terrorization.

The firm has stubbornly refused to bargain with Local 114, United Retail Shoe Employes, although the union represents more than a majority of the company's shoe clerks.

ATTEMPTS FAILED

The union is affiliated with the United Retail and Wholesale Employes, CIO.

Attempts by both federal and state mediators to settle the strike have been unsuccessful. The company has tried to evade the National Labor Relations Act by forcing its employes to sign individual contracts, in clear violation of the act, the union charges. It has also started a suit for $100,000 damages against the union.

In an appeal for funds to carry on the strike which has drained the union's treasury, Local 114 declared that the strike "is a challenge to organized labor throughout the nation." It asks that funds be sent to United Retail Shoe Employes Local 114, 52 North Tenth St., Philadelphia.

PEACE PLAN OF CIO WINS WIDE ACCLAIM

Congress Gets More Protests On Wagner Act

(See Stories Page Five)

Hearings of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, originally scheduled for March 10, have been indefinitely postponed pending outcome of the unity discussions. Unions, nevertheless, kept up their barrage of mail and telegrams to Congressmen and Senators, practically all of them attacking amendment of the Act.

The fight against the proposed change was redoubled when it became known that the reactionary New York Chamber of Commerce had endorsed the Walsh amendments, and that Sen. Burke of Nebraska, arch-foe of the National Labor Relations Board, was helping the National Association of Manufacturers to distribute Tory propaganda against the Act.

In the House, meanwhile, a new amendment bill which would wipe out the present National Labor Relations Board as it now stands, was filled with the House Labor Committee.

Other developments:

1. A survey showed enormous gains made by CIO affiliates with the protection of the Act and the NLRB.

AFL GROUP HELPS

2. An AFL Committee to aid CIO Hearst strikers in Chicago warned the Illinois Congressional delegation that amendments would be considered an action hostile to labor.

3. Similar action was taken by CIO groups in Portland, Oregon, and New York state, while the Aluminum Workers of America launched an active campaign among all affiliated locals to build support for the law as it now stands

Peace Groups Leave Parley

U. S. Congress Of All Labor Discussed

NEW YORK, Mar. 11 — The eyes of labor and the nation turned to New York this weekend, as leaders of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor met to discuss the CIO proposal for uniting all organized workers in a great American Congress of Labor.

The far-reaching CIO plan for labor unity stirred the whole country when it was presented at the first unity conference called in the White House by President Roosevelt.

Calling for a unity convention to bring the three great labor groups, CIO, AFL and the railroad Brotherhoods, under one roof, it won widespread acclaim and brought a flood of approving telegrams from labor unions all over the nation.

Agreement to discuss the plan in New York was reached at a second unity conference held in the U. S. Dept. of Labor and attended by John L. Lewis, Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, representing the CIO; and by Harry C. Bates, Daniel J. Tobin, Matthew Woll and T. A. Rickert, representing the AFL.

OVERRULE FORD

Kansas City, Mo. (FP) — The regional office of the National Labor Relations Board, over-ruling protests of Ford company attorneys, took steps to shorten testimony by the company as the Ford hearing entered its second year.

Guild Strike Costs Hearst $500,000

CHICAGO, Mar. 11—William Randolph Hearst has lost a cool half-million dollars in advertising revenue as a result of his stubborn opposition to the Chicago Newspaper Guild. strikers on the Evening American & Herald-Examiner estimated today.

The strike is now in its fourth month. During that time, Guild leaders said, advertising records show a loss of 1,283,060 lines, largely the result of Guild pressure on advertisers, which has caused 482 of them to withdraw their space from the two papers.

Union Fights Merger Of Wire Companies

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11.—A campaign to protect employes in the telegraph industry from being thrown out of their jobs in the event of a merger of Western Union and Postal Telegraph, was announced by Mervyn Rathborne, president of the American Communications Association, CIO union.

A bill proposing the merger has been introduced in the U. S. Senate by Senator Wallace H. White, Jr., as an amendment to the Communications Act of 1934. The proposed measure would also repeal Section 314 of the Act, which provides for the preservation of competition and the prevention of monopoly.

WORKERS 'FORGOTTEN'

The ACA points out that no protection for the employes who might be displaced by a merger is contained in the Senate bill.

In a letter sent to President Roosevelt and to heads of various government agencies, Rathborne called for a conference between government and union representatives to discuss "the immediate needs of the workers in the telegraph industry and their attitude toward these vital problems."

Past and present policies of the telegraph companies, Rathborne said, "have placed in serious jeopardy the jobs of 75,000 employes in the industry," hindering the economic recovery of the nation and "seriously impairing" an industry which is a vital arm of the national defense.

"Of late these polices of the telegraph companies have been proceeding in the direction of absolute monopoly without regard for the welfare of these 75,000 workers or the effect of such monopoly on the nation's economy," he declared.

CIO SUPPORT

The companies were charged with seeking "an unsanctioned monopoly at the expense of labor and the public" by John Brophy, CIO national director, in a statement urging an immediate Congressional investigation.

"The CIO welcomes the investigation of the telegraph industry proposed by Senator Burton K. Wheeler, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee.

Catholics Form Legion of Justice To 'Buy Union'

VILLANOVA, Pa., Mar. 11—A "Buy Union" campaign with a new twist is being started by friends of labor here, with the formation of a Legion of Justice whose members pledge themselves to buy only those goods made under fair conditions.

Pledges are being circulated by Richard Deverall, editor of the Christian Front, progressive Catholic monthly published in this city. The drive is described by Deverall as "a form of Catholic activity available to all, Catholics as well as non-Catholics, to help the worker in his righteous struggle for a just, living wage."

HOUSTON, Tex.—Labor has been so effective in muffling Texas' reactionary Governor W. Lee O'Daniel, the hill-billy flour salesman, that he is again resorting to singing hymns and reciting poetry over the airwaves in an effort to regain popularity.

A crushing blow was dealt to the governor's tax proposals last week when Roy Sessions, vice-president of the Texas State Industrial Union Council, and Ted Denman, business representative of the Joint Teamsters Council, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, divided a half-hour radio program over the Texas Quality Network.

FIRST JOINT PROGRAM

It was the first time in Texas that a joint program was sponsored by the CIO and AFL. Sessions and Denman tore the governor's tax schemes to shreds, and offered numerous taxation substitute proposals which will not reach into the working man's pockets.

Principal of them was the suggestion to tax the natural resources which huge corporations net millions yearly and give little in return.

WINS PUBLIC APPLAUSE

The radio program, arranged for by the CIO, was applauded throughout the state by the newspapers. An exception, however, were the Houston papers, which "played" the story down with a few paragraphs. Jesse Jones' Houston Chronicle suppressed the story entirely, and KXYZ, from which the program was broadcast, refused to permit it in Houston.

When it became aparent, a number of other Texas radio stations would not use the program, protest telegrams were sent to the Federal Communications Commission, and to Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel in Washington. Through actions taken by Pressman most of the network stations used the program.

Steel Union Gains in Texas

Dallas, Tex., Mar. 11—The Steel Workers Organizing Committee won an important victory in its southern campaign when the National Labor Relations Board ordered the dissolution of a company union at the Emsco Derrick & Equipment Co.

The company was directed to withdraw recognition from the phoney outfit and to cease interfering with workers' rights to join the SWOC. As a result, SWOC Lodge 2005 expects to win many new gains, according to Harold Rasmussen, SWOC director here.

Chicago Stockyards Sign CIO Contract

By LESLIE OREAR

CHICAGO, Mar. 11.—CIO stockhandlers in Chicago are overjoyed at the final settlement of their strike of last November against the Union Stockyards and Transit Co., signed this week. The workers are members of Local 567 of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee.

It remained for the PWOC to be the first to sign a contract with the firm, which in its 68 years of business boasted of never dealing with a union. Conditions won included a five cent an hour raise for approximately 200 workers, a guaranteed 40-hour week, time and half for overtime, vacations, seniority, and sole collective bargaining rights for the Local.

STEP TO ARMOUR

Principal stockholder of the firm is Frederick Prince, chairman of the board of Armour & Co. PWOC leaders hail this long-fought-for victory as an indication that a contract will likewise be signed with Armour, key member of the Big Four of the packing industry.

The stockyards in Chicago were practically shut down in November by the strike, precipitated by a dispute over wages and working conditions. One of the points in the agreement which ended the militant walkout was a promise on the part of the company to bargain collectively with the union.

Sioux City Labor Unites, Wins At Polls

Sioux City, Ia., Mar. 11—Standing shoulder to shoulder, CIO and AFL union members here got out the biggest vote for a special election in the city's history to help smash an attempt by reactionary business men to change the city government from the commission to the manager form.

The manager proposal, which in one way was a disguised recall directed at labor sympathizers on the city council, was defeated by a vote of 11,372 to 7,862.

JOINT ACTION

The defeat was a victory for joint action by CIO, AFL, railroad organizations, Workers Alliance and unemployed groups, all of which sent delegates into a single committee which took the name, Citizens Welfare Committee, for the purposes of the campaign.

Well-known liberals of the city flocked to support the joint efforts of the unionists, providing funds to help the campaign and speakers for a number of mass meetings at which the chief slogan of the oppositionists' drive, "Keep Hitlerism From Sioux City," was explained in the terms of the businessmen's proposed city manager plan.

Big Eyeglass Firm, CIO In Contract

New York, Mar. 11.—The largest retail eyeglass making shop in the country has signed a contract with Local 208, United Optical Workers Union.

The 40½ hour week, vacations and holidays with pay, seniority rights and arbitration of disputes were included in the agreement, reached with the M. H. Harris Co. The 40-year-old firm makes all the eyeglasses for its 25 large retail outlets in New York and New Jersey.

LIBERAL ATTITUDE

The pact was reached without work stoppage. M. H. Harris, president of the company, waived public hearings and a Labor Board election, agreeing to accept signatures on union cards as evidence of membership in the CIO local.

A contract with the Optical Employers Assn., covering 100 shops and providing for a $60 a week minimum for optometrists, has also been signed recently. As a result the union expects to organize the rest of the industry in rapid fashion, and eliminate long hours and low wages.

'Safety, Courtesy' Is CIO Union's Slogan For World Fair Visitors

NEW YORK, Mar. 11.—A campaign for "greater safety and courtesy" on the transit facilities of the city in preparation for the World's Fair was announced this week by the Transport Workers Union, CIO.

Transit workers will constitute "the front line of the city's army of welcome" to the 60,000,000 visitors to the World's Fair, the TWU executive board said in a letter sent to all union members. The board urged them to begin preparing now to assure the greatest degree of safety and courtesy during a period when all transit facilities will undoubtedly be taxed to the limit.

55,000 UNDER CONTRACT

The TWU has closed shop contracts covering more than 55,000 men and women employed on all the major subway, elevated, trolley and bus lines and taxicab companies.

Austin Hogan, president of the TWU of Greater New York, said the union's campaign will be based on the theme of "How to greet and treat World's Fair visitors." More than 3,000,000 leaflets and pamphlets on this subject will be issued within the next two months, according to Hogan.

PLAN CAMPAIGN

Plans to further the campaign were presented to some 800 officers, stewards and other key men in the unionized transit industry at a meeting held this week at union headquarters.

A letter writing competition on the general theme of how to greet and treat the World's Fair visitors open to all TWU members has also been announced. The best 28 suggestions will be awarded prizes and will be printed in literature to be distributed to passengers. Cash, gold-plated TWU membership pins and admission tickets to the Fair will be awarded as prizes.

Mooney To Attend Mine, Mill & Smelter Union Convention

DENVER, Colo., Mar. 11 — Tom Mooney has accepted an invitation to attend the 1939 convention of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, to be held in Denver starting August 7.

Arrangements have been made by the union officials to hold a mass meeting in Denver at that time, with Mooney one of the leading speakers. Pres. John L. Lewis, of the CIO, has also been invited to attend.

In a letter to the union, Mooney said, "I shall consider it an honor and a privilege to be with you." Mooney added in another communication that he is not "free" as long as Warren K. Billings remains in prison.

"My first thought is of Billings," he wrote, "and then to work for labor unity, so that the American Federation of Labor, the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the Railway Brotherhoods may be united into a powerful labor movement to protect the American workers on the economic front and preserve our democratic institutions."

Thomas Edison Co., Union In Contract

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Mar. 11. — Guaranteed minimum hourly pay, paid vacations, strict seniority rights and other benefits were won in a new one-year contract signed between Local 407, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers and the Thomas A. Edison, Inc.

Other divisions will be included under the general terms of the contract as they are organized. The company has agreed to recognize the union as sole bargaining agent for additional units whenever a check of the union membership with the payroll shows that a majority of the workers belong to the UERMW.

A drive is now under way to complete the organization of other battery plants in the area. Edison is the largest plant in this district. The smallest, General Lead Co., is also under contract with the UERMW.

Summer Session On Democracy

Buffalo, N. Y., March 11—CIO unions have been invited to send representatives to the Summer Institute for Social Progress, which will meet at Wellesley College, Wellesly, Mass., July 8-22.

Subjects for the various lectures and discussions will be on the general theme, "How Can We Make Democracy Work?" Further information can be obtained by writing to Miss Dorothy P. Hill, director, 22 Oakland Place, Buffalo, N. Y.

Goodrich Signs New Pact With Rubber Union

AKRON, Ohio, Mar. 11.—Members of the Goodrich Local, United Rubber Workers, by a vote of more than two-to-one, have ratified a new contract signed between the union and the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co.

The agreement, which provides for maintainance of the present wage rates, is the second to be signed by the company. It is to be effective until December 31, 1939, or until either party gives 30 days notice of desire to end it.

Union officials hail the agreement as knocking the slats out from under Akron Chamber of Commerce arguments for lower wages to "keep the rubber firms from moving out of town."

HITS TORY CLAIM

They point out that not only have wage rates been kept intact in the Goodrich pact, but also the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., has announced that it will spend $3,000,000 to modernize its Akron plants.

The new contract calls for a minimum vacation pay of $20 a week for men and $12 for women, with one week for employes with five years' service, and two weeks' for ten years' service. A new provision specifies that three days' notice or 15 hours' pay shall be given in cases of layoffs.

36-HOUR WEEK

The six-hour day, 36-hour week are declared the normal working hours, although provision is made for a "flexible working schedule" not to exceed eight hours a day or 40 a week, with the check that in no case shall the total yearly hours exceed 1800 for any employe. This would be the equivalent of a 36-hour week for 50 weeks.

Goodrich is the second major Akron rubber company to renew an agreement with the CIO rubber union. The other is Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., now in its second year under contract. Goodyear, the third of the "big three" has so far continued to stall on signing up with the union.

San Francisco Print Trades Join League

San Francisco, Mar. 11—The Allied Printing Trades Council of San Francisco, with a membership of more than 6,000, has affiliated with Labor's Non-Partisan League in this state.

More than 500,000 California workers are now represented in the League's state branch, officials estimated.

Peace Committees Discuss 'American Congress of Labor'

Peace Proposals Of The CIO

Following is the complete text of the proposals for labor unity submitted by President John L. Lewis of the Congress of Industrial Organizations at the conference in the White House on March 7.)

Between April 15 and April 30, 1939, the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor shall each hold a special national convention. These conventions shall be held separately and at any convenient place. The purpose of the conventions will be to pass upon and approve the following basic plan of procedure.

(1) Not later than June 1, 1939, there shall assemble in the city of Washington, D. C., in the hall owned by the Daughters of the American Revolution, a convention of representatives of: (a) the American Federation of Labor; (b) the Congress of Industrial Organizations; and (c) the four Brotherhoods in the railroad transportation field, heretofore independent.

(2) This convention is to organize and dedicate the American Congress of Labor, designed to supersede and embrace the membership of the CIO and the AFL, and to include the membership of the before mentioned railroad organizations. The convention will outline its objectives, adopt a constitution, and elect officers for a term of one year.

(3) John L. Lewis and William Green shall not be eligible for election to any office in this convention. The ACL will grant Mr. William Green a life tenure of his present salary for services rendered. The same arrangement will include Mr. Frank Morrison.

(4) The executive board or governing body of the ACL will be composed equally of representatives of the AFL and the CIO, with proportionate representation for the four Railroad Brotherhoods. The president of the ACL, to be elected by the convention, shall be selected from the membership of the Brotherhoods, from such types of executives as A. F. Whitney, President of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and D. B. Robertson, President of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen.

(5) During the year ensuing from the organization of the ACL, the services of the United States Department of Labor and its Conciliation Bureau shall be continuously available for cooperative mediation on all controversial questions affecting overlapping jurisdiction or other matters existing between the constituent unions of the Congress.

(6) To insure the orderly, tranquil and good faith execution of the suggestions herein noted, the President of the United States is requested to preside at the sessions of the unified ranks of labor, when its constituent representatives assemble for the purpose of stating objectives, electing officers, and adopting a constitution.

Comedy Of Errors

San Francisco, Mar. 11—Ordinarily there is nothing funny in 15 union men being arrested for picketing and carted off to jail, but as the thing happened in the Shasta Dam dispute, it had its comic side.

Charged with violating the Shasta county anti-picketing ordinance, 15 of a number of CIO men arrested were in court before the judge who had committed them to jail. When everything was ready, however, the judge discovered that all the deputy sheriffs were out patrolling the highway and there was nobody to take them to jail, several blocks away.

JUDGE GETS IDEA

Suddenly the judge had an idea. Turning to CIO Attorney Richard Gladstein, who was present in a double capacity as representative of the men and a prisoner under arrest, himself, the judge said, "Why don't you let me deputize you? Then you can escort them to the jail as an officer of the law."

Gladstein refused to mix matters more by taking on this third role, explaining that as a CIO representative he couldn't serve as a deputy sheriff in a labor dispute.

"Never mind the deputizing," he said. "Just give me the commitment papers. I'll carry them over to the sheriff and the boys can walk behind me."

ESCORT THEMSELVES

The dispute over which they were arrested concerned jobs with the United Concrete Pipe Co., contractors in charge of the Delta Tunnel job on a railroad relocation project. Although practically all the workers belonged to the CIO, the company signed a closed shop contract with some AFL officials before the project opened.

When the men reported for work they were told they would have to leave the CIO and join the AFL, paying good sized initiation fee before they could go to work. They struck, and later were arrested for violating the county anti-picketing law.

Mine Pact Negotiations Start Soon

Washington, Mar. 11.—Completion of arrangements for contract renewal conferences was announced this week by the United Mine Workers of America. The first meeting of the Bituminous Policy Committee has already taken place in New York, followed by a meeting of the International Executive Board.

March 14 the joint conference of the UMWA and the Appalachian area operators will be held, followed a week later by the Tri-District Anthracite Convention. Early in April the Anthracite Joint Wage Scale Conference will meet, also in New York.

G. E. Plant Votes For CIO Contract

Bloomfield, N. J., Mar. 11.—One more plant of the General Electric Co. is due to come under the terms of the corporation's contract with the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workes.

Employes of the Bloomfield plant voted by a lage majority to have Local 422 of the union represent them as sole bargaining agency.

The original contract signed with the company covered only certain plants, but provided for the inclusion of others as soon as workers vote for the union as their exclusive agent.

CIO Issues New Wagner Act Leaflet

Washington, Mar. 11.—"Don't be fooled—its your wages and your unions they're after. Save the Wagner Labor Act!"

These slogans on the front cover, plus a cartoon, preface the newest leaflet put out by the CIO in defense of the Natl. Labor Relations Act.

The leaflet, designed for mass distribution, outlines in simple terms the objections of labor to the amendments proposed by Senator Walsh, Senator Burke and others.

Copies can be obtained from the CIO, 1106 Connecticut Ave., Washington, D. C., at 40 cents per 100, $3.75 per 1,000.

UNPOPULAR

New York.—When the New York World-Telegram asked readers for letters of approval or criticism of its increasingly anti-New Deal editorial policies, it found that only 28% of the letters favored the paper's present stand.

CIO Unity Plan Stirs Labor's Applause

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11 — Unity of all American labor in an all-inclusive American Congress of Labor is the CIO proposal on which national attention has been focussed since peace negotiations started last week.

John L. Lewis, Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, representing the CIO, presented their six-point plan for unity to President Roosevelt and the AFL committee at the White House March 7, in the course of the first conference called by the President. The AFL representatives agreed later to discuss it at a conference in New York over the weekend.

The CIO plan calls for separate conventions of the CIO and AFL between April 15 and April 30, 1939 to pass upon and approve the following procedure:

(1) A joint convention of the AFL, the CIO and the railroad transportation Brotherhoods to be held in Washington not later than June 1.

(2) Formation at this unity convention of an American Congress of Labor, to include the CIO, AFL and railroad labor organizations.

(3) Neither John L. Lewis nor William Green to be eligible for election to any office in this convention, and life tenure of present salary to be assured for Green and AFL Secretary Frank Morrison.

(4) Executive board of the ACL to be composed equally of AFL and CIO representatives, with proportionate representation for the Brotherhoods, and the president to be elected from the Brotherhoods.

(5) The U. S. Department of Labor and its Conciliation Bureau to be asked to aid in mediating jurisdictional and other differences between unions during the year following organization of the ACL.

(6) President Roosevelt to be requested to preside at the convention "to insure the orderly, tranquil and good faith execution of the suggestions noted."

The direct and sweeping character of the CIO peace proposals electrified the country and took the AFL committee by surprise. This committee, consisting at first of Harry C. Bates, Matthew Woll, and T. A. Rickert, issued a statement the same day denouncing the CIO plan as "fanciful" and questioning CIO motives in presenting it.

ASKS CONSIDERATION

On the next day (March 8), when the CIO and AFL committees met again at the Department of Labor, President Lewis of the CIO made a plea that the AFL "give intelligent analysis to our proposals rather than to continue attacking our motives."

At this conference, the AFL committee agreed to give consideration to the CIO proposals, as well as to any others that might be made, at the next unity conference which was set for Friday evening, March 10, in New York City.

TOBIN JOINS GROUP

The AFL committee meanwhile had been enlarged to four by the addition of Daniel J. Tobin, President of the Teamsters Union. Tobin was named by President William Green in the first place, but resigned from the committee shortly after. He was persuaded to withdraw his resignation in time to attend the Wednesday conference.

The CIO proposal for speedy and inclusive unity of American labor in one great body which will represent some nine million workers, met with an immediate and favorable response throughout the country.

The CIO Proposals for Unity

The CIO has reaffirmed and made more emphatic its consistent stand for a united labor movement, in the peace proposals which its representatives, John L. Lewis, Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, presented at the first unity conference called by President Roosevelt.

The CIO suggests concrete plans for a unity convention to be called at the earliest possible date. The purpose of this convention would be to unite the three great labor groups, the AFL, the CIO and the railroad Brotherhoods, in an all-inclusive American Congress of Labor.

Under this plan, neither Lewis nor William Green would be eligible for election to the presidency of the new united body, but a neutral president would be chosen from the railroad Brotherhoods.

The CIO further proposes that President Roosevelt be requested to preside at the Unity convention; and that the U. S. Department of Labor be asked to lend its aid in mediating jurisdictional differences between unions.

* * * *

The CIO proposals deserve the most serious consideration not only of AFL and railroad Brotherhood leaders but of all organized workers, regardless of affiliation.

They are sincerely offered as a constructive suggestion for bringing about just and effective unity within the shortest possible time.

In making these proposals, the CIO representatives are fully conscious of the great demand which exists within the ranks of labor for united action on the part of all unions in the promotion of labor's common objectives.

Many intricate difficulties stand in the way of the labor unity which is so greatly desired by American workers. The railroad Brotherhoods have never been able to unite in one Federation with the AFL. And now a whole new labor movement has come into being through the CIO, because the AFL did not permit of the growth of industrial organization within its ranks.

The CIO is not unaware of these difficulties. But it considers that unity is nevertheless possible if immediate steps are taken to bring all existing unions together, without sacrifice of their rights, in one inclusive body, leaving minor jurisdictional differences to be worked out later within this great new family of American labor.

* * * *

The CIO has consistently stood for labor unity and for a spirit of live-and-let-live among labor organizations.

While subscribing to the principle of industrial organization in the mass-production industries, the CIO has never challenged the rights of craft unions where these are preferred by the workers and function effectively in their behalf. It has only demanded equal rights for industrial unions where the workers need and desire this form of organization.

The CIO never desired a split in the AFL; on the contrary, it fought hard to prevent it as long as possible. The split was finally forced by the action of the AFL executives in driving out the CIO unions, rather than to permit the growth of industrial organization within the Federation.

Since the split occurred, the CIO has repeatedly tried to restore the unity that was thus disrupted. And its present proposals are motivated by the same desire it has always held to unite both craft and industrial unions, without sacrifice of the rights of either, in a unified labor movement.

* * * *

The unity which the CIO proposes is of immediate concern to all of labor. But there are also even wider considerations of public welfare. Labor needs to act unitedly, not only for its own immediate economic interests, but also in defense of all progressive legislation and of our country's democratic institutions.

It is in this spirit, and with all of these considerations in mind, that the CIO has made its sweeping proposals for labor unity. They deserve the study and support not only of all labor unionists but of all public-spirited Americans.

Why Not Unite?

THE best way to unity is to unite.

That is exactly what the CIO peace plan proposes, and that is why it has caused such a stir.

Some people have been quite shocked by its daring. It is almost as if, at a disarmament conference, some bold spirit would propose that the nations actually disarm.

Unity conferences to such critics are simply formal occasions for endless wrangling over details.

Both sides are supposed to meet day after day, week after week, month after month, to argue and quibble over jurisdictional differences—until the main goal is all but forgotten.

The American Federation of Labor has been debating and squabbling over just such jurisdictional disputes within its own ranks for more than half a century. And most of them are still as far from a final solution as they ever were.

If the CIO were not genuinely concerned with uniting labor, it might be willing to spend the next fifty years too in the conventional type of "unity conferences."

Instead of that, it has been just rude enough and crude enough to suggest cutting the cackle and getting down to unity—by actually uniting the country's three great labor groups in one all-inclusive American Congress of Labor.

The CIO Plan

The CIO proposal is brief and simple. It is that both CIO and AFL hold separate conventions to approve plans for a unity convention not later than June 1.

At this unity convention the CIO, the AFL and the railroad brotherhods would all be represented, and an American Congress of Labor would be formed to unite all existing labor unions in one federation.

It is proposed that both John L. Lewis and William Green step aside and let a neutral president be selected from the railroad brotherhoods.

The last time Lewis proposed that he and Green resign, to answer the argument that their personal claims stood in the way of unity, the objection was raised that whereas Lewis would still be president of the United Mine Workers, Green would be out of a job if he resigned as AFL president.

To meet this objection, the CIO proposal includes life tenure of present salary for Green and AFL Secretary Frank Morrison.

Finally, it is proposed that the U. S. Department of Labor aid in mediating jurisdictional disputes between unions within the united Congress; and that President Roosevelt be asked to preside over the unity convention.

The American Way

The CIO peace proposal may be a bit breath-taking in its simplicity for those who cannot see the wood for the trees. The legalistic minds of labor experts have dwelt so long on the intricacies of labor division that they do not see the genuine demand for unity now, regardless of red tape and details which can be worked out later.

The CIO proposal is addressed not only to the AFL negotiators but to millions of American working people in all labor unions. It speaks clear and straight to them in the American language, on a subject that is close to their hearts.

All of these workers want a united labor movement. And the American way to get what you want is usually the direct way. That is why the simple and direct proposal of the CIO is meeting with such a tremendous response throughout the ranks of labor.

A Realistic Approach

The CIO proposal is realistic. It takes account of the fact that there are now three main groupings of American labor, the CIO, the AFL and the railroad brotherhoods; and that each of these groups consists of unions which have every desire, intention and right to maintain their identities and to continue serving the members who have chosen them.

Several years ago it was reasonable to talk in terms of restoring unity in the AFL by lifting the suspensions that caused the split and by permitting industrial organization within the Federation.

But that is no longer the most realistic approach. A whole new labor movement has come into being, with scores of strong unions that were never in the AFL. To adjust AFL jurisdictions in such a way as to preserve the rights of all these new unions would now present great difficulties.

The CIO therefore proposes, not absorption, but a uniting of two movements which are approximately equal in strength.

One stumbling-block to such a merger is the natural struggle for control of the united body between the two groups which are so nearly equal. To meet this difficulty, and to prove that it is more concerned with unity than with control, the CIO proposes the inclusion of a neutral element, the railroad brotherhoods, which would hold the balance of power.

The brotherhoods have always held aloof from the AFL. One reason for this has been the same jurisdictional rigidity which repels the CIO. But the formation

New York Tories Praise, Endorse Amendments

NEW YORK, Mar. 11.—The efforts of certain AFL leaders to win amendments to the Wagner Act today had backing from influential quarters—the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York.

The action came after the bankers and businessmen had heard and applauded a speech by Matthew Woll, vice-president of the AFL and one of the federation's peace negotiators.

The Chamber also approved the AFL executive council's blast against New Deal spending policies, made at Miami last month.

COMMENDS COUNCIL

The resolution declared in part that the Chamber "commended the executive council of the AFL for its recent declaration regarding the policies which should be pursued to bring about a solution of the unemployment problem and a return of prosperity."

It added that the C. of C. "hereby records its belief that the Walsh bill to amend the National Labor Relations Act should be enacted into law as it is an important step along the lines previously advocated by this chamber as a necessity to promote industrial peace."

ENEMIES OF LABOR

The chamber's action attracted interest here since among its officers and members are some foremost enemies of organized labor. One of the three vice-presidents of the chamber is Leroy A. Lincoln, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., which has spent thousands of dollars collected from policyholders to fight unionization of its workers.

New Bill Introduced In House

Washington, Mar. 11 — Amendments to the Wagner Act sponsored by AFL leaders have been introduced into the House of Representatives by Cong. Graham A. Barden, North Carolina Democrat.

The Barden bill is said to be similar to the one previously filed in the upper house by Sen. David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, who has spent a considerable portion of his time since then in explaining away his actions to angry union groups in both the AFL and the CIO.

AFFECTS NLRB

The House bill calls for scuttling of the present National Labor Relations Board and the substitution of a five-man board with five-year terms. The measure reflects the hostility of the AFL top leadership to the present Board.

The bill has been referred to the House Labor Committee, headed by Cong. Mary Norton of New Jersey. Mrs. Norton has revealed that her committee has not yet scheduled hearings on the bill.

Hearings on amendments in the Senate have been postponed by Sen. Elbert Thomas, chairman of the Education and Labor Committee, pending outcome of AFL-CIO unity negotiations.

of an all-inclusive Congress of Labor, in which the rights of all unions would be fully protected, would unquestionably have a great attractive force for the railroad workers as well as for all other sections of American labor.

NAM Helps Burke Fight Wagner Act

Washington, Mar. 11—Senator Burke, who wants to kill the Wagner Act, believes in "educating" his constituents—with the help of the Natl. Manufacturers Association.

He has just sent thousands of copies of the February issue of the NAM Law Digest, legal guide to the Association's reactionary anti-labor policies, to the voters back home with a covering letter, plus copies of his own proposed amendment to the Wagner Act and all the others offered to date, plus copies of his letter to Chairman Madden of the Labor Board.

ROUND-UP OF REACTION

The NAM Digest gives the employers reasons why the Act should be changed to allow company unionism, to allow collusive contracts, to turn the Act over the courts at every turn; in general to make it a bosses' law rather than a workers' law.

The Burke amendments put all these proposals into the correct statutory language. The Burke letter to Madden, sent some time ago, was described by the Board Chairman as "full of misstatements of facts, mishandling of statistics and perversions of Board policies," in a reply which Burke has not yet rebutted.

ONLY EMPLOYERS' SIDE

Incidentally, Senator Burke didn't include any material answering either the points raised by the NAM or himself in the little bundle sent out to the expectant voters. All they got was the employers' side, plus Burke's able interpretation of the NAM point of view.

Sen. Lodge Hits Changes Hurting CIO

Washington, Mar. 11 — Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., Massachusetts Republican, today was on record as firmly "opposed to any amendment" to the Wagner Act that "will hamper industrial organization."

The youthful Bay State Senator's statement was given to the general executive board of the CIO United Shoe Workers of America, which has been interviewing numerous Congressmen and Senators on their attitutde towards the Act.

BLOW AT UNIONISM

Lodge told the shoe workers that, though he had not given detailed study to all the suggested amendments, he was convinced that any major blow at industrial unionism is a blow at all unions. Modern industrial plants, he indicated, can be successfully organized only on an industrial union basis.

The delegation told the Massachusetts senator that amendment of the Wagner Act would crimp their efforts to organize runaway shops, many of which have left Massachusetts in recent years for low-wage areas in nearby states.

Chicago AFL Joins Campaign

Chicago, Mar. 11—The AFL committee formed to aid members of the Chicago Newspaper Guild striking against the Hearst publications here went on record today as opposed to amending the Wagner Act.

In a letter to the Illinois Congressional delegation, the committee said:

"The rank and file of organized labor consider the Wagner Act one of their important gains, and will interpret any attempt to amend or weaken it as an unfriendly act, and as citizens will not hesitate to show their disapproval in accordance with labor's policy of rewarding friends and punishing enemies."

Report Shows Board Averts Many Strikes

NEW YORK, Mar. 11.—Employers and unions are turning increasingly to the National Labor Relations Board for speedy and peaceful settlements of their disputes, Eleanor Herrick, NLRB regional director in the important metropolitan New York area announced in a report released here this week.

"Employers have learned that they cannot be said to bargain in good faith if the answer to every proposal is a flat 'no!'" Mrs. Herrick said. "Unions have learned that they cannot slap a contract down on the desk and say: 'Sign there or else we'll throw a picket line around the plant.'"

PEACEFUL TALKS

The New York office of the board handles about one-fifth of all its cases, the report noted, and 90 per cent of these cases have been closed. About half of them have been settled by informal discussions between employers and employes under the auspices of the NLRB.

"For the year 1938 alone, these settlements carried with them $131,083.85 in back pay to workers discriminately discharged," she commented. "A total of 2,454 workers have been reinstated in this region after illegal discharge. . . "

Other points noted in the report:

1. Cases are being handled more speedily by the Board, indicating growing faith in the NLRB's work.

2. Elections with the consent of all parties are increasing in number.

3. Use of injunctions against the Board has practically been abandoned by employers.

4. A decrease in the number of strike cases and a corresponding rise in petitions for certification as bargaining agencies shows a tendency on the part of unions to use the NLRB rather than the strike as a method of solving labor disputes.

Wagner Act Aids Peace, Unions Say

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11.—Contracts won, wages boosted, strikes avoided and industrial peace maintained with the help of the Wagner Act is the general story reported by CIO unions in a survey of progress since the Act was passed three years ago.

A look at the record of one CIO union—the Electrical and Radio Workers — shows what the Wagner Act has meant to workers in the basic industries of the U. S.

The United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America took part in 66 elections covering 66,000 workers in the period August 1, 1936, to July 31, 1937. Fifty-nine thousand workers voted for the UERMW, which was certified in 52 plants.

In the space of three years, the union has won contracts covering 250,000 workers, boosted pay 10 per cent, reduced hours, won paid vacations for thousands. And the significant point about these gains is that only 5 per cent of the workers covered had to resort to strikes.

Ninety-five per cent won without having to use the strike weapon—because, as President Carey pointed out, the Wagner Act offered a peaceful, orderly way of achieving collective bargaining.

PRAISE FROM BOSS, TOO

These gains were possible, with industrial peace, because "the Wagner Act and its administration helped to establish a measure of industrial democracy within the gigantic plants of the electrical manufacturing industry," Carey said.

Sensible employers recognize the benefits the Wagner Act has brought to them, as it has helped to establish collective bargaining. This is what one of them, a high officer in the General Electric Co., had to say:

"We have had no trouble with the Wagner law. It was designed to take care of the employe who can't take care of himself. My suggestion would be to let the Wagner law ride and let some of these employers who haven't tried it, give it a try. . ."

OLDER UNIONS GAIN

Older unions, including those that helped to start the CIO in 1935, report similar gains in the period since the Act's passage. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers, one of the founding unions of the CIO, reports for the period 1936-1939:

Membership increased from 150,000 to 253,000; contracts from 3,576 to 5,420; organization in men's clothing from 85 per cent to 95; in cotton garments an increase of 25,000 members; in laundries (a new field) strong locals containing 30,000 previously unorganized workers.

During the same period, the 36-hour week in men's clothing was maintained and a 12 per cent general wage raise secured. Wages in cotton garments were boosted from $6.00 per 60-hour week to an average of $16 for a 40-hour week. General increases were won for laundry workers. In 1938, a depression year, workers' incomes were increased $2,000,000, and 38,000 new members added through the international union.

The Flat Glass Workers, CIO, reports contracts won, workers reinstated, company unions dissolved throughout the industry. "We can definitely say," Secretary-Treasurer De Shetler writes, "that the fact that the Act is the law of the land saved major disturbances in the greater part of the plate, window and laminated glass industry."

AIDS PEACE

The Packinghouse Workers, one of the newer CIO affiliates, reports 13 complaint cases adjusted under the Act, involving more than 12,000 workers. Elections involving close to 9,000 were held, in which the union won certification.

The Natl. Maritime Union, headed by Joseph Curran, list 53 contracts, wage increases from 15 to 30 per cent, 54 elections won. "Never before," the union says, "have the American seamen had the conditions they get today through the merits of this Act."

Benefits have been won for lumber workers in the Pacific northwest. A. F. Hartung, president of Council 5 of the Intl. Woodworkers of America, CIO, has this to say about the Act:

"We are opposed to any changes. The Board is just, and should not be hamstrung by any amendments. Letting the workers decide by a fair ballot the issue of affiliation is certainly based on the U. S. Constitution and is the most democratic way to settle labor disputes."

WHITE COLLAR, TOO

"White collar" unions, particularly in the newspaper industry, add their contribution in praise of the Act. The American Newspaper Guild in a brief tabulation reports wage increase "well over $6,000,000," the five-day week, severance pay, vacations, etc., and credits much of these gains to the operation of the Act.

This is only a partial listing of the gains organized labor in the CIO has won through the Wagner Act. Further study shows great improvements in wages and working conditions through the CIO, won by a combination of organizing and full use of the protection the Act affords to workers.

Discuss CIO Unity Proposal quarters from unions in all three labor groups, and press reaction was generally favorable.

A definite reaction was not immediately forthcoming from most railroad Brotherhood officials. But President A. F. Whitney of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, who was mentioned along with President D. B. Robertson of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen as examples of the type of neutral labor executives who might be elected to head the American Congress of Labor, commented as follows:

WHITNEY'S COMMENT

"If the groups want to set up a cooperative program, I think I could go along with them. A federation of organized labor, or something of that sort, I think, would appeal to the average person. We will cooperate with one or all of the groups at any time for the benefit of society or labor."

The CIO and AFL committees were first called together by President Roosevelt at the White House with Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins also in attendance.

ROOSEVELT'S MESSAGE

In opening the first conference, President Roosevelt emphasized the importance of labor unity, urged that the conferees enter negotiations with open minds, and declared: "It is desirable that this should be a negotiated peace made by this committee, using your own ingenuity and resourcefulness to find various ways of settling knotty problems."

"I accept the premise that both sides want peace," Roosevelt said, pointing out that in many cities the local CIO and AFL "are working together in closest harmony," and calling attention to the volume of demand for unity from the rank and file of labor.

Push Drive In New York State Office

New York, Mar. 11—Local 45 of the State, County & Municipal Workers, CIO, is pushing its campaign for recognition and the establishment of grievance committee procedure in the offices of the New York State Insurance Fund.

The office, a division of the state Department of Labor, handles workmen's compensation funds. The union charges the management of the state bureau with responsibility for the breakdown of harmonious employer-union relations, and with intimidation of union representatives.

Ask Help For Railroads

Indiana Harbor, Ind., Mar. 11—Led by District Director Nicholas Fontecchio, executive representatives of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in the Calumet district have called upon Congress and Pres. Roosevelt to speed legislation designed to rehabilitate the nation's railroad system.

Such action, they said, "would not only benefit the railroad industry but will greatly aid a large number of steel producing and fabricating plant workers in this territory and elsewhere, who are now idle."

Negotiators Meet

Martin's Convention Is Great 'Flop'; CIO Auto Union Pushes Ahead

By ROBERT DALE

Detroit, Mar. 11.—Plans for the special convention in Cleveland starting March 27 were pushed this week by the United Automobile Workers, CIO, here, while a rump meeting of ex-president Homer Martin's retainers broke up in discord.

The UAW-CIO, of which R. J. Thomas is acting president, announced that locals with a membership of 334,000 have voted to send delegates to Cleveland. Martin's dual union session represented less than 17,000 UAW members, a careful check showed.

Martin's one-man show was marred by continuous bickering and factional fighting revolving around Lovestone followers on the Martin payroll. Martin took the convention floor against a proposal to bar members of this group from the union. His defense kept out a reference to Lovestonites from a resolution barring Communists and Nazis, which was adopted.

TRIES TO DICTATE

Another source of squabbles was Martin's attempt to dictate the convention procedure and policy. Detroit newspapers report he demanded the right to appoint executive board members but was defeated by his own hand-picked delegates. He did win the right to appoint regional directors, contrary to the UAW-CIO policy of election.

On the subject of delegate's expenses, there was a bitter backstage row. Martin had two classes of phoney delegates, Class A and Class B. The "A" boys got $7.50 a day, the others but $5. These rates compare with the 50c. an hour Martin has been paying flophouse inmates and floaters to try and worm their way with phoney credentials furnished by Martin into UAW-CIO meetings.

There was a staged demonstration for Martin when he was elected "president" of the dual outfit. This show of enthusiasm soon waned, however, as the factional scrap became more bitter.

TORIES SEND GREETINGS

Among the few greetings received by Martin were expressions from Michigan's anti-labor Governor Fitzgerald, sponsor of a bill to limit the right to strike, and Detroit's Mayor Reading, who was vigorously opposed by labor when he ran for office.

Though Martin had Sosed the White House, all he got was regrets from a presidential secretary who said the President was too busy on "important business" to recognize Martin's "goonvention", as it is known in auto centers. There was a lone AFL subofficial on hand, but no other representative of organized labor, CIO, AFL or independent, honored the meeting with his presence.

Neither Harry Bennett, Ford union-buster, nor Gerald L. K. Smith, self-styled "ism expert of America", were seated but both watched proceedings with interest. Both Bennett and Smith are also Martin pals in the fields of union busting and frenzied oratory.

WISHES HE'D QUIT

The Martin farce was mercilessly razzed by the Detroit papers. At a press banquet Martin confessed that he wished he had quit "at the peak" and that he now plans to be the pastor of a nonsectarian church in Detroit.

Scores of locals seated by Martin were either dormant or nonexistent. He also seated a number of so-called "rank and file" delegates from locals that have already voted to go to Cleveland. Some of these dual union delegates were suspended "for 99 years" by the Dodge local here.

On the key question of affiliation with the labor movement, Martin led his group right out of the labor movement altogether, voting not to affiliate with either CIO or AFL but to stay independent.

LINE UP WITH CIO

Even before the Martin sessions broke up, there began a further parade of locals to the UAW-CIO. Several of Martin's delegates whose expenses had been paid for them by Martin came over to the Fort Shelby Hotel, headquarters of the legitimate UAW, to make overtures. Numbers of locals that had kept neutral or been steamrollered into attending Martin's meeting, are now seeking UAW-affiliation.

Hillman, Murray Help AFL Strikers

Washington, Mar. 11—CIO Vice-Presidents Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman showed their union solidarity with AFL pickets when the Hotel and Restaurant Workers Alliance, AFL affiliate, called strikes in 13 major Washington Hotels this week.

The two CIO leaders in Washington for labor peace conferences, immediately moved out of the hotels in which they had been registered. Murray discovered the strike, which had begun at dawn as the result of a refusal of the employers to sign a new contract, when he came down into the lobby in the morning.

Scorning the services of a scab elevator man, he walked four flights of stairs, packed his bags and walked out. Hillman was notified of the strike when the headwaiter offered to serve him breakfast. He immediately left the hotel, sending a messenger boy back for his luggage.

Union Asks $400,000 From Firm

NEW YORK, Mar. 11. — The CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee today had on file with the National Labor Relations Board a complaint asking payment of back wages amounting to $400,000.

The sum, the largest ever involved in a Labor Board decision, is due to 275 members of Amalgamated Utility Workers, UWOC affiliate, who were fired in August, 1935, by the giant Consolidated Edison Co. of New York, the union said.

Only a few months ago six members of the UWOC received $22,000 in back pay when the U. S. Supreme Court upheld the Labor Board's order, and declared the utility firm affected by the Wagner Act.

At that time Con-Ed was ordered to stop interfering with CIO organizing activities and to cease favoring an AFL company union.

'COURAGEOUS FIGHT'

Commenting on the case, Allan Haywood, chairman of the UWOC, said that "our local, the Amalgamated Utility Workers, has waged a long, courageous fight against one of the biggest corporations in the country, and one whose labor relations deserve the strongest censure.

"This case will go far toward completing organization and assuring workers benefits now subject to management whim. Despite huge annual profits, Con Edison has discharged 6,000 men and women in less than two years—and further layoffs seem imminent to union observers who consider the many forms of speed-up and artificial work elimination now in effect highly detrimental to the security of employes."

Win Closed Shop Pact In New York

New York, Mar. 11. — Thirty-eight members of Local 415, CIO United Photographic Employes, have returned to work with a closed shop contract, a 10% pay increase and a raise in minimum wage rates at the plant of Emil Koudelka, Inc.

The settlement needed a lockout and strike lasting almost eight weeks.

The same local recently signed a contract with the large Barber Photographic Co. in New Jersey and is looking forward to winning other agreements in New York and New Jersey.

Music Group Affiliates With Philly CIO

Philadelphia, Mar. 11. — The Philadelphia Music Center, sponsored by numerous liberal music lovers, has become affiliated with the CIO Industrial Union Council here.

The Center plans to work in conjunction with the council on cultural projects. First of these will be an evening of choral music for officers and leaders of the CIO, to be held Saturday evening, March 18.

YOUR WPA JOB

By James B. Carey

Secretary of the CIO
Chairman, Committee on Unemployment

We are just now being treated with the happy spectacle of everyone joining in a fervent obeisance towards the Mecca of recovery. To this we are glad to say "Amen."

Let us realize that recovery does not occur through simple repetition of the word, that recovery is built upon economic fact, not on rhetoric.

HURTING RECOVERY

Today, especially in Congress and in certain of the most reactionary business groups, those who are shouting recovery the loudest are the ones who are doing the most to damage it. In less than three weeks, if Congress does not act, the WPA will begin throwing out of work a million to two million workers. That would be the most brutal blow against recovery that could be struck at this time.

The effect would be something like the effect upon recovery if the steel industry closed down all at once. Or if the automobile industry stopped every payroll.

INDEX SLIPPING

Look at the index of business since Congress slashed $150,000,000 off the President's request for WPA. It has been slipping downward. I predict that unless Congress makes some adequate provision for our unemployed, the country will stop here and now advancing towards recovery. Take the WPA payroll alone.

It amounts monthly to more than a third of all the wages paid in all the American manufacturing industries. The WPA employes every month more than half the number of workers employed in American manufacturing industries. Slashing this payroll by two-thirds, cutting this employment anywhere from a half to two-thirds, would do more to blast recovery than any conceivable occurrence today.

It does not take much imagination to realize what would happen to the economic health of the country if we turn loose jobless, penniless, hopeless upon the streets of our cities and towns two million workers with more than four million dependents.

That is not recovery. That is chaos.

Mooney Record Available

The record, which includes Mooney's and Olson's speeches, gives a realistic impression of the tense and emotional feeling of the principals and the audience at the proceedings.

Copies are available from the Key Recordings, 103 Park Ave., New York, at $2.00 each. Profits go to the Mooney Defense Committee to aid the fight to release Mooney's fellow victim in the 1916 frame-up, Warren K. Billings.

No Need For Union?

Marenisco, Mich., Mar. 11 — A survey of conditions in 102 upper peninsula lumber camps conducted by Local 12-15 of the Intl. Woodworkers of America has revealed intolerable conditions in camps not under union contract.

Out of 102 jobbers' camps, only 22 had single beds, seven had shower baths, and nine had steam baths. Eighty-six had no bathing facilities at all, 75 had poor ventilation, 63 had poor food and 90 had no pillows.

SEEKING CERTIFICATION

Camps under contract have bath houses, single beds, blankets, pillows, lights, good food and plenty of ventilation.

The union is seeking Labor Board certification on an industry wide basis as bargaining agent for the northern Michigan area. This would pave the way for uniform contracts with numerous small jobbers and break the monopoly of the Hardwood & Hemlock Assn., which has controlled wages and lumber prices in the past.

READY TO BARGAIN

Oakland, Calif., Mar. 11—The Westinghouse porcelain plant is prepared to sign an agreement with the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, Supt. J. W. Ryan has informed the union.

Strikers In 7th Month Appeal For Support

Long Island City, N. Y., Mar. 11.—CIO Furniture Workers are appealing for nation-wide support in their seven months' strike against the Spring Products Corp. of this city.

The strike began August when the employer replied to a request for a contract with a cut in wages and a demand for the open shop in his plant. The 400 strikers, Negro members of the CIO United Furniture Workers, have held their morale firm since that time.

The Furniture Workers have put the company on the unfair list, and ask all unionists and friends of labor to withhold patronage until the strike is settled.

New York CIO Fights Tory Legislation

By SAUL MILLS

NEW YORK.—New York City CIO unions, having an aggregate membership exceeding 500,000, are mobilizing their forces to fight increasing Tory-sponsored legislation, both on a national and local scale, designed to smash organized labor's gains.

The Walsh-Green amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act pending in Congress and the Wicks transit bill before the New York State legislature came in for special condemnation at an emergency conference of presidents, secretaries and legislative representatives of CIO affiliates, held here recently.

Following adoption of a resolution describing the Walsh amendments, Senate Bill 1000, as "union-busting, fostering of company unionism and the shackling of organized labor to the courts," a permanent joint legislative committee was set up to conduct the campaign against this bill in the metropolitan area.

CONTACTING AFL

Delegates voted to contact all local AFL affiliates to impress upon them the dangers of the Walsh amendments. A form resolution condemning the bill was drafted for distribution to all labor and progressive organizations in the city and a post card campaign to the majority and minority leaders of both the Senate and the House was inaugurated.

The conference, held at the headquarters of the Transport Workers Union, voted authorization to the officers of the N. Y. State Industrial Union Council to call a public mass meeting to protest the Walsh amendments, the Wicks bill and other anti-labor legislation pending in Washington and Albany.

AGAINST WICKS BILL

In relation to the fight against the Wicks Bill, which threatens the jobs of thousands of TWU members and if enacted would deprive all city transit workers of their seniority rights, pension benefits and the right to collective bargaining, the conference heard that more than 800 organizations, having an aggregate voting strength of more than 2,000,000, had gone on record in opposition to the bill.

The Wicks Bill, introduced by an upstate Republican who recently was defeated for the post of majority leader of the State Senate, has been condemned by many posts of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Catholic War Veterans and civic, church, political and fraternal organizations. More than 30 AFL unions also have joined the fight against the Wicks Bill.

PLAN MASS MARCH

The conference voted to mass further pressure on legislative leaders and on Mayor LaGuardia, who has not taken any position on the bill. It also was voted to take a mass delegation of "at least 10,000" to Albany when a public hearing is granted.

Chairman of the conference was Gustave Strebel, secretary-treasurer of the State Council. Speakers included Martin Cooper, CIO legislative chairman; Murray Weinstein of the ACWA, Harry Sacher, TWU counsel; Lyle Dowling, TWU legislative representative and Mary Luciel McGorkey of the State, County and Municipal Workers.

Wants Opinion Of 'Sitting Bull' On Sitdowns

San Francisco, Mar. 11—The Supreme Court's decision outlawing sitdown strikes is full of legal phraseology "as complicated as a Japanese apology," the commentator on the daily CIO labor news broadcast here said.

"When you get to defining where a person may sit down and how long he may sit there, you've got a job on your hands," he declared. "It's too bad old Chief Sitting Bull isn't alive to give us an expert opinion on this matter."

Referring to various actions of anti-labor employers which really amount to sitdowns, such as last year's partial sitdown strike of big business against the New Deal, the commentator said the employer's attitude was:

"I'm so discouraged and unhappy about the Wages and Hours Act, the Wagner Act, the Social Security Act, and the WPA, that I haven't the heart to do business any more. I have lost confidence."

START RADIO STATION

Sydney, Australia (FP) — The first radio station in Australia owned and operated by a single labor union will start broadcasting in March when the Professional Employes Institute (radio artists and technicians union) take over Station 2LT at Lithgow, New South Wales. Central labor councils have been operating stations in a number of cities.

Life Insurance Firms Run For Bankers, Union Charges

NEW YORK, Mar. 11.—Interests of policyholders and employes are sacrificed to "the interest of the bankers", the United Office & Professional Workers charged in an attack on the present policies of life insurance executives, as revealed by the government's Monopoly Investigating Committee.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance was also charged with attempting to discredit the work of the committee, by seeking to create the impression that "the union has entered into a conspiracy with the United States government."

The charge was based on press reports quoting Samuel Roth, president of the Employes Fidelity Organization, Metropolitan company union, to the effect that testimony of several of the company's agents showing that managerial intimidation forced the agents to obtain signatures on election ballots for directors in a questionable manner was "part of a CIO plot."

"It is clear that this is an effort to discourage examination into the conditions standing behind the election balloting," an editorial in the union's official organ declared, "which enter the field of the permanent role of management itself."

Fire 13

NEW YORK, Mar. 11 — In and attempt to gag other employes from testifying before the Monopoly Investigating Committee, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., last week fired 13 of its industrial insurance agents. The discharges followed testimony given by the agents exposing faked elections of directors.

CIO Urges U.S. Public Works Dept.

Senate Committee Hears Labor Demand Guarantee of Rights

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11.—CIO approval of the creation of a Federal Department of Public Works including WPA and PWA, and of increases in Social Security benefits, was expressed by Ralph Hetzel, Jr., CIO Unemployment Director, and Alice Liveright, member of the CIO Social Security Committee in testimony at the Senate hearing on the Byrnes bill, S. 1265.

Both statements contained suggestions for improvements in the bill, following lines set forth by the CIO in previous policy statements on public works employment and social security.

CIO PROGRAM

Hetzel's statement quoted five basic points for a public works program laid down by the CIO Convention at Pittsburgh last November:

1. All workers should be employed on work suited to their needs and skill.
2. Projects should be socially necessary and productive.
3. Jobs should be given for all without humiliating means tests.
4. Funds should be appropriated to meet current needs as they arise.
5. Guarantees of collective bargaining rights.

Following these points, Hetzel urged that the Brynes measure should provide "employment and a means of livelihood for unemployed workers at times when and as long as private industry cannot use their services."

UNION RIGHTS URGED

Guarantees of collective bargaining rights were also asked, both to allow workers "to form, join or assist labor organization, to bargain collectively through organizations of their own choosing, or to engage in concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection."

At the same time, Hetzel urged "that no contract shall be awarded to any person who at the time of such an award shall be interfering with, restraining or coercing his employes in the exercise of their rights."

WHITE COLLAR PROJECTS

Protection of certain types of WPA projects unprovided for in the Byrnes bill was urged. These include WPA projects for women, clerical and white collar workers, musicians, teachers, artists, etc. Hetzel also pointed out that protection for unemployed farm workers should be included, "upon projects that will permit them to remain in the community where they reside."

Finally, Hetzel urged, in the name of the CIO, that the bill include provision to make full use of the U. S. Employment Service, and that this be kept as at present under the U. S. Labor Dept. "Labor is strongly opposed to taking the Employment Service out of the Labor Dept.," he said.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Mrs. Liveright's statement dealt with the Social Security aspects of the Byrnes bill, pointing out as Hetzel did that the CIO regarded the whole question as one of the utmost importance to all workers in the country.

Mrs. Liveright touched on four points in the proposed bill: (1) Approval of the principles of Federal control of personnel of state Social Security agencies on a merit basis ; (2) Approval of the principle of variable grants to the states so that poorer states are not handicapped in comparison to wealthier ones; (3) Approval of more Federal standards governing state laws; (4) Urged prohibition of discrimination of any kind against recipients of Social Security benefits.

Pushover

BAYONNE, N. J., Mar. 11—A Labor Board election among employes of the Conmar Co., here, was won overwhelmingly by the United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers. Opposed on the ballot by the AFL Metal Polishers, the CIO union won by a vote of 305 to 23.

Sponsor

Sen. James F. Byrnes, sections of whose new relief bill have won CIO endrosement. The senator is presiding at committee hearings on his measure.

207 Deaths From Silicosis

This was the evidence placed before the House Committee of Public Health and Sanitary Affairs by a delegation from the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union, CIO. The miners were demanding new legislation aimed at cutting the devastating death rate among employes of the Anaconda Copper Mines.

Corporation lawyers said the proposed bill was "unconstitutional."

ARSENIC POISONING

Anaconda smeltermen were represented by John Emmons, who introduced two victims of arsenic poisoning, whose nostrils were partially eaten away.

"Every employe in the arsenic department," he said, "is in pretty much the same condition."

The delegation, consisting of 70 miners and their wives, showed a pile of death certificates. In each case, they said, death came either directly from silicosis or from conditions to which silicosis was a contributing factor.

Fink Heads Fake Union In Portland

Portland, Ore., Mar. 11—The AFL local at the Southeast Portland Lumber Co. is not only a company union, National Labor Relations Board hearings are demonstrating, but its president is a veteran strikebreaker.

Patrick Duane, head of Local 28-78 of the Lumber and Sawmill Workers, AFL, broke down and confessed he has scabbed half way across the nation. At one time a paid fink on the iron range in Hibbing, Minn., he also served as a strikebreaker in a western Oregon strike.

At present a deputy sheriff, he always packs a gun, Duane admitted during cross-examination in the union's petition for certification as sole bargaining agency at the lumber mill.

The fake union is also seeking certification at the nearby Kingsley mill, where it claimed that 97 out of the 99 employes supported their claim. Investigation showed that only five members —the officers—are in good standing, and that numerous strawbosses signed the petition.

Violence Again At Westwood

By MIRIAM ALLEN deFORD

Westwood, Cal.—Vigilantism is running riot once more in this California lumber town. New "deportations" of CIO lumber workers are threatened.

First fights broke up a hearing of Earlton Shannon, AFL business agent, on a charge of assaulting the wife of a CIO worker, and 20 CIO workers were injured in street attacks, some of them by hammer blows. A mob of 300 attacked CIO headquarters and reduced it to splinters.

APPEAL TO OLSON

A delegation from the CIO appealed to liberal Gov. Culbert Olson, who responded by announcing that he would send the National Guard here if disorder did not stop at once. State officials commented on the "remarkably clean record" of the CIO in this dispute.

In San Francisco, Mrs. Alice Rosseter, regional director of the NLRB, notified the Washington office of the new crisis, which will inevitably delay any consent election at the Red River Lumber Co.

EXAMINE BOOKS

Meanwhile, a certified public accountant selected by Gov. Olson is going over the firm's books to determine the truth of the company's claim that it cannot restore the 17½ per cent wage cut of last summer, the initial cause of the entire trouble.

For several days CIO workers were chased like rabbits through the streets by armed bands of vigilantes, or caught and beaten and their CIO buttons torn from their coats. The State Highway Patrol is now covering the main business streets, the only part of the town not the property of the company.

IWA COMMENTS

"The local law is stacked against us," said George Graf of the Intl. Woodworkers of America. "The deputies are the same ones who ran us out of town last July."

The Governor responded that "when local officers won't enforce the law, we shall have to send in the National Guard." He criticized the AFL for "creating disturbance while both unions were trying to obtain a pay-cut restoration from the company. The bitter animosity will have to die out before any permanent peace can be effected. There is real difficulty ahead."

They Liked WPA Show

East Coast Seamen Sign Three New Pacts

New York, March 11—Three contracts covering about 325 unlicensed seamen on ten freight ships were signed last week by the National Maritime Union. Eight of the ships belong to C. D. Mallory, one to the Intl. Freighting Corp. and one to Boland & Cornelius, coal carrier.

642 SHIPS COVERED

A total of 56 companies employing nearly 30,000 men on 642 vessels are now under union contract, the NMU announced.

Mallory and Intl. Freighting signed the blanket agreement, with some of the terms improved, now in force on most East Coast passenger and freight lines. Boland & Cornelius signed the blanket collier agreement.

In the IFC agreement, the wage scale was raised $10 above the scale in the blanket agreement, and was increased $5 in the B & C contract. Other provisions of the new agreements include overtime pay, closed shop, hiring through the union hall and arbitration of disputes.

UNITY TALKS CONTINUE; NEXT MEETING MARCH 24

Peace Meetings Resume

CIO, AFL Plans Discussed In New York

(See Stories Page Three)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18 — Conferences between CIO and AFL representatives are to be resumed in Washington, March 24, following a series of sessions in New York City.

During the recess, President William Green of the AFL has announced that a meeting of the Federation's executive council will be held March 22, to consider some of the questions raised by the CIO in the conferences.

Under consideration by the conferees are the CIO proposal to bring AFL, CIO and the railroad Brotherhoods into one united American Congress of Labor; and a counter-proposal by the AFL that negotiations be resumed at the point where they broke off in December, 1937.

Resolutions and wires continued to pour in on CIO headquarters from all sections of the labor movement testifying to the widespread popularity of the CIO proposal to bring all unions under one roof as soon as possible.

Rap Army, Navy 'War' On Labor

Washington, Mar. 18.—Action of the War and Navy Departments in cooperating with the National Association of Manufacturers to kill the Barkley amendment to the National Defense Bill was condemned today by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel.

The bill would have made contractors supplying the government's defense needs abide by the terms of the Wagner Act.

In a letter to CIO affiliates (see page 5), Pressman said the fight will go on. In his Labor and the Law column (see page seven), the CIO attorney declared:

"This country has not yet reached the stage where the control over the destinies of the American people is to be placed in the hands of a few reactionary generals rather than in the hands of the representatives of the people."

To Name Date For Wagner Act Hearings

(See Other Stories, Page Five)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18.—The Senate Committee on Education and Labor will convene on Tuesday, Mar. 21, presumably to set the date for hearings on amendments to the Wagner Act.

Sen. Elbert Thomas, it was understood here, wished to postpone the hearings still further, in order that they might not interfere with unity negotiations between the CIO and the AFL.

Sen. Robert Taft, Ohio Republican, was one of those who pressed for immediate hearings. Sen. Walsh, another member of the committee, is sponsor of the amendments offered by Pres. Green of the federation.

DEVELOPMENTS

In Tampa, Fla., AFL cigar workers called upon CIO Pres. Lewis to help fight the amendments.

Cong. V. Harrington of Iowa was under sharp attack from the Sioux City Industrial Union Council, which accused him of going back on election promises when he attacked the National Labor Relations Board in Congress recently.

World's Fair Theme Used By Pickets

New York, Mar. 18—The "World of Tomorrow"—theme of New York's World Fair—made its first appearance on a picket sign this week as the American Advertising Guild, CIO, opened a fight against the Gussow, Kahn & Co. agency.

The Guild, an affiliate of the United Office and Professional Workers, charged that the firm has paid salaries as low as $12 and $14 weekly, violated the wage-hour act and intimidated employes from joining the union.

The picket signs were the work of experienced advertising copy writers, layout men and artists. Slogans included: "The World's Fair, but Gussow, Kahn isn't"; and "Gussow, Kahn employes are 99.44 per cent poor."

Local Shows Big Majority

Omaha, Neb., Mar. 18 — Certification of Local 8, United Packinghouse Workers, as bargaining agent at the Omaha plant of Armour & Co. appeared certain today when the local showed 760 paid-up membership cards out of the 930 workers.

CIO Wins Sugar Poll, 296–36

Houston, Tex., Mar. 18—The United Sugar Refinery Workers Local Industrial Union No. 917 won an overwhelming victory, 296 to 36, and was designated as sole collective bargaining agency in a consent election conducted by the National Labor Relations Board at Sugarland, Tex., 30 miles from here.

Maurice Dineen, CIO representative, said that negotiations for a contract would be renewed immediately. He pointed out that the victory was the first in the south giving sugar refinery workers' union sole bargaining rights.

The Imperial Sugar Company owns and controls the entire town in which the plants are located. The union was organized in November. Three years ago the American Federation of Labor attempted to organize the town but failed.

UAW SIGNS

Brooklyn, N. Y.—A four-week strike by 45 members of Local 259 of the United Automobile Workers against the Fred Roeder Manufacturing Co., one of New York's biggest truck body makers, ended with the signing of a union shop contract.

CIO Legislators Win Praise

Cheyenne, Wyom., Mar. 18. — Two CIO union members elected to the Wyoming legislature received an approving slap on the back in an editorial in the Wyoming Eagle here for their work during the session which recently adjourned.

According to the editorial, the two men, David Gilfillan of Superior, and A. L. Zeiher of Reliance, "who make their living by digging coal in the coal mines in Sweetwater county, were definitely the outstanding members of the house of representatives."

Hear Relief Demand

Charge Health Plan Used Against Coal Union Miners

NEW YORK, Mar. 18.—Miners in the Applachian coal fields have $6,000,000 a year taken out of their pay by the coal companies for medical care under a system so riddled with abuse and dishonest practices that it is little short of scandalous.

The study, made by a staff of trained investigators, gives much force to the demand for adequate medical care and hospitalization set forth as one of the points in the statement of policy drawn up by the United Mine Workers as a basis for negotiations for a new agreement now going on in New York between UMW officials and bituminous operators.

122,000 MINERS AFFECTED

According to the Bureau's survey, 122,000 miners in southern West Virginia, Virginia, eastern Kentucky and northern Tennessee, have had $2,500,000 deducted from their pay checks under the "check-off" medical care system. In addition they have been forced to pay $1,000,000 in extra charges for physicians' services, $2,000,000 for hospitalization, and $500,000 in extra charges for hospital care.

The investigators interviewed nearly 800 miners and their wives, 75 physicians, and a number of other interested persons.

OPERATORS' PROFIT

They found that a large part of the $2,500,000 checked off for medical care, "is going in unjustifiable profits to the operators and contract doctors, for an unsatisfactory, disorganized type of medical service over which the employes have no control, and with which they are very much dissatisfied."

Facts collected in the field by the staff showed that in many places a sizeable share of the sums checked off from the miners' pay was pocketed by the companies, while in other places, contract doctors who receive as much as $2,400 a month, hire assistants for half this amount or less to do their work.

WEAPON AGAINST MEN

Company doctors do not have to live in the vicinity of the mines. One case is cited of a contract doctor who lived in Philadelphia.

As the present system works out, the coal company doctor, rather than being a benefit to the miners, is "one of the company's most powerful weapons against the men," Dr. Kingsley Roberts, the Bureau's medical director said, in releasing the report.

In some instances the company doctor is used as a means of discharging men in violation of the union contract, by a false diagnosis of low or high blood pressure, leaky heart, or other ailment which the man does not have. "This kind of discharge is frequently used as a means of getting rid of men who are especially active in the union," the report states.

ROBBED WORKERS

Company doctors are also used by the companies to prevent miners from receiving just cash benefits under the workmen's compensation laws, the report brings out. Cases cited include one of a miner killed while carrying explosives, reported by the doctor as "suicide."

Another miner whose back was broken in the mine and who contracted pneumonia afterward while in the hospital, dying three days later, was reported by the hospital to have died of "natural causes."

One doctor lost his job because he reported a miner's death as due to carbon monoxide poisoning, instead of "stomach trouble" as the company suggested. A man who lost his eye in a mine accident was reported by the doctor as having nothing wrong with him.

A miner with a broken back was declared to have a "bad sprain"; another also with a broken back, was reported to have died of "meningitis."

BARED BY POLAKOV

Dr. Walter N. Polakov, director of research engineering for the United Mine Workers first called the attention of the Bureau of Cooperative Medicine to the abuses coal miners suffer under the present medical care system, in an address given before the National Health Conference at Washington in July, 1938.

The Bureau's survey was financed by a fund for medical economics left by the late philanthropist, Edward A. Filene. It is administered by two trustees each from the Twentieth Century and the Good Will Funds.

LEATHER STRIKE

Hoboken, N. J. — (FP) — Two hundred members of Local 34, Natl. Leather Workers Union, CIO, have struck against the R. Neumann Co., leather tanners, protesting a company proposal which would reduce the number of workers.

CIO Local 'Calm And Collected' Despite Attack

PENSACOLA, Fla., Mar. 18. — The traditional method of union-busting — shots in the dark and anonymous notes — is being employed here to try to persuade workers in Newport Industries not to join District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America.

Joe Tolbert, Negro leader in the newly-formed union in the plant, had a quiet evening at home punctured by a gang of hoodlums who drove past his home firing charges of birdshop at doors and windows, and departed leaving a threatening note behind.

The note read, "This is a warning to you and your friends to not vote on anything or join anything if you want to live and do well. And tell that man that's going from house to house telling you all what to do that he's on the spot if he stays here. And if you Negroes want to live OK stay out of any kind of ? This is just a sample if you don't take warning!"

REVERSE EFFECT

The note had a reverse effect, however, for Field Representative Maxwell, "the man that's going from house to house," reported that the most successful meeting of the union was held after the incident.

The union immediately appointed a committee to visit the Pensacola Chief of Police to urge action on the case. The committee offered a list of five suspects and promised to secure samples of their handwriting for comparison with the note.

PROMISE PROBE

Police are now patroling the plant and the county sheriff has promised an investigation. The union is pushing the case and will supply evidence. To counteract the local newspapers' interpretation of the shooting as just further "labor trouble" the Local adopted a resolution which received much favorable publicity.

It described that attack as a "craven and cowardly attempt to intimidate union members through gunfire," caused by "anti-labor ruffians and those who encourage them in such un-American practices."

"We publicly and contemptuously condemn the un-American vigilante tactics of these hoodlums," it continued, "which leave us collectively cool, calm and collected."

AFL Strikers Greet Brophy

John Brophy, CIO director, gets a warm smile from striking AFL hotel employes when he joined their picket line in front of the swank Mayflower Hotel, in Washington, D. C. Brophy told the strikers that CIO supports all bona fide workers' struggles for better conditions.

Plan Drive On Western Union

NEW YORK, Mar. 18.—A concerted organizing drive to bring the 42,000 employes of the Western Union Telegraph Co. into the American Communications Assn. CIO, was announced this week by Mervyn Rathborne, ACA president.

Proposed merger of the company with the Postal Telegraph & Cable Co., is the immediate cause of the drive, Rathborne said, as the jobs of the employes of both concerns must be protected.

Decision to undertake the organization of Western Union workers was made at a meeting of the Intl. Executive Board of the ACA held in New York. In his report to the Board, Rathborne declared:

"There is one job facing us today which ranks as the most important task ever assayed by our union—the complete and speedy organization in the American Communications Assn. of the employes of the Western Telegraph Co.

"The policies of Western Union and Postal Telegraph have placed the jobs of 55,000 workers in jeopardy. Both companies have for a long time cherished the thought of a merger that would mean absolute monopoly in the field.

MERGER BILL IN CONGRESS

"That they are driving toward merger right now is clearly indicated by the White Bill (S. 1520) recently introduced into the U. S. Senate, which by making certain changes in the Communications Act of 1934, would permit merger of these two companies without any provision for the protection of the telegraph workers.

"We must fight this vicious bill and we will. But the defeat of the White Bill alone is no solution to the problems which beset the communications workers. The only way they can get the protection which is rightfully theirs is through organization.

"The Postal Telegraph workers are organized into the ACA. Our job now is the organization of the workers employed by Western Union."

Shoe Union Maps New Campaign

Washington, Mar. 18—The general executive board of the United Shoe Workers of America today launched plans for an extensive union organizing campaign in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Maine and upper New York State.

Meeting for their first session of the year, the board members decided to concentrate efforts in the "stitch-down" branch of the shoe industry.

SEND GREETINGS

The board also sent greetings to nine union organizers now imprisoned in Auburn, Me., on frame-up convictions of a hoary state statute which purports to outlaw "conspiracies" to injure the business of a corporation.

The nine prisoners, whose imprisonment dates from the shoe strike in Lewiston and Auburn two years ago, were given a pledge by the GEB "of complete support in every effort to obtain your freedom."

PLAN HEARING

Washington, Mar. 18.—A public hearing dealing with occupations in plants manufacturing explosives hazardous for minors between 16 and 18 has been announced by the U. S. Children's Bureau for Mar. 28 in the U. S. Departmental Auditorium opening at 10 A. M.

Labor Unity Meet Continues

Ask $150,000,000 For WPA to Save Million Jobs

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18.—Do you dare to drop 400,000 workers from the WPA rolls during the first week in April?

This was the blunt challenge hurled at the "economy" bloc in Congress this week by Pres. Roosevelt, as he renewed his demand for quick passage of a relief deficiency appropriation of $150,000,000.

The President warned that if the money is not forthcoming, an additional 600,000 persons will have to be dropped on May 1, and 200,000 more early in June.

"I cannot bring myself to believe that these discharged men and women will contribute to the prosperity of the United States, nor do I believe that the merchants and landlords they are now dealing with will become more prosperous when their trade ceases," the Chief Executive said.

WPA EXPENDITURES

He pointed out that of every $100 spent by WPA, $86 is spent directly for wages, $10.50 for materials, equipment and supplies, and only $3.50 for administration.

Roosevelt recalled that his earlier demand for $875,000,000 had been pared down by $150,000,000 in Congress, though with the proviso that not more than 5 per cent of the WPA workers could be dismissed before the end of March.

"Since my messages of January and February," he added, "a careful checkup shows that there has been no substantial change in the conditions of unemployment. On the contrary, recent data have become available substantiating the real need for an additional appropriation of $150,000,000."

FEW JOBS IN INDUSTRY

Improving business conditions will account for no more than 300,000 new jobs, he estimated. There are now about three and a half million people on WPA; if no new funds are made available by Congress, this number will have to be slashed to only two million by the end of the government's fiscal year on June 30.

The President took a sharp rap at those who desire to see the relief burden thrown back on the local communities.

"I am of the opinion," he said, "that states, counties and municipalities are doing, in the overwhelming majority of cases, all that their finances will permit to meet the situation."

CIO Backs Plea For WPA Funds

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18—The CIO today mobilized its strength behind Pres. Roosevelt's renewed demand for $150,000,000 WPA funds.

That sum, Ralph Hetzel, Jr., CIO unemployment director told Rep. Edward Taylor, head of the House Appropriations Committee,

RALPH HETZEL, Jr.
CIO Unemployment Director

"is not enough to do the WPA job adequately, but it will prevent a very serious nationwide emergency."

Hetzel said that numerous CIO affiliates had been told by their Congressmen and Senators that the low deficiency appropriation bill passed last January would have won little support if it had not left the door open for additional funds at this time.

SET-BACK TO RECOVERY

"It is hard to believe that anyone could sincerely question the fact that the failure to provide the $150,000,000 would create a serious emergency in the nation," he declared. "It would create among the unemployed a suffering unequalled by anything since the present Administration began.

"It would, in addition, strike a blow to recovery strong enough to wipe out most of the gains which have already been made."

In urging Congress to act hastily on the matter, Hetzel warned that delay will mean widespread firings—creating panic "not only among the unemployed but among the landlords, their grocers, their coal merchants and all of the millions of tradesmen who benefit from WPA wage expenditures."

Office Union Board Meets In Chicago

Chicago, Mar. 18—The general executive board of the United Office and Professional Workers, meeting in session here, won praise from John Brophy, CIO director, "for many advances in a difficult field, in the face of opposition from some of the most powerful concentrations of finance capital in the country."

OTHER ACTIONS

1. Sent fraternal greetings to Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers, CIO.
2. Elected Miss Alice Smith of Indianapolis to fill a board vacancy.
3. Asked Sen. Elbert Thomas to postpone indefinitely hearings on amendments to the Wagner Act.

Miners Ask Pay Raise

New York, Mar. 18.—A six-hour day, wage increases of 50c a day, vacations with pay and a guarantee of 200 working days a year were among the demands presented by the United Mine Workers of America, as negotiations opened with the Appalachian soft-coal operators.

Some 400 representatives of the miners and operators gathered in the ballroom of the Biltmore Hotel to begin negotiations for a new contract to replace the one which expires on March 31.

Walter L. Robison, a Cleveland operator, was elected chairman of the joint conference and Thomas Kennedy of the UMWA, secretary. President John L. Lewis of the UMWA introduced Vice-President Philip Murray, who read the statement of policy adopted by the international policy committee of the UMWA and explained the union's demands.

OPERATORS WANT CUT

The operators countered the next day with a proposal that discussions begin on the terms of the agreement that expired in March, 1937, under which wages were 50c lower than the present scale. Charles O'Neill, their spokesman, argued that the miners' demands would mean a large increase in costs, which the industry could not afford.

Lewis replied to O'Neill's arguments, declaring that the proposed wage increases would not increase production costs by 66c a ton, as O'Neill contended, but only by 27c a ton.

Harlan Represented

New York, Mar. 18 — The Harlan County Coal Operators Association was represented for the first time in the union negotiations, due to the establishment of collective bargaining during the past year in what was formerly known as "bloody Harlan County."

To Resume Parleys In Ten Days

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18.—Following a series of conferences in New York, unity negotiations between the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor recessed for ten days, to reopen in Washington March 24 at the U. S. Department of Labor.

The New York conferences were devoted to discussion of the CIO proposal to bring AFL, CIO and the railroad Brotherhoods under one roof in an all-inclusive American Congress of Labor; and to a counter-proposal on the part of the AFL to go back to the point where the negotiations of December, 1937 were broken off.

Evidence of an enthusiastic reaction to the CIO peace proposal was seen in a large number of wires, letters and resolutions from CIO, AFL and railroad Brotherhood groups, endorsing it as the best plan yet offered for speedy and effective labor unity.

The December 1937 unity conferences broke down when the executive council, meeting in Washington, insisted on the original AFL proposal to admit at once only suspended CIO unions subject to certain craft limitations, leaving all other CIO unions outside until jurisdictional differences could be adjusted with the AFL internationals concerned.

ASK AFL POSITION

In discussing the AFL proposal at the New York conferences, the CIO representatives inquired as to the AFL position on the present jurisdictions of the CIO unions which were originally in the AFL. Conferences were then adjourned, to enable the AFL representatives to consult with Federation officials and President William Green announced that there would be a meeting of the AFL executive council in Washington on Mar. 22.

In announcing the council meeting, Green declared: "It was pointed out that several of these unions have extended the jurisdiction under which they formerly operated under AFL charters to new branches of industry.

"The executive council will be asked to decide at its meeting on March 22 whether these unions could be re-admitted to the AFL with charters."

Both the CIO proposal and the AFL counter-proposal are still under consideration, without any commitment being announced by either side.

The CIO proposal calls for separate conventions of the CIO and AFL during April to approve plans for a unity convention at which AFL, CIO and the railroad Brotherhoods would be represented.

CONGRESS OF LABOR

This convention would organize an all-inclusive American Congress of Labor, and both John L. Lewis and William Green would be ineligible to election to office, the presidency going to a member of the railroad Brotherhoods.

Under the CIO plan, the executive board of the American Congress of Labor would be composed equally of representatives of the CIO and AFL, with proportionate representation for the railroad Brotherhoods.

President Roosevelt would be asked to preside over the unity convention, and during the year following the organization of the ACL, the U. S. Department of Labor and its conciliation bureau would be asked to cooperate in mediating jurisdictional controversies between unions.

Wires Say CIO Plan Popular

Washington, Mar. 18.—A flood of telegrams and letters is pouring into CIO headquarters here praising the CIO plan for a united labor movement to include CIO, AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods in one American Congress of Labor.

The telegrams come from all labor sources, CIO, AFL and Brotherhoods, and urge that the CIO Committee stick to the plan as the most acceptable to the great mass of American workers.

HONORABLE PEACE

The messages from CIO unions stress the need for an honorable peace, and pledge their undivided support to John L. Lewis and the other CIO representatives in their efforts to unite the labor movement in one powerful organization.

To date 45 locals of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, affiliated to the CIO Textile Workers Organizing Committee, have wired their approval and support for the CIO unity moves.

AFL LOCALS PRAISE PLAN

Typical of AFL local and state bodies supporting the CIO plan for unity of the three organized labor groups is a message from the Salt Lake City, Utah, Federation of Labor, which wired to President Lewis urging "amalgamation of all three labor factions."

Appeasing the Chiseler

The Barkley amendment to the National Defense Bill was attacked by the National Association of Manufacturers as "lending a hollow note to talk of business appeasement."

All the Barkley amendment proposed to do was to deny government contracts under the program to concerns which break the law governing workers' collective bargaining rights.

In Europe the word "appeasement" has come to mean granting violent aggressors all they want at the expense of peaceful and democratic peoples.

In this sense, the N.A.M. used the word aptly. For by killing the Barkley amendment, Congress has "appeased" chiseling and law-breaking employers at the expense not only of labor but also of fair employes who observe the law in respect to collective bargaining.

Things have come to a pretty pass when Congress thus encourages the breaking of laws which it has itself enacted.

For this is what it does when it permits government contracts to be awarded to anti-labor corporations which can underbid the fair employer because they deny to employes their legal collective bargaining rights.

The experience of the Barkley amendment will spur labor and all believers in governmental honesty and consistency to redoubled efforts for enactment of legislation to compel observance of the law on all government contract work.

A National Emergency

The unemployed have been knocking at the doors of Congress for some time asking for bread. But about all they have been offered so far is a fancy assortment of stones.

The first stone was a vicious slash in the appropriation necessary to keep WPA going. This was passed off as "economy."

Then when President Roosevelt called attention to the urgent need of another $150,000,000 for WPA, Congress turned a deaf ear and offered delays.

Now this urgency has become an emergency. A million and a quarter human beings will be deprived of their meager livelihood from WPA jobs in the next few weeks, if money is not voted.

So now the Congressional foes of "spending" are offering the unemployed the stony comfort of an investigation of WPA.

But human misery cannot wait upon political investigations —particularly when these are intended chiefly as a maneuver to delay or block the voting of funds.

This same cry of "investigation" was raised to block the first WPA appropriation in January. But once the reduced appropriation was voted, the politicoes lost interest in their proposed probe.

The present emergency is a desperate one for millions of unemployed and their families. It is nearly as serious for countless businessmen whose goods are bought with WPA wages. And it threatens recovery generally with withdrawal of millions of dollars of purchasing power from circulation.

The CIO joins with President Roosevelt in sounding the alarm. It calls on all its unions and members to add their voices to those of the unemployed in demanding that Congress quit stalling and vote the extra $150,000,000 needed for WPA without further delay.

Name Shoe Pay Board

Washington, Mar. 18.—Appointment of the Industry Committee for the shoe manufacturing and allied industries was announced this week by Elmer F. Andrews, administrator of the wage-hour law.

Composed of nine representatives each for the employes, employers and the public, the committee will be required to recommend a minimum wage schedule covering some 215,000 workers in the shoe industry.

Four representatives of the United Shoe Workers of America, CIO, are included on the employes committee. They are Powers Hapgood, Indianapolis, Ind., USWA director, and three members of the general executive board — C. Frank Farrell, New York City; Henry A. Schwarzett, St. Louis, Mo.; and Mrs. Mae Young, Lynn, Mass.

Of the other five labor representatives, four are from the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, AFL, and one is from the Brotherhood of Shoe and Allied Craftsmen, independent.

Francis J. Haas, dean of the School of Social Science at Catholic University, Washington, is chairman of the committee.

Looking Ahead

Unity in Action

When the United Mine Workers and the coal operators open their negotiations, it is like a great convention.

Hundreds of union representatives and employers gather together in the same hall, elect a chairman and secretary, adopt rules of procedure and listen to the presentation of the point of view and proposals of both sides.

Subcommittees are then named to carry on the more detailed negotiations. But these subcommittees must report back finally to the whole assembly, and the democratic forms of convention procedure are followed throughout.

Coal negotiations have become a model of orderly and effective collective bargaining. The knottiest problems are regularly worked out with the minimum of friction and waste motion.

A huge industry and hundreds of thousands of workers are represented in these negotiations. They are collective bargaining on the largest scale ever attempted.

This type of procedure on such a scale is made possible by complete union recognition and almost 100 per cent organization throughout the industry.

Two Conferences

The Appalachian Bituminous Joint Conference of the United Mine Workers and the coal operators began its sessions in the same New York hotel where another series of labor conferences were being held at almost the same time.

In a small suite on another floor, seven representatives of the CIO and the AFL conferred, to see whether the country's labor unions could not also get together to work out their differences and problems in an orderly and democratic fashion.

Observers of both conferences noted that interests as divergent as those of coal operators and mine workers could be represented together in a common conference; and they wondered why the country's labor movements could not do likewise.

That in essence is what the CIO proposes in its peace plan. The basis of common conferences in the coal industry is complete mutual recognition. If AFL and CIO are willing to recognize the rights of their respective unions in both bodies, and to accord them proper representation, there is no reason why CIO, AFL and the railroad Brotherhoods cannot all sit down together in a common convention to work out their common problems.

Goal of Workers

The goal of an American Congress of Labor, or a similar body with another name, represents the fervent desire of most American workers who want to see labor really united by bringing all unions under one roof.

The first step in this direction is the mutual recognition and common conference, with all unions represented, which the CIO proposes.

The forms of unity which are now under discussion between CIO and AFL are means to an end, rather than an end in themselves. The main end is united action for labor's common purposes.

Without waiting for formal unity, there are many fields on which labor can already act unitedly.

Labor's open-shop enemies may try to play off one union against another. But basically they aim to cripple all effective labor organization. And right now they are concentrating on a number of legislative schemes to bring this about.

The anti-labor initiatives on the West Coast were opposed by both CIO and AFL unions. A similar united front is necessary to block the other anti-union moves which are being made in the present Congress.

The strength of labor's enemies in Congress is shown by the disgraceful manner in which the Barkley amendment to the National Defense Bill was scuttled.

This amendment simply proposes that government business in connection with the defense program should not go to chiseling concerns which refuse to accord to their employes the collective bargaining rights required by law.

The CIO, for its part, is determined to keep up the fight until this reasonable principle is applied to all government contract work.

But this is not the concern of the CIO alone. It is the concern of all labor organizations, regardless of affiliation. On this issue both CIO and AFL unions can and must act unitedly for the common benefit of all labor.

Defense of Wagner Act

Defense of the Wagner labor relations act is another issue on which united action is both possible and urgent.

Regardless of partisan claims of favoritism, the act has brought the greatest benefits to all of labor.

By encouraging shortsighted and partisan amendments, the act's enemies seek to play off one section of labor against another, while they prepare a wholesale attack on the act itself.

Many AFL bodies have already joined with the CIO in defense of the Wagner Act against amendment and emasculation, and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen has also taken a similar position.

This is labor unity in action—and we need more of it.

Wagner Act Hearings May Be Set March 21

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18.—Labor has again forced postponement of hearings on the proposed amendments designed to destroy the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

The Senate Committee on Education and Labor, headed by Senator Elbert D. Thomas of Utah, announced that hearings would again be held over. One Senator, Republican Taft of Ohio, demanded immediate hearings. The Senate Committee, however, announced it would meet Tuesday, March 21, when it will take up the question again.

The postponement is the direct result of thousands of letters and telegrams pouring on in the Committee from CIO, AFL and other organizations demanding that the Act be left alone.

In the meantime the campaign should be kept up. Write and wire to Senator Elbert D. Thomas, chairman, Senate Committee on Education and Labor, Senate Office Bldg., Washington, D. C., and to your own Senators and Representatives.

Unions Blast Tory Speech by Iowa Congressman

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Mar. 18.—Cong. Vincent Harrington will think twice when next he wants to attack the Wagner Act and the National Labor Relations Board.

In a hot letter, the Sioux City Industrial Union Council told the Congressman that his last speech against the Board must have resulted either from "extreme ignorance" or "the completion of a deal made with big moneyed interests."

"IGNORANCE OR FALSEHOOD"

Harrington, the letter said, had totally misrepresented the facts at a recent strike in the Swift packing plant here. It charged that "only ignorance or deliberate falsehood can account for the statement that the CIO union was in the minority."

"We expect an apology and a complete explanation," the council told the Congressman. "You have betrayed us by bitterly attacking the most progressive piece of legislation ever enacted.

"We will always support the New Deal and we expect those whom we elect to be faithful to their electors."

Fight on Act Labeled As Blind Hatred

Waukesha, Wis., Mar. 18—The Central Labor Union (AFL) here has put the finger on the AFL top leadership drive to cripple the Wagner Act, describing it as due to "blind and unreasoning hatred of a great labor organization."

The description came from Henry J. Oettinger, vice president of the CLU, in reply to an attack by state federation leaders on the central body's opposition to amendments to the Act, expressed in a resolution some time ago. Henry Ohl, state AFL president, and J. J. Handley, secretary, accused "CIO elements" in the Waukesha group and its president, Gordon M. Hey, in particular of sabotaging the AFL and of having "sinister motives."

"SINISTER ACTIONS"

"Ohl and Handley are correct if seeking labor peace and trying to hold legislative gains are sinister actions," Oettinger replied.

comes a resolution saying: "Resolved, that the proposed plan for an American Congress of Labor to include all railway organizations meets the approval of this lodge and we hope for its speedy accomplishment."

Local 266, Butchers, Tanners, Fish Butchers and Poultry Workers of Santa Cruz, Calif., "wishes to second efforts of your organization to bring unity to the American labor movement," as does the Tri-City Central Council of Goose Creek, Tex. In Providence, R. I., Local 94 of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners writes "we are looking forward to and hoping for any early settlement."

In Shelton, Wash., Local 161 of the AFL Pulp and Sulphite Workers threatens to withdraw from the AFL if unity is not achieved.

CIO UNIONS BACK PLAN

CIO national unions, locals and state and city organizations are 100 per cent behind the CIO stand on unity and urge acceptance of the CIO proposal as the most effective means of securing it.

The Intl. Longshoremen and Warehousemen in Seattle sent a wire: "Kindly accept our 100 per cent endorsement of plan outlined by you for American Congress of Labor."

CANNERY UNION

In Maine, 26,000 members of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee added their support. Speaking for 127,000 CIO workers in the Cannery and Agricultural Workers, Don Henderson, president, wired Lewis: "Our union wishes to express to you and members of CIO negotiating committee complete support of your efforts to achieve unity in labor movement."

The list of CIO affiliatees supporting the proposal is much too long to give in detail. It includes unions from every section of the country, from every industry.

More AFL Affiliates Join Drive To Protect Wagner Act

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18.—AFL unions continue to pile up protests against attempts to amend the Wagner Act out of existence and against unfair attacks on the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

Here are a few of their comments, picked from statements of AFL local, district and state officers and organizations.

In Chicago, Victor Olander, head of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, had this bouquet for the work of the Labor Board in carrying out the provisions of the Act:

"I will say on behalf of the American, the Chicago and the Illinois Federation of Labor, and all of the affiliated organizations, that we feel we have received the fairest treatment at the hands of the NLRB examiner. I am very grateful to him for his fair attitude. Everyone of us would like to thank him."

ELECTRICAL WORKERS

Local organizations of the AFL feel as strongly as Mr. Olander does that attacks on the Board and the Act should be resisted. Local 677 of the Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, for example, writes from Pueblo, Col:

"We do very definitely oppose such amendments proposed by those who are known enemies of the principles of collective bargaining. We feel it behooves the organized labor movement of Colorado to vigorously oppose any tactics curtailing the benefits derived from the Act and to give their undivided support in behalf of the NLRB so that employes in industry will be protected."

TO THE LAST DITCH

The Employes Joint Council of Salt Lake City wrote to Senator Borah saying that workers would "fight to the last ditch with what resources they have any attempt to detour or impair the fundamental objects of the Act."

The Laundry Workers (AFL) of Hot Springs, Ark., passed a resolution putting themselves on record as "opposed to any amendments to the Act whatsoever." The Inter-Mountain Typographical Conference of Denver resolved to "join with the progressive organizations of America in their protests against any alteration or amendment of the law as it now stands." Local 80, Hotel and Restaurant Employes, of Washington did the same.

The Hod Carriers of Ste. Genevieve, Mo., resolved "That the Wagner Labor Relations Act stand as now administered, which has been upheld as constitutional by the Supreme Court of the U. S."

And from an AFL district organizer, Graeme B. Baker, of Montana, comes this statement: "I want to say at the present time that I am satisfied with the NLRB in its present form, and do not feel that its usefulness could be augmented by any changes, other than further financial assistance."

Rap War, Navy Depts. For Protecting Tory Firms From Wagner Act

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18.—The CIO fight to make government contractors obey the Wagner Act will continue, Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, indicated in a letter to CIO affiliates today.

The struggle started last year and came to a head when the reactionary Rules Committee refused to let Congressmen vote on a bill that would withhold government contracts from persistent Wagner Act violators, Pressman explained. The bill, which had passed the Senate, was held up by the Rules Committee and could not reach the floor of the House.

This year the same stalling tactics were used. Passed unanimously by the Senate, this time as an amendment to the national defense program, the measure was again killed by a small anti-labor group of Congressmen on the Senate-House Conference Committee that meets to consider measures.

CIO, AFL, ROOSEVELT APPROVE

The amendment had the support of Senate majority leader Barkley and of Pres. Roosevelt, as well as of the entire CIO and big sections of the AFL. The November convention of the CIO made such a bill a No. 1 item in the legislative program for this session. As Pressman pointed out in his letter:

"The U. S. Government should lead the way in insisting that all people dealing with it comply with the Natl. Labor Relations Act. Opposition from such reactionary forces as the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, the War and Navy Depts., and those in Congress following the lead of Vice-Pres. Garner should not be sufficient to overcome the demand from labor for such protective legislation.

"For this reason we intend to keep pressing forward for legislation to this effect. Your continued aid and support in this regard, as it has been furnished in the past, will be the deciding factor as to whether we obtain this legislation or not."

AFL Cigar Locals Fight Amendments

Tampa, Fla., Mar. 18—Seven thousand members of the Cigar Makers International Union, AFL, were on record here today as "unalterably opposed to any changes in the Wagner Act."

"All present proposals for changes are either unnecessary or else definitely harmful to labor," the union's joint advisory board declared in a telegram sent to CIO Pres. John L. Lewis.

At the same time the AFL group appealed to Lewis to help bring about a U. S. policy of ceasing to furnish the fascist aggressor nations "with the means of destroying democracy."

AVERAGE PAY DOWN

New York, Mar. 18.—The average income of the working population dropped from $1,110 in 1937 to $1,038 in 1938, according to figures released by Labor Research Association. In 1929 it was estimated to average $1,310.

AFL-CIO Council Oppose Changes

Bethlehem, Pa., Mar. 18. — The Joint Labor Council composed of delegates from both CIO and AFL unions as well as the International Ladies Garment Workers, independent, has gone on record as vigorously opposing any amendments to the Wagner Labor Act.

A resolution passed by the Council declared any action taken to change the act was "a deliberate attempt to destroy that bulwark of our liberties, no matter what the pretext to amend the Wagner Labor Act may be."

Mine Union Asks Pay Raise in New Contract

union's demand for adequate medical service and joint supervision of medical facilities, pointing to a recent survey of improper medical care for miners, whose revelations he said were "astonishing and to some degree scandalous."

In explaining the UMWA demands, Murray declared that losses in the industry were due to the operators' unwillingness to work together and make the industry a profitable one. He criticized operators for attacking efforts of the Bituminous Coal Commission to stabilize prices.

MURRAY DEFENDS DEMANDS

Defending the miner's proposal for 50c a day increase, which would establish a basic rate of $6.50 a day, Murray declared that a wage survey showed miners' average net earnings to be only $886 a year in some districts. Living costs in some mining communities, he said, are as much as 44 to 61 per cent higher than in greater centers of population where there is independent merchandising of commodities.

In regard to hours of work, the UMWA is asking a six-hour day and a 30-hour five-day week. The present contract provides for a seven-hour day and a 35-hour week. The union is also seeking increases of 15c a ton in cutting and loading rates and of 25c a ton in pick mining rates, and a 20 per cent increase in yardage and dead-work rates.

ASK SHARE OF GAINS

Mechanized mining is receiving much attention in the negotiations, and the union asks that the miners be given an equitable share of profits accruing from the operation of mining machinery.

In asking for a guarantee of not less than 200 days work a year, the union seeks a minimum annual wage of about $1300 a year. The operators would be obligated to pay miners $6.50 a day for each day less than 200 worked.

Two week's annual vacation with pay are asked by the UMWA for all miners.

In regard to medical care, the union points out that "tragic inequality, inefficiency and dishonest practices" have prevailed under the present system. Its contentions are supported by a survey just completed in the mining industry by the Bureau of Cooperative Medicine.

CHOICE OF DOCTORS

The union asks that the miners have equal participation with the companies in the selection of physicians, and that the Mine Workers also participate in the supervision of hospital, medical, surgical and nursing facilities, in all cases where they are financed through deduction from miners' pay.

Other provisions in the UMWA demands cover seniority rights, safety at work, physical examinations, elimination of unfair differentials and a request for a standard checkoff throughout the industry.

HIGH ACCIDENT RATE

Murray pointed to the high accident rate in coal mines and criticized the virtual suppression of reports on mine disasters which are made by the United States Bureau of Mines.

In regard to mechanization, he pointed out that some 60,000 men have been displaced in recent years by the introduction of mechanical loading machines, and called for the cooperation of the operators in meeting the problem.

Hosiery Meet In September At New York

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Mar. 11—A decision to hold the 1939 convention of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers in New York some time in September was made during the meeting of the union's national executive board held here last week. The exact time was left to the discretion of the officers.

The board also pledged support to the Wagner Act, reaffirmed the hosiery union's support of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee and backed the efforts now being made to bring about unity in the labor movement.

Texas CIO To Meet April 1

By FRED SEELIG

Houston, Texas, Mar. 18—With important legislative and organizational matters coming up which will vitally effect all labor unions in Texas, elaborate preparations have been made for the third annual convention of the Texas State Industrial Union Council to be held in San Antonio, April 1 and 2.

More than 200 delegates are expected to attend. Outstanding labor leaders and government officials have been invited to participate in the speaking program. Among them are Walter Smethurst, assistant to CIO Pres. John L. Lewis; Dr. Edwin Elliott, regional director, National Labor Relations Board, and an officer of the Railway Brotherhoods.

SEEK CO-ORDINATION

An effort will be made at the convention to formulate a program which will ultimately lead to the co-ordinating of all the Texas CIO activities into the hands of the Texas State Council. The necessity of this will be brought before the delegates.

Another important project to be undertaken will be a concentrated appeal to the national office for the appointment of a regional director in Texas. Two sub-regional offices will also be asked.

Texas has 1,250,000 unorganized workers. Requests from groups throughout the state have come to the State Council, asking that organizers be sent to the respective localities and the council has been unable to cope with the demands from the unorganized.

DISCUSS WAGNER ACT

Among other topics are discussions on maintenance of the Wagner Act, WPA and Housing Act appropriations, and the danger of issuance of charters to company unions in Texas.

Outlining a legislative program to combat the present anti-labor state administration, a campaign for good-will through publicity, further plans for labor unity, and steps toward assisting progressive political groups are but a few of the matters to come before the convention.

New Homes For Old

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing.

By THOMAS HUMPHPRIES

Are all the bad slums in the big cities?

If you think they are, you're making a big mistake.

The small towns and rural areas may not have teeming tenement houses. But they have their housing problems. Millions of small-town workers are forced to live in dilapidated shanties, shaky lean-to's and the shot-gun houses which are said to have been nailed together by throwing a few bits of lumber in the air and firing a load of shot at them.

It's even worse in the farm areas.

Five out of six farm-houses have no running water. Six out of seven have no electric lights. One half of them need major repairs. Only one out of twenty measures up to the so-called American Standard.

WHAT CAN BE DONE?

Fortunately, there are methods of doing at least a little bit toward remedying bad housing conditions outside of the big cities.

First—

Set up local housing authorities and borrow housing funds from the United States Housing Authority.

Practically any community, no matter how small, can build USHA-financed projects. At this very moment a 70-dwelling housing project is under way in Mt. Hope, West Va., a town with a population of about 2500.

In some states towns of this size are not allowed to set up housing authorities. But that shouldn't stand in the way! County housing authorities can be set up in such instances and can build a project in any of the towns within its boundaries.

Second—

Farmers themselves can borrow directly from the Farm Security Administration or secure FHA-insured loans from private banks—and use the money to repair their farm-houses.

But how about the farm laborers?

What about the millions of dispossessed sharecroppers and migratory fruit and vegetable pickers?

FSA CAMPS

Third—

These camps are not subsistence homesteads. They are the farthest thing in the world from forced labor camps, such as prevail in Hitlerized Germany. They merely provide farm laborers with decent shelter at a very low price.

Two types of shelter are provided: cabins and tents. The cabins usually rent for about $8 a month, the tents for about $5. Hot and cold water are provided.

Most of these camps include a workers' council set-up. Union organization is welcome.

Naturally, the big fruit companies don't like such camps. According to Harry V. Olsen, organizer for the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers (CIO), "They want to keep the workers on the jump, so they can't organize and demand decent wages!"

MORE HOUSING FUNDS

The biggest obstacle to more and better housing is the lack of funds.

The Farm Security Administration has always had to operate on a shoestring. The United States Housing Authority is now dead broke.

Labor must see to it that Congress expands the work of both these agencies.

BE ON GUARD!

Look for the union label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America when buying men's and boys' clothing, overalls, shirts, undergarments, neckties, lumber jackets, gloves, and all other kinds of men's wearing apparel.

The Amalgamated Label is your guarantee that the articles you buy are of the best workmanship and produced under one hundred percent union conditions by members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

By insisting on the Amalgamated Label you will help to guard against a return of sweatshop conditions to the industry. By helping the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America you help the labor movement generally.

Ask for the Amalgamated label on each part of the suit, coat, pants and vest. There are different Amalgamated labels for coats, pants, vests, shirts and undergarments, work clothes, neckwear and gloves.

Labor and the Law

Reactionary Generals and Labor

Last week a labor measure was defeated in a congressional conference committee.

It was the amendment to the National Defense Bill which would have required firms getting juicy government contracts for defense supplies to recognize the fundamental rights of labor.

The amendment was proposed by Senator Barkley who is the majority leader in the Senate. It was accepted by Senator Sheppard of Texas, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs. It was passed by the Senate. It was backed by the Secretary of Labor, and President Roosevelt was reported to be in favor of it.

WAR, NAVY AND NAM

However, the War and Navy Departments, joining with the National Association of Manufacturers, opposed it. The War and Navy Departments said that they were opposed to the amendment on two grounds: first, they claimed that the amendment would leave to the head of the department, awarding the contract, the determination of whether the employer was violating the rights of labor and thus deny the employer the right to go to the courts.

But Senator Barkley agreed to modify this provision so that an employer would be barred from getting government contracts only after a final court judgment had found him guilty of violating the federal labor laws. Second, the Department said there were certain supplies that could be furnished only by a single company, and the amendment might prevent the government from getting the necessary supplies, if that company were, for example, using labor spies.

AGREED TO MODIFY

Senator Barkley was willing to meet this second objection by authorizing the President to make exceptions in the public interest where there was only one source of supply. Nevertheless, the War and Navy Departments continued their opposition and the amendment was lost.

This record of the defeat of an important labor measure raises a very serious question.

The opposition of the National Association of Manufacturers can easily be understood. They are fighting tooth and nail against the full establishment of genuine collective bargaining in this country.

But the War and Navy Departments are agencies of the federal government and in opposing the amendment, they opposed not only labor's interests, but the Administration itself.

NO GREATER JURISDICTION

In these days when foreign affairs are in constant crises, our armaments must be increased and activities of the War and Navy Departments will necessarily expand. But the jurisdiction of the War and Navy Departments should be confined to the strictly military problems of the national defense.

They have no justification for interfering with the labor policy of the federal government. They have no justification for their opposition to the Barkley Amendment which was intended to protect the rights of organized labor.

It is not only labor that is involved, because the War and Navy Departments were also opposed to the flat limitation of 10 per cent upon the profits of aircraft corporations supplying planes to the United States.

This country has not yet reached the stage where the control over the destinies of the American people is to be placed in the hands of a few reactionary generals rather than in the hands of the representatives of the people.

Trade Unionism and Tap Dancing — Office Workers School Supplies Both

NEW YORK.—"I'll take Trade Unionism and Tap Dancing," said the pretty little brunette from Local 16.

"Make mine Social Psychology," said her boy friend, a maintenance man in a large social agency, who belongs to Local 19, the Social Service Employes Union.

They started something. With about 600 others, they took part in the autumn educational program of the New York Joint Council, United Office & Professional Workers of America.

They started a real, tangible, living aspect of "white-collar" and professional organization in the metropolitan area, something that is going far to make the union a part of its members' lives.

UNUSUAL

The Joint Council is an unusual sort of body, to begin with, unusual because of its composition. It takes in seven locals, whose 16,000 members include people as varied as clerical and office workers, social service employes, commercial and fine artists, industrial insurance agents, financial employes, book and magazine workers and advertising men and women.

Starting from scratch, the Joint Council's educational committee opened up a new field when it got down to business last Fall. Trade Unionism and Tap Dancing, Social Psychology and Women's Forums, Labor Forums and Chorus, Orchestra and Training for Active Leadership, Stenography, Public Speaking, Sports.

SO MEMBERS MAY KNOW

Some things trade unionists must know. Some things they want badly to know. Some things they need by way of self-expression, self-realization. The Joint Council set out to give the members these things.

There were some people at first who felt that it was too far a cry from Trade Unionism to Tschaikowsky . . . or Truckin' . . . or The Care of the Teeth. They were wrong.

PROPAGANDA

For years the anti-labor press has been pounding away on the phoney note that unions were strange, or un-American, or wrong, or just not "respectable." These arguments were particularly effective in the case of "white-collar" and professional people, in part because they have been traditionally the kind of people who read and pay attention to what they read.

Not that other unions haven't had to meet the same problem. But the office and professional worker has been conspicuously subject to the delusion that it was somehow wrong to do something about a skimpy pay envelope, insecurity, that summer vacation that never quite came off.

MAKE UNION ATTRACTIVE

Now, one of the most effective means for combating the crooked propaganda of the labor-haters is to make the union attractive, not only to prospective members but to new and undeveloped members. And another means for making the union strong is to make it a part of the lives of its members.

Mind you, what has just been said has nothing to do with the courses like Training For Active Leadership, or Beginnings Of Trade Unionism, to pick a couple at random from the Joint Council's attractive new catalogue. These courses are of a different nature. No one would dream of questioning the necessity for including them in a trade union educational program.

But there were, at the beginning, some people who felt the other matters were somehow outside the field, or, rather, too far afield.

POPULAR COURSES

They learned they were wrong when the pretty brunette from Local 16 and scores of others like her took the cultural courses, enlisted in the extra-curricular activities, and liked them! Talked about them, felt proud of them, became better union members because of them.

Tenant Farm Locals Rap Officers

St. Louis, Mo., Mar. 18—Fifty-two delegates representing 4,000 Missouri sharecroppers, tenant farmers and agricultural laborers voted here this week to continue as part of the Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, CIO.

The decision was taken after a notice of withdrawal from the UCAPAWA by the executive council of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union, of which the Missouri workers were formerly a part.

"This action constitutes a definite repudiation of the attempts of the STFU officers in Memphis, Tenn., who have been suspended, to split away from the CIO," Owen Whitfield, STFU vice-president and leader of the Missouri croppers, said after the vote was taken.

LEADERS SUSPENDED

STFU officers were suspended by the Cannery and Agricultural Workers after their refusal to pay per capita tax to the international, in violation of the constitution. A settlement requested by the STFU from the national office of the CIO was offered, which included compliance with the international constitution by the STFU officers, full autonomy for the STFU within the constitution, and lifting of the suspension.

This was rejected by the officers of the STFU, who announced withdrawal from the UCAPAWA.

End of Long Court Fight

Their long court fight against the Fansteel Metallurgical Co. at an unsuccessful end, members of a Steel Workers Organizing Committee lodge in North Chicago, Ill., start their terms, ranging up to six months, in the county jail. Supreme Court, brushing aside employer's violations of the Wagner Act, cracked down on their sitdown strike.

Gorman Fails In Try To Tie Up Union Funds

NEW YORK, Mar. 18.—Pretensions of Francis J. Gorman, former president of the United Textile Workers, that he still leads the UTW were shattered last week by Supreme Court Judge Aaron J. Steuer, who denied a preliminary injunction sought by Gorman to tie up the funds of both the UTW and the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, CIO.

Gorman was expelled from office some weeks ago by the UTW executive council on charges of setting up a dual organization and attempting to lead the union back into the American Federation of Labor.

Judge Steuer's decision was based on a number of affidavits, union decisions, resolutions and briefs submitted by TWOC counsel. A number of UTW and TWOC locals denounced Gorman's "attempt at usurpation" in supporting the TWOC's contention that Gorman no longer represented the membership.

Hearst Sues For Peace; Meets Guild

Chicago, Mar. 18—Publishers of the strike-bound Hearst papers here have felt the pressure of the American Newspaper Guild attack and have made their first step towards suing for peace.

The offer to negotiate came from Harry Koehler, publisher of the Herald-Examiner, and was addressed to Harry Wohl, Chicago Newspaper Guild president.

NOT YET OVER

Wohl warned that the strike is not over, and that it will continue until a settlement providing for job security of the 500 Guild members is secured.

"Now is the time to intensify and redouble efforts to bring the Chicago Hearst strike to a successful conclusion," Wohl said.

Meanwhile a five-page report signed by leading pastors and laymen declared that "we believe that the strike of the Hearst unit of the Chicago Newspaper Guild was justified." The committee was made up of representatives of a number of denominations.

Ask Probe of Dismissal Of Insurance Agents After Testimony

NEW YORK, Mar. 18.—Investigation of the recent discharge of 13 agents of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., who testified before the Monopoly Investigating Committee was asked in a letter sent to Chairman William O. Douglas of the Securities & Exchange Commission by Lewis Merrill, president of the United Office & Professional Workers, CIO.

"This action on the part of the company serves to intimidate any other agents who may be subpoened by the government," the letter declared, and "will naturally make it difficult for the committee to obtain reliable evidence at further hearings on the practices of insurance companies."

In a statement on the men's discharge, Merrill charged that the company "is seeking to place responsibility for these practices on the agents instead of in the management where it properly belongs."

CIO Fights Ban On Picketing

Indict 27 Men, Jail Scores In California

By MIRIAM ALLEN DeFORD

REDDING, Calif., Mar. 18. — Twenty-seven CIO leaders stood indicted today for conspiracy to violate Shasta County's recently enacted ban on picketing.

John Morgan, international representative of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers; Louis Goldblatt, California CIO secretary; and Richard Gladstein, CIO attorney, were among those named by the grand jury.

"We will carry this case to the Supreme Court," Gladstein said, "and make a national issue to see if peaceful picketing is a felony. The right to organize is meaningless without the right to picket."

Meanwhile, the county jail here, built to hold 22 people, is packed with 88 members of the tunnel constructors union, a Mine, Mill & Smelter affiliate. Seven wives of arrested workers who took to the picket line have not yet been arrested, though the sheriff promises that he will take care of them as soon as he "can get around to it."

AFL "CONTRACT"

The dispute started some time ago and concerns jobs with the United Pipe Concrete Co., contractors in charge of the Delta Tunnel job on a railroad relocation project.

Although most of the workers on the job belonged to the CIO, the company signed a closed shop contract with some AFL officials before the project opened. When the men reported for work, they were told that they would have to pay a high initiation fee to join the AFL before they could go on the job.

Rather than pay initiation fees to the AFL union, the CIO members placed picket lines around the company's projects.

PICKET BANS

As a result they came into conflict with county officials. Shasta County, like many others throughout California, has passed stringent anti-picketing ordinances at the behest of the Tory Associated Farmers group.

An injunction against the CIO forbidding it to "hinder by force, threat, violence or intimidation" AFL workers on the Delta project at Shasta Dam has also been issued by a local judge.

MAKE TEST CASE

Determined to make a test case of the anti-picketing ban—which they charge is clearly constitutional—local CIO leaders declined to remove the pickets.

"We repeat . . . that we do not feel that we have a moral right to abandon the constitutional privileges of workers to assemble—which is their right to picket—and that we will have to continue to organize picket lines even though there are county ordinances which seek to take away from labor this fundamental, traditional, necessary right," their statement said.

JAIL CONDITIONS BAD

Meanwhile arrested CIO members are finding conditions in the Redding jail intolerable. Prisoners were obliged to break the windows to get any air, and even so several of them collapsed and had to be moved to the county hospital.

There is not room for many of the prisoners to lie down on the floor.

LIKE "SLAVE SHIP"

Harold Simon, CIO attorney, told the grand jury that conditions are "worse than on a slave ship, with food served to prisoners that would be a disgrace if served to a pig." He demanded a probe of a contract made by the county board of supervisors with a restaurant which provides the food for the prisoners.

Plans are being made to move some of the jailed workers to the Glenn and Tehama County jails, to make room for expected new arrivals. When the men objected the sheriff agreed to move only single men, and to let the pickets choose these themselves.

"Some 60 odd prisoners were confined in a space originally intended for 22 men," Simon pointed out. "Due to the crowded space, human beings are forced to sleep on filthy, louse-infected mats, on concrete floors, at times flooded with water from faulty plumbing."

Four men have already had to be removed to the hospital suffering from respiratory infections due to these conditions.

Wives On Picket Line

Auto Union Maps Plans For Convention March 27

By ROBERT DALE

CLEVELAND, Mar. 18.—Final preparations for a harmonious and constructive convention of the United Automobile Workers, CIO affiliate, were completed by the International Executive Board. The convention starts here March 27.

Actions of the Board included trial and ouster of Homer Martin, former president, who has now misled a handful of followers into setting up a dual union to the UAW. Martin did not appear.

Testimony against him was offered by officers and rank and file members of the UAW. It was based on first-hand experience with Martin and his disruptive efforts. He was found guilty on 15 counts of conspiring to destroy the UAW in league with notorious enemies of labor.

R. J. Thomas, who had been acting president since Martin's suspension last month, was named president by the Executive Board. He will serve until the convention which will pass on all officers.

The Board instructed local unions to place on trial all members who attended Martin's rump convention in violation of decisions of their locals. Local unions that were misled into going to Martin's meeting but who now wish to return to the CIO fold were invited back by the Board. The convention credentials committee was instructed to receive such locals if they reverse their support of Martin.

EXPEL OFFICIAL

Expulsion was ordered of any international representative who, in support of Martin's dual union movement, took UAW-CIO issues to court before exhausting union procedure as outlined by the Constitution. Martin's regional man in Cleveland, Elmer Davis, was ousted under this ruling.

Committees elected by the Board were: constitution, credentials, resolutions, rules, organization, union label, competitive plants, education, and grievances. These committees will serve for the convention. The Board reconvenes March 24 here.

ONLY 15,000 FOOLED

With the disruptors and dual unionists finally out of the way except for a tiny minority of less than 15,000, the Board turned its attention on problems to come before the Cleveland convention. The remainder of the 375,000 members of the UAW have voted to be represented at Cleveland.

Among the constructive union-building jobs of the UAW this week was approval of new union contracts with a number of manufacturers. One of these was with the Jacobsen Mfg. Co., of Racine, Wis. It recognizes UAW-CIO as sole bargaining agent.

Among the principal charges on which Martin was tried and convicted was his effort, long concealed and denied, to try and take the UAW out of the CIO. He was accused of taking secret advice from the Ford Motor Co., to this effect.

Rank and file union members bared the notorious story of Martin's subrosa dealings with the Ford Co. and of his efforts to sell the membership of the Ford locals on a phony union agreement. Percy Lellewellyn, president of Local 600 (Ford), was a star witness.

FILE NLRB CHARGES

Charges similar to those on which Martin was tried by the Board have been filed with the National Labor Relations Board in a novel move to obtain protection for the UAW from the Ford-Martin machinations. It is believed the only case in which a union executive has been charged with violation of the Wagner act. He is accused of acting as an agent of the employers, especially Ford.

In addition to his alliance with Ford, Martin also associated himself with Father Coughlin, who acted as go-between on the Martin-Ford conversations.

What remains of Martin's support was fast crumbling away this week as his funds began to give out. His office staff was being curtailed and several members of the executive board of a dual Ford local were laid off. Added to the earlier dissensions in the rump camp between the Lovestoneites and the few honestly misled union members, the financial stringency created havoc.

Big Cannery Signs with CIO

San Diego, Calif., Mar. 18—Local 64 of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers, CIO, has just won over the biggest tuna fish cannery in the world, with a signed contract involving 700 workers.

The contract, signed with Van Camp's here, provides for preferential hiring, seniority rights, overtime, recognition of shop committees and maintenance of wage rates.

Last October the local won a collective bargaining election for sole recognition by an overwhelming majority. Following the election, the cannery closed down for three months. Now it is running again, with a CIO contract to protect the workers.

Court Dismisses Suit On Steel Pay Decree

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18.—A drive by seven independent steel producers to escape paying 62½c an hour on large government contract orders bogged down in federal district court here.

Judge Jennings Bailey ruled that the companies had offered no evidence to prove that Sec. of Labor Frances Perkins had acted "arbitrarily" in establishing the wage rate set by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee as the prevailing rate of pay in the important northeastern steel producing area. A temporary restraining order against the Department of Labor was dissolved and the case dismissed.

In making his decision, the judge heard arguments from both the government and the CIO legal staff, which maintained that the companies had failed to prove that the Public Contracts Board of the Labor Department had not given serious study to the case.

The Act provides that the government may establish certain fair labor standards in various industries, and that no contracts of more than $10,000 can be awarded to firms which fail to observe the standards.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25.—Wires and letters from all sections of the labor movement—CIO, AFL and independents—continue to pour into CIO headquarters here praising the plan for unification of the labor movement under an American Congress of Labor, as proposed by the CIO committee in the first White House meeting with the AFL.

From Seattle, Wash., Local 28 of the Natl. Federation of Post Office Clerks, AFL, wrote to Pres. Lewis enclosing a resolution "strongly urging the adoption of the plan as suggested by you as a means of bringing about unity within the labor movement, since upon study it seems to offer a most practicable solution to the existing differences between the various organizations."

NEED INDUSTRIAL UNIONS

The Owosso and Shiawasee Federation of Labor of Michigan has passed on a letter sent to Green in which the members said: "we believe in settling this problem. Industrial organization must be conceded by the AFL. This caused the split and this concession on your part will heal the breach."

AFL cement workers in Chattanooga, Tenn., wrote, "We are convinced that both craft and industrial unions can be given their proper place within the AFL, if the heads of the craft unions will only see the situation as they should, and we hope they will."

In Chicago, the AFL Committee to Aid Guild Strikers, composed of representatives of 15 AFL unions, wrote to Lewis thanking him for his "splendid attitude toward the forthcoming conferences between your group and ours, and to express the fervent hope that out of these conversations will come a lasting unity of American labor."

In California both houses of the state government are on record as favoring unity between the sections of the American labor movement. The Letter Carriers of West Virginia wired in a similar message, praising "your desire to effect a peaceful settlement of the labor strife."

CIO messages supporting the American Congress of Labor plan from locals, districts, councils and internationals are too numerous to catalog, but a partial survey shows support from Councils in St. Louis, Cleveland, Wheeling, W. Va., San Francisco, Lowell, Mass., San Diego, Calif., Marion Co., Ohio, Bridgeport, Conn., Martinsburg, W. Va., Seattle, Delaware Co., Pa.

All these groups applaud the Congress of Labor plan and urge the CIO negotiating committee to continue its efforts to unite all labor in one powerful organization.

HONORABLE PEACE

The messages lay stress on the need for an honorable peace between the CIO and the AFL which will preserve the principles of industrial unionism that have built the CIO to its present position.

Typical is one from a local of the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers in Colorado, which said: "Our union supports the CIO program for unity with its insistence on democracy in the labor movement, industrial unionism in the basic industries, and preservation of existing unions."

These messages represent only a fraction of the total received. Throughout the general tone is endorsement for the Congress of Labor plan, for an honorable peace that will preserve industrial union principles, and for unity.

Local Wants Congress Session Broadcast

Baltimore, Mar. 25. — The Marine local of the American Communications Assn. here wants all sessions of Congress to be broadcast on the radio.

"The people of this nation should have the right to know every position their representatives take upon the problems that confront the nation as a whole," a union resolution said.

"It is a well known fact that if the people of this nation could hear the voices of reaction that are opposed to every liberal move made by the liberal forces in Congress, they would defeat those reactionaries at the polls in the following election."

Peace Confab Resumes

(See Story Page Three)

New York, Mar. 25. — The CIO is eager for labor peace and will consider any plans proposed, but its unions will not let themselves be cut to pieces as the price of association with the AFL, Pres. John L. Lewis declared at the anthracite miners' Tri-District convention.

The CIO leader's speech was delivered while the AFL executive council was meeting in Washington, to decide on its answer to CIO questions about the jurisdictions of CIO unions under the AFL proposal.

FOLLOWED RECESS

Conferences between the CIO and AFL committees were resumed Friday in Washington, following a ten-day recess.

Lewis told the cheering delegates of the United Mine Workers of the great achievements of the CIO. He warned AFL leaders who have been starting puny dual unions to harass the CIO unions, that if they reject unity and continue their attacks, "the CIO is capable of doing more than merely defending itself" and may make them live to regret their assaults.

UNIONS APPROVE

Meanwhile wires and other messages continue to pour in on CIO headquarters testifying to the enthusiastic reception of the CIO proposal for uniting all labor in one American Congress of Labor.

This proposal of the CIO and a counter-proposal of the AFL to resume negotiations where they broke off in December, 1937, have both been under consideration at the unity conferences.

Urge Probe Of Tory Farm Group

Washington, Mar. 25 — Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, today urged continuation of the work of the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee in a letter to all senators.

Pressman pointed out that "the committee is carrying on an investigation of the Associated Farmers, Inc., one of the most active violators of civil liberties on the west coast and elsewhere.

"We understand a great deal of material has been secured by the committee on this organization, but due to lack of funds it has not been prepared or put into report form."

U. S. Rubber Co. Subsidiaries Yield, Sign

KITCHENER, Ont., Mar. 25.—The United Rubber Workers, CIO, won its first signed contract in Canada recently when the Dominion Tire and the Merchants Rubber companies, subsidiaries of U. S. Rubber, signed agreements following a month's strike of 1,000 employes.

Under the terms of the contract, Locals 67 and 80 of the URW are recognized as union representatives for the workers. Time and a half pay for overtime, a nine-hour day, and seniority rights are also included in the agreement.

One of the major demands, a five cent wage raise, will be referred to an arbitration board of three, composed of one member each chosen by the union and the company, with the third selected by the other two. Award of the arbitration board will be retroactive.

HAD REFUSED TO SIGN

Originally the companies refused to sign a contract or grant an increase in pay, but after the strikers voted to continue the strike until their demands were recognized, the firms compromised.

The agreement will be in force until October 31, and may be terminated or amended thereafter on 30 days' notice.

Settlement of the strike ended the strike-breaking activities of a company-inspired "back-to-work" movement. A day before the strike was settled, a group threatened to force entrance to the plants, but failed to show up.

BIG VICTORY

Alfred Mustin and Harry James, presidents of the two locals, hailed the contract as "an outstanding victory".

The community and unions throughout Canada, both CIO and AFL, as well as locals in the United States, sent contributions to the strike and played an important part in winning the settlement.

Wire Union Backs Bill On Merger

Washington, Mar. 25 — When Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana introduced a bill into the Senate calling for an investigation of the telegraph industry, telegrams of approval began pouring in from numerous locals of the American Communications Association, CIO union, urging him to bring the bill to an early hearing.

Meanwhile, John Brophy, CIO director, issued a statement stating that "the CIO welcomes the investigation of the telegraph industry proposed by Senator Burton K. Wheeler, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee.

"It is a well-known fact," Brophy declared, "that the telegraph industry is today on the verge of collapse and chaos. After years of mismanagement and incompetence the telegraph companies should not be allowed to solve their problems by creating an unsanctioned monopoly at the expense of labor and the public."

The ACA union charges that in the plans advanced for the merger of Western Union and Postal Telegraph, no account is being taken of the loss of jobs involved.

Mayors Get An Ear Full

Without mincing any words, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York warned chief executives of western cities that disaster lies ahead if the Tory bloc in Congress manages to slip through a cut in WPA funds.

WPA Cut Threatens 'Havoc, Carey Warns

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25.—While House Tories once again played with the idea of cutting WPA funds, Sec. James B. Carey of the CIO warned Congress of the "havoc" that would follow for business, the jobless and the nation as a whole if Pres. Roosevelt's request for $150,000,000 for WPA is refused.

Carey, who heads the CIO Committee on Unemployment, sent his message in a letter to every member of Congress.

CAREY'S LETTER

The letter said:

"... I would like to convey to you the CIO's conviction that it is of great importance to the nation that at least $150,000,000 additional be appropriated for the WPA for the current fiscal year.

"It is hard to conceive of the cutting of such an amount from any other of the non-administrative federal expenditures which would wreak so much havoc on the country.

"No other cut in such expenditures, we believe, would damage so many people, adversely affect so many businesses and cause such a blow to the morale of our people."

PREPARE AXE FOR 400,000

Meanwhile, WPA officials revealed that they have been forced to prepare the axe which will fall on 400,000 jobs by April 1 if Congress fails to pass the deficiency appropriation before that date.

The reductions will amount to 36,000 in Pennsylvania, 25,000 in New York City, 34,000 in Illinois, 36,500 in Ohio, 20,000 in Michigan and corresponding slashes in other states.

ECONOMY BLOC EAGER

Reactionaries in the House of Representatives are attempting to whittle twenty-five or fifty million dollars from the President's $150,000,000 deficiency appropriation request. Should they succeed, upwards of 100,000 jobs would be lost.

President Roosevelt told his press conference that he would favor less governmental spending if there were any indication that business would absorb the millions made jobless. There is no such assurance at the present time, he said, and a slash would mean added distress and a setback to the economic machine of the nation.

600 Protest WPA Slash

Des Moines, Ia., Mar. 25—Six hundred people heard 11 speakers protest any slash in the WPA appropriation at a mass meeting arranged by the Des Moines Industrial Union Council.

In addition, the audience passed a resolution condemning any attempt to amend the Wagner Act. Don Harris, director of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, was chairman of the meeting.

Attack On Miss Perkins Proves Dud

Washington, Mar. 25—A Republican-Tory Democrat attempt to embarrass the New Deal by instituting impeachment proceedings against Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins met its death in a House judiciary sub-committee today.

The committee found that there was no evidence to support charges of red-baiting by Congressman J. Parnell Thomas of New Jersey, Republican, that Miss Perkins and her legal staff had acted illegally in the deportation case against Harry Bridges, West Coast CIO director.

USED BY FASCISTS

Thomas, a vocal member of the Dies Committee, had filed an 8,000-word resolution demanding her impeachment. Thomas' statement was reprinted in pamphlet form by the Silver Shirts, a fascist organization.

Miss Perkins and legal authorities in the Labor Department have taken the position that they should await determination of the Strecker case—now under study by the U. S. Supreme Court—before taking any further action against Bridges.

Farm Equipment Workers' Meeting Hears Of Growth

CHICAGO, Mar. 25. — Organizing activities of the Farm Equipment Workers are proceeding with new vigor and confidence following the convention held the early part of the month at union headquarters in Moline, Ill. Delegates from 17 UFEW locals were present.

Reports on past activities and plans for the future were made by local delegates and organizers, with a final and summary report made by Joseph Weber, executive assistant director of the CIO union.

Resolutions were passed at the convention opposing any change in the Wagner Act, supporting President Roosevelt's demand for an additional $150,000,000 WPA appropriation; backing the CIO committee's proposal for peace in the labor movement, and endorsing the Chicago Newspaper Guild strike.

BAN SWIFT PRODUCTS

Meat products of Swift & Co., were declared on the unfair list, and all members were urged to support the union's efforts to win an agreement with the firm.

A constitutional committee of seven, headed by Jerry Fielde, UFEW secretary-treasurer, was set up by the convention to draw up a constitution for the union which will be submitted to the locals for ratification, amendment or rejection.

THREE STAGES

In his summary report, Weber outlined the three stages of the union's development, beginning with the formation of the organizing committee for the farm equipment workers in July 1937 by ten locals of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in the farm equipment industry.

The second or expansion stage began with the affiliation of the Oliver Local 112 at South Bend, Ind., followed by the appointment of four new organizers by the CIO, the chartering of five new locals, and the affiliation of a number of other locals formerly belonging to other CIO unions.

UNION DEVELOPS

This prepared the way for the third and present stage, Weber reported, the period of development of mass organization with the winning of substantial gains.

Weber predicted that by the time of the next convention, the UFEW will be able to report gains commensurate with the vast size and importance of the farm equipment industry.

Gov. Olson Backs State 'Wagner Act'

Sacramento, Calif., Mar. 25—Gov. Culbert Olson, supporter of liberal policies in a state governed by reactionaries for a score of years, announced today he would ask the state legislature to pass a "baby" Wagner Act.

"There is a most urgent need for a state labor relations act," he said, "and for a mediation authority to deal effectively with state labor problems not falling under the jurisdiction of the National Labor Relations Board.

"I believe we should have such laws. We declared for them in the platform upon which I was elected. I shall urge the legislature to pass such laws."

CIO Chemists Win Closed Shop Pact

SAN FRANCISCO, Mar. 25. — The Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians, CIO, won a closed shop contract for laboratory workers in the Consolidated Chemical Co. plant here.

The contract negotiations were carried on jointly by the FAECT, the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union and the Warehouse Office Employes Union.

Completion of the contract awaits settlement of negotiations on wage increases, which the FAECT has demanded.

Plan Confab

Bridgeport, Conn., Mar. 25—The Bridgeport Industrial Union Council has called a conference of representatives of all CIO unions in the city to review labor's progress and to map plans for future activities.

Prominent leaders in labor, the state and city governments have been invited to address the meeting, which is to be held April 1 at the Stratfield Hotel here.

CIO Auto Union Convention To Show Strength

By ROBERT DALE

CLEVELAND, Mar. 27.—Firm in its determination to move forward with the CIO, the United Automobile Workers, second largest CIO affiliate, meets in special convention at the Hollenden Hotel here today. About 500 delegates from all parts of the nation were expected to be in the hall when President R. J. Thomas bangs the gavel starting the sessions. It is the fourth UAW convention.

Locals representing all but a tiny fraction of the UAW membership are represented at Cleveland. Membership of the UAW was placed at 371,000, only a few thousand below the peak figure of 1937 right after the big organizing drive. Of this total all but 15,000 are represented here.

Maintenance of the dues-paying membership at so high a figure was especially noted in the report to the convention of President Thomas, who contrasted it with the mere 30,000 in the union prior to its affiliation with the CIO. The dues-paying membership increased by 39,000 from a year ago.

THOMAS LAUDS CIO

High tribute to the work of the CIO in holding its gains through the 1937-38 depression was paid in the Thomas report. "The American labor movement," Thomas said, "has come through the latest breakdown of American capitalism with its ranks solid, its gains intact and its spirit for new advances unchecked."

Credit for this achievement was given the CIO by Thomas. He said: "The CIO is the strong right arm of American labor ever ready to strike to maintain labor's hard-won gains, ever ready intelligently and aggressively to reach out for new gains."

320 UNION PLANTS

The UAW, Thomas revealed, has under contract 320 auto plants owned by 253 corporations. These contracts have obtained gains for more than half a million workers.

Forecasting a year of progress ahead for the UAW, Thomas said: "We meet in an atmosphere that promises well for the continued growth and health of the organization. The great threat raised by industrial dislocation has been overcome. The puny threat of disruptionists has been defeated in remarkably short time.

"The membership of the UAW has shown that it has the solidarity and the intelligence to proceed to the goal of making the automobile industry of the United States an industry which will lead not only in the volume of its profits and productions and in the superiority of its industrial technics, but also in its securing for its workers a full measure of economic justice and industrial democracy," he added.

Warm praise for the work of the

Dock Union To Convene April 3

San Francisco, Mar. 25. — The second annual convention of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union opens here Monday, April 3, at Eagles Hall. Delegates from locals with a total membership of more than 33,000 will attend.

Fraternal delegates from other unions have been invited to the Convention, in a letter sent out by Secretary-Treasurer Matt Meehan. They are requested to have the customary credentials of their organization, duplicate copies of which are to be forwarded to the San Francisco or Seattle office of the union.

Textile Workers Plan Convention May 15

NEW YORK, Mar. 25.—Consolidation of the tremendous gains made by the Textile Workers Organizing Committee since its formation less than two years ago, will be the main objective of the union's first constitutional convention, which will open May 15 in Philadelphia.

The official call was issued this week by Sidney Hillman, TWOC chairman and Emil Rieve, vice-chairman.

"The convention, among other things," the union announced, "will consider measures for the consolidation of the tremendous advances in the organization of textile workers during the past two years under the leadership of TWOC and the United Textile Workers of America.

TO UNITE TWOC, UTW

"In furtherance of this objective, a proposal will be submitted to the convention to consolidate TWOC and UTW in order that all organized textile workers may be united in a single permanent organization, democratically controlled under its own constitution and by-laws.

"A convention of the UTW has been called by its international executive council to meet in Philadelphia on the same date, and after proceedings have been taken to consolidate the two organizations they will proceed to unite in a single convention."

Delegates from 32 states representing several hundred thousand textile workers will attend the conventions which will be held at 150 North Broad street, formerly known as the Scottish Rite Temple. Convention headquarters will be at the Hotel Lorraine.

New Orleans CIO Supports Wagner Act

New Orleans, Mar. 25—CIO labor here is taking care that its Senators and Representatives know how it stands on attempts to amend the Wagner Act or interfere with the National Labor Relations Board.

Lewis States CIO Position On Labor Peace

Meet Again

Washington, Mar. 25. — Unity negotiations between the CIO and AFL committees had been resumed in the U. S. Department of Labor, as this issue of The CIO NEWS went to press.

Following a series of conferences in New York, the negotiations were recessed to March 24, to allow the AFL committee to consult the Federation's executive council in the meanwhile.

The AFL council met in Washington on March 22 and 23, to determine its answer to several questions raised by the CIO committee, in regard to the AFL proposal.

JURISDICTIONS

The main question was whether the AFL proposed to readmit the CIO unions which it had ousted, with their present expanded jurisdictions, or whether it would insist on breaking them up to fit into the original AFL pattern.

President William Green announced that the AFL reply would be given to the conference which met on Friday.

CIO PLAN

Under discussion at the unity conferences are the CIO proposal to unite all existing labor organizations in a single American Congress of Labor, and the AFL counter-proposal that negotiations should be resumed at the point where they broke up in December, 1937.

The CIO proposal calls for conventions of the CIO and AFL during April to approve plans for a unity convention. The purpose of this convention would be to form an all-inclusive American Congress of Labor, in which the AFL and CIO would have equal representation on the executive board and the railroad brotherhoods proportionate representation.

CIO's Attitude

New York, Mar. 25.—The CIO has accepted the President's invitation without qualification and will discuss any suggestions for labor unity that may be made at conferences with the A. F. L., but its unions will not let themselves be chopped to pieces as the price of unity, President John L. Lewis, of the CIO declared in a speech before the Tri-District (anthracite) convention of the United Mine Workers of America.

"The great industrial organizations, comprising the CIO, do not propose to dissolve themselves and cut themselves up into a multitude of pieces as the quid pro quo of becoming associated with the AFL," he said.

WON'T SWALLOW POISON

The CIO unions, Lewis added, "will not swallow poison and go off and die merely to please those advocates and supporters of craft unionism who resent the fact that labor has organized through the medium of industrial-union philosophy and intends to continue its work of organization and the attainment of its logical objectives. America needs these unions in the mass-production industry."

The CIO leader struck back vigorously at enemies of the CIO who have been trying to pin a "red" label on it.

"It will not avail for the enemies of labor", he said, "to issue their fulminations against the CIO on the ground that it is less respectable or less virtuous or less sanctimonious than the previously organized AFL.

RAPS RED-BAITERS

"For be it known that the man, whoever he may be, on the street corners, in the counting houses, in the market places, or in the Congress of the United States, who makes the charge that the CIO is an un-American institution that is composed of

Coal Operators Stall On Pact; Anthracite Miners Meet

New York, Mar. 25 — Negotiations for a renewal of the United Mine Workers contract with the bituminous coal operators were marked this week by refusal of the operators to agree to continue the present contract in force, if no agreement is reached by March 31, expiration date.

John L. Lewis, UMWA and CIO president, and Philip Murray, vice-president, charged the operators with "deliberate stalling" and with attempts to force a lockout of the industry's close to 400,000 workers.

REFUTES EMPLOYES

Lewis pointed out that conditions in the industry of which the operators complained were due to their refusal to abide fully by the Guffey Act, which stabilizes marketing and production in the field.

ANTHRACITE MEETING

At the same time he pointed out that the Mine Workers union was today stronger and possessed more resources than ever before, and that its position as the spearhead of a great labor movement made it impregnable in any dispute that might be forced on it.

Speaking at the Anthracite Tri-District convention, which also met in New York this week, Lewis told delegates that labor is the best defense that the democracy and the people of the nation possess.

"There is but one way for the U. S. to remain free from those ailments and malignant diseases which plague most other nations," he said. "That is, that a fair deal be given to the working men and women who must be responsible for the protection of their government."

ASK PAY RAISE

The anthracite miners' committee will ask for the 30-hour week, a $4.62-a-day minimum pay rate and a guarantee of 200 days' work, Pres. Lewis announced. The present contract, which covers 112,000 miners, expires April 30.

In the bituminous coal negotiations the UMWA is asking for a 50 cent raise in daily pay from $6.00 to $6.50 and a reduction in the working week from 35 to 30 hours, with a guarantee of 200 days work per year. The operators have countered with a request for a wage cut to $5.50 per day and an increase in hours to 40 a week.

Oregon Picketing Law Up For Test

PORTLAND, Ore., Mar. 25—Oregon's anti-labor law comes up for a test of its constitutionality before the Circuit Court here on April 3.

Unions throughout the state have been vigorously protesting against the initiative ever since it was passed last November. It so limits the rights of unions to conduct strikes as virtually to outlaw picketing.

Paper Praises 'Congress' Idea

Washington—Typical of the favorable public reaction which has greeted the CIO proposal for uniting AFL, CIO and the railroad brotherhoods in a single American Congress of Labor, is an editorial appearing in the Washington Evening Star.

"The plan offered by the Lewis group must be said to envision unity of labor in its broadest sense," the editorial stated in part.

"It would seem almost axiomatic, therefore, unless there is a conviction within labor that it should or desires to remain split, that the CIO proposal offers a most proper basis for further negotiations.

ROOM FOR CHANGES

"That there may be room for modifications or refinements in this original suggestion looking toward its eventual improvement or to its adaptation to conditions as they are determined in the course of negotiations is quite likely."

Let the Workers Decide

The Wagner Labor Relations Act is based on the proposition that the public welfare can best be promoted by genuine collective bargaining in which workers as well as employers are free to choose representatives who really represent them.

The Wagner act has been notably successful in clearing the way for such collective bargaining, with great benefits to labor, industry and the whole country. But in spite of this, the act is now under serious attack. It has been subjected to a tremendous campaign of hostile propaganda and misrepresentation.

President John L. Lewis of the CIO, writing in Fortune magazine, cuts through the fog created by this propaganda campaign by examining the motives of those who inspire it and by calling attention to the real issues involved.

"The agitation against the act," he says, "comes chiefly from people who are opposed to all genuine collective bargaining, or who seek to use the act as an instrument to promote their narrow special interests at the expense of the general welfare of labor and industry."

The enemies of the act on the employers' side, according to Lewis, are die-hard anti-union industrialists who have resisted the law since its enactment; "professional agitators who make a profitable racket of conducting industrial welfare, ostensibly on the employer's behalf but more often at his expense"; and reactionary politicians "who are willing to seize on any stick to beat the present administration."

Such opposition would have little chance of success, however, Lewis adds, if it were not strengthened by apparent opposition from within the camp of labor.

"This type of opposition," he says, "comes from backward-looking craft-union leaders who oppose the forms of industrial unionism which follow the lines of modern industry, and who are disgruntled at the workers' obvious preference for modern unionism when given a free opportunity to express their choice."

But one thing which all the opponents of the Wagner act have in common is their unwillingness "to allow the workers a free and untrammeled choice of the type of union representation they desire."

"They seek," says Lewis, "to jockey and gerrymander in such a way that workers may have to accept alleged unions which are the employers' choice, or else craft unions which came into being long before the era of modern mass-production industry and are not adapted to cope with its problems."

Democracy demands that the workers themselves be free to choose what type of union best suits their needs, as the present act provides. This is also the only possible basis for real collective bargaining.

That is why all true friends of democracy and collective bargaining are rallying to the defense of the Wagner Act against all proposed amendments.

Unity of All Auto Workers

Ever since the automobile workers began to organize, they have sought the goal of unity in one powerful industrial organization of all workers in their industry.

One of the first tasks undertaken by the CIO was to aid in uniting a number of competing auto unions into a single organization and then to support this organization, the United Automobile Workers of America, in its claim to complete industrial jurisdiction, which was denied by the AFL.

The UAWA succeeded splendidly, with CIO assistance, in establishing itself as the one union for all auto workers. Following the CIO principle of industrial organization, it went from success to success in organizing the auto industry.

The UAWA triumphed over dual unionism. It triumphed over AFL craft division. It triumphed over union-fighting employers. But the toughest enemy with which it has had to contend has been division within its own ranks.

And now, with the Cleveland convention of the UAWA, the ground is prepared for a triumph over this enemy of internal dissension.

The attempt of Homer Martin to lead some deluded followers into a little breakaway dual union may prove a blessing in disguise. For it automatically cuts off from the UAWA the elements which have been most responsible for internal troubles.

The auto workers need and desire above all unity in a single industrial union. Martin's breakaway has been repudiated by such an overwhelming majority of the workers, that the UAWA can now go forward from its Cleveland convention as the one real union for the industry—drawing back those workers who have been tricked into leaving and proceeding to its goal of complete organization of all automobile workers.

A Goal Worth Shooting For

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Frey and the Ritz Brothers

Anyone could see that the four Marx Brothers have something to do with Marx. But it has taken a Frey to snoop out the redness that hides behind the bourgeois name of Ritz.

All the other boys and girls went to the movies to laugh or hold hands when the Ritz brothers played in "The Three Musketeers." But not John P. Frey.

He just sat and smelt for Reds. Until his great moment came!

All the other boys and girls snickered when the Ritz brothers clowned around shouting, "All for one, one for all." But not John P. Frey.

He just sat bolt upright and looked over the audience to see if anyone should give the high sign or answer, "Howdy, comrades," to the Red Ritzes.

For Frey had made a great discovery. One of those chaps who usually sell strangers such items as the Brooklyn Bridge had sold him an important clue. Through it he hoped to uncover, not a few hundred or thousand Reds, but literally millions of them.

What Nobody Knew

Here's Frey's secret — the thing that nobody knew. If you study it closely, you too may become a great detective and sniffer-outer of Reds — if the booby natch does not close too soon on your promising career.

All the other boys and girls thought that "All for one, one for all"—the slogan of the Three Musketeers—was just a harmless sentence from the novel by Alexander Dumas. They thought it was as much commonplace in the lingo of labor unions and most other organizations as "United we stand, divided we fall." But not John P. Frey.

He'd been told by the same fellow who tried to sell him the Brooklyn Bridge that, "All for one, one for all," was a secret slogan of the Communists whereby they identify themselves to each other when they address meetings.

His Great Moment

Since thus identifying the Ritz Brothers, Frey has gone from triumph to triumph with the aid of the above simple formula.

He has been able to prove—to his own, if nobody else's satisfaction — that everyone is a Communist who does not believe in the counter-slogan of the rugged individualists, "Every man for himself."

But Frey's supreme moment came when he saw in The CIO NEWS a cartoon of the Three Musketeers, with their slogan under it. He immediately got off a release to the press, referring to this cartoon as proof that the CIO proposal for a united labor movement was all a Communist plot!

A Well-Guarded Secret

Despite this release, Frey's great discovery has remained a well-kept secret until this day.

The reason is that most reporters are kindly fellows.

When a big politician or captain of industry says, "Me and them like me thinks this here Wagner Act is lousy," that's not what you read in the papers. The considerate reporters draw a veil over the great man's grammar and write something like this:

"The National Labor Relations Act is detrimental to industry and wholly unfair in its administration," said Mr. Highcockalorum.

So when Frey tried to take the whole world into his confidence about the Three Musketeers and their slogan, the papers kindly ignored his bid for the booby hatch.

The press all over the country carried stories about Frey's charge that the CIO plan for labor unity was "Communist-inspired." But hardly a paper mentioned his tommy-rot "proof" about the cartoon and the musketeers' slogan.

There may be a personal angle in Frey's picking on the Ritz brothers. He's something of a clown himself. But he favors the dead-pan technique of a Buster Keaton, when he springs his funny "red scares," rather than the smirks and contortions of the Ritzes.

A Serious Purpose

But whatever Frey's personal motives when he carries red-baiting to its most ludicrous extremes, those who encourage his buffoonery have a definite purpose of their own.

It is part of a deliberate propaganda campaign to smear a red label on the CIO. No serious charge of this character against a great American movement of millions of working people can stand the light of investigation. But any ridiculous claim is good enough to get a newspaper headline with the words "red" and "CIO" close together. And it is the repetition of such headlines that creates the desired impression in the minds of the unthinking.

There is more than this, however, to Frey's clowning. His latest and funniest offering was carefully timed to do the maximum of damage to the unity negotiations between CIO and AFL.

Opposed to unity are some craft-bound labor bureaucrats, union-hating employers, reactionary politicians and others of this ilk. These applaud and egg on Frey in his buffoonery. But the rest of the public emphatically prefer the Ritz brothers.

AFL Typo Union Vice-President Defends Act

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Mar. 25.—Unqualified opposition to amendments to the Wagner Act is expressed by F. G. Barrett, first vice-president of the Intl. Typographical Union in the current issue of the ITU journal.

"Personally, the writer feels that the Act should not be tampered with in any way at this time," Barrett declared. "Every effort to amend should be defeated. To open up the Act for amendments will be the signal for a deluge of changes whose purpose will be, in the majority of cases, designed to destroy rather than improve it.

"Both labor and industry have a fair conception of its operations and while there may be some inequalities, they do not begin to offset the inequalities and the injustices under which labor suffered for so many years.

"Local unions, typographical conferences, Allied Printing Trades Councils and central trades and labor councils should adopt resolutions against amending the Act at this time, and forward same to your senators and representatives as quickly as possible."

5,000 AFL Metal Workers Condemn Amendments

NEW YORK, Mar. 25.—Five thousand AFL metal workers in the Brooklyn Metal Trades Council joined the growing number of Federation members who have condemned attempts to destroy the Wagner Act by amendments.

The Council, which has 18 affiliated AFL craft unions in its membership, sent a strongly worded resolution and letter to President Green rebuking him for sponsoring Senator Walsh's proposed amendments to the Act, and urged the national leadership of the AFL to disavow all attempts to cripple the Act.

Any amendments to the Act at this time, the Council told Green, would have the effect of "playing right into the hands of those persons who have traditionally fought the AFL and its affiliated unions.

RAP WALSH BILL

"Our organization is particularly opposed to the amendments introduced by Senator Walsh of Massachusetts because past experience has shown that by giving the courts practically full control over the interpretation and administration of the Act, it will be turned into a law that will be used against labor," the letter said.

"It is our firm belief that by indirectly giving the courts power to determine jurisdictional questions, which has always been the prerogative of the AFL, it works against the best interests of our affiliated membership.

'SET US BACK YEARS'

"In view of the aforementioned, our Council, representing 5,000 members, feels that any amendments at this time will only help labor's enemies cut the heart out of labor's magna charta, and set us back many years.

"We hope the Executive Council will change its stand and fight any amendments to the Act this time."

CIO Head Raps Tory War On Act

New York, Mar. 27.—Motives of the real forces behind the present attack on the Wagner Act must be examined to understand fully how great a menace the attack is to organized labor and to democracy, John L. Lewis writes in an article in Fortune magazine released today.

The sources of the attack are in two main divisions, Lewis points out — certain die-hard Tory employers who have tried to block the Act from the beginning, and equally die-hard Tory leaders in the camp of labor.

"The only sound basis for orderly and peaceful labor relations is properly conducted collective bargaining," Lewis begins. "If this is to function effectively, the workers must be represented by responsible organizations which are their free choice and are capable of speaking for them with authority.

PURPOSE OF THE ACT

"The purpose of the National Labor Relations Act is to make possible such genuine collective bargaining, in the public interest. Its task has not been an easy one. But nevertheless measurable progress has been made in this direction in the last few years.

"All of such progress is now greatly threatened by the present campaign to amend and undermine the Act."

This campaign, Lewis shows, comes from employers "who refuse to admit the inevitability and the desirability of collective bargaining under modern industrial conditions in a democracy.

"Employers of this stamp have resisted the law since its enactment. They now seek to upset it entirely, thus penalizing more enlightened employers who have accepted the law and adusted their personnel matters accordingly."

AFL Local Leaders Help Defend Act

Washington, Mar. 25—Officers of three large AFL local unions have joined with a number of prominent Washington citizens in calling a conference to "preserve the social gains and protect the rights of labor embodied in the Wagner Labor Relations Act."

Lewis Tells CIO Stand On Unity

Communists and has a leadership responsive to Communist principles, that man is a knave, a liar and a poltroon.

"And that statement is just as broad as a barn door and just as high as a church steeple, so that it will take in anyone who may come within its scope."

While emphasizing the sincere desire of the CIO for real labor unity, Lewis warned that if the AFL leaders reject unity and continue to harass the CIO unions, the CIO may have to change its present attitude.

"If peace with the AFL comes, well and good," he said. "Labor will be the beneficiary and the country will have reason to rejoice.

IF PEACE FAILS

"If peace upon an honorable and reasonable basis fails to come from these conferences, then the CIO will change its policy. Its policy has been one that has been merely defensive in its attitude toward the AFL.

"The CIO did not start out to reorganize the organized. It started out to organize the unorganized. The CIO has not struck back from the foul blows delivered to it by the AFL. It has not organized unions to absorb existing unions of the AFL. But the AFL now is organizing unions to absorb the unions in the CIO.

"Even in our own industry the AFL has chartered a puny little sickly group in the mining industry to try to destroy the United Mine Workers of America.

COULD HURT ENEMIES

"Well, the CIO will not long tolerate that policy, because the CIO is capable of doing more than merely defending itself. The CIO is capable of inflicting injury upon an adversary.

"The day will come when patience will cease to be a virtue, and those who are now enjoying themselves in the AFL in vile, lying attacks upon the CIO's integrity and its policies and in harassing its existing organizations may well look forward to the day when they will be fully occupied at home, because that day will come if peace comes not."

Labor Protests Postpone Act Hearings Again

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25. — Organized labor and liberal protests again brought a halt to the Tory attempt to rush hearings on Wagner Act amendments this week, with the announcement that the Senate Labor and Education Committee would postpone setting a date for another week.

Senator Elbert D. Thomas, chairman of the Committee, announced that hearings were held off in the interests of the CIO-AFL negotiations for unity. He said that a large number of messages had been received from CIO and AFL unions demanding delay in the hearings and expressing opposition to amendments.

The committee vote, which was unanimous for futher delay, came after a wire from Philip Murray, CIO vice-president, in which Murray urged no hearings "at least until after the two peace committees have had further opportunity to explore the possibility of unifying the house of labor.

"I feel as a member of the peace committee that hearings at this time would definitely hamper whatever chances there are of working out a solution of the CIO-AFL controversy."

MURRAY SPEAKS

Vice President Philip Murray also addressed the anthracite miners convention, tracing the growth and achievements of the CIO, which he said had increased the purchasing power of the nation by nearly five billion dollars through wage increases.

The Steel Workers Organizing Committee of the CIO, Murray said, has established 1400 lodges and negotiated 582 collective bargaining agreements resulting in annual wage increases of $300,000,000, and similar advances have been made in other industries.

"The CIO has furnished the only resistance against the onslaughts that might have been conducted by manufacturers on wages and employment," Murray said. "The CIO stopped wage slashes in 1938."

BOSSES BUSY TOO

But the bosses are busy too, Senator Thomas indicated. He showed reporters another pile of wires from chambers of commerce, members of the National Manufacturers Assn., and other anti-union employers' groups. This pile was alarmingly big—almost equal to that from the CIO.

"There is being developed pressure by the Manufacturers Assn. to open the whole field," Thomas said.

This was taken to indicate a change in the line of the NAM, which previously felt that President Green and other top leaders of the AFL could carry the ball for the employers who want the Act destroyed. It showed that refusal of AFL unions to fall in line with Green's proposals was also having its effect in forcing anti-labor employers to apply their own pressure direct.

BURKE APPEAL FAILS

Another development reported by Senator Thomas was the response to Senator Burke's recent radio appeal for wires to the committee in favor of amendments. Burke, of Nebraska, has been the most outspoken enemy of the Act in Congress to date. So far this response has been meager, Thomas said, but the whole campaign to speed hearings and to emasculate the Act has been stepped up to a considerable degree.

CIO unions and AFL locals and internationals who oppose changes in the Act are urged to keep up the barrage on the committee, which meets again Tuesday, March 28.

Ask The Man Who Carries One - -

And you'll find that the reason for this picket line is anti-union practices in the Gussow-Kahn Advertising Agency in New York. Members of the American Advertising Guild, CIO affiliate, picketed the swanky shop of Best & Co., client of the ad agency, with placards carrying some of the swankiest slogans yet seen in a labor dispute.

LaFollette Group Hits Use of Munitions

Corporations' Arms Cause Violence, Report Says

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25.—Employers who prefer the law of the jungle to the law of the land in dealing with their workers received added condemnation today as the Senate Civil Liberties Committee filed its report on industrial munitions.

"The possession and use of industrial munitions by employers is the logical end of a labor-relations policy based on non-recognition of unions—in opposition to the spirit of the national labor laws," the report declared.

"The principal purpose of such weapons is aggression. Their use results only in violence, embitters industrial relations and hampers peaceful settlement of industrial disputes."

A JOINT PROBLEM

The committee — composed of Senators Elbert Thomas and Robert LaFollette—advised no specific legislation to deal with corporation armaments alone. Regulation, it suggested, should consider munitions as "a part of the evils of the system of professional strike-guards and private police, since all three spring fundamentally from a hostility to the principles of collective bargaining."

Private persons who are apt to be involved in industrial disputes, however, "should be prohibited from possessing weapons, such as machine and submachine guns and offensive chemical weapons" which should be confined to the use of public authorities, the committee asserted.

In studying a group of selected corporations, the committee said it found that the commoner types of firearms were stored in "surprising large quantities," and that these same corporations maintained "'strike-preparedness' arsenals on a vast scale."

LOTS OF SALES

In the period between January, 1933, and June, 1937, some 80 corporations bought tear and sickening gas, and gas equipment, worth $490,598.93. The 80 corporations each purchased more than $1,000 worth of the material.

Another 115 companies, whose purchases ranged between $300 and $1,000 apiece, threw $57,532.19 into the industrial munitions pot.

Tom Girdler's Republic Steel Corp. — as might be expected—was the largest single buyer during the four and a half year period. The company paid out $79,712.42 for this purpose.

Other large purchasers included: U. S. Steel, $62,028.12; Bethlehem Steel, $36,173.69; Youngstown Sheet & Tube, $28,358.39; General Motors, $24,626.78; and Goodyear Tire & Rubber, $16,912.58.

MUNITIONS SUPPLY

During the Little Steel strike, when Girdler was crying of his defenselessness at the hands of "armed workers", Republic possessed "52 revolvers, 64 rifles with 1,325 rounds of ammunition, 245 shotguns with 5,784 rounds of shotgun shells, 143 gas guns with 4,033 gas projectiles and 2,707 gas grenades."

Youngstown had on hand "453 revolvers, 369 rifles, 190 shotguns and eight machine guns. These machine guns were not sub-machine guns but regular army model Colt and Lewis weapons." For these machine guns the company had built up a magazine of 40,000 rounds of ammunition.

Gas munitions—tear gas, vomit gas and others — are sold almost exclusively to public law enforcement agencies and private business concerns, the report said, "while approximately one-half of the sales of gas weapons ... goes to industrial employers."

The committee tossed into the wastebasket employers' arguments that these munitions are kept to protect private property from thieves or marauders.

"On the contrary," the senators said, "the character of the weapons purchased, the quantities kept on hand, the dates of purchase, the elements of their typical use in strike situations all indicate that such weapons are designed to be and are so used by agents of the employer against strikers, pickets, or other such groups of people."

The committee struck a blow at the whole theory of private armaments on the big scale used by the nation's larger corporations.

"The power and duty to maintain order and to control assemblages of people, it seems needless to say, properly reside only in public authority," the report noted.

"The idea that any corporation or individual can with force seek to determine the outcome of a labor controversy is repugnant; the possession of industrial munitions such as tear and sickening gas and machine guns, endowing the possessor with a degree of power sufficient to prevent the exercise of the right of free assembly, is in opposition to established public policy."

UNIONS DON'T BUY THEM

No record exists of any purchase of tear gas by a labor organization, the report said in answering the arguments of those industrialists who cloak their armaments in a slogan of "self-defense." Resort to arms by a workman, the committee asserted, is a "rare occurrence," though it disclosed that "in one or two cases there seems to have been a concerted resort to arms in response to the use of arms by agents of the employers."

The study of the industrial munitions traffic revealed that corporation owners frequently have the armaments of public law enforcement agencies used in their behalf.

"Reduced to its simplest terms," the committee charged, "police officials are armed by one side of an industrial dispute for the purpose of having them use the arms against the other.

"Such private subsidization of public authority, occurring during a strike period, is at best of doubtful propriety. In one instance, examined by the committee, the acceptance of such arms was . . . an essential element in a scheme to break a strike in a donor's plant."

Principal caterers to the munitions appetite of anti-labor corporation heads are Federal Laboratories, the Lake Erie Chemical Co. and the Manville Manufacturing Corp.

ENJOY VIOLENCE

"Wish a hell of a strike would get under way. . . I hope that this strike develops and matures and that it will be a damn bad one; we need the money. . . . We are surrounded with strikes, but they are all too peaceful for me . . . I think someone should get out a restraining order on the President of the United States to prevent him from stopping all these strikes. It seems to me that his actions are absolutely in restraint of trade—that is, as far as we are concerned."

Auto Union Convention to Show Strength

CIO in helping the UAW overcome internal difficulties and rid the union of dual unionists was voiced by the Thomas report.

That the UAW is and has been affiliated with the CIO since 1935 was cited by Thomas who quoted official resolutions and other action to that effect.

Thomas reviewed the internal problems caused by the rule or ruin policy of former president Homer Martin, who was tried and ousted by the executive board a week ago, and told of the UAW-CIO triumph over Martin's dual union policy. He told of secret financing of Martin by some unknown source in New York and of the latter's attempted sell-out of the UAW to the Ford Motor Co.

ATTACKS FORD

Initiation of an immediate "Ford Unfair to Labor" drive on a national scale with CIO cooperation was proposed to the convention by Thomas. He pointed out the CIO resolution adopted at Pittsburgh last November merely threatened to start such a campaign, yet even the threat has pushed Ford sales to third place among the big three.

Declaring that Ford's labor policies are rotten to the core, Thomas said that the machinery for a tremendous campaign of education among the labor and middle classes is being set up. He said that Ford workers are eager for unionism and urged an organization drive at the same time as the "Ford Unfair to Labor" campaign.

AFL Backs Probe

Washington, Mar. 25—The AFL Executive Council, meeting here, took time out from considerations of unity negotiations with the CIO to endorse the work of the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee and to urge its continuance.

The Result ---

Charles Minor, striker, being examined by friends after one of the tear gas bombs fired by a Republic Steel guard had struck him in the face.

Charge U.S. Officials Wink at Lawbreaking By Shipowners

NEW YORK, Mar. 25. — Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins was asked today to probe enforcement—or lack of it—of the eight-hour law for seamen as applied to licensed officers and engineers.

Edward P. Trainer, business manager of Local 33 of the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, CIO affiliate, in a letter to Hopkins cited several flagrant cases of "extraordinary lenience" on the part of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation in dealing with shipowner violations of the law.

He said that the Bureau is sabotaging the law by refusing to prosecute violations and refusing to collect fines when the violations are proved.

12 OUT OF 106

In the last report of the bureau's director, Trainer charged, out of 106 violations recorded, "fines were collected in only 12 cases and six were against the same company.

"These fines totaled but $425, although the fine set in the law is $500 for each violation. The usual fine, when one is levied is $25—which can hardly be said to have a deterring effect even when the company is forced to pay it.

"Many fines have been remitted for strange reasons. Others were simply not collected."

CUT TO 4%

A fine of $27,000 levied against the American South African line for a violation aboard the S. S. Atlantic was cut to $1,100—and then never collected.

Six charges against the American Merchant lines for violations aboard the S. S. American Traveler were dropped because "there may be more violations."

The 8-hour statute is part of Public Law 808. Congress authorized an appropriation for the enforcement of the act, but, according to Trainer, regular bureau inspectors are used and are paid out of Bureau funds.

Split Attempt Failure In Farm Union

Washington, Mar. 25—Attempts of the executive board of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union to pull the membership away from the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers have been a failure, Donald Henderson, president, indicated here.

Reports from two of the three states where the STFU has organizations show that members in Missouri and Oklahoma have unanimously rejected the executive board's withdrawal from the CIO international. Both have voted in convention to stay in the international.

The attempted break-away resulted from the refusal of STFU officers to observe the international constitution, and came after they rejected a three-point plan of settlement offered by the CIO and accepted by the international.

Calls For Stop 'Hitler' Protest

New York, Mar. 25—John Brophy, national director of the CIO, has endorsed the "Stop Hitler" demonstration called by the American Council to Combat Nazi Invasion.

"The barbarities of the Nazi invasion of peaceful nations, together with the cruelties inflicted on workers, Jews, Catholics and other sections of the German and European people are condemned by every civilized person," he said.

"The lights of freedom are being extinguished in Europe, not only by the savagery of Hitler, but by the criminal aid given him by reactionaries in power in other European nations.

"Our country has given a lead in the cause of world resistance to Nazism. We must follow this up with the widest popular action against Hitler we can assemble."

Marine Union To Honor Sea Heroes

NEW YORK, Mar. 25.—Heroism shown by members of the National Maritime Union in sea disasters and rescues will be appropriately honored by the NMU according to a plan announced this week by President Joseph Curran.

Medals will be struck off for presentation to each man exhibiting unusual bravery in sea rescues or crises, and a scroll is to be prepared at the union headquarters on which members named will be inscribed.

Curran said that nearly all the East coast seamen who have been cited for bravery in several spectacular rescues at sea in recent months have been members of the union.

"We feel that it is time that the union itself took steps to recognize the outstanding bravery of the men who effected these rescues," Curran said, adding however, that the union did not contend that "these men are unusual in the NMU", as 99 out of a 100 seamen would do the same things if they were placed in similar positions.

PART OF TRADITION

"No one is more surprised, probably, than the seaman himself when it turns out that he is a hero. To him his act was routine, in line with his duty. Rescues are a part of sea tradition," Curran said.

October 2, 1938, eight members of the American Banker crew in a lifeboat, took off the crew of the schooner Pioneer in heavy seas south of the coast of Nova Scotia. The men were John Ponchane, boss'n; Arne Raaos and James Weiss, quartermasters; William Evans, George Halpin, Alex Craig and Olin Minott, able seamen; and Hans Hansen, fire watchmen.

DIVED OVERBOARD

In November, Clark Wyly, able seaman on the American Republic's liner Uruguay, dived overboard in the harbor of Rio de Janeiro to rescue a drowning longshoreman.

December 13, six members of the American Farmer crew in a lifeboat rescued a crew of seven from the Nova Scotia schooner Fieldwood, 200 miles southeast of Halifax. The rescuers were Roderic Emmons, William Nixon, Nathan Liberman, Timothy Moriarity, Philip Babcock, and Donald G. Forbes.

SAVED 13

December 23, an NMU lifeboat crew from the freighter Schodack took 13 men off the Norwegian freighter Smaragd, foundering in heavy seas 600 miles southeast of New York. The five seamen who received medals from the Life Saving Benevolent Assn. were Andrew Rosses, Joseph Lefthouse, Edward Sturkin, Olav Halle and Trygve Tjemme.

About midnight on January 21, a boat crew including six unlicensed members of the Esso Baytown crew picked up the survivors from the sunken Bermuda seaplane Cavalier, 200 miles off New Jersey. They were Tom Brady, John Thomaschek, Howell Smith and John T. Goodwin, able seamen; Joseph Minor, boss'n, and Stanley Taylor, ordinary seaman.

Most of those named have already received medals and money awards from organizations outside the union.

Transit Parleys Start

New York, Mar. 25—Negotiations were under way today for the renewal of the contract between the Transport Workers Union and the Interborough Rapid Transit Corp., operator of elevated, street car and subway lines in four New York boroughs.

A 90-day extension of the present closed shop contract is due to expire March 31. TWU officials said they will seek "adjustments upward in wages and other working conditions."

Recommend Textile Pay Rate of 32½c

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25.—With the approval of its labor members, the wage-hour industry committee for textiles today recommended a minimum hourly pay rate of 32½c an hour for the 600,000 wage earners in the industries under the committee's jurisdiction.

The committee vote was 13—6 for the recommendation, with the six dissenters holding that the proposed wage rate was too high, it was learned here.

If Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews accepts the committee report, some 120,000 workers will receive pay raises, the economic section of the wage-hour division estimated.

NO DIFFERENTIAL

Significantly, the recommendation contains no provision for a lower southern preferential. During NRA days, a rate of 32½c was established in the north, while southern employers were forced to pay only 30c an hour.

Industries affected include the manufacture of cotton, silk, rayon and synthetic yarns and fabrics, excluding knitted fabrics.

Plan Annual Picnic

Harrisburg, Pa., Mar. 25—The Broad Top Miners' Picnic Association of the United Mine Workers of America will hold its fourth annual gathering at Broad Top, Pa., August 18 and 19.

The gigantic two-day picnic is sponsored by the ten local unions of the Broad Top coal field. A general invitation is extended to everybody in the communities in which the ten local unions assure their friends a fine celebration.

Mine Leaders Meet

Quash Try To Scuttle U. S. Housing

Washington, Mar. 25—Tory attempts to scuttle the U. S. housing program were set back by the overwhelming defeat of a proposed amendment to limit the over-all cost on houses to $3500 in Congress this week.

The amendment, sponsored by enemies of the New Deal and of the entire housing program, would have effectively crippled the U. S. Housing Authority if it had passed.

The CIO Committee on Housing, headed by Michael Quill, chairman, and Anthony Wyne Smith, secretary, was principally active in organizing the opposition from labor and other sources that forced the defeat of the proposal.

Newspaper Guild Wins Wilkes-Barre Strike

Lewis Helps Settle 6-Month Walkout

WILKES-BARRE, Pa.—Mar. 25.—The 26-week strike of the Wilkes-Barre Newspaper Guild against three local dailies came to an end here as strikers overwhelmingly accepted an agreement arranged by leaders of the Guild and the CIO.

President John L. Lewis of the CIO, Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers and John Kmetz, UMW international board member from this area, assisted union leaders in the negotiations and helped arrange the settlement.

Conferences were switched to New York from Wilkes-Barre after several parleys here had proved fruitless, due to publishers' stalling. Lewis, though busy with coal contract negotiations and labor peace meetings, found time to give his services to the strike settlement discussions.

Resumption of publication of the three papers will be delayed, however, until the managements reach an agreement with the AFL printers' and pressmen's unions, whose contracts with the papers have expired.

FORTY-HOUR WEEK

The agreement covers employes in the editorial, commercial and advertising departments of the three papers. It provides for the five-day, 40-hour week to go into effect next Labor Day, severance pay running up to 20 weeks after 19 years of service, the Guild shop for all employes excepting a few relatives of the publishers, and arbitration of wage increase demands.

Previous to the final negotiations the publishers had offered what union leaders called a "substandard" contract with a "take-it-or-leave-it" attitude. When the strikers "left it" the publishers' representatives walked out of the conferences.

NO PAPERS PUBLISHED

During the entire six month period, the city was deprived of local dailies. The Guild organized its own news collecting service and broadcast items nightly.

The owner of a Sunday paper which had also been struck on October 1 signed with the Guild several weeks ago.

Clam Workers Get Raise In CIO Pact

Seattle, Wash., Mar. 25—Eighteen hundred clam workers in the Gray's Harbor area near here won 5c an hour increases as Local 7 of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers signed a new contract with employers here.

The pay lifts set new minimum rates of 45c an hour for women and 55c an hour for men. The eight-hour day and the preferential shop were other gains won in the pact.

The clam industry was set to start on March 2. No one went to work, however, until March 21, the day after the contract was signed. Refusal of the workers to start the job before negotiations were completed was one of the main factors in winning the new benefits, union leaders said.

Insurance Local Wins Election

Philadelphia, Mar. 25—The Insurance Guild, CIO union, swept to an easy 108-11 victory in a Pennsylvania Labor Relations Board election held at the Sun Life Insurance Co. here.

As a result the Guild, which forms Local 22 of the United Office and Professional Workers, won sole collective bargaining rights for the company's 123 industrial insurance agents and clerks in the Philadelphia office.

The local, organized for 18 months, has previously won substantial pay increases, improved working conditions and greater job security.

Guild Refuses Hearst Demand Of 'Surrender'

CHICAGO, Mar. 25.—Negotiations between the management of the two Hearst papers and striking members of the Chicago Newspaper Guild came to an abrupt end here when the publishers insisted upon the dropping of all Guild demands as a basis for settlement of the 16-week strike.

The publishers of the American and Herald-Examiner took the position that they would refuse to negotiate unless the Guild dropped all its demands. If the Guild agreed to this virtual surrender, the Hearst representatives said, they would then be willing to negotiate as to how many of the 600 strikers might get their jobs back.

A derisive "NO" was the union's reply.

As the Guild redoubled its efforts to push the strike to a final victory, records showed that union pressure had cut the two papers' advertising totals by 1,670,731 lines since December 1.

OTHER PAPERS GAINED

This figure, strike committee leaders said, was all the more impressive because every other Chicago paper has increased its amount of advertising space during the same period.

"If the second half of March compares favorably with the first, from our point of view, then Media Records (advertising statistical service) should be the management's 'handwriting on the wall.'

"The strike will continue to go on—till the signature of the Hearst management is on the dotted line."

THUGS BUSY AGAIN

The committee reported that Hearst thugs were back at their old tricks. C. E. Elliott, striking branch circulation manager, was knocked unconscious by two of the Hearst goons as he left his car to enter Garfield Park Hospital to visit his wife.

GUILD DEMANDS

In its negotiations with the management, the Guild had called for an end to the threat of company unionism; a Guild shop contract covering all white collar workers in the editorial and commercial departments; limitation of the firing powers of management, with consultation with the Guild before discharges; rehiring of strikers without loss of service or position and full back pay for the time lost during the strike; discharge of strikebreakers; dropping of legal action against the Guild and compliance with a National Labor Relations Board intermediate report which ordered the management to cease and desist its Guild-busting tactics.

The management showed willingness to abide only by the last two of the demands. Union negotiators replied that the Hearst office was not even negotiable.

Race-Baiters, Labor Haters Birds Of A Feather

New York, Mar. 25.—Scratch a race baiter and you will find a labor hater under the skin, Gerald J. McLellan says in an article appearing in the current issue of the Transport Bulletin, official organ of the Transport Workers Union, CIO.

Preachers of the doctrine of hate against minority groups are flourishing in a score of industrial centers throughout America, McLellan declares.

"What better means to divide workers, and what better means to nullify the fruits of President Roosevelt's progressive legislation than to foment national race hatreds, using as a backdrop to the base campaign the hysteria of brutal persecution of minorities which is now sweeping middle Europe?"

Pointing out that no free labor movement, no bona fide trade unions exist in the countries where race persecution is raging, McLellan says, "it is not our ancestors they are after, but our closed shop, vacations, sick-leave, holidays, higher pay and our freedom."

Mine Union Re-Elects Officers

His speech, to be delivered at 10:30 P. M., eastern standard time, will be carried by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Unity Conferences Resume April 4

NEW YORK, Apr. 1.—Representatives of the AFL and the CIO will meet again at the Hotel Biltmore on Tuesday, April 4, it was announced here.

Originally scheduled for March 30, the meeting was postponed because of the death of a long-time associate and friend of Harry Bates, AFL bricklayers' union president and member of the AFL unity delegation.

The last meeting of the two committees, held in Washington, ended with no statement being given out by either side.

Canadian Labor Watching Peace Negotiations

(See Other Story, Page Two)

TORONTO, Can., Apr. 1. — Canadian labor is eagerly awaiting a successful outcome of the peace negotiations now in progress between AFL and CIO unity committees.

Scores of local unions, both AFL and CIO have addressed wires and letters to President Roosevelt, CIO President John L. Lewis and President William Green of the AFL expressing hopes that unity might be reached between the two great labor centres.

TORONTO COUNCIL

The Toronto District Labor Council, representing over 40,000 affiliated members, and the largest central labor council in the dominion, was the first to wire leaders of both groups commending them for resuming peace conferences.

Other central labor councils and unions have followed suit.

If a poll were taken a majority of Canadian international union members would be in favor of the CIO plan for uniting the CIO, AFL and the independent railroad brotherhoods into one great American Congress of Labor, observers stated.

Wants Industry 100% Union

(See Story Page Three)

CLEVELAND, Apr. 1.—Meeting here for its third convention, the International Union, United Automobile Workers of America, showed it had successfully overcome the disruptionist attempts of Homer Martin and his gang and mapped plans for complete organization of the nation's key industry into a completely-unified CIO affiliate.

More than 500 delegates, representing all but a handful of the organized auto workers in every section of the nation and Canada, were on hand for the long-awaited sessions.

Evidence that Martin's slanderous attacks on the CIO had fallen far short of their mark was seen in the thunderous applause that greeted the CIO's representatives at the convention.

The CIO spokesmen urged the delegates to cast aside the factionalism that nearly spelled ruination for their union, and to concentrate instead on the 100% organization of the industry and the betterment of working conditions.

The CIO, the delegates were told, will stand squarely behind every effort of the UAW to reach these goals.

First Southern Sugar Plant Signs With CIO

By FRED SEELIG

HOUSTON, Tex., Apr. 1.—New union history was made for the South this week with the signing of the first union contract ever to be negotiated with a sugar refinery below the Mason and Dixon line.

The Imperial Sugar Company of Sugarland, Tex., 30 miles from here, signed with the United Sugar Refinery Workers Local Industrial Union No. 917 of the Congress of Industrial Organizations. The firm manufactures Imperial Pure Cane Sugar.

The contract covers 380 employes, making the entire town of Sugarland, which is company-owned, practically a 100 per cent CIO community.

Considering the history of the town, which first came into being as a convict labor industrial center, and then a privately-owned industry with working conditions for years hardly above that of a penal colony, the CIO contract signing was a remarkable achievement.

AFL EFFORTS FAILED

Efforts have been made frequently during the past 30 years to organize the Sugarland industries. It was only three years ago that the American Federation of Labor tried, but was thwarted.

The new CIO unionists were jubilant and praised the work of Maurice Dineen, national field representative of the CIO, for handling organizational problems and negotiations which nearly broke down and almost resulted in a strike.

CIO WON POLL

Dineen arrived in Sugarland just as the employes were preparing to take a strike vote. He called a meeting and advised against hasty action. Next he conferred with the sugar refinery officials. It was then agreed that a consent election be held under the auspices of the National Labor Relations Board. The CIO won, 296 to 36.

Anthracite Leaders Meet

U. S. Study Shows Strikes Down In '38, Unions Growing

WASHINGTON, Apr. 1.—The number of strikes during 1939 dropped to only half the total rolled up in 1937, while union membership rose over the 8,000,000 mark for the first time in the nation's history, the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported today.

The figures provide a fitting answer for those critics of the Wagner Labor Relations Act who charge the law with inciting strikes rather than promoting industrial peace. Previous statistics from the National Labor Relations Board confirm the fact that the Wagner Act has contributed greatly to the peaceful settlement of labor disputes.

"There were only half as many strikes (all strikes, including sit-downs) as in 1937, with only about one-third as many workers involved," the article, entitled "Industrial Relations in 1938," declared.

YEAR OF TRANSITION

The government bureau described 1938 as a year of transition in labor-employer relationships.

"In contrast to those firms which were continuing their belligerent opposition to any kind of collective bargaining, was an increasing number of employers who had accepted unionism and were making a sincere effort to adjust their personnel policies and methods to the new situation."

Still other employers, the article found, have followed a policy of hoping that unionism of their workers is merely a fad.

SOME HALF-HEARTED

This group has given a "semblance of meeting the demands of their employes by going through the formality of signing a union agreement, but in one way or another set up barriers to any real day-by-day collective bargaining relationship.

"Others made unusual efforts to improve plant working conditions and personnel policies with the hope that employes gradually would lose interest in trade unions."

Tory Labor Bill Hits Squalls

Lansing, Mich., April 1—Strong and united labor pressure appeared today to have killed the viciously reactionary state labor bill sponsored by the late Gov. Fitzgerald of Michigan.

The State Senate Labor Committee announced it would refuse to report out the bill with its present anti-union clauses.

"This bill will not only antagonize labor, it will foment strikes, and I am in favor of rewriting it, patterning it after the New York labor law," said Senator Harry F. Hittle, Republican chairman of the committee.

The Michigan House of Representatives had previously passed the bill by a 58-37 margin.

Gov. Dickinson—who became the state's chief executive when Fitzgerald died suddenly—asked the committee to confer with AFL and CIO leaders when they draft the new bill.

Pennsylvania CIO Convention, May 2

HARRISBURG, Pa., Apr. 1.—Delegates from CIO unions with a total membership of nearly half a million workers from the mass production and smaller industries of Pennsylvania will attend the second annual convention of the CIO state Industrial Union Council which opens in Harrisburg, May 2.

Sessions will be held in the Chestnut Street Auditorium, beginning at 10 A. M.

According to the convention call, signed by Pres. John A. Philips and Sec'y Lester Thomas, all "local unions chartered by the CIO and by international unions affiliated with the CIO, and city and county industrial union councils of locals in the state, are to be admitted into affiliation with the Council."

Metal Miners Back Labor Congress Plan

DENVER, Colo., Apr. 1.—The CIO plan for a united American Congress of Labor has the full endorsement of the Intl. Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, according to a unanimous decision of the Executive Board meeting here.

"Fundamental in unity is the recognition that the principles of industrial unionism, so dramatically carried out into practice by the CIO, be safeguarded," the Board said in a letter from Pres. Reid Robinson to Chairman Bates of the AFL unity committee.

"The principles of a program which effectively organized millions of hitherto unorganized workers in mass production industries must be continued—must be greatly expanded.

"The unity proposals of the CIO put forth concisely a comprehensive technique for the desired unity of labor, without the need for sacrificing the basic principles of craft unionism on the one hand or industrial unionism on the other."

LIST AFL ATTACKS

This decision of the Board, the letter said, was based on long experience in the AFL as well as its history as one of the founding unions of the CIO. Its right to industrial organization has been recognized by both—though more in theory than in practice by the AFL.

Since the union joined in with others to form the CIO, the letter points out, it has been subjected to a series of unscrupulous raids by order of the AFL.

In 1937, the AFL chartered the notorious "Blue Card" union in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma—a gang of company unionists and gun-thugs.

Aid CIO Truckmen

Athens, Ohio.—All friends of labor are asked to patronize union trucks and to look on the windshield for the monthly sticker of United Truck Drivers Local Industrial Union No. 724 of Athens, Ohio.

It's About Time!

After a lapse of 150 years, Gov. Rivers of Georgia signs a resolution adopted by the general assembly ratifying the Bill of Rights, while two sponsors of the resolution look on.

Look For The Label

More Unions Hail CIO Peace Plan

WASHINGTON, Apr. 1. — More messages endorsing the CIO stand for unity in the labor movement show a steady increase in the number of local unions and central bodies of all three organizations, CIO, AFL and Brotherhoods, backing up the CIO and demanding that unity be brought about.

Evidence that the CIO plan for an American Congress of Labor has found favor with the workers is seen in the number of wires and letters specifically endorcing the proposal. The Brotherhood of Railway Carmen in Chicago, AFL, wrote: "Such a united labor movement of the AFL, CIO and Railroad Brotherhoods would greatly strengthen the entire labor movement in America and would encourage millions of still unorganized workers to join the ranks."

In Tacoma, Wash., Local 199 of the AFL Pulp and Paper Workers resolved: "The Lewis proposal for an American Congress of Labor will give the rank and file an opportunity to force and bring about this greatly needed unification," and went on record in favor of the CIO plan.

From Toronto, Canada, and Brooklyn, N. Y., the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators (AFL), wrote its approval of the CIO efforts towards unity and fraternal wishes for success in the conferences. AFL truck drivers in Canton, Ohio, wired a similar message, as did Local B-959 of the AFL Electrical Workers.

CIO UNANIMOUS

Up to early last week 26 AFL central bodies have sent messages supporting the need for unity and close to 100 locals of 30 national and international AFL affiliates. Sixty-five church groups have written, and numerous messages have come from Railroad Brotherhoods, Labor's Non-Partisan League, and miscellaneous progressive groups.

CIO approval of the American Congress of Labor plan is overwhelming. In Butte, Mont., 5,000 metal miners of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers sent a letter warning of the dangers of labor and the renewed reactionary drive of Tory Congressmen and their anti-union bosses in big business, and describing the CIO plan as the best answer to the anti-labor offensive.

CIO Industrial Union Councils wiring or writing their approval this week include Toledo, Ohio; Iowa-Nebraska State, Snohomish County, Wash.; Trumbull County, Ohio; Sabine area and Perot Naches, Tex.

EVERY INDUSTRY

Every industry and area where the CIO is represented approves of the Congress proposal. Messages have come in from CIO textile workers in Canada, dairy workers in California, electrical workers in Minnesota, utility workers on the West Coast, packinghouse workers in Chicago, newspaper workers in Seattle, marine draftsmen in Brooklyn, N. Y., social service employes in New York, steel workers in the Mid-West, state and county government workers on the Pacific and scores of widely differing types of workers.

All are united in their demands for unification of the American labor movement along the lines laid down in the CIO plan for an American Congress of Labor.

Deadline Nears On Coal Pact Negotiations

NEW YORK, Mar. 31.—Negotiations between the United Mine Workers of America and coal mine operators for a new contract covering some 350,000 Appalachian bituminous miners moved towards their April 1 deadline with no agreement announced by either side.

The old contract expires at midnight, March 31. Early in the conferences, Pres. John L. Lewis of the UMW suggested to the operators that they agree to an extension of the terms of the 1938 agreement until a new contract is accepted by the two groups.

His offer was rejected by the employers at that time on the basis that there was plenty of time before the zero hour.

The mine union placed before the operators demands for a 50-cents-a-day wage increase, a six-hour, five-day week, a share in the benefits of technological improvements, a guaranteed 200-work day year, seniority and other gains.

Their demands brought forth a counter-proposal from the employers for a 50-cents-a-day wage decrease

PeaceParleysContinue; Plans Under Discussion

NEW YORK, Apr. 1.—Resumption of AFL-CIO unity negotiations was postponed until Tuesday, April 4, it was announced here.

Cause of the delay in the conferences, which had been scheduled to get under way again on March 30, was the death of the vice-president of the AFL bricklayers union. Harry Bates, bricklayers international president and one of the unity negotiators, left immediately for Chicago to attend the funeral services.

The negotiators met for several hours in the Department of Labor building in Washington on March 24, but had no statement to make regarding the progress of their discussions. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins was closeted with the AFL and CIO representatives for about three hours during the day.

Both CIO and AFL headquarters have received many requests from local union groups in all sections of the nation to continue the discussions until an honorable and fair peace is attained. A large proportion of the messages have hailed CIO President John L. Lewis' original proposal for an American Congress of Labor, to include unions of the AFL, the CIO and the four independent railway brotherhoods.

Vote 95-1 For CIO

CASS LAKE, Minn., April 1—The workers of the Rathborne Hair & Ridgeway box plant voted unanimously for the Congress of Industrial Organizations to act as their sole bargaining agent. Out of 97 votes cast, 95 voted yes, one voted no, and one was a blank.

Marine Unions To Fight USMC Hiring Halls

SAN FRANCISCO — Any attempt by the U. S. Maritime Commission to open government hiring halls on the West Coast will be met with determined opposition of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific.

A letter to Admiral Emory S. Land warned that the Federation "will refuse to load or discharge any ship where the personnel is forced to seek employment through channels specifically established by the U. S. Maritime Commission."

Texas CIO Meets In San Antonio

San Antonio, Tex., Apr. 1—One of the most anti-labor cities in the South, San Antonio—scene of bloodshed during the 1938 shellers' strike—is the mecca today of hundreds of CIO delegates who are scheduled to attend the third annual convention of the Texas State Industrial Union Council. The sessions start April 1 and end April 2.

Despite the strong-arm tactics and brutality of the San Antonio police department of a year ago, the pecan shellers, numbering nearly 10,000, recently signed a closed shop contract. It was a major victory for the CIO.

It was because of the strong resistance to unionism in San Antonio that the Texas State CIO Council decided to choose that city for its convention. Also, San Antonio was one of the financial centers for the Golden Shirts, fascist revolutionary party that had planned to seize Mexico.

UNITY MARKS UAW MEET; PLAN DRIVE FOR 100% UNION

CLEVELAND, Apr. 1.—Freed from the factionalism which marked the Homer Martin regime, the United Automobile Workers of America at an enthusiastic convention laid plans to complete organization of the auto and aircraft industries.

The completeness of the union's victory over Martin's breakaway movement was shown by the credential committee's report. The 500 delegates present represented close to 200 locals and all but a tiny fraction of the organized workers in the industry.

With a present membership of 355,680, the UAW-CIO now has all but 15,000 represented in its ranks. More than 500,000 workers are covered by its union contracts.

Organization of competitive parts plants and tool and die shops was a subject to which much attention was devoted — in addition to the dominating question of organizing Ford.

The union's loyalty to the CIO was enthusiastically reaffirmed. CIO officers were thanked for their services and for their "scrupulous observance" of the union's autonomy.

The greetings of CIO President John L. Lewis were conveyed to the convention by Vice Pres. Philip Murray, who, together with Vice Pres. Sidney Hillman, addressed the delegates in executive session.

CONGRATULATIONS

Both Murray and Hillman congratulated the UAW on removing the cancer of factionalism by their rejection of Martin and his policies. They warned the delegates against dangers of division if they allowed any revival of factional strife, and urged that personal considerations be subordinated to the interests of a united union.

CIO greetings were also brought to the convention by Secretary James B. Carey and Director John Brophy.

Brophy told the delegates that "it is necessary to throw the Homer Martins out of the labor movement so far that they can never crawl back again—so far that they will never again be useful to the employers that support them in their attempts to disrupt and wreck our unions."

Warning of the spread of Fascism in other countries, he said: "This hasn't happened in America because we have a strong labor movement here that knows its enemies and knows how to deal with them."

Carey declared that the whole CIO was watching this convention and that it could "ignite a spark that will lead to another great organization campaign.

"What happens here does not affect only the UAW and the CIO," he said, "but the whole labor movement."

As president of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, Carey challenged the UAW to compete with his union as to which will first have a completely organized industry.

E. L. Oliver of Labor's Non-Partisan League, also addressed the convention. He stressed the urgency of organizing labor's forces politically for the 1940 elections.

Few outside speakers were invited, and most of the time of the convention was devoted to amending the constitution to remove some of the causes of past troubles, to electing a united union administration, to preparing for organizing drives, and to other union business.

LOYAL TO CIO

Vigorous and outspoken in discussion, the delegates responded as one man whenever it was necessary to demonstrate their unity and their loyalty to the CIO.

Acting President R. J. Thomas reported on the first day that the union now has a higher dues-paying membership than at its last convention. He emphasized the importance of launching a great drive to organize Ford and the aircraft industry.

Vice Presidents Frankensteen, Welles, Mortimer, Hall and Secretary-Treasurer Addes also reported to the convention on the third day, and their reports were accepted by the delegates.

The UAW adopted an emphatic stand on defense of the Wagner Labor Relations Act and voted to inform Congress of their determined opposition to all amendments.

The LaFollette-Thomas oppressive labor practices bill was endorsed, and adequate funds for WPA were urged.

The convention was still in session when this issue of THE CIO NEWS went to press, with election of officers still on the remaining order of business.

Tories Ask New Cut For WPA

Washington, Apr. 1—An "economy"minded House Appropriations Committee today was in the midst of a new campaign to starve the nation's jobless.

Knocking $50,000,000 from President Roosevelt's request for a WPA deficiency appropriation, the committee made known that it felt its action had none-the-less been on the "liberal" side.

Unless the committee's recommendation is overturned in the House and Senate—as it may well be—500,000 WPA jobs will be sacrificed.

MANY PROTESTS

Members of both Houses, it is known, have received hundreds of demands from labor and unemployed groups pointing out that a cut in WPA at this time would seriously retard the present slow economic recovery

Die Casters To Meet

New York, Apr. 1 — The fifth annual convention of the National Association of Die Casting Workers opens in New York, April 28, at the Hotel McAlpin, National Secretary W. R. Ramsey announced this week.

Delegates will be present from locals in New York City, Syracuse and Batavia, N. Y.; Garwood and Newark, N. J.; Pottstown, Pa.; Toledo, Ohio and Kansas City, Mo.

A Bill for Freedom and Peace

Industrial peace is the aim of the Oppressive Labor Practices bill just introduced in Congress by Senators LaFollette and Thomas.

It represents the most constructive proposal yet advanced to put an end to the violence and bloodshed that have so often marked American industrial struggles.

At the same time it serves the cause of peace by forbidding many practices which have driven workers to strike in defense of their rights as American citizens.

Few bills have ever had such a background of careful investigation and thorough study as has the Oppressive Labor Practices bill.

It is the fruit of two and a half years of investigation by the LaFollette-Thomas civil liberties committee, in the course of which 18,000,000 words of testimony and exhibits were collected, 98 days of public hearings held, and 485 witnesses heard.

The committee found that "the most persistent and significant violations of civil liberties occurred in the field of labor and arose principally from a labor relations policy hostile to collective bargaining and the organization of unions."

The bill is designed to prohibit the use of labor spies, strikebreakers, strikebreaking agencies, oppressive armed guards and industrial munitions.

It declares that such practices violate the right of employes to organize; cause and provoke acts of violence and destruction of property; lead to labor disputes obstructing the free flow of commerce; and obstruct the settlement of labor disputes through negotiations and the orderly procedure of collective bargaining.

The hearings of the Senate civil liberties committee produced a tremendous volume of evidence in regard to the abuses and provocations to which working people are subjected when they seek to organize.

It exposed the whole vicious system of labor espionage; the use of gangsters and gunmen to break strikes; and the arsenals of machine guns, sawed-off shotguns, gas bombs, etc., purchased by anti-labor corporations for use against their employes.

It proved conclusively that nearly all the violence in recent labor disputes was directly traceable to these practices of the employers.

The exposures of the committee have already done great good in discouraging many of these activities. But they have not done away with them. And the danger is that, once the spotlight of publicity ceases to play on them, they may be revived in even more virulent form.

The LaFollette-Thomas bill is designed to eliminate the un-American practices which the committee has exposed. It should have the support of all public-spirited citizens who want to see the workers' civil rights protected, an end put to lawless violence and a constructive step taken to preserve industrial peace.

Open Attack on the Wagner Act

The plot against the Wagner Labor Relations Act has been brought out into the open, on the eve of Senate hearings, by the publication of the demands of the Natl. Association of Manufacturers for the act's revision.

The effect of these demands would be to change the Wagner Act from an instrument for protecting labor's right to organize into an instrument for shackling and oppressing labor.

The NAM, if it had its way, would outlaw the closed shop, the check-off and even majority rule as now construed by the act. It would change the law to encourage company unionism and to place many new restrictions on the rights of bona fide labor unions.

Members of the AFL may be surprised to note that in advancing this program, the NAM quotes statements of Pres. William Green of the AFL in favor of revision of the Wagner Act.

But this should not occasion surprise. For actually the amendments embodied in the Walsh bill and endorsed by Green have played right into the hands of all enemies of the labor act.

Anti-union manufacturers have been content to let the demand for amendment of the Wagner Act appear to come from AFL sources. They have held back heretofore from announcing their full demands, hoping that the Walsh bill would open the floodgates for virtual destruction of the present act.

The Walsh bill, in fact, embodies many of the demands of anti-labor employers for freer play for company unionism. But the opposition of AFL as well as CIO members to the Walsh bill has been so great, that the NAM now evidently feels that it should come out from behind this stalking horse and apply its own direct pressure for its full demands.

The CIO has warned repeatedly that all present moves to amend the Wagner Act, on whatever pretext, constitute a grave danger to the act as an instrument for protecting labor's rights.

This danger has now become acute, and all friends of labor and of the Wagner Act need to rally their forces as never before to defend it against all amendments.

Their Game

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

A Vigorous Union

Vim, vigor and vitality are among the most noteworthy characteristics of the United Automobile Workers of America.

Some of the old AFL craft unions may be dying of dry rot. But the chief danger to the UAW seems rather to come from the surplus of its own vitality.

The UAW is typically American in most respects. Aggressive pioneers of unionism in modern industry, its members do not suffer from timidity, servility or other similar inhibitions.

Walt Whitman would have rejoiced in their free-and-easy democracy, even though it may tend to turbulence at times.

Misleaders Removed

The auto workers have shown their free spirit by twice overthrowing misleadership that impeded their union's progress.

At the South Bend convention in 1936, the UAW put an end to AFL misrule through Francis Dillon which had nearly strangled their organization at birth.

The year that followed this convention was one of startlingly rapid growth. Aligned with the CIO and freed from AFL restraints, the union grew from a few thousand to nearly four hundred thousand members.

The Cleveland convention marks the success of another major operation to remove misleadership. Homer Martin and his irresponsible policies, which kept the union in a perpetual turmoil of factionalism, have been decisively rejected by the auto workers.

The UAW is now free to go forward once more, devoting the tremendous energies of its membership to constructive work instead of ruinous internal fighting.

The Concern of All

Every union of the CIO has been vitally concerned with both the progress and the troubles of the UAW.

Its amazing successes centered the attention of the whole country on the auto workers' union. Every other CIO organization benefitted in prestige as a result.

But one of the penalties of such nation-wide attention was that the spotlight was turned even more glaringly on all of the UAW's internal troubles, when these developed.

Every CIO union has followed closely the auto workers' fight against factionalism. And all of them rejoice as one, now that the Cleveland convention has shown the successful outcome of this fight.

Harmony and Unity

"The CIO's behind us; we shall not be moved," was a refrain that was repeatedly sung by the convention delegates.

They recognized their responsibility toward the whole CIO, and at the same time they profited from the experienced advice of the CIO national leadership.

Factional habits are not easily overcome. They were a still-present danger at the Cleveland convention, and the press of the country was alert to even the slightest signs of friction.

But nevertheless, harmony and unity were the leading notes at the convention, and the prevailing loyalty to the CIO aided the delegates and officers in subordinating personal and factional considerations to the common interests of their great union.

The Tasks Ahead

The vigor, initiative and courage of the auto workers in organizing their industry have been an inspiration to the whole CIO.

But other unions may also profit by learning from them the lessons which the auto workers have had to learn in the school of hard knocks.

Many difficult tasks still confront the UAW.

The dwindling number of workers who have been misled into following Homer Martin have to be won back before complete unity is achieved.

The authority of the union has to be conclusively re-established in its contractual relations with the auto companies.

The huge Ford Company, last holdout of industrial feudalism, has to be organized.

But no one who observed the vitality and enthusiasm of the Cleveland convention will have any doubt that the auto workers will succeed in these tasks.

Murphy For Defense Of Civil Rights

Washington, April 1—The "democratic ideal must be applied in every part of our life—social, political and economic," Atty.-Gen. Frank Murphy declared in a radio broadcast in which he called for defense of American civil liberties.

The former Michigan governor, who has established a civil liberties division in the Department of Justice, warned that "we must be on guard against those tendencies and attitudes, in ourselves as well as in others, that open the door to one denial of liberty and then another."

Bosses Pay 15c-A-Worker For Fight On Wagner Act

SEATTLE, Apr. 1.—West coast lumber barons feel that amending the Wagner Act is worth 15c a worker.

In a letter sent out by the Committee for Amendment, National Labor Relations Act, employers are told that "we are bothered by the fact that we may be called to Washington on a minute's notice and perhaps within a few days, to appear before a Congressional Committee. We would very much like, if this occurred, having to abandon the project because money was lacking."

Included on the committee of six persons is the secretary of the powerful, anti-union West Coast Lumbermen's Association.

Manufacturers Assn. Spurs Its Drive To Kill Wagner Act

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 1. — The National Association of Manufacturers has come out from behind Bill Green's skirts with an open admission that it wants the Wagner Act amended out of existence.

The NAM's strategy was to let Green and other top shots in the AFL carry the ball for them, but Green has fumbled so badly in efforts to swing AFL unions into line that they have to make their own plays from now on.

Last week the NAM started piling telegrams into the office of Elbert D. Thomas, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee that will hold hearings on the proposed amendments beginning April 11.

This week they've opened out with a pamphlet seductively titled, "Who Wants the Wagner Act Amended?" The pamphlet is nicely laid out, bound in conservative gray, with no union label on it, and with the name of the NAM buried in small print on the last page.

WELL, WHO DOES?

The pamphlet goes over the old anti-labor ground about the Act being unfair, coercive, unjust to the helpless employer, and of course a crying shame for the way it maltreats the poor worker.

What's new and more interesting about the NAM's latest effort is the list of people it says want the Act changed. Who are these people that the NAM cites?

To begin with, there are eight (count 'em) reactionary politicians —described as "legislators." These include five out-and-out Republicans and three renegade Democrats. Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, arch-enemy of labor and of everything progressive in the U. S., leads the Republicans. Following him are the notorious Rep. Hoffman of Michigan, friend of the Black Legion and particular foe of the automobile workers in his state, Senator Davis of Pennsylvania, who votes against relief, Rep. Short of Missouri, who says "panic, anarchy, revolution and ruin" will result if the four-year-old Act isn't changed, and Rep. Gifford, another Republican from Pennsylvania.

TORY DEMOCRATS TOO

Senator Burke of Nebraska leads the Tory Democrats listed by the NAM. Everybody knows his record. Elected in 1934 after proclaiming himself a 200 per cent New Dealer, this champion of reaction has voted against every important New Deal measure since that time.

Following him are Sen. Logan of Kentucky, who says "the farmers are fighting to save their farms against this insidious, ruinous procedure," though the Act doesn't apply to agriculture, Rep. Cox of Georgia, who favors concentration camps for strikers, and Rep. Rankin of Mississippi.

But the NAM doesn't mention the scores of Congressmen and Senators who have opposed amendments to the Act. It doesn't say anything about the scores of AFL unions and central bodies and union leaders (such as Lynch of the Pattern Makers, Laudemann of the Machinists, Tobin of the Teamsters) on record in favor of the Act or opposed to meddling with it.

Wagner Act Hearings To Start April 11

WASHINGTON, Apr. 1.—Hearings on proposed amendments to the Wagner Act were ordered by the Senate Labor Committee for April 11.

The order came after a delay of almost a month, during which CIO and AFL unions and other progressive groups bombarded the Committee with requests for no amendments and for postponement of the hearings.

Last week the Natl. Manufacturers Assn. and Pres. Green of the AFL took the front pages with almost identical demands for immediate hearings and for drastic revisions designed to cripple the Act. Senator Thomas, Committee chairman, showed reporters a pile of wires received from the NAM and from Chambers of Commerce, indicating a concerted employer pressure campaign for quick hearings and sudden death to the Wagner Act.

Now that hearings are set, CIO and AFL unions opposing the plan to kill the Act will have to step up the fight to save it to a faster tempo than ever. Efforts should be made to line up progressives outside of the organized labor movement to join in the campaign.

SEND WIRES AND LETTERS

The hearings start April 11 in the Senate Office Bldg., Washington, D. C. Wires and letters should be sent to Senator Elbert D. Thomas, chairman, Senate Committee on Education and Labor, demanding that the Act be left alone. Similar messages should go to Senators and Representatives from local districts.

The fight to defend labor's Magna Charta has entered its second phase. Labor protests have delayed the Tory offensive against the Act this far. A redoubled protest will be needed to save it again.

Whitney Warns Of Tory Drive

By S. MINKIN

Washington, Apr. 1—"In the face of the reactionary offensive in Congress which directly threatens the entire American labor movement, we must bend our every effort to preserve the right of collective bargaining by opposing efforts to amend the Wagner Act out of existence," A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, told an overflow meeting at the CIO Federal Workers School here this week.

Whitney traced the growth of collective bargaining in the railroad industry and hit hard at the Tories in Congress who are plotting to destroy the social gains labor has won in the last six years, adding:

'VIEW WITH ALARM'

"I hope you are 'viewing with alarm' the actions of certain Tory Senators and Representatives, whose faces are turned away from the entreating pleas of the millions of unemployed and of those on relief; these hypocritical legislators who are bent on 'appeasing' big business.

"There are plenty of Edward Burke's in Washington and in every state capital scheming to curb social security measures, to break up the trade unions by making a mockery of collective bargaining procedure, and to shackle the civil liberties of our people."

GIRDLER, FORD DEFY LAW

Pointing to the uphill struggle the American workers have had to establish the right of collective bargaining, Whitney said: "The legality of trade unions was definitely established in 1842, but Tom Girdler and Henry Ford, and their friends in Congress and in our state legislatures, are not willing to accept this fact. That is why we need a National Labor Relations Act."

Des Moines CIO Raps Green, Hails Act

DES MOINES, Ia., Apr. 1.—Six hundred delegates at a mass conference called by the Des Moines CIO Council met here this week to take action on outstanding labor and legislative problems and to lay plans for organizing on labor and political fronts in Iowa and Nebraska.

First on the agenda was the defense of the Wagner Act, and the delegates went on record unanimously opposing any changes in the act, and particularly opposing the attempts of Pres. Green of the AFL and the National Manuafcturers Association to force crippling amendments through this session of Congress.

"The National Labor Relations Act has been instrumental in establishing better relations between employers and employes, which has resulted in higher wages, shorter hours, and improved working conditions for millions of workers in the U. S.," the resolution said in part.

CONDEMN GREEN

"International unions of the AFL representing 936,000 members have either opposed amendments to the Act or approved the Act as it now is,

"Therefore be it resolved that this mass meeting go on record condemning William Green and accusing him of promoting legislation sponsored by enemies of organized labor."

Other resolutions unanimously demanded the full appropriation for WPA asked by Pres. Roosevelt, urged a liberalization of Iowa unemployment benefits, and demanded a state housing law, to enable Iowa to participate fully in the U. S. Housing program.

DEFENDS WPA

Speaking on the WPA appropriation, Don Harris, national director of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, warned, "Let no one believe that fascism is far away. By putting these WPA workers out of work, we are providing a fertile field for fascism."

All Iowa CIO locals were represented at the conference, which included delegates from Nebraska and from the Des Moines Workers Alliance and the state Farmer Labor Party.

BACK BILL

New York—(FP)—Labor organizations affiliated with the American Labor Party will throw their full support behind an AFL bill introduced into the State Legislature which would set up a state wage-hour administration.

AFL Painters Local Raps Act Changes

San Francisco, Apr. 1—"Leave the Wagner Act unchanged" is the advice sent to AFL Pres. Green and California's Congressional delegation by Local 1158, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, AFL affiliate.

"The Wagner Labor Relations Act," the local's resolution said, "was enacted for the benefit of all labor and has proven itself of material value by raising the standards of wages and working conditions.

"This law is being attached by the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and certain executives of organized labor to the detriment of labor."

LawMagazine Defends Labor Board

New York, Apr. 1—The Columbia Law Review, one of the nation's most prominent legal magazines, charged critics of the Wagner Labor Relations Act with using distorted arguments in their fight against labor's magna charta.

The authors of the article, Profs. Walter Gellhorn and Seymour Linfield, declared in the Columbia University periodical that the board has fully preserved "the basic values of traditional judicial processes."

The article takes issue with those who charge that the National Labor Relations Board has fostered strikes.

BE ON GUARD!

Look for the union label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America when buying men's and boys' clothing, overalls, shirts, undergarments, neckties, lumber jackets, gloves, and all other kinds of men's wearing apparel.

The Amalgamated Label is your guarantee that the articles you buy are of the best workmanship and produced under one hundred percent union conditions by members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

By insisting on the Amalgamated Label you will help to guard against a return of sweatshop conditions to the industry. By helping the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America you help the labor movement generally.

Ask for the Amalgamated label on each part of the suit, coat, pants and vest. There are different Amalgamated labels for coats, pants, vests, shirts and undergarments, work clothes, neckwear and gloves.

File Bill To End Strikebreaking

LaFollette Plan Would Curb Practices

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 1.—The Senate Civil Liberties Committee today fired a mighty broadside at the entire strikebreaking industry.

The "Oppressive Labor Practices Act of 1939," filed in the upper house by Senators Robert LaFollette and Elbert Thomas, calls for outlawing the use of industrial munitions, labor spy agents, strikebreakers and private police forces against organized labor.

In addition, it would bar government contracts of more than $10,000, federal loans or ship-operating subsidies to firms which refuse to pledge observance of the Act. Heavy penalties are provided for those who break the law.

Significant is the fact that civil rights of workers are not only protected by the Committee's proposal, but that violators face heavy penalties for violations. If the act is passed, it will be to the economic interest of employers to help preserve civil liberties.

LONG OVER-DUE

"This bill is several decades over-due," the two Senators declared in a joint statement as they filed their proposals. "On complaints made, and on the finding of past governmental investigations in the last 40 years, such a bill should have been introduced long ago."

The use of strikebreaking devices violates the right of workers to organize, helps to incite violence, leads to strikes and prevents the speedy settlement of labor disputes, the bill declares. As a result, interstate commerce is directly affected, and the oppressive labor acts become a matter of concern to the federal government, it points out.

ILLEGAL PRACTICES

Oppressive labor practices defined as illegal by the LaFollette-Thomas bill include:

1. Employment or utilization of labor spies, strikebreakers or strikebreaking agencies.

2. The payment or the agreement to pay any person who with the consent of his employer acts as a "private guard or peace officer while armed and while absent from the premises or place of business of his employer." Definite exceptions are made, however, for the protection from theft of money or goods in transit.

3. The hiring as a guard or peace officer during periods of labor disputes of any person who has a criminal record of homicide or felonious assault.

4. The ownership or use about a place of employment of industrial munitions or the use of industrial munitions "in connection with any labor dispute."

VIOLATION OF LAW

Under the terms of the statute it becomes a violation of the law to engage in an oppressive labor practice in or about any place of employment or to furnish any person with supplies or services for engaging in these oppressive practices.

At the same time the new bill bars the use of the mails or the channels of commerce to the entire business of strikebreaking.

Thus, it becomes unlawful to furnish or offer to furnish supplies or services for an oppressive labor practice.

HITS PRODUCTS

Even more important, products manufactured in plants where oppressive labor practices existed, may not be transported, shipped delivered or sold.

Penalties for violating the act may be a $10,000 fine or six months imprisonment or both. Jurisdiction over the act is placed in the hands of the federal district courts, while the Secretary of Labor is given the right to seek injunctions against persons violating the act or about to violate it.

SEN. ROBERT LaFOLLETTE

Recommendations Based on Long Investigation

WASHINGTON, Apr. 1.—The "Oppressive Labor Practices Act," sponsored by Senators LaFollette and Thomas, is based on two and a half years of investigation, 18 million words of testimony and exhibits, 98 days of hearings and 485 witnesses.

Testimony before the committee covered 40 industries, employers' associations and communities, as well as 116 strikes occurring between 1930 and 1937.

Commenting on the proposals which resulted from these lengthy investigations, the two senators—who head the Civil Liberties Committe—declared:

"No bill could more directly aid industrial peace.

"In no way does the bill deprive the employer of the fullest protection of property. It does not touch his legitimate private protective equipment nor limit policing activities on his own premises. It does strike at aggressive private armies by whomsoever employed."

The senators noted that it is "significant . . . that while this committee had to overcome every sort of obstruction in unearthing facts, it could elicit no reasoned justification of the oppressive labor practices exposed, although witnesses were time and time again asked to justify their action."

The committee, they said, received from erring employers "professions of reform rather than justification of the practices exposed.

"The nearest to defense of espionage and strikebreaking was the warning of an officer of an employers' association that regulation might result in 'bootleg' outfits getting the business and driving dastardly practices further underground."

MANY HAVE CHANGED

As a result of the committee's activities, the statement pointed out, "some industrialists have been persuaded to abandon certain oppressive practices, thereby saving themselves hundreds of thousands of dollars.

"As the bill moves on to legislative consideration," they continued, "we doubt that any person will undertake to justify labor espionage or commercialized strikebreaking, the use of private police for these purposes, and the use of or possession of industrial munitions during or in anticipation of labor disputes.

"While the investigation has apparently corrected some ills, the committee emphasizes that investigation alone has long been proved insufficient.

"Legislation is needed to end the evils. The bill contains nothing that will cause concern to the great majority of businessmen, most of whom now conform to present enacted national policies.

"The committee, during the course of its investigations, found that the most persistent and significant violations of civil liberties occurred in the field of labor and arose principally from a labor relations policy hostile to collective bargaining and the organization of unions. . . .

"'Oppressive labor practices' is the characterization given these activities by the bill. The aim of the bill is to prevent employers and others from engaging in them."

Committee Paid for Itself

WASHINGTON, Apr. 1—The Senate Civil Liberties Committee has more than paid for itself, it was revealed here today.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue was able to collect in taxes and penalties $232,000 as a result of evidence unearthed by the committee. This amount is more than one and a half times the money appropriated for the committee.

A Gas Station Attendant Talks

By Benjamin Appel (League of American Writers)

Service with a smile—that's us, the guys who fill up your car with gas. We get fifteen to eighteen bucks a week, six days a week, twelve hours a day. The smaller the town, the smaller the pay. And people call Rockefeller a financier when he's got millions to play around with! What we grease monkeys can do with a pay check—that's real finance!

And don't forget you have to be full of charm besides. It's smile, smile, smile, and then smile some more. If you're born a sour-puss, the company school straightens you out. In three weeks you learn that you and the company both belong to one big happy smiling family; and that if it's prosperity for the company, you'll get your share.

You practice your lessons on the instructor. "I'm a customer in a car," he says. "Sell me." You learn how to unload oil, grease jobs, special sales, and sometimes waffle irons. Big chains like Sobol Brothers will have Waffle Iron Weeks. And you got to sell your quota of waffle irons, besides your gas and oil quotas, if you want to stay in that particular happy family.

SMILE! SMILE!!

At last you graduate from the school with not even a balogney for a diploma. You report to some gasoline station and don't forget your smile You've learned that you must hang around the gas pumps unless you're busy scouring the toilets, another job you got, or maybe you're chasing around with a gasoline-soaked rag cleaning up grease spots. The station has to be kept spotless as a drug store. But when the station manager yells "front" you drop whatever you're doing and run lickety-split to the customer, and don't forget you first run to the driver's side. You say: "Fill 'er up?" And by all means you're smiling and showing your good teeth, plus the one with the cavity.

After the customer orders you must run to the back of the car and put in the gas. Then you wipe the rear window—that's more routine—and run down the other side of the car to wipe the front window. The customer's usually in a hurrry but you got to hypnotize him anyway with still another smile as you lift up the hood and say: "Check the oil?"

You try to sell him the finest oil in the station regardless of the car's make or age. Then you try to sell him a new fan belt or new spark plugs. If you get him on the pit for a grease job, you try to sell him new bulbs. It's sell, sell, sell!

NOT MANY TIPS

All day long the cars roll in, and you give each and every one the old smile. Maybe, a popular priced car will tip you a nickel or a dime. What you get from the Packard is a drunk making a beeline for the toilets. And like a hospital orderly, you have to clean up each and every drunk or slob. The customer is always right.

There are other nuisances. The weather crank thinks it will rain if it's snowing, and snow if it's raining. The bargain hunter wants every squeak taken out even if he owns a tin can on wheels. And the one-gallon pain-in-the-neck always drives into the station in the middle of a rainstorm. "Fill 'er up?" you ask. The pain-in-the-neck holds up one finger and answers: "Fill 'er up." It's the standard joke in the industry. At a big station, you can hear it thirty times a day.

CREDIT VS. QUOTA

Then there's the customer who wants credit. The company doesn't take any chances. But a grease monkey with a gas quota finds himself laying out his own good money and keeping a notebook like a bookkeeper. Sometimes you get stuck and your pay checks take it on the chin.

You take it on the chin and in the solar plexus, too, with the shortage evil. The computor pumps figure out the price and the amount of gas sold. But there's always a difference between the money you take in and what the computor pumps read, and the more business the more shortage. The company's efficiency rats don't bother with shortage. They're too busy scheming how to fire men. Anyway, it's not the company's worry as long as grease monkeys get pay checks. And people call Rockefeller a financier!

WHAT CAN YOU DO?

But what can we do? Quit the chain and work for an independent where the boss'll tell you all his troubles but keep his successes to himself? You hear all about his debts and why he can't afford more help. You worry when the rent and gas payment comes due. You become his pal and end up by working fourteen and fifteen hours a day for the same pay. Working for a chain, the hours are regular anyway.

There's no future in the industry. A natural-born salesman might be recommended by the supervisior for a station manager's job. But most likely the supervisor's wondering whether he shouldn't fire you!

The company's policy don't help a decent supervisor stay decent. The supervisor's in the same spot as the traffic cop who must bring in a certain number of summons every day or get in trouble himself. It's some job all right. The routine and speed-up get you down. At the end of the day you're too tired to breathe. You end up with a new disease. Call it Frozen Smilitis.

There's one real answer and that's the Oil Workers' International Union. Their contract with a chain like City Service provides for a closed shop, eight hours a day and twenty to twenty-two dollar minimum wage. Unionize the whole industry, chains and independents! That's the answer. That'll be something to smile about.

NEW HOMES FOR OLD

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing.

Politics At Its Worst

By THOMAS HUMPHRIES

Recent attempts to sabotage the New Deal's low-rent housing program afford a graphic example of underhanded politics at its worst.

Public, low-rent housing and slum clearance is too popular nowadays for anyone, even the most rabid reactionary, to openly oppose it. The only thing left for the Congressional enemies of better housing is to pretend that there is nothing closer to their hearts than the problem of doing away with the slums, and at the same time try to hamstring the housing program by deceptive amendments.

ANTI-HOUSING TRICKERY

A few weeks ago Senator Millard Tydings of Maryland launched an attack upon the United States Housing Authority—all in the name of trying to "improve" the housing program now being carried on throughout the country with the USHA's technical and financial aid.

His attack was based upon a gross misrepresentation of the construction costs of USHA-aided projects. Although the average net construction cost per dwelling on these projects is less than $3500 (and in all cases less than the cost of similar construction by private industry), Tydings resorted to mathematical trickery. Like a magician pulling a rabbit out of a hat, he pulled out the astounding figure of $12,000 and brandished it before the face of the Senate!

Two days later Representative White of Ohio echoed Tydings' mouthings in the House. Only he went Tydings one better He added another $5000 to Tydings' figure and without batting an eyelash tried to prove that each home built under the USHA program would cost $17,000!

TO WRECK PROGRAM

Then, when the House considered the appropriation for the USHA's administrative expenses, White introduced an amendment which provided for a cost limitation that would have almost wrecked the entire housing program. He asked that total costs (that is, not only construction costs but the costs of land, non-dwelling facilities such as recreation space and social halls, slum dwellings that are torn down, land for future use, etc.) be limited to $3500 per dwelling. In most cities this would have been impossible.

Taking advantage of a moment when very few Democrats were in the House, a small clique of reactionaries had this amendment put to a vote. It passed by a small margin.

FRIENDS ALERT

Luckily, the friends of housing were not asleep.

In the Senate, Senator Wagner blasted Tydings' charges and presented accurate data showing how low costs and rents are under the USHA program. The CIO Committee on Housing, and the AFL Housing Committee as well, leaped to the defense of the USHA and insisted that the crippling restriction be removed.

On March 20 the matter was brought to a re-vote in the House. With a large number of Representatives present and with the true facts about the USHA program having been brought to their attention, the $3500 amendment was voted down by the resounding majority of 290 to 77.

Truly, this overwhelming vote in favor of the housing program as it is now being administered by the USHA should be an ominous warning to those who think they can sabotage low-rent public housing and slum clearance.

The story of this attack upon the USHA illustrates not only the devious methods used by the enemies of housing, but the broad popularity of public housing with both Congressmen and the people they represent.

Council Fights Race Hatred

PHILADELPHIA, Apr. 1—(FP)—A resolution introduced into the state legislature which would make it illegal for anyone to distribute literature intended to incite racial hatred is receiving the support of the CIO Industrial Union Council here.

The council adopted a resolution, which has been sent to all its affiliated unions, urging all CIO unions to petition their representaives to back the measure.

Worth Their Salt

By MIKE RYAN

Halifax, N. S., Apr. 1—Application for a conciliation board to settle a wage dispute with the Malagash Salt Co., Ltd., has been made by the Salt Workers CIO Union to Hon. Norman Rogers, Canadian Minister of Labor. The board would be set up under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act.

This action was taken by the Salt Workers following a breakdown in negotiations for a higher wage scale in Halifax between a delegation representing the union, officials of the company and provincial Deputy Minister of Labor R. H. MacKay.

Many salt workers receive only $2.60 for a 10-hour day and the union insisted on an upward revision.

The breakdown in the Halifax conference resulted from the refusal of the company to supply the union with a financial statement. Although the company contended it was unable to raise wages, it refused detailed information as to its finances.

Special significance was attached by the Salt Workers to the flat refusal of the company to reveal how much money was paid in salaries and how much in wages. A detailed financial report would reveal this information, and according to the union men, the company's claim it was unable to increase wages would be discredited.

Unfair Oil Firm Feels CIO Power

Tulsa, Okla., Apr. 1—Mid-Continent Oil, whose workers have been on strike here for four months now, is feeling the pinch of the unfair list circulated throughout the country by the Oil Workers Intl. Union, CIO.

Oil Workers Officers report that results have been shown from the 8,000 letters sent to unions describing the strike at Mid-Continent, and that the company has lost hundreds of thousands of gallons in sales.

Maine Shoe Firm Fined In Wage-Hour Case

PORTLAND, Me., Apr. 1.—The federal wage-hour administration added one more to its string of court victories in its fight to enforce the fair labor standards act when a Lewiston shoe firm pleaded guilty to criminal charges of violation.

Max and Maurice Mersky, principal executives in the Bay Shoe Co., reversed their original plea of innocence and admitted that they were guilty of fourteen counts of violating the law. They paid a fine of $1,000 against the company and fine of $250 against each of them personally.

District Court Judge John A. Peters suspended an additional fine of $1,000 against the firm on promises that three women who had been paid less than the prescribed 25c an hour will receive back wages due them.

Hearst Ad Sales Skid; Strike In 17th Week

Chicago, April 1—Legal skirmishes with the Chicago Newspaper Guild and rapidly skidding advertising lineage added to the woes of Publisher William Randolph Hearst as the strike of 600 employes of his American and Herald-Examiner moved into its seventeenth solid week.

In the first twenty days of March, statistics show, the two Hearst papers dropped 487,943 lines of advertising space compared with the same period in 1938, while all other Chicago daily papers increased their advertising revenue.

SEEKS OTHER COURT

Ben Meyers, attorney for the Guild, announced that he will seek a change of venue on hearings for a temporary injunction sought by Hearst against the Guild. He charged that Judge Niemeyer, who granted the writ, is prejudiced against the Guild.

Meanwhile, the Guild charged that the Walgreen chain of drug stores, which has been a strong financial supporter of Hearst during the four-month strike, has "come out in the open as a strike-breaker."

The accusation was based on the action of the Walgreen management in seeking court permission to become a party to the Hearst court fight against the Guild.

ADMIT PICKETING HURTS

Admitting that the strikers' picketing of advertisers in the scab papers has caused "irreparable damage" to the drug chain, Walgreen asked the court to forbid the Guild to distribute handbills which show Walgreen's continued support of the struck publications.

Two Guild sound trucks are being used to carry the union's message to Chicago citizens, and 100,000 copies of the second edition of the strikers' paper are being distributed.

All clergymen in the 40-mile area around the city have been sent copies of the Churchmen's Fact Finding Report. Some 20 Protestant, Catholic and Jewish clergymen and laymen probed the issues involved and found that the "Guild strike was justified" as the only method of saving the union from the attacks of the Hearst management.

Hunger Strike Effective, Wins Gains

New York, Apr. 1—A hunger strike of employes of the Beth David Hospital here ended far this side of starvation when the management reached an agreement with their union during the fourth day of the spectacular demonstration.

Pres. Harry Wenning of Local 129, State, County & Municipal Workers, CIO, said the agreement provides for recognition of a union grievance committee, a week's vacation with pay, a week sick leave with pay for all employes on the job six months or more and hearings before discharge.

$35 A MONTH

Miss Bessie Hanan, representative of the local, said that strikers had agreed to end their demonstration as a result of the promise of the hospital authorities to bargain in good faith.

"We feel that the Beth David workers, who are earning the miserable wage of $35 a month, are making a tremendous sacrifice by agreeing to continue conferences on wage increases," she added.

Don't Tread On Us . . . Hearst Told

San Francisco, Apr. 1—If William Randolph Hearst wants a newspaper Guild strike on his hands in this city as well as in Chicago, he's welcome to continue provoking the union—but he'd better not try.

This was the warning given the failing old dean of yellow journalism by the San Francisco Newspaper Guild on the eve of contract negotiations here.

WARNING HEEDED

The SFNG statement apparently was heeded by the local management, for statements soon appeared on the bulletin board at the Examiner advising employes that they are free to join any union of their own choosing. Previously the management had tried to intimidate classified advertising department employes with warnings that Guild membership would result in immediate discharge.

Tad Irving, Guild secretary here, said that "it looks as though the Hearst management here may be feeling its way toward trying to oust the disruptive tactics which contributed to the present Guild strike against the two Chicago Hearst newspapers.

"If the Hearst management wants to repeat these tactics in San Francisco we can promise that the Guild here, and the entire labor movement, is ready for them."

Predict Inland Steel To Sign Pact

Negotiations Called "Very Satisfactory"

By HOWARD J. McCARTNEY

PITTSBURGH, Apr. 2.—Indications are that Inland Steel Company is on the verge of signing a contract with the CIO's Steel Workers Organizing Committee. This is the belief of steel union leaders in the Midwest, based on recent developments. Joint meetings between company officials, SWOC lodge committees and national representatives of the union have already been held. At the conclusion of the last joint meeting—union representatives declared that the discussions were "very satisfactory."

The management "in as many words admitted that the SWOC represents a vast majority of the Inland employes, and that the steel union is a responsible and bona fide organization." When steel union members—bulwarked by civic groups — issued demands that the company meet and negotiate with the SWOC, an appeal for joint conferences was issued by Governor M. Clifford Townsend, through the Indiana Commissioner of Labor.

CONFER WITH MANAGEMENT

As a result, negotiating committes were formed in SWOC lodges, and at the first meeting 16 lodge representatives, along with Van A. Bittner, Midwest SWOC director; Nicholas Fontecchio, district director, and James Robb, State CIO director, met with top officials of Inland Steel.

Inland Steel Company was allied with other companies in the "Little Steel" group during the strike of 1937. The controversy over whether Inland should sign a contract with the SWOC has been under way since then. The matter has been slowly coming to a head, culminating in a resolution adopted by the lodge which demanded that the company sign a contract, as ordered to do so by the National Labor Relations Board.

It was the alarm created by demands of the employes that led to the joint conferences.

Another company associated with the "Little Steel" alliance during the 1937 steel strike—Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company — is the target of charges filed with the Labor Board by the SWOC. While the charges were submitted to the Board, more than six months ago, efforts have been made to settle the case without formal action before the Labor Board.

The case involves some 268 Sheet and Tube employes, who, it has been alleged, were discriminated against by the company following the strike. In "peace" conferences in Youngstown and Cleveland over the past six months the union succeeded in bringing about the reinstatement of some 80 workmen. But the company, even in those cases, refused to settle the question of back pay, or to do anything about the remaining 150 or more who had been fired or demoted.

It is estimated that if the SWOC wins all the cases, the company will be forced to return approximately $250,000 in back pay.

In the charges now before the Board, the SWOC declares it represented a majority of the firm's workers in three plants—at South Chicago, Ill.; Indiana Harbor, Ind., and Youngstown, O. — and that it should be certified as exclusive bargaining agency for all workers.

The Labor Board will be asked to order dissolution of various company unions in the Sheet & Tube plants.

Meanwhile, in Huntington, W. Va., the SWOC won a major victory at International Nickel Company, when, in a government-supervised election, a majority of the employes voted in favor of the CIO union, thereby assuring a contract guaranteeing sole bargaining rights to the steel union.

Negotiations are expected to get under way in the near future. International Nickel Co. is one of the most profitable firms in the world. It produces 80% of the world's nickel. In 1937 the company's profits were over 70 million dollars. It is a wholly-owned subsidiary of International Nickel Company of Canada, where the SWOC is conducting a vigorous drive at the present time.

Laud Transit Union Safety Campaign

New York, April 1—The Transport Workers Union's campaign for greater safety and courtesy in the handling of an expected 100,000 new riders daily on New York's transportation system as a result of the World's Fair today won high praise from city and state officials.

"I am sure that the campaign will meet with very general approval both by the people of New York and our many millions of visitors," said Gov. Herbert Lehman.

FINE EXAMPLE

Lieut.-Gov. Charles Polettti described the TWU campaign as "a fine example of the efforts of organized labor to render a real service to the community." Chairman Fullen of the Transit Commission stated that the "purpose of the union is a laudable one and deserves the official commendation it has received."

The Transport Workers Union of Greater New York has some 55,000 members employed on all major subway, elevated, trolley, bus and taxi systems in the city.

CIO Woodworkers Campaign to Save U. S. Lumber

To protect our natural wealth by banning export of giant Douglas fir trees which have taken hundreds of years to grow, is the aim of a new campaign of the Intl. Woodworkers of America, CIO affiliate. Lower picture shows huge logs cut from the irreplaceable forest giants being loaded on a Japanese freighter. Upper photo shows cross-cut sections of plywood made from American (left) and foreign grown lumber of this type, and indicates the vast superiority of the home-grown wood.

SEATTLE, Apr. 1.—The whole force of the International Woodworkers of America, CIO, will be thrown into a drive to save American resources of choice Douglas fir logs, according to an announcement by Harold J. Pritchett, president.

Together with other labor organizations and conservation groups in the northwest, the IWA will demand a ban on export of these logs now being shipped in huge quantities to the fascist countries, Germany, Japan and Italy.

"We are glad to join with all progressive conservationists in this fight for the very life of the forest industries in the Pacific northwest," Pritchett said. "The export of our priceless high quality Douglas fir logs affects American plywood workers, members of our union.

$1,000,000 LOSS

"There is a payroll of more than one million dollars a year lost to our plywood labor alone since Germany, Japan, and Italy have started to import our raw logs, making their own plywood, and placing it on the world markets. Through this aggression of the totalitarian states, American labor has suffered.

"No wonder these countries can compete with us when they get our raw products and deny their people the right to think, let alone speak in favor of labor organization and collective bargaining. Japan, especially, has an advantage in the production of plywood wherein the workers receive 3c an hour while our American plywood workers, under contract to his employer, averages 78c an hour."

Pritchett points out that while there are nearly 6,000 men employed in the plywood industry, many more are laid off on account of the shrinkage through unfair competition in the plywood trade.

SAVE RESOURCES

"The proposed legislation now before the United States Congress will, if it accomplishes its purpose, reserve our choice timber for the American people and eventually restore to the American mills the foreign markets previously held but lost through the furnishing of logs, because nowhere else in the world are such logs available for export, and stabilize the domestic forest industries through the development of this export trade. "Therefore, the International Woodworkers of America gives this Bill its wholehearted and unconditional support."

Pritchett asked all CIO unions to join with the IWA and the conservation groups in this fight to save an irreplaceable resource for America.

Don't Tell Chi. Coke Workers That Wagner Act Needs Changes

Chicago, Apr. 1 — If anyone talks about amending the Wagner Act around the Crawford Avenue coke plants here, he gets a queer look from employes of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Co.

The National Labor Relations Board, when it finally won a decision from the United States Supreme Court in the Consolidated Edison case, was given jurisdiction over huge gas utilities, declared to be engaged in interstate commerce. Before that famous decision, the gas workers were unprotected by the law. Company unionism and outright discrimination flourished in the Chicago plant.

CAN ANSWER NAM

The Peoples Gas Light Workers can tell you that the talk of the National Association of Manufacturers about the necessity of making the Wagner Act considerate of both the employer and employe is only a fancy brand of hot air. The employers don't want the Wagner Act in any form and all their efforts to "improve" it are only attempts to weaken and destroy it.

Witness the way the Peoples Gas Light and Coke acted when it was thought that gas utilities were outside the Labor Board's supervision. Did management try to bargain equally with the union members? Did they respect the right to organize? No!

LAID OFF 100

When the coke workers began to organize, one hundred workers were laid off. It was strange that an economy measure could be so selective. It "just happened" that the company laid off six CIO men to every one non-union man.

District Fifty of the United Mine Workers of America immediately filed a complaint against these anti-union tactics of the company with the NLRB. The Supreme Court had not then decided the Consolidated Edison case and the Labor Board wanted to wait until the issue had been settled.

Peoples Gas Light and Coke solemnly averred that it was not engaged in interstate commerce, in spite of the fact that it services some of the largest industrial plants in the nation. In addition, thousands of tons of coal are imported from West Virginia and Kentucky and millions of cubic feet of natural gas per day are piped 980 miles from Texas to Chicago.

BRIGHT IDEA

The Labor Board was unable to act until its jurisdiction was clearly established and so the company felt it was justified in flouting the law. Immediately after the Consolidated Edison decision, the Peoples Gas Light Company had a brilliant new idea.

The AFL conveniently appeared and was recognized for the next five years. But the workers are encouraged. The Labor Board can and will protect them and they are demanding an election to prove that they want the CIO.

Senate Group Will Hear From Unions

(See Stories Page Five)

WASHINGTON, Apr. 10.—The hearings on amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act will start tomorrow, April 11.

Sen. Robert Wagner of New York, father of the bill which has been termed labor's "magna charta" is expected to be the first witness before the committee.

The hearings, which will extend over a period of several weeks, will hear testimony from such enemies of the Act as Sen. Walsh of Massachusetts, Pres. William Green of the American Federation of Labor, and representatives of anti-union businessmen's organizations.

Spokesmen for CIO unions, for the National Labor Relations Board and numerous progressive organizations will defend the Act as it now stands on the books.

Members of all unions—CIO and AFL affiliates and railroad brotherhoods—have been asked to flood the committee with telegrams and letters to show that the rank and file of American labor is solidly united in opposition to the big-business attempt to nullify the benefits of the Act.

Guild Asks Injunction Against Hearst Tactics

CHICAGO, Apr. 8.—Taking a leaf from the Hearst's legal notebook, striking members of the American Newspaper Guild on the Herald-Examiner and Evening American today sought an injunction against the management of the two papers.

Through Ben Meyers and A. J. Isserman, attorneys for the Guild, the strikers are seeking to gain a decree which will halt Hearst law-breaking and force an end to end the publishers' gangster tactics.

It demands that Hearst be restrained from committing unfair labor practices, from attempting to smash the Guild as a collective bargaining agency or from seeking to halt the distribution of the union's strike handbills.

Meanwhile the strikers announced that they have been able to pull about 2,000,000 lines of advertising from the columns of the two papers. This is equivalent to 7,143 columns or 893 standard pages of advertising space.

Emperor Dethroned

New York, Apr. 8 — William Randolph Hearst has lost control of the chain of newspapers which provided him with a fortune based on a formula of smut, sensationalism and red-baiting.

American Newspapers Inc., top-dog in a maize of holding companies, announced that the presidency has slipped from the hands of Hearst to those of John St. Claire Brooks, Jr.

Brookes, it is revealed, is a director of a number of Mellon-controlled corporations, and was former secretary and general counsel for Koppers Co., one of the largest of the Mellon subsidiaries.

He is also a member of the board of Tom Girdler's Republic Steel Corp.

Metal Union Plans Drive in Gold Mines

SOUTH PORCUPINE, Ont., Apr. 8.—The Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union, CIO, has launched an organizing drive in this gold mining camp with the object of enrolling all employes of the Buffalo Ankerite Gold Mines Limited in the union by the end of April.

Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' Union headquarters in Timmins have begun a campaign in the area for better safety conditions and are demanding a voice in the methods of mining and application of safety regulations.

HIGH DEATH RATE

According to survey of accidents during 1938, 2.13 miners per 1,000 were killed in Ontario mines last year. A total of 61 men were killed in gold and metal mines, this being an increase of 9 over 1937.

"How can accidents be reduced?" the MM&SU asks.

"By elected safety committees of experienced miners, recognized by the companies and supported by a strong union," it replies.

For Workers' Health

To combat tuberculosis, an occupational disease in the fur industry, the joint council of the Intl. Fur Workers, CIO, opened a health clinic in New York. Irving Potash, union manager, looks on as Technician Ed Gilligan places Sam Wolkow at the x-ray machine.

Fur Workers Union Starts Drive Against Tuberculosis

NEW YORK, Apr. 8.—For the first time in the history of of American labor, the entire membership of a trade union group is to be given an examination for tuberculosis, dreaded plague which yearly lays low thousands of industrial workers in this country.

Some 15,000 New York fur workers, members of the International Fur Workers, CIO union, will be x-rayed under a joint program of the city Board of Health and the WPA tuberculosis project, with the cooperation of the union. Tuberculosis heads the list of occupational diseases in the fur industry.

In announcing the examinations Irving Potash, manager of the Furriers' Joint Council of New York said, "the 15,000 members of the Furriers Joint Council welcome this opportunity for free medical examination. Thousands of fur workers are eagerly awaiting the reports on the condition of their health.

MAYOR'S ENDORSEMENT

Mayor LaGuardia who endorsed the project through the Board of Health, has proposed that all persons on relief in the city be x-rayed.

The medical survey was called a "step in the program for complete control of tuberculosis in New York City" by Dr. Herbert R. Edwards, director of the Board's Bureau of Tuberculosis. He called attention to the fact that the New York survey is in line with the proposed health program set forth in the Wagner health bill.

Potash pointed out in his statement that the Furriers Council has also initiated a health insurance plan for its membership. The plan provides for the payment of $8 a week to a member for ten weeks during illness and a payment of $150 when sanitorium treatment is necessary.

In addition to the x-ray examination of the lungs, fur workers are also being examined by the Industrial Hygiene Department of the State Department of Labor, which is conducting a complete health survey in the fur industry.

Dockmen Meet On West Coast

San Francisco, Apr. 8 — Delegates from more than 90 locals of the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, CIO, from southern California to Alaska are attending the annual convention which has been in session here since April 2.

Renewal or modification of the ILWU contract on Sept. 30 was one of the outstanding problems taken up by the 150 delegates present. Pres. Harry Bridges recommended that a referendum be held on reopening the contract in September.

The convention went on record in favor of an appropriation of further funds to continue the La-Follette Committee investigation on the West Coast, defense of the Wagner Act and passage of the Walgreen amendments to the Merchant Marine Act to compel the U. S. Maritime Commission to use union hiring halls.

CIO to Push Rhode Island Campaign

Providence, R. I., Apr. 8 — A state-wide drive to organize the mass production industries in Rhode Island was launched last week at a banquet held in Pawtucket, sponsored by the CIO state council. Some 200 representatives from CIO unions throughout the state attended the affair.

Joseph Mayo, Rhode Island CIO director presided. Speakers included Frank J. Benti, vice-president of the Dyers' Federation and newly apointed state director of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee; Horace A. Riviere, TWOC national representative; Michael F. Widman, New England CIO director, and Adelard Gingras, president of the R. I. Council.

CIO Peace Plan Wins More Praise

WASHINGTON, Apr. 8.—Automobile workers, government employes, metal miners, fishermen, shoe workers, papermakers — all the industries where labor has organized approve the CIO plan for an American Congress of Labor to bring the CIO, the AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods into one united body of American workers.

This week's round-up of letters and wires approving the Congress proposal, coming from both CIO and AFL, is led by the resolution unanimously passed at the United Automobile Workers convention in Cleveland.

"We call upon our great CIO president, John L. Lewis, the Executive Board of the CIO, the Executive Council of the AFL and its President, Wm. Green, and the independent Railroad Brotherhoods to use all their forces at their command to bring into being a united and consolidated labor movement in our country," the resolution said.

5,000 MINERS

Five thousand metal miners in Montana, members of Local 1 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, also voted unanimous approval of the CIO proposal at their regular March meeting. This followed a letter sent previously approving the plan.

In Longview, Wash., Local 153 of the AFL Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers (1,000 members) resolved; "The Lewis proposal for a Congress of American Labor will give the rank and file an oportunity to force and bring about this great need of unification," and went on record favoring the Congress idea.

The second annual convention of Hamilton County's Labor's Non-Partisan League in Cincinnati, attended by CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhood delegates, resolved that "unless unity is achieved before the 1940 election, there is grave danger that all of the social and economic advances of the past seven years will be wiped out," and urged the negotiating committees to achieve "an honorable and lasting settlement."

CIO Councils in Nashville, Tenn., and Fort Wayne Co., Mich., added their approval to the scores of CIO delegate bodies already on record.

REM-RAND EMPLOYES

AFL workers at the Remington-Rand plant in Middletown, Conn., who have experienced just about everything an anti-union boss has to offer in strikebreaking technique, wrote to Pres. Green demanding that he do everything in his power to effect at least a truce in "the disagreement between you and the CIO."

"We regret to see that this state of affairs exists and feel that you are entirely on the wrong track in your stand and wish to state here, that we are very much opposed to your actions concerning this matter."

250 Attend Texas CIO Convention

By FRED SEELIG

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Apr. 8.—Highlighted by militant and far-reaching progressive plans and measures, the third annual convention of the Texas State Industrial Union Council held a two-day parley here which was attended by approximately 250 delegates and staunch friends of the CIO.

In coming to San Antonio for its annual session, the Texas CIO body invaded a city that a year ago was cursed for its police brutality and un-American suppression of labor and civil rights. The CIO today is solidly entrenched here.

An organizational program, far-reaching in scope, was mapped out. A survey of the industrial areas from which requests have come from the unorganized workers for CIO organizers was authorized. The survey will be made by local unions and will be compiled into a report by the State office.

An appeal to all Texas organized labor, presented by John Crossland of Pasadena, Tex., of Oil Workers International Union, 367, was adopted as a declaration of the State Convention.

ASK UNITED ACTION

It carried a warning that the working people of Texas are faced with a menace to continuation of existing liberties and standards of living by the present state government administration. It called attention to Governor O'Daniel's taxation program which will be a heavy burden on working people, and his encouragement of company unionism.

Resolutions passed by the convention pledged support to Newspaper Guild strikers on the Chicago Hearst papers, backed a proposed investigation of the nation's telegraph industry and voicing confidence in the labor peace proposals of the CIO.

Another resolution called for opposition to amending the Wagner Act, while the Texas legislature was urged to pass a baby Wagner Act for the state.

Strikes of the Oil Workers Int. Union, whose membership in the Lone Star State is very sizeable, against the Mid-Continent Oil Co. and the Crown Central Oil Co. won pledges of aid from the council.

WIRE FROM LEWIS

President John L. Lewis, of the CIO telegraphed greetings to the convention. It read, in part, "I have the greatest confidence that your deliberations will prove an inspiration and a guide not only to the workers of Texas but to the entire nation." John Brophy and Walter Smethurst of the national CIO offices also sent congratulatory telegrams.

Roy Sessions of Houston, Oil Workers International Union, 227, was elected president of the Texas State Industrial Union Council.

Minnesota CIO Meets May 12

Minneapolis, Minn., Apr. 8. — Further advancement of the cause of industrial unionism in Minnesota will be mapped out at the second convention of the state Industrial Union Council to be held at the Spaulding Hotel, Duluth, May 12-14.

Delegates from local industrial unions and councils and other CIO affiliates throughout the state with a total membership of more than 50,000 will attend the convention which will lay down the program and policy for the coming year and elect officers.

Elected

Alice Smith, who has just been elected to the General Executive Board of the United Office and Professional Workers. Miss Smith came into the labor movement and the CIO via the YWCA in southern Indiana, where she was a leader in business and professional girls' organizations.

Don't Like Garner

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Apr. 8 — The Texas CIO doesn't want the Democratic party to consider Vice-Pres. John Nance Garner as its 1940 presidential candidate.

A resolution passed by the state's industrial union council accused Garner, a native of Texas, of attempting to undermine the progressive program undertaken by Pres. Roosevelt. It declared its opposition to any attempt to set Garner up as the 1940 Democratic candidate for the presidency.

Coal Shutdown Blamed on Mine Operators

NEW YORK, Apr. 8.—While more than 300,000 bituminous coal miners throughout the Appalachian area remained idle, leaders of the United Mine Workers, headed by Pres. John L. Lewis, renewed their efforts to bring to a satisfactory conclusion negotiations with coal mine operators which have been in progress for three weeks here.

With Lewis at his side, Vice-President Philip Murray of the UMW told a full session of the 300 workers' and employers' representatives that the union has discarded, one by one, its various demands in order to reach an understanding.

The UMW, he said, is now ready to sign a two-year renewal of the old contract, provided the clauses which provide for a penalty of $1 or $2 a day for each miner who strikes in violation of the contract, is removed.

DON'T FOOL PUBLIC

"Don't try to tell the public that the issue which caused this breakdown was the union shop," the veteran UMW leader warned the operators. "We'll accept two-year extension of the old contract, plus the abolition of the penalty clauses."

In the absence of the union shop, he continued, the UMW is unwilling to be penalized for idleness due to the activities of dual unions which might enter "foul conspiracies" to destroy the UMW.

"Some eight per cent of the workers in the soft coal industry might very well be classified as craftsmen, some 40,000 of them subject to raids by organizations which were seeking assumption of jurisdiction.

34 UNIONS

"In the event they succeeded, the industry would be confronted with 34 collective bargaining agencies instead of one. Jurisdictional disputes would ensue and a few key men in a revolting organization could close down a mine property. If that happened, our union men would be made idle, and we don't want to be fined for that."

During the course of his speech, Murray charged that "outside influences" had been attempting to sabotage the negotiations in the hope of weakening the union. It was believed that Murray was referring to large financial interests and powerful industrial corporations which are heavy purchasers of coal.

Macy Dept. Store Signs Pact, Lifts Pay

By SAUL MILLS

NEW YORK, Apr. 8.—A closed shop contract calling for wage increases totalling $175,000 annually, shorter hours, time-and-a-half overtime pay, paid vacations, legal holidays off with pay and other improved working conditions was signed last week between the R. H. Macy Company, largest retail department store in the world, and Local 1 of the Department Store Employes Organizing Committee of the CIO.

The contract, signed for Macy's by Jack I. Straus, vice-president, for the union by Samuel Wolchok, head of the organizing committee and Michael J. Quill, TWU president and city councilman who acted as personal representative of John L. Lewis in the negotiations, averted a threatened walkout by the Macy employes.

The contract, which also contains clauses on strict seniority observance and grievance machinery for the handling of dismissals or transfers, was hailed throughout New York as the best labor union agreement in the retail store field.

Speaking in behalf of President Lewis, Quill praised Mr. Straus for his "industrial statesmanship" and prophesized the inauguration of contractual relations between the company and the union would forever be known as "the beginning of greater cooperation between management and employes" in the huge department store and throughout the retail selling industry.

Ready To Strengthen Union

A group of delegates to the United Automobile Workers convention give their lungs some exercise following the election of union officers. Now they're ready to make the auto industry 100 per cent union.

Auto Union Elects Thomas, Addes; Convention Maps Future Campaigns

By ROBERT DALE

CLEVELAND, Apr. 8.—Writing a new chapter in union democracy and solidarity, the United Automobile Workers of America, CIO affiliate, wound up its special convention here with adoption of a more democratic constitution and constructive plans for organization of the auto, parts and airplane industries.

The nearly 500 delegates, representing 355,000 UAW members, left definitely behind them the things that have impeded their progress in the past year. Factionalism was banished, dual unionists were read out of the union. Economic conditions in the auto industry, with production now at above normal rates, gave added promise for the future.

Elections, which were the final order of business, chose R. J. Thomas, a former vice-president and head of Chrysler Local 7, as International President, and George F. Addes of Toledo, as International Secretary-Treasurer. Both Thomas and Addes are pioneers in the UAW and have long been recognized for their militant and responsible leadership.

EXECUTIVE BOARD

The convention ordered election of international executive board members from each region by the delegates of that region by roll-call vote. The following were elected to the board:

Ohio—Paul Miley, Richard Reisinger, Ellsworth Kramer; Indiana—Leroy Roberts; Wisconsin—William Cody; Missouri — Delmond Garst; West Coast—L. H. Michener; Canada — George Burst; South—Lawrence Smith.

Commenting on the election results, Pres. Thomas declared: "The UAW executive board elected today is a progressive, aggressive and business-like group of men in whose hands the UAW may expect to go forward in further service to the automobile workers."

The CIO, through Vice-Presidents Sidney Hillman and Philip Murray, counseled the UAW officers and delegates in their deliberations. Both spoke at an executive session and Hillman spoke later before an open session, which gave him an ovation. Murray was called to New York by coal negotiations, but Hillman remained most of the week and met with countless rank-and-file delegations.

UNANIMOUS VOTE

The action of the convention in abolishing the offices of vice-presidents was by unanimous vote after it had been approved on the floor by all elements among the delegates, including previous holders of those offices.

Continuation of the CIO-UAW coordinating committee was also requested by unanimous vote. The resolution names the president and secretary-treasurer as UAW representatives on the committee and requests Vice-Presidents Murray and Hillman to continue as CIO representatives. The committee will have only advisory powers, as in the past, and all recommendations must be approved by the International Executive Board.

Labor Peace Confabs Are Postponed

New York, Apr. 8. — Further peace conferences between the committees of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor have been postponed until some "mutually satisfactory date in the future," on account of the Senate hearings on the Wagner Labor Relations Act and the continuance of coal contract negotiations.

The two committees met for the seventh conference on Tuesday at the Biltmore Hotel in New York, and adjourned without making any announcement as to progress made.

The following day President John L. Lewis of the CIO announced that Matthew Woll, on behalf of the AFL committee, had "easily agreed" with him on postponing the next conference because of the Wagner act hearings and the negotiations.

The Senate committee on education and labor had held off hearings on the Wagner act for several weeks, so that the controversy started by attempts to amend the act might not interfere with peace conferences between CIO and AFL. But last week it decided to start hearings on April 11.

Blame Freight Differential

Fort Smith, Ark., Apr. 8. — Differential freight rates between northern and southern states contribute greatly to making the South the nation's No. 1 economic problem, the Arkansas CIO Industrial Union Council declared in a resolution endorsing Governor Carl E. Bailey's efforts for equalization.

The Council asked that all affiliated unions in the state ask their representatives in Congress to vote for legislation to remedy the evil.

Recommend 40c Wage For Hosiery Workers

WASHINGTON, Apr. 8.—A 40c hourly minimum wage for full fashioned hosiery workers was recommended to the Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews today by the hosiery industry committee.

The committee, which was the third set up under the provisions of the wage-hour law, is the first to have recommended 40c, the highest figure permitted by the statute.

At the same time the committee suggested a rate of 32½c an hour for workers in the seamless branch of the industry. The vote on both recommendations was unanimous.

If the proposed rates are finally established, some 16,000 full-fashioned workers and about 30,000 seamless workers, will receive substantial wage increases, the committee estimated.

The committee was headed by Prof. George W. Taylor, of the Univesity of Pennsylvania, veteran labor arbitrator. Its labor delegation, entirely made up of members of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO affiliate, included Pres. Emil Rieve, Alfred Hoffmann, William Leader, Thomas Lehmann, and W. Cedric Stallings.

Liberals Fight Plan To Slash WPA Funds

WASHINGTON, Apr. 8.—One hundred thousand people will be removed from the WPA rolls each month unless Congress restores the $50,000,000 slash in Pres. Roosevelt's $150,000,000 WPA deficiency appropriation bill.

This was the warning sent to Congress by the President himself, now resting at Warm Springs, Ga. WPA headquarters have already sent out instructions to fire 230,000 workers in case the full appropriation fails.

The tory economy bloc in the Senate has threatened to seek an even more drastic slash in the funds if New Dealers bring the fight for the full $150,000,000 appropriation out on the floor of the Senate. The bill has been in a Senate committee for several days.

Act Now To Defend Your Rights

The Senate hearings which open April 11 will produce a smokescreen of propaganda against the Wagner Labor Relations Act—a law which has done more good for labor and the country than almost any other legislation on the books.

Behind this smokescreen, preparations are being made for the real offensive of reaction, which is directed against all effective labor organization and designed to break down the wages and better conditions which the unions have won.

The drive to amend the Wagner Act is intended to deprive workers of the right to organize in unions of their own choosing, so that they may be unprotected against coming attacks on their wages and working conditions.

It therefore becomes urgent for labor and all friends of labor to mobilize their resistence without delay.

Wagner Act Defense Committees have already been set up in many industrial centers, through which CIO, AFL and other unions join hands with progressive organizations of all kinds for the campaign. But active committees of this kind are now needed in every center of population.

Mass meetings should be called without delay to impress on all Senators and Congressmen that the people back home are aroused by the present attacks on the Wagner Act.

Resolutions should be adopted, petitions circulated, delegations organized and everything else possible done to let Congress know, while the hearings are being held, that labor and all progressives are insistent that the present act be defended against all amendments.

Labor Spies Paid With Government Money

The employment of stoolpigeons to spy on workers is an infringement of the civil rights of American citizens which the government is sworn to uphold.

Yet the latest report of the LaFollette-Thomas civil liberties committee reveals that the government itself has been encouraging this loathsome un-American practice.

It tells of 32 companies enjoying fat contracts from the U. S. War, Navy and Treasury Departments while they used the services of labor spies of the Natl. Metal Trades Assn.

"It cannot be claimed that these firms need labor spies in order to meet their obligations to the government," the report comments. "They exhibit the anomalous situation where beneficiaries of government contracts willfully violate the spirit of national labor policy."

The Oppressive Labor Practices bill sponsored by the committee would end such scandalous inconsistencies in government policies by barring corporations which employ labor spies from receiving federal contracts.

The CIO has long been campaigning for legislation to stop government contracts from going to concerns which violate the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

It is high time that an end be put to the government condoning breaches of the labor laws which the government should be the first to enforce.

Whittling Away WPA

The country has been treated to a sorry spectacle in the resistence of Congress to voting adequate funds for WPA.

The unemployed have been made the victims of politicians who have not the courage to come out openly against WPA work for the jobless, but who have been working to that end by underhand means.

The surest way to destroy any government program is to deprive it of funds. And that is what the reactionaries have been doing in Congress by constantly whittling away at every administration request for even the most limited appropriation.

It is to be hoped that the memories of the unemployed who are thrown off WPA will be long enough to remember the members of Congress who vote against them until the next elections.

Not only they, but all other workers and public-spirited citizens, should also have long memories for the politicians who have carried on this underhanded campaign to starve the jobless, to undermine labor standards and to deprive business of the stimulus that comes from WPA wages.

Taking Aim

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

How Jitters Are Caused

THE present war jitters in Europe have a parallel in the United States. Nervousness, irritability, uncertainty about the future are beginning to make themselves felt in industrial and political life.

The causes of America's internal jitters are similar to the causes of Europe's case of nerves.

Both are deliberately provoked by aggressors who think they will profit from disorder and confusion, and who are so concerned about their own special interests that they are reckless of the general disaster that may follow their policies.

This attack has been opened in the Senate by anti-labor industrialists and other elements who seek to promote their narrow selfish interests at the general expense.

Industrial peace, stable labor relations and unity of the trade union movement receive a lot of lip service these days as factors necessary for recovery.

Yet the people who have insisted on going through with the attack on the Wagner act at this time, have done so with the knowledge that they would thereby be upsetting the apple-cart in regard to all these matters.

Sudeten Tactics

One conservative Senator was asked if he would be willing to accept responsibility for the adverse effects on the labor movement which would result from his insistence on immediate hearings on the Wagner act.

"Most certainly," he replied. "Our first duty is to business and industry."

But actually this Senator and his kind are not doing their duty to business and industry. Rather they are trying to serve their own political interests and those of a minority of employers who have refused to obey the Wagner act, at the expense of all the rest who have adjusted themselves to collective bargaining as required by the law.

Such reactionaries hop to produce a New Deal defeat in 1940 by keeping labor divided, by playing on the imagined grievances of anti-union employers and by creating general industrial confusion.

They are copying the tactics whereby Hitler seized control of Czechoslovakia. By building up and playing upon the supposed grievances of the Sudeten German minority, and by provoking internal disorder, the Nazis provided themselves with a convenient excuse for every subsequent act of aggression.

Creating Minorities

Similar Sudeten tactics are being used wherever possible to disrupt the American labor movement.

Where strong unions are organized which have the confidence of the great majority of the workers, anti-union employers and those who play their game instigate some form of breakaway or minority movement which will contest the union's claim to represent the workers.

They use such movements as an excuse to avoid collective bargaining; and if the Labor Board rules against these phony outfits, the Wagner act is unfair and should be amended.

The insincerity of Hitler's professed concern for minorities under foreign rule, is shown by the way he has imposed Nazi rule on the Czech and Slovak peoples.

And there is no more reason to believe that the anti-union employers who seek revision of the Wagner act are backing the claims of company unions, breakaway minorities and some craft leaders except as a means of breaking down the whole system of collective bargaining which the act provides.

Democracy at Stake

The present Wagner act is a democratic instrument for determining what kind of union representation the workers themselves desire, and for reducing industrial friction through collective bargaining between the freely chosen representatives of both workers and employers.

It is not unfair to employers, since it merely grants to workers the same rights of selecting representatives as their employers have already enjoyed.

Nor is it unfair to any section of labor, since it allows the workers themselves to say whether they want craft, industrial or any other form of organization.

But those who would amend the Wagner act are little more concerned with democracy than is Hitler. They would change it in such a way as to deny workers the right to choose industrial organization, and to allow employers to interfere in many ways with their employes' freedom of choice.

By their aggressions, these foes of the Wagner act and of free collective bargaining are helping to create the jitters, uncertainty and lack of confidence of which we hear so much.

It is high time for all who are concerned for democracy and recovery to build a solid front against them and in defense of the present Wagner act.

Maritime Convention In July

NEW YORK, Apr. 8. — The second general convention of the National Maritime Union will be held in New Orleans the first week in July, according to "The Pilot", official organ of the NMU.

The first convention was held in New York in August, 1937. Since then the membership has increased until at the present time it numbers more than 67,000.

What Hurts Labor Hurts Business

CIO Issues New Leaflet in Defense Of Wagner Act

WASHINGTON, Apr. 8.—The CIO moved this week to carry the fight to save the Wagner Act to the great majority of fair employers and businessmen, with the publication of a new leaflet entitled, "What Hurts Labor Hurts Business."

The leaflet is in the form of an open letter to employers outlining the benefits of the Act to business as it now stands, and pointing out the dangers in the proposed amendments.

Citing U. S. Labor Dept. figures to show the decline in strikes since the Act was declared constitutional, the leaflet says: "The Wagner Act has demonstrated in practice that it aids the entire nation by reducing labor disputes and thus reducing time lost because of strikes and lockouts. This is the best test we can apply to any law designed to improve labor conditions."

QUOTES MAGAZINE

The leaflet quotes from Fortune Magazine, which ran a lengthy article on the Act and the Labor Board some months ago.

"It is necessary to point out," Fortune said, "from the standpoint of the sponsor of collective bargaining, that almost all amendments so far proposed from whatever motives would have the effect of impeding, or slowing down, or in some way complicating the process of collective bargaining. . ."

GE OFFICIAL

It also quotes from Vice-President Burrows of the General Electric Co., who said in defending the Act from attempts to amend it;

"We have had no trouble with the Wagner Act. It was designed to take the part of the employe who can't take care of himself. My suggestion would be to let the Wagner law ride and let some of the employers who haven't tried it, give it a try."

Copies of the leaflet can be secured from the CIO National Office, 1106 Connecticut Ave., Washington, D. C., at 40c per 100, $3.75 per 1,000.

Labor's Eyes On Wagner Act Hearings April 11

WASHINGTON, Apr. 10—Hearings start tomorrow, April 11, on the proposed amendments to the Wagner Act. They will be held by the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, Sen. Elbert D. Thomas of Utah, chairman.

Proposed amendments up are those in Sen. Walsh's bill, S. 1000, backed by Wm. Green of the AFL and supported by the National Manufacturers Assn., the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, and other anti-labor forces.

WOULD DESTROY ACT

The amendments, if they go through, would destroy the Act by breaking down protections against company unions, dividing workers in industrial plants into small craft units, would turn the Act over to anti-labor courts, and give employers many other privileges they could use against unions.

The CIO and a large and increasing number of AFL and honest independent unions are opposed to these amendments. Progressive church groups and other liberal organizations have gone on record against changes.

CIO and AFL affiliates and all friends of labor and fair play must mobilize every resource to prevent these amendments going through. The Wagner Act and with it our unions and our wages are in danger.

To Preside

Sen. Elbert Thomas, head of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, who will preside at hearings on the Wagner Act, starting Tuesday, April 11, at the Senate Office Building in Washington.

These are the members of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor who will hear witnesses on amending the Wagner Act:

Elbert D. Thomas, Utah
David I. Walsh, Massachusetts
James F. Murray, Montana
Vic Donahey, Ohio
Rush D. Holt, West Virginia
Claude Pepper, Florida
Allen J. Ellender, Louisiana
Josh Lee, Oklahoma
Lister Hill, Alabama
William E. Borah, Idaho
Robert M. LaFollette, Wisconsin
James J. Davis, Pennsylvania
Robert A. Taft, Ohio

Every local union in the country should send wires, letters and petitions to these senators, reminding them that American labor wants the Wagner Act left unchanged.

Remember—a blow at the Wagner Act will be a blow at you and your job.

Molders Fry Frey

Washington, Apr. 8 — The AFL Molders local here has the number of John P. (Colonel) Frey, president of the AFL Metal Trades Dept. and self-appointed denouncer of "Reds," "Communists" and other "alien influences" in the CIO and the progressive movement of this country.

They've just written him an open letter advising him to "go back to sleep and let the CIO and the AFL get together and settle this difference," rather than breaking out into a rash of headlines denouncing the CIO proposal to bring all workers together in an American Congress of Labor.

SHOULD THANK LEWIS

"John, my boy," they wrote, "you and your friends in power should thank John L. Lewis for showing you how to go out and organize labor and bring capital and labor together. And to you, John, and your friends go the credit of labor's defeats in the past years.

"We as members of the Molders Union sincerely trust that this disruption in labor's ranks will be settled now and for all time and may we find more men like John L. Lewis and fewer men like John Frey and Bill Green."

Rem-Rand AFL Local Hails Act

Middletown, Conn., Apr. 8—AFL Typewriter Workers, members of Lodge 851 of the International Machinists, and employed by Remington-Rand here, are emphatically on record against the proposed amendments to the Wagner Act backed by AFL Pres. Green and introduced by Sen. Walsh of Massachusetts.

They have written a sharp letter to Green saying, "this local goes on record very much opposed to the changes or amendments you are proposing on the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

"The Labor Board has done its duty and has stood firmly behind this local and all of its members by compelling Remington-Rand to reinstate all of our members who were out on strike."

"If one was to start scratching the surface one would surely come to the conclusion that you are sponsoring a bill or amendments which would benefit company-dominated unions more so than legitimate trade unions," the local said.

AFL Paper Workers Intl. Union Backs Wagner Act

ST. PAUL, Minn., Apr. 8. — Forty-five thousand AFL paper workers, organized in the Intl. Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, went on record at their recent convention here as opposed to any or all amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

In passing the resolution, which went through unanimously, the Brotherhood joined an increasing number of AFL internationals, locals and delegate bodies that have opposed the attempts of Pres. Green to line up the AFL with the Manufacturers Assn. and tory politicians in the drive to destroy the Act.

WARN OF TORY DRIVE

Pres. Burke of the Brotherhood spoke in support of the resolution, pointing out that the drive of AFL top leaders to emasculate the Act played directly into the hands of reactionary and fascist elements in this country. The Brotherhood should be careful, he declared, to avoid giving any aid or comfort to these enemies of labor by supporting their offensive against labor laws.

HELPED BY WAGNER ACT

The Brotherhood has shown great gains since the Act became effective, Pres. Burke reported, citing an increase to 45,000 members in the past two years. Other speakers from the Minnesota and Wisconsin State Federations of Labor also warned the delegates to resist all attempts to deprive labor of the legislative gains of the past few years.

The convention also went on record as unanimously favoring unity of the great labor organizations of the country, pointing out that unity was essential at this time, and that efforts should not be stopped until present differences have been settled.

CIO Outline Advises Unions How to Press Fight to Defend Wagner Act

WASHINGTON, Apr. 8.—Plans and suggestions for local union and progressive groups to defend the Wagner Act are outlined in a bulletin sent to all CIO affiliates by the national office this week.

The bulletin briefly describes the dangers contained in the proposed amendments, and suggests steps to take in rallying community protests against the tory attempt to destroy the Act.

These suggestions are based on three main steps, resolutions and statements in local unions, both CIO and AFL, publicity, particularly in local papers and on the radio, distribution of literature, and formation of Wagner Act defense committees.

WIDE CAMPAIGN NEEDED

The bulletin emphasizes the need for the widest possible campaign if the Act is to be saved for the welfare of labor and all sections of the people. It urges unions to get in touch with church and civic organizations and leaders, to secure prominent individuals (not necessarily labor men) as leading sponsors, to set up speakers bureaus, arrange letter writing campaigns, etc.

Copies of the bulletin can be obtained free from the Publicity Dept. of the CIO, 1106 Connecticut Ave., Washington, D. C.

of the bitter experience of the past 18 months when irresponsible leadership ran rampant. The loopholes for arbitrary action have been closed and the machinery for insuring democratic leadership has been modernized.

Among the constitutional changes are these:

(1) No member may be suspended or expelled from membership except by regular procedure within his own local union.

(2) No International Officer or board member may be suspended by the president. All he can do is to recall him from his assignment and then bring charges. Democratic procedure for trial by a jury of 12 union members, none of them board members or international representatives, was set up.

(3) No international officer or representative may conduct any negotiations alone with the management. He must be accompanied by the local or plant committee.

(4) No contracts go into effect unless ratified by vote of the members that have to work under them.

The foremost convention decision was to concentrate on organizing the Ford Motor Co. Unlike the Milwaukee convention, the Cleveland convention approved a detailed organizing plan for the board to put in practice.

Organizing emphasis was placed also on the tool and die division, the competitive shops, the aircraft industry, and the garage division. It took a firm stand for unity within the entire labor movement, not only between the CIO and AFL but also with the railroad brotherhoods and other unaffiliated bona fide unions, as proposed by the CIO.

DEFEND WAGNER ACT

It opposed all amendments of the Wagner Labor Relations Act and endorsed legislation in all industrial states on a similar basis.

Two resolutions approving the charges, trial and sentence on the former international president, and approving all acts of the board beginning with the January 10 meeting were unanimously passed.

SHOE STRIKE

New York — (FP)—Three thousand members of Local 129, United Shoe Workers, CIO, have struck against 10 manufacturers of children's shoes after the collapse of negotiations with the Stitched-Down Manufacturers Assn.

Metal Trades Assn. Spy System Under Attack

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 8.—The U. S. War, Navy and Treasury Departments are awarding large government contracts to firms which employ strikebreakers and labor spies in an effort to sidestep the Wagner Labor Relations Act, the Senate Civil Liberties Committee charged today in a report exposing the activities of the reactionary National Metal Trades Assn.

The committee, headed by Senators Robert LaFollette and Elbert Thomas, asserted that the NMTA masquerades its outright opposition to all forms of collective bargaining behind a slogan of resistance to the "closed shop."

Early in 1937, when the association was studied by the committee, its membership numbered 952 manufacturers of machines and tools, about half of them small producers.

SPIES AND STRIKEBREAKERS

"In order to effectuate the open shop policy" with this group of employers, the "association obligates itself to render certain services to its members which are defined among the objects as 'investigation and adjustment of questions arising between members and their employes,'" the committee found.

"In sum and substance, these investigations and adjustments involve labor espionage services to members in time of peace, and strikebreaking services in time of industrial disputes."

For those member companies which received government contracts, the federal expenditures amounted to a practical subsidy for espionage and strikebreaking.

ARMY, NAVY CONTRACTS

"Thirty-two companies used the services of labor spies of the National Metal Trades Association, while they were enjoying U. S. Government contracts during the years 1933-1936, in the amount of $12,090,579.69," the senators pointed out. Of this amount, about 11 milions dollars worth of contracts had been let out by the two military agencies, while the treasury department accounted for another million.

"It cannot be claimed that these firms need labor spies in order to meet their obligations to the government," the report continued. "They exhibit the anomalous situation where beneficiaries of government contracts willfully violate the spirit of national labor policy."

WOULD OUTLAW PRACTICES

Passage of the Oppressive Labor Practices Act of 1939, sponsored by the committee, would bar these spy-employing corporations from receiving federal government contracts of more than $10,000.

The association, the report showed, has collected almost four million dollars in dues from employers since 1917, and at the end of 1936 had a reserve fund of $214,928 on hand with which to fight organized labor. As a result of the LaFollette committee probe, the NMTA was forced for the first time to pay U. S. taxes on this "war chest."

The National Labor Relations Act brought forth strong opposition from the association, and its members were counseled to disregard the law. A high official of the organization was quoted as saying he would be seriously "disturbed" if any of the member firms signed a union contract.

The fact that Pres. Gerard Swope of the General Electric Co. and an official of the Philadelphia Storage Battery Co. publicly advocated collective bargaining under the act caused the NMTA high command even more anguish.

Labor espionage was the first line of attack against the growing clamor of workers to organize. In a 40-month period ending July 31, 1936, the association had employed 103 spies at a cost of $171,000 for work among 69 companies, two of them non-members of the association.

Lumberton, N. C. — Judge John Burrey has removed a restraining order against a Textile Workers Organizing Committee local here, which was originally obtained by four disgruntled employes.

Do Workers On WPA Turn Down Jobs?

WASHINGTON, Apr. 8.—Another myth has been exploded. It's the tale about all those jobs WPA workers are rejecting.

More than 5,000 complaints, citing cases of alleged job refusals since 1935, have been investigated by Federal researchers. Just exactly 42 of these refusals—less than one per cent—were found to be unjustifiable refusals of actual jobs. Most of the other 4,958 job offers vanished upon inquiry— nobody had a real job to offer; and the rest were for seasonal work at sub-standard pay, or else required skill the workers involved did not have.

The investigation covered large cities with diversified industrial employment, smaller cities possessing a single industry, and agricultural areas of varied types.

In the instances where jobs actually had been offered and rejected, the workers' reasons for refusing to take the jobs were carefully checked. In all but 42 cases the reasons for refusing jobs were legitimate reasons.

UNREASONABLE COMPLAINTS

Many of the employers who made complaints were offering seasonal employment at substandard wages, or unreasonable working hours, or both. Sometimes the "job offers" involved the transportation of the worker many miles from his home—at his own expense. The individual workers, when interviewed, said they would be willing to accept any employment under reasonable conditions.

The fact that the employment offered was seasonal would not in itself be a legitimate reason for refusing it. WPA regulations permit a man to go off the rolls for seasonal employment and then return to project work.

Ted F. Silvey, secretary-treasurer of the Ohio Industrial Union Council, who has been directing a vigorous campaign to fight WPA cuts.

In agricultural areas, moreover, WPA projects are often suspended to release available labor during the crop season. Hundreds of WPA workers leave the rolls each week, the payroll reveals, for periodic or permanent employment. Many of their names reappear months later.

NEVER RECEIVED OFFERS

Thirty-eight per cent of the workers of whom critics complained as having refused jobs, were found never to have received the offers while on the WPA. The employment bureau's notification caught up with them after they had found their own way back to private jobs. Change of address had caused others not to receive the notices at all.

Three complaints in the 5,000 investigated are typical of most of them. One correspondent complained to the President that there was an acute labor shortage in Delaware and Maryland—caused by work relief. Pressed for details, the informant mentioned 21 canneries short of labor.

NO BASIS FOR COMPLAINT

The facts? Half of the canneries were not operating and only ONE was looking for workers: this plant wanted a few women to clean strawberries. Shortages did exist in field labor in two areas, but in neither would the jobs have lasted over two weeks. Employers interviewed admitted that the effect of relief employment was negligible. These labor shortages occur annually—WPA or no WPA.

A Kansas farmer declared he had driven hundreds of miles in search of farm hands but found them all on WPA projects. The unemployment Census of that county showed 518 men registered as out of jobs and wanting work. Only 189 workers were employed on WPA projects at the time.

When interviewed, the farmer had no jobs to offer. He said he might need one helper some months hence.

Official records reveal that over 1,000,000 workers have left WPA rolls to take private jobs since 1935 and that as many more who left probably took private jobs although they did not state the reason for leaving.

The nation's jobless workers are helping prevent their going "rusty" by working on WPA—and at the same time improving the nation's physical plant. Upper picture shows WPA workers on a farm-to-market road that will help farmers sell their products. Lower scene shows WPA workers constructing a badly-needed bridge in West Virginia.

YOUR WPA JOB

Secretary, Committee on Unemployment

The CIO Councils At Work

The CIO-affiliated unions and councils, in their work on behalf of their unemployed members, have had no precedents to follow and no rules to guide them.

Before the CIO it had not been customary for American trade unions to provide service for their members when they became unemployed. The CIO has had to devise new methods and to explore unknown fields.

The pioneering work that has been done by many of the unemployment committees and welfare departments has been notable. We will describe from time to time some of the jobs that have been done.

OHIO COUNCIL

The Ohio Industrial Union Council, under the leadership of Pres. John Owens and Secretary-Treasurer Ted F. Silvey, has attacked the problem from all sides and sought to present a completely rounded and inclusive program.

The work done in connection with the WPA appropriations is an excellent example of the energetic action of this council.

The Ohio Council has been most tireless in pounding away at the Ohio Congressmen and Senators to support the President in his attempt to gain an adequate deficiency appropriation for the WPA for the rest of this fiscal year. In January, 1939, after the House had arbitrarily lopped off $150,000,000 from the $875,000,000 requested by the President, Silvey wired the Ohio Senators and Representatives and urged them to restore the full amount.

He also wired the most active CIO leaders in 30 Ohio counties, advising of the situation and suggesting they communicate their attitude to Senator Taft, who voted for the cut in the Appropriations Committee, and impress upon him the need of his constituents in Ohio for the larger amount. He suggested that they get as many local people, such as the Mayor, Relief Director, and so on, to do likewise. The telegram sent by the Ohio Industrial Union Council to Senator Taft received wide publicity over a news broadcast in Ohio.

WARNED CONGRESSMEN

In March, when the President's request for the $150,000,000 was being considered by Congress, Silvey sent a letter to Senator Taft and all Ohio Congressmen who had voted for the cut. He forcefully brought to their attention the tragic consequences to the businessmen of Ohio, as well as to the WPA workers, that would follow failure to pass the additional appropriation.

The Ohio Council has tried particularly hard to provide service to WPA and unemployed workers, in many cases non-CIO members, in those regions where there are no county councils and few CIO unions.

In June, 1938, a conference of CIO officials of six central Ohio counties was called. WPA problems were considered and experiences were exchanged. This has proved very helpful in making the work throughout Ohio uniformly successful and effective.

Labor and the Law

By Lee Pressman

CIO General Counsel

The Apex Hosiery Decision

In a previous column, we have spoken of the way in which the courts nullified the protection which Congress gave to organized labor under the federal anti-trust law.

The law states that "The labor of a human being is not a commodity nor an article of commerce" and that neither labor unions nor their members shall "be held or construed to be illegal combinations or conspiracies in restraint of trade under the anti-trust laws".

Notwithstanding this specific declaration by Congress, a federal court has recently allowed damages in the sum of over $700,000 to be imposed against Branch One of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers. This huge sum is imposed upon the union as a result of a sitdown strike in the plant of the Apex Hosiery Mills in Philadelphia in 1937.

SITDOWN NOT THE ISSUE

The legality or illegality of the sitdown strike has nothing to do with the question of whether the Federal court had jurisdiction to impose these damages. This jurisdiction of the federal court depended upon a ruling by Judge Kirkpatrick, in the face of the plain language of the law, that the anti-trust law applies to labor unions.

Not only has the court applied the anti-trust law to a labor union when the statute says it should not, but it has applied the law against labor much more harshly than it is applied against business monopolies. In case after case, the federal courts have held that big corporations do not violate the law where they control even as much as 60 or 70 per cent of the business in a particular industry.

3% OF BUSINESS

In the Apex case, it was shown that the Apex Company only had about 3 per cent of the total hosiery business in the United States. Yet because the sitdown strike caused a suspension of the operations in this fractional part of the hosiery industry, it was held to be an unlawful restraint of trade.

England has been held up to the American public as having model labor laws. But in England, as a result of the reactionary tendency on the part of the courts to mulct the union treasuries of huge sums by damage claims, Parliament passed a law to protect unions. This law provides that a labor union cannot be sued for damages arising out of its activities during the course of a labor dispute, no matter how unlawful those activities may have been.

The least that can be done to remedy the situation presented by the Apex case is to take it to the Supreme Court, and have the anti-trust law interpreted to mean what it says.

Steel Union Renews Three Contracts

Indianapolis, Ind., Apr. 8 — Renewal of a Steel Workers Organizing Committee contract with three Continental Steel Corp. plants. added to the long string of recent CIO victories in the Hoosier State.

The pact, announced by SWOC District Director James Robb, covers 3,800 workers at the plants in Kokomo, Indianapolis, and Canton, O. The Indianapolis plant is practically 100 per cent organized and dues paying. Twelve hundred union members pay dues in the Kokomo mill.

GAINS WON

Gains won in the contract include recognition of the union as sole bargaining agency for all employes, recognition of Dues Stewards who are permitted to collect dues on company time in the shops, same termination clause as in the U. S. Steel contract and changing pay days to every other Friday instead of twice a month.

Shoe Union Elects McGrath

Washington, Apr. 8—The United Shoe Workers of America, CIO, announced today the election of Frank McGrath of New York as General Organizer, the highest post in the union.

James J. Mitchell, general secretary-treasurer, was re-elected without opposition. Thomas Giordano of Philadelphia and Thomas Grimn of St. Louis were elected to the general executive board, while Joseph Gilbert of Lewiston, Maine, was re-elected to the board in the only other contest.

The board voted unanimously to request the CIO to retain Powers Hapgood as national director of the union. Hapgood, who was not eligible to run for office in the USWA, was appointed to the position when the union was first formed as a CIO affiliate. The office of General Organizer has heretofore been vacant.

Sinclair Oil Signs New Agreement

New York, Apr. 8 — Unlicensed seamen on ten vessels of the Sinclair Oil Company are covered by a new closed shop contract, won by the National Maritime Union. A $5 a month wage increase for all hands is included in the agreement which replaces one that expired at midnight, March 31.

The pay raise provision brings the wage scale up to that of the "standard tanker agreement" which has been in effect with the other tanker companies for a year, the NMU stated.

STRIKE AT STANDARD?

Meanwhile a strike on vessels of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey is being threatened by NMU seamen following the breakdown of negotiations for a new contract to replace the one which expired March 31.

NMU officials said that the company which operates 78 tankers employing some 2,800 unlicensed seamen, had refused to meet the union's fundamental demands.

The Big Morgue-

That's What Steel Workers Call New Automatic Strip Mills

Some 85,000 jobs in the steel industry are going to be eliminated in the next few years. Already thousands of families in Pennsylvania and Ohio are seeing their occupations snatched away by new technological developments.

In this article, Harold Ruttenberg, Research Director of the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee, states the problem, and tells why a government investigation to suggest a remedy is needed—quickly.

By HAROLD J. RUTTENBERG

As we approached Steelville* from the other side of the river, we could see the graceful silvery mill stretching more than half a mile behind the town, at the foot of one of the hills that form the rich industrial Ohio River Valley. The late afternoon sun reflecting from the galvanized roof cast an orange light across the milltown houses and the abandoned, rusty, mill by the river.

Entering at the north end of the vast structure, the endless ceiling drew my eyes until I had the feeling of infinity that one gets staring down a railroad track. We emerged two hours later from the southern end fascinated, exhausted, bewildered.

THE CASE OF MIKE MICHAELS

Just before leaving the mill I met Mike Michaels*, an officer of the local union, sweeping up paper, bale tie ends, and dusting the shipping room. Mike came to America from Wales in 1904 at the age of fifteen.

Mike had worked in the mill for over thirty years until it was closed last year. For 20 years he was a roller, an "aristocrat of labor," earning twelve to fifteen dollars a day. Now he was doing a laborer's job, at 63c-an-hour. Less than 200 of the 1,500 displaced sheet mill workers in Steelville found jobs in the strip mill. "What do you think of her?" Mike asked.

RUNS LIKE A SWISS WATCH

"It's impressive," a friend with me replied, "impressive — all that big automatic machinery running virtually without manpower, like the works of a delicate Swiss watch!"

Mike pointed to the endless ceiling with the massive machinery under it. "Look at her!" he said. "You know what we call her?—'The Big Morgue.' The few of us old hand-mill men that got something to do here ain't so bad off as the 1,300 or more fellows that are out starving on relief or struggling on WPA. When we meet on the street and get to talking we call this 'The Big Morgue,' the place where all out of jobs are buried."

85,000 LOSING THEIR JOBS

Eighty-five thousand hand-mill workers are less fortunate than Mike Michaels. They are permanently displaced and cannot even get a laboring job in the strip mills. Their plight as individuals is tragic.

In New Castle there is still hope, because the idle mill has not been dismantled. All such hopes, however, are gone in Clarksburg and Morgantown, West Virginia, and Scottdale, Pennsylvania. The companies decided to dismantle their hand-mills there, but finding it was cheaper to give them away, the mills were turned over to the Chamber of Commerce or "a group of citizens" to attract new industries, provided, of course, that steel products were not manufactured in them.

The twelve hundred New Castle men, however, banded themselves together into a permanent unemployed-WPA workers organization. At first they concentrated on getting their unemployment compensation checks, and then WPA jobs and relief with a minimum of delay.

During the primary elections they carried their town and county for the CIO gubernatorial candidate by a wide margin. Since then they have been pushing a local housing program and laying plans to publicize their plight and the plight of their community. They intend to make the nation, especially Congress, aware that New Castle is fast becoming an industrially stranded community, and that it requires special legislative aid.

Private industry having failed to make any provisions for them, the displaced workers look to the Government for assistance. A few find their way back into private industry usually at much lower-paying jobs.

THOUSANDS ON RELIEF

But thousands of the strip-mill victims can be found desperate on relief or WPA or hopelessly walking the streets. You can see them in Ohio—Cambridge, Yorkville, Portsmouth, Martins Ferry, Youngstown, Canton—or in the Keystone state—New Castle, Aliquippa, McKeesport, Monessen, Scottdale—and in other states where once prosperous industrial milltowns look upon the country's 27 strip mills as "Grim Reapers." The older workers are outcasts of private industry, while the younger ones are on industry's waiting list, drafted into the army of the unemployed.

Whatever the final employment results of the strip mills—probably the greatest technological advance of the past decade—the present plight of the 85,000 workers displaced or about to be displaced, is tragic. Nor is there any present encouragement in the possibilities of new jobs through the development of new industries utilizing the strip mill output.

TWO HERE, A DOZEN THERE

Most of the recent labor-saving advances have been small mechanical improvements eliminating two men here, a dozen there. In Johnstown, Pennsylvania, a handful of "scarfers' replaced several dozen chippers.

The scarfers, with their acetylene torches, can burn the bad seams out of billets five times as fast as chippers can cut them out with their air pressure chisels. A steel roll mill recently installed two new small electric furnaces which can be charged automatically in twenty minutes. It took two and one-half hours to charge the old furnaces by hand. Four men were eliminated from the furnace crews.

All this is "small stuff" which has been going on in the industry for years, though when all these lost jobs are added up the total is startling. But far more ominous, from the standpoint of employment, are pending technological advances in steel manufacturing.

WOULD HIT MANY DEPARTMENTS

The present method requires eight operations from the open hearth furnace to the rolling mill, and the steel has to be transported four times. When the process of rolling molten steel has been perfected—and enough progress has been made to indicate that the process will be commercially feasible within the next decade—only three operations will be necessary, and the steel need be transported but once.

Entire departments, including the soaking pits, blooming mills, chipping yards, and so on, will be abolished or reduced to mere skeletons. Roughly, one out of every six steel workers will be eliminated by the process.

Neither the industry nor the Steel Workers Organizing Committee has a solution at hand for the problem of the displaced workers.

The strip mills are a pre-union development, more than eighty-five per cent of them in operation before the SWOC was established. The steel workers therefore cannot expect to receive benefits from the union for a period when they were unorganized. The men lacked union leadership to control and plan the introduction of the strip mills, and many of them were scarcely aware of the new development.

SWOC EDUCATION WORK

The SWOC favors technological improvements and carries on a continual progress of education among its members, as to the futility of opposing progress. But unless provisions are made to care for displaced workers, the speed with which the industry is introducing labor-saving devices may be checked by the revolt of the men involved. SWOC has proposed a practical plan to govern the introduction of labor-saving devices in a pamphlet, "Production Problems," which has been widely circulated throughout industry.

NEED FOR 30-HOUR WEEK

All developments indicate to the union the inevitability of the thirty-hour week at existing, or more likely higher wages.

An investigation under impartial public auspices and a plan based on it are long overdue. The survey should include special studies of such stranded communities as New Castle, Pennsylvania, in the hope of helping them before they become incurably blighted areas.

The swift, steady displacement of workers by machines in the steel industry is no doubt an example—if an extreme one—of what is happening in many areas throughout industry. Here is one of the grave problems of the machine age, one that cannot be solved except through the common effort of industry, labor and government.

Union Appeals Huge Damage Award

PHILADELPHIA, Apr. 8.—Counsel for Branch One of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO affiliate, today took action to appeal the staggering $711,932 damage verdict against the union won by the Apex Hosiery Co. under the Sherman anti-trust law. The attorney for the union local for its president, William Leader, said he was prepared to carry the case up to the U. S. Supreme Court.

If no reversal of the federal district court jury's decision is obtained, the attorney said, "the natural, logical and inevitable result will be that every strike in any industry or even in any single factory will be within the Sherman Act, and subject to federal jurisdiction, provided any appreciable amount of its product enters into interstate commerce."

'DANGEROUS DOCTRINE'

He added that "an effort is being made to establish a novel and dangerous doctrine in labor law. It cannot and will not stand. Of this we are firmly convinced and we propose to take all necessary measures to have it declared so judicially."

The damages average about $41 per member of the union. However, a stipulation worked out between the attorneys for the two sides in the dispute provides that the individual members are not responsible for the damages. Thus, the company will not be able to seize the members' personal property to help pay for the judgment.

Branch One, which has won contracts with practically every Philadelphia hosiery firm in the last few years, has a treasury of about $50,000 and an office building valued at approximately $10,000.

BIG PROBLEM

How the money will be collected—provided the verdict is upheld in the higher courts—provides many knotty problems, observers here believe.

Assessments can be voted only by the union membership, which might be expected to show some reluctance to raise funds directly for the company. The company could probably seize the dues receipts of the union as they are paid in each month, but such a process might soon defeat its own ends by driving the union out of business.

The union, which had organized practically every hosiery mill in the area, came into conflict with the wealthy Apex firm in May, 1937. At that time a sit-down strike resulted in closing the plant for more than six months, and eventually won a contract.

The company held that its machinery had been damaged to the extent of several hundred thousand dollars, and claimed that the union leaders had authorized the sit-down.

USED SHERMAN ACT

The company sued the union under the Sherman anti-trust law, basing its claim that the union had conspired to restrain interstate commerce.

"The verdict," said the union attorney, "in effect repeals the Sherman anti-trust act, as far as industry is concerned, and puts it into effect against labor."

Smelter Union Wins Strike, Gets Pact

IRVINGTON, N. J., Apr. 8—One month's negotiations and a strike by Local 462 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, CIO, won a closed shop contract with the Phoenix Brass Fittings Corp. here this week.

The contract was won after almost a month's strike and an overwhelming victory in a Labor Board election. It includes seniority, division of work in slack times, double time for holidays, and a retroactive wage increase.

Justice Dept. Probe Reveals Activities Of Nazi Bund

WASHINGTON, Apr. 8.—Nazi heils, Hitler salutes, anti-Semitic filth, especially for children, military drill and oaths of loyalty to Germany—are happening here in America, according to the report on the German Nazi Bund just released by the U. S. Dept. of Justice.

They're happening in seven Nazi camps in this country, where members of 50 organizations under the leadership of Bundesfuehrer Fritz Kuhn (currently on trial for evading taxes in New York) "consecrate" themselves on "a little piece of German soil in America, as a symbol of our motto 'obligated to America, tied to Germany.'"

NAZI ROUTINE

Only German is allowed to be spoken in the camps. The Swastika flag is hoisted and saluted daily. Children and adults are drilled in military formation. They sing the German Nazi anthem. They hear speakers telling them over and over again that the Jew is the enemy of mankind, responsible for Bolshevism, trade unionism, internationalism, capitalism, Catholicism, everything.

According to little Fuehrer Kuhn, the Bund is divided into three departments — Eastern, Middle-Western, and Western, with 8,299 members. Most of these, the Justice Dept. report says, are in the East, where 5,324 are concentrated. Five of the camps are in the east, three of them in New York state and one each in Connecticut and New Jersey.

IT'S A BUSINESS

But the German-American Nazis don't preach hatred of the Jews and the Catholics and trade unionists just for the fun of it. There's a very solid profit motive behind their activities in this country. Kuhn's Nazis are in business for what they can get out of it besides just the satisfaction of being traitors to American democracy.

They publish four newspapers—all with the title "Deutsche Weckruf and Boebachter" (Hitler's personal paper in Germany is also called "Beobachter") which are owned by the A. V. Publishing Corp.—Fritz Kuhn, president.

They have the Deutscher Konsum Verband (DVK), whose purpose is, according to the G Men, to "Promote an anti-Jewish boycott" and persuade people to buy from stores owned by members of the group. Fritz Kuhn is president of that, too. Much of its activity consists of putting anti-Semitic stickers on Jewish owned stores—always done in the dead of night when the courageous Nazis are less likely to run into Americans.

STORM TROOPERS

Of course they have storm troopers, who wear uniforms sold by Nazi business men who belong to the DVK. These thugs are organized in the Ordnungsdienst (OD) or "Order Service." Their function is to beat up hecklers at meetings, intimidate Jews and other American citizens.

These things are happening here, in free and democratic America — as they happened in what was once free and democratic Germany.

Settle Toledo Hotel Dispute

Toledo, Ohio, Apr. 8 — Settlement of a grievance at the Commodore Perry Hotel here was announced this week by Kenneth Cole, secretary of the Toledo Industrial Union Council. Members of the United Restaurant & Hotel Workers, CIO local industrial union 64, voted two-to-one to accept the settlement which guarantees no further "letting out" of work to outside contractors or displacement of union members.

All hotel employes must be or become members of the union in good standing.

Liberals Win In Los Angeles, Chicago Polls

LOS ANGELES, Apr. 8. — The campaign of reform of Mayor Fletcher Bowron to purge the Los Angeles City Council of reactionary members seemed at least a partial success today following early return on the city's primary elections.

Strongly backed by labor and liberal groups in the city, Bowron had called for the defeat of five councilmen, charging them with serving reactionary selfish interests and with being closely allied to the underworld.

RUN-OFF CONTESTS

The other four, it seemed certain, would be forced into run-off contests May 2 to retain their seats.

The councilman had vigorous support from the conservative Los Angeles Times, which made efforts to paint the liberal mayor as a dictator.

In a radio speech delivered just before the polls closed, Bowron charged that the campaign "has been largely financed by selfish interests, underworld leaders and those who have enjoyed special privileges."

CHICAGO, Apr. 8.—Backed by a strong coalition of labor and progressive forces, Mayor Edward F. Kelly won an easy re-election contest here, piling up a 180,000 plurality over his Republican opponent, Dwight Green.

Chicago labor groups hailed the results as a boost for the New Deal throughout the middle West.

In recent months Kelly has been extremely friendly to labor, and has reiterated his belief in the New Deal's policies and methods. Members of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, the Packinghouse Workers and the Farm Equipment Workers, as well as other CIO and AFL unions in the city, rallied to his cause.

Labor's Non-Partisan League played an active part in helping the mayor gain another term in office.

During his campaign Kelly called for maintaining WPA expenditures, urged extension of the U. S. housing and slum clearance programs and pledged his support to labor. Only recently he helped the packinghouse workers win a signed contract with the Union Stockyards Transit Co., which for 62 years had resisted unionization.

Army, Navy Union Favors Wire Probe

Washington, Apr. 8—The Army and Navy Union, whose 600,000 members are veterans of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, has gone on record in favor of the Wheeler resolution to investigate the telegraph industry, and opposed to any merger of the telegraph companies which would throw thousands out of jobs.

A letter to Sec. of Commerce Harry Hopkins from the Legistative Chairman of the Union explains the belief that "an Administration concerned with the welfare of labor should take steps to ensure the continuance of the jobs of the thousands of workers in the telegraph industry which are today endangered by the rapidly worsening conditions of the industry."

Sign Two-Year CIO Contract At Van Camp

Indianapolis, Ind., Apr. 8 — A two-year union contract covering 800 employes at plants of Van Camp's Inc. in Indianapolis and Martinsville, Ind. was announced this week by James Robb, CIO regional director.

The agreement which continues the check-off of dues, liberalizes the vacation plan to include all employes who have been with the company 100 days. Joint meetings to adjust wages in September of this year and in March, 1940 are also provided in the contract.

How About Your State?

This map, prepared by the Department of Labor, shows the states which have so far passed minimum wage laws for women workers. Most of the state minimum rates exceed the 25c-minimum of the federal wage-hour law.

Chicago. — Negotiate for a union contract with the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee by May 10 or expect trouble — this was the warning given Armour & Co. by a conference of union leaders meeting here.

Wage Law

Washington.—The CIO will oppose changes in the Fair Labor Standards Act aimed to loosen, rather than tighten, its enforcement, Lee Pressman, general counsel, announced.

To Accuse Telephone Company

Norwalk, Ohio., Apr. 15.—Formal charges of unfair labor practices against the Northern Ohio Telephone Co. will be filed with the National Labor Relations Board by the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee.

Thomas Evans, UWOC field representative, said the move to file the charges was speeded by an affidavit showing the Northern Ohio Telephone Employes Association had been sponsored directly by the company.

Company employes recently received a UWOC charter.

Preside At Hearing

New York State's 'Baby' Wagner Act Upheld In Court

ALBANY, N. Y., Apr. 15.—New York State's "baby Wagner Act" has received the o. k. of the Court of Appeals, highest tribunal in the Empire State.

By a 4-3 decision, the judges threw out a number of arguments raised by the billion-dollar Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. and ordered the financial colossus to bargain collectively with Local 30 of the United Office & Professional Workers, CIO affiliate.

In making known its findings, the high state court ruled that the act had not created a new state department in violation of the state constitution. It ruled, too, that the industrial insurance agents are definitely employes of the insurance companies, a point contested by Metropolitan.

SEES BIG VICTORY

Pres. Lewis Merrill of the UOPWA described the decision as a "significant victory" not only for the union but "for white collar workers everywhere."

Adding that it places the stamp of illegality on attempts to withhold collective bargaining rights from office and professional workers, Merrill saw the court verdict as furnishing "a sound basis for outlawing all efforts at legislative discrimination to which white collar workers have long been subject.

VINDICATES POLICY

"The stand of the UOPWA for the right of self-organization among the employes of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. has been vindicated," he declared.

"The policy of the company, in refusing to meet with representatives of their employes for the peaceful negotiation of differences, has been discredited.

"We hope that Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. will now abide by the court's decision and meet with representatives of the union duly designated by its employes one year ago."

WON ELECTION

It was just one day short of a year before the decision that the UOPWA won a State Labor Relations Board poll among the Metropolitan agents and was subsequently certified as their sole collective bargaining agency.

Ho! Hum!—Girdler Wants Act Changed

Tom Girdler, head of Republic Steel Corp., told an audience of 400 here that business leaders will rush to the support of the Act—provided it is so amended as to be a "good law' in the eyes of the industrialists.

"If you have to make a bad law into a good law by 'emasculating' it, then you'd better 'emasculate' it," the beagle-eyed industrialist opined.

Girdler's references to emasculation of the statute were in an answer to a hope expressed by Sen. Robert Wagner that the Act would escape such a fate.

Senator Defends Statute

(See Stories, Pages 5, 6)

WASHINGTON, Apr. 15—Foes of the Wagner Labor Relations Act were on the defensive today as the result of the testimony of Sen. Robert Wagner of New York, father of the law, at the opening session on amendments before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

Reading a 26-page statement which bore evidence of weeks of careful preparation, the veteran liberal answered in deliberate tones the hysterical arguments which have been offered against the Act and the National Labor Relations Board in recent months.

He challenged long-time foes of labor to drop their mask of seeking amendments to "protect labor" and to admit their real motive is to nullify the workings of the law.

Wagner denied that the law is any more one-sided than dozens of other pieces of legislation which have been accepted by the nation, mentioning the Reconstruction Finance Corp., the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Securities & Exchange Commissions as administrative bodies whose problems are much like those of the NLRB.

NLRB Stand

WASHINGTON, Apr. 15. — The National Labor Relations Board is opposed to amending the Wagner Act at this time, a special report issued by the Board declared. See Story Page Five.

Typo Union Locals Knock AFL Policies

WASHINGTON, Apr. 15.—A resolution proposing that the International Typographical Union stop paying all per capita taxes to the AFL in protest against its "arbitrary and destructive" policies and its hostility to the CIO, is receiving favorable action in many ITU locals, it has been learned here.

A referendum of all ITU members on the proposals must be held if 150 locals pass the resolution.

It charges the AFL leadership with encouraging jurisdictional disputes and forcing union workers to scab on their union brothers in an attempt to "humble" the CIO.

Efforts to defeat political candidates with "unblemished labor records" and an alliance "with employers and reactionary groups in an effort to sabotage the Wagner Labor Relations Act" are also described as part of the AFL leaders' private war on the CIO.

Suspension of dues payments to the AFL is suggested until the AFL:

1. Agrees to stop trying to control the internal policies of the typographical union.
2. Composes its differences with the CIO.
3. Provides for a more democratic election of AFL officials.

Amendments Not Needed—Garrison

New York, Apr. 15.—The Wagner Act needs no amendments.

This is the sentiment expressed by Lloyd K. Garrison, one-time member of the National Labor Relations Board and at present dean of the University of Wisconsin Law School, in a lengthy letter to the editor of the New York Times.

'REMARKABLE JOB'

"Nor do I suggest that the (Labor) Board has not made mistakes. But considering the novelty of the law, the flood of cases since it was upheld, the determined resistance to it in many quarters, and the emotions engendered by labor's internal feud, I think that the board has done a remarkable job."

Receiving Homage

"Button, button, who's got the button?" is a question easily answered by eight-year-old Eugene Morasco (right) who spent his time at the United Automobile Workers convention making a collection of the union insignia. Pres. R. J. Thomas and Sec-Treas. George Addes of the UAW congratulate the youngster for lining his entire suit with the buttons.

Harlan Coal Mine Must Rehire 116

WASHINGTON, Apr. 15.—Fired two years ago for refusing to work on Labor Day, more than 100 Harlan county miners were ordered reinstated with back pay last week.

In a ruling handed down by the National Labor Relations Board, the Good Coal Company of Lisle, Harlan county, Kentucky, was told to bargain collectively with District 15, United Mine Workers as sole union representative, and to take back 116 employes with reimbursement for wages lost since their discharge.

The Board also ordered the firm to abolish the company-dominated Wallins Creek Employes Association and to stop discouraging membership in the UMW.

FIRED IN 1937

All but nine of the miners ordered reinstated were fired September 6, 1937, after they stayed away from work the previous day in celebration of Labor Day.

The Board's investigation disclosed that the Employes Association was formed at the suggestion of the company's vice-president, who circulated a "loyalty" petition among the workers and told them that if they wanted a union he would help them organize, get a charter and pick their committee.

OFFICIALS FOUGHT UNION

Evidence before the Board showed also that company officials expressed open opposition to outside unions, warning the miners that they must "not get tied up with the union that was floating around the country."

In connection with the reinstatement of the miners, the Board held that since failure of the men to work on Labor Day was a consequence of the current labor dispute, and since the company had not rehired other men at the time they were not allowed to return, the refusal constituted a discrimination against them within the meaning of Section 8 of the Wagner Labor Act.

Labor Wins In Baltimore Voting

Baltimore, Md., Apr. 15—Labor and New Deal forces in Maryland staged a come-back victory when Mayor Howard Jackson won the renomination in the Democratic city primary.

Complete returns showed Jackson ran ahead of the anti-New Deal candidate by 35,000 votes. His opponent, Charles Buck—"the businessmen's candidate"—had the support of the reactionary machine headed by Howard Bruce, millionaire industrialist, and U. S. Sen. Millard Tydings, one of the most outspoken foes of Pres. Roosevelt in the upper house.

Their machine had managed to defeat Jackson when he sought the nomination for governor of the state in last autumn's primary contests.

ELECT CIO COUNSEL

Labor scored another victory when Jack Edelman, attorney for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in the city, was nominated to the city council from the fourth ward. Edelman was 6,000 votes ahead of his nearest opponent.

A Labor Committee for Jackson functioned effectively throughout the campaign. Headed by Charles Mitzel of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, it brought together representatives of CIO, AFL and railway brotherhood locals.

Steel Union Wins Poll In Houston

Houston, Tex., Apr. 15. — The Steel Workers Organizing Committee rolled up another Labor Board election victory in its drive to win complete organization of the plants of the American Can Co.

The vote in Houston was 94-27 for the SWOC, and gave the CIO union sole collective bargaining rights. Negotiations with the company for a contract will start immediately, H. A. Rausmussen, union director in the Texas-Oklahoma district, announced.

Montana CIO Meeting Planned

GREAT FALLS, Mont., Apr. 15.—The second annual convention of the Montana Industrial Union Council, CIO, will be held here starting Apr. 30.

A large attendance is expected, since CIO unions throughout the state have experienced considerable growth in the past 12 months.

It's Your Fight

Chicago, Apr. 15 — "We are fighting Hearst's million with our pennies. It is your fight too!", the Hearst Strike Committee reminds trade union members and friends of organized labor in an appeal for dollars, dimes and quarters.

"The Guild strikers on the Herald and Examiner and the Chicago American are fighting the fight of all workers against Hearst, labor's enemy No. 1" the appeal says. Send funds to the Hearst Strike Committee at 188 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Toronto AFL Aids Hearst Strikers, Angers Green

TORONTO, Ont., Apr. 15. — Denunciation by AFL Pres. William Green of the Toronto District Labor Council's endorsement of the Chicago Newspaper Guild's strike against the Hearst Evening American and Herald-Examiner was strongly protested by delegates to the central body at its last meeting.

Asserting that certain federation unions had contractual relations with Hearst, Green denounced the council as "pro-CIO" and as being neither "fair or just" to the federation.

Delegates approved Secretary J. W. Buckley's reply in which he refuted the assertion, declaring the council has always been active in an effort to heal the breach between the CIO and AFL.

In the debate, Harvey McCool, president of the Toronto Allied Printing Trades Council, promised full support to the Newspaper Guild in its activity.

BERATES COUNCIL

Green wrote in part: "In characteristic fashion your central body took the side of the CIO as against the AFL, notwithstanding the fact that your central body is a chartered AFL organization and that you pretend to operate under the name and auspices of the AFL.

"This deceptive action on the part of your central body is pretty well understood because your central body has always shown itself to be pro-CIO and when there is an issue between the CIO and the AFL you can always count on your central body being for the CIO."

SECRETARY REPLIES

Secretary Buckley in reply said the council does not desire to enter jurisdictional disputes and would not have endorsed the strike if there were such a dispute as Green claimed.

"As to your charge that we are pro-CIO as against the AFL this is not true. While it is true that our trades council has done and is doing all that it can to heal the breach, surely you can give honesty of purpose to those who may differ from you, as it has been given to no man or set of men to claim infallibility," he added.

Urge Dock Men Build Strength

San Francisco, Apr. 15 — Shipowners have fostered and taken advantage of jurisdictional friction between waterfront unions to shave down working conditions, Harry Bridges, president of the Int'l Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, said in his report to the delegates attending the national convention in session here.

Bridges emphasized the need of strengthening the union's position to regain lost ground and to win improvements in wages and working conditions.

NEED FOR UNITY

Stressing the need of cooperating with other maritime unions in accordance with the policy of the longshoremen since 1934, Bridges urged that all moves to improve terms of the agreement be made in conjunction with these other unions, many of which are also considering re-opening their contracts and making new demands.

"We are not going to work on a policy of going on strike in September regardless of circumstances," he said, "but the best way to get our demands if the convention and membership decide to make them, is to be in a strong position."

To this end he recommended that all locals institute monthly assessments to build a strike fund to have ready if necessary.

Bridges recommended that a referendum be held on the question of reopening the agreement for improvements this year.

The whole matter of the Maritime Commission and the threat of separate hiring halls was dealt with in a special report to the convention.

LOTS OF WOMEN

New York—Some 800,000 women now belong to U. S. labor unions, according to Labor Research Assn.

He 'Beat' the Wage Law; Fine—$3,000

NEW YORK, Apr. 13.—A New York glove manufacturer today had paid a $3,000 fine for violating the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act—increasing evidence that the government is sharpening its enforcement teeth and will demand compliance with the law passed last year.

Nathaniel Breath, vice-president of the Picardy Mills, one of the largest units in the glove industry, pleaded guilty to five charges filed against him by the wage-hour division of the Dept. of Justice.

The fine was collected on only one count, with an additional $12,000 suspended for three months with the understanding that Breath will pay his employes some $1,500 due them as a result of his past chiselling.

Breath was found to have paid three girls less than the 25c-an-hour minimum required by the statute, falsifying records and failing to keep others, and with having forced his workers to punch the time clocks long after they came to work, and considerably before they left at the end of the day.

"A fine ought to be paid so that other industries seeking to evade the law from a business point of view would find it an unprofitable affair," commented Judge Robert Inch, who presided at the trial.

Wage-hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews indicated in a recent speech that "the honeymoon is over" and that non-compliance with the law will result in court action by the government

Coal Lockout Aims To Smash Union---Lewis

NEW YORK, Apr. 15. — With 320,000 bituminous coal miners still idle and the nation's coal supply rapidly dwindling, Pres. John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers charged today that mine operators and "outside interests" are attempting to destroy the country's most important union.

Subcommittees representing both the UMW and the Appalachian coal operators have been unable to break the deadlock on terms of a new contract to replace the agreement which expired on midnight, March 31.

LISTS OUTSIDERS

Lewis, speaking to the press at the conclusion of one of the sessions with the operators, listed the outside interests as "independent steel firms, utilities, railroad corporations, large consumers of coal and employers who fear collective bargaining extension."

He bluntly described the present situation as a lockout forced by the mine owners.

The miners, he pointed out, have given up every one of their demands except the one calling for the removal of $1 and $2 penalties per man per day for each strike in violation of the contract. The UMW has taken the position that with the AFL-affiliated Progressive Miners of America seeking to make deals with certain operators in order to carry on the AFL's war against the CIO, the 20-year-old strike penalty clause should be removed.

100,000 MORE

Lewis said that if an agreement is not soon reached, another 100,000 miners in other districts, who have been working under terms of their old pact pending conclusion of the Appalachian agreement, would halt operations.

"This is a bad time for the operators to undertake to destroy the United Mine Workers, in this year of 1939, to please labor-hating interests in the country who oppose collective bargaining," Lewis declared.

"We assert that it cannot be done and we say that the coal industry should not permit itself to be used as a catspaw in this situation."

READY TO FIGHT

He added that if the operators feel that "nothing will satisfy them except the blood of the union, the mine workers will be compelled to consider the broadening of the base of this struggle and possible cancellation by 15 days' notice of all agreements existing in fields outside the Appalachian fields.

"It may also be recalled that the anthracite wage agreement expires on April 30.

26 CONCESSIONS

"If the bituminous operators through their stupid policy will be satisfied with nothing less than war in the industry, the United Mine Workers will be able to accommodate them and protect themselves."

The UMW chieftain pointed to the fact that the union has made 26 concessions during the negotiations, while the operators have remained adamant, as evidence that the "operators are blindly determined upon a lockout, which is now in effect."

Postpone Anthracite Parleys

NEW YORK, Apr. 15.—Negotiations between the United Mine Workers and the anthracite operators for a new contract to replace the agreement expiring April 30, have been postponed until April 18.

Scheduled originally for April 10, they have been delayed by the prolonged negotiations with the bituminous operators for a national contract to continue the agreement which expired March 31.

Workers Assail Senate Tories' Slashing Of WPA Funds

WASHINGTON, Apr. 15.—Defying united protests from organized labor, the Senate "hatchet gang" composed of conservative Democrats and Republicans—augmented by a group of middle-of-the-road Senators—today was rejoicing in a $50,000,000 slash in WPA funds.

By a 49-28 vote the upper house threw out an amendment by Senator Claude Pepper to keep the work relief deficiency appropriation at the $150,000,000 figure offered by Pres. Roosevelt.

Meanwhile, it was revealed that the President will shortly send a message to Congress asking for a regular appropriation of a billion and a half dollars WPA allottment for the fiscal year 1940.

THOUSANDS AFFECTED

Shortly before the appropriation slash rode through the Senate to the cheers of the Tories, Ralph Hetzel, CIO Unemployment Director, warned that a cut of 767,000 jobs may result from the Senate's action.

Hetzel charged that "the enemies of the WPA do not dare to attack in the open."

Instead, he said, "they employ backroom, secret conferences and hidden parliamentary maneuvers to break down WPA. This is a completely undemocratic process. The voters have no chance to know who is responsible and no chance to make known their convictions . . . The CIO is urging the Senators to dismiss backroom bargains and to join the gallant fight to appropriate what is really needed."

ROOSEVELT'S LETTER

The band of loyal New Dealers who supported the full appropriation on the Senate floor read into the record a letter from Pres. Roosevelt calling the WPA problem a matter of "arithmetic."

"If $100,000,000 is voted, between three and four hundred thousand fewer people can be given work if $150,000,0000 is voted — and in addition, practically none of the seven or eight hundred thousand people on the waiting list can be given employment," the President's letter asserted.

"It seems to me that that is the long and short of it."

YOUR WPA JOB

By Ralph Hetzel, Jr.

Secretary, Committee on Unemployment

The reactionaries in Congress have once more been playing political football with the unemployed.

First, these reactionary groups tried to wear down the opposition by ignoring for almost two months the President's request for an additional appropriation for the WPA of $150,000,000 and until the WPA had already sent out orders laying off over 200,000 people. The House Appriations Committee waited until the President was forced to send another message, asking for this additional appropriation and pointing out its urgent necessity.

The Appropriations Committee pulled out the same parliamentary trick which had worked so well with the President's original request for $875,000,000. The debate in the House was manoevered in such a manner that the Representatives could vote for a cut of $50,000,000 (one-third the President's request) without putting their votes on record.

'SQUEEZE PLAY'

The "economy bloc" in the Senate caught the ball from the House reactionaries. Before anyone knew what had been happening the Senate Appropriations Committee emerged from a closed hearing with an agreement to put through the $50,000,000 cut without any debate in the Senate.

The well-known "squeeze play" had been worked on some Administration leaders. They were told that unless an agreement was put through to pass the $100,000,000 a terrific fight would be put on to cut the appropriation even further. Some of the Administration supporters caved in.

In spite of every proof that the $100,000,000 was not enough, the majority of the Senators voted against the President's requested amount.

FIGHT NOT OVER

But the fight is not over. There are two immediate and very important things to do.

There is no reason why the WPA should be cut to such a great extent if a sufficiently intensive fight is put on throughout the country. Every attempt must be made to make sure that no person in need is laid off. If the money runs out before the end of the year, the WPA can still come to Congress in June and ask for more money. Several Senators suggested that course during the debate.

1940 APPROPRIATION

Second, and even more important, is the 1940 appropriation for unemployment relief. There does not seem to be any doubt that the reactionaries on the Hill will fight to the last ditch to cut it down to the bone.

Signs of the Times — A Warning to Reaction

These two lines of men ought to serve as reminders to "economy"-minded legislators that their months of balance the budget talk haven't diminished the need for WPA jobs. At left, jobless men parade down New York's Fifth Ave. at the height of the Easter Sunday fashion parade to protest layoffs. At right, 7,000 men stand in line outside the Charlestown Navy Yard at Boston, Mass., in the hope of getting 25 available jobs. Who says the unemployed won't work if they have the chance?

Strange Triplets

When anti-labor employers and faithless labor leaders get together, the result is a program to amend the Wagner labor act.

Such at least appears to be the mixed parentage of some strange triplets that were recently born.

The programs of the National Association of Manufacturers, William Green of the AFL, and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to amend the Wagner act, are as similar in many respects as three peas from the same pod.

In almost the same language, for instance, the NAM spokesmen, Green and the C. of C. call for "free speech" for employers (even where this interferes with their employes' freedom of choic of representatives); for court review of Labor Board decisions; and for the right of employers to call for elections.

Green and the standard-bearer of the NAM, Senator Burke, also find themselves in agreement on amendments for compulsory craft division of the workers.

Green goes still further in the employers' direction with the Walsh amendments which he sponsors, by asking protection for contracts which an employer signs in collusion with a union of his rather than the workers' choice; by calling for disqualification of trial examiners whom the bosses may not like; and by advancing a number of other proposed changes which will break down the barriers against company unions.

The triple program of the NAM, Green and the C. of C. is not born of any holy matrimony between capital and labor, however. Rather it is the illegitimate fruit of an intrigue between selfish minority interests which truly represent neither capital nor labor.

The NAM and the Chamber of Commerce do not represent the interests of the majority of fair employers who have accepted the Wagner act and adjusted themselves to collective bargaining. Their amendments would confuse and upset labor relations generally, for the benefit of a minority of employers who have defied the law.

Similarly Green speaks only for a minority of craft leaders who are willing to make a deal with anti-labor employers which will endanger all union rights, for the sake of winning some special favors for themselves.

He certainly does not speak for the majority of the workers, in the AFL as well as in the CIO, who are determined to defend the rights and benefits won under the present Wagner act by opposing all amendments.

The Lockout of the Miners

The lockout which has crippled bituminous coal production and rendered hundreds of thousands of miners idle is the result of a stubborn policy of negation on the part of the coal operators.

From the time negotiations started the representatives of the United Mine Workers of America repeatedly did everything possible to insure continuance of production until an agreement should finally be reached on the new contract.

On March 15, President John L. Lewis reports, the union offered "to keep the mines in operation under the old wage scale and conditions, pending conclusion of an agreement. That offer was rejected by the operators.

"Later," he says, "the Mine Workers offered an extension of the existing contract from April 1, pending the working out of a basic scale in the meantime. That offer was rejected by the operators.

"Later the Mine Workers offered to continue operation of the mines subject to 30 days' formal notice of cancellation by either side. That offer was rejected by the operators.

"Later the Mine Workers offered a two-year contract under existing wages and conditions, with the clarification of a clause in the contract granting a union shop in the industry. That offer was rejected.

"Later the Mine Workers offered a two-year contract with the penalty clause eliminated. That offer was rejected by the operators."

This record shows that the union made every possible effort to keep the mines in operation, but that the operators insisted on the lockout.

By following this course of action, which is no more in the interests of the industry than of the miners, the operators are letting themselves be used, Lewis says, as a catspaw of outside anti-labor interests which are bent on checking the spread of collective bargaining.

It is fortunate for the industry and the public, as well as for the workers, that the miners have the most powerful labor organization in the world, which is fully capable of protecting them and defeating this anti-union plot.

Take Your Choice

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

"Unfair"

"Unfair" has long been a word favored by labor. There are "unfair lists" of non-union employers. Pickets carry signs that the company concerned is "unfair to labor." And in many other ways the word is used to call attention to injustices which workers suffer.

Lately anti-union employers have tried to appropriate the word and to turn it against labor. They have sought the same kind of public sympathy that labor seeks, by claiming that the Wagner labor relations act is "unfair" to employers.

Senator Wagner has been quick to expose the absurdity of this claim.

"In addition to a legal system weighted heavily in his favor, the employer has at his disposal superior economic staying power, more money, better legal counsel, and better access to the instruments of public opinion," Wagner told the Senate committee on education and labor.

"Against all this, the Labor Act gives the worker nothing but the right to institute a lengthy legal proceeding to protect his right to organize and bargain collectively, a right theoretically recognized by our law for a hundred years."

Wagner pointed out that the rights which the act gives labor freely to select its spokesmen for collective bargaining, have been enjoyed by employers for a century or more.

The proposed amendments purporting to make the act less "one-sided," he said, "are designed to destroy the equality of bargaining power which the Labor Act strives to make possible, and to restore the gross inequality of bargaining power that existed before the act was passed — the inequality that existed when the isolated worker stacked his pitiful weakness against the gigantic strength of consolidated capital."

Fairness and Equality?

The spokesmen of organized wealth are most ill-advised to raise the issue of "fairness" and "equality of treatment" when discussing relations between capital and labor.

Let anyone study the miserable conditions under which millions of American working people have to live and bring up their families. Let him consider the additional sufferings of these people, ill-housed, ill-clothed and ill-fed at the best of times — when they have to strike to better or protect their conditions.

Let him compare with this the security and luxury of the employers and owners of industry, and see how little they suffer personally when they close their plants to whip their workers into submission.

Then let him, if he dare, say that a law is "unfair" to employers which does no more than protect the right of workers to bargain as a group, instead of as helpless individuals, with the giant power of corporate wealth.

Unequal Treatment

If employers think that the Wagner act is "unfair" to them, what in the name of all that is reasonable do they think labor is entitled to call all the other conditions it confronts in its struggles to better its lot?

Is there fairness and equality when poverty bargain against wealth?

Does the press of the country give as fair and equal treatment to the claims of the workers as it gives to the claims of the wealthy interests which own and control it?

Is there equal treatment on the air for corporations, which can spend millions of dollars to buy radio time, and for labor unions which, even when they can scrape together a few dollars for this purpose, often find their programs barred as "controversial"?

Is there fairness in the courts when property rights are so often given precedence over human rights?

Is it fair and democratic that a wealthy few should be able to mobilize on their side all the "public opinion" and all the instruments of economic and political power which money can command; while the laboring many, ever on the verge of hunger and want, have little more on their side than their ability to stick together and the knowledge that their cause is just?

A Boomerang

The spokesmen of wealth and reaction are using a word that will boomerang back in their faces, when they speak of the Wagner Act being "unfair."

This act does not establish equality of bargaining power between capital and labor. It does not establish a fair relationship between the laboring many and the wealthy few.

All it does is to remedy to some degree that grossest of inequality which exists when employers, free to organize themselves, deny to workers the similar right to organize and select freely their own representatives for collective bargaining.

Wagner Assails Foes' Attacks On Labor Act

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 15.—Firm opposition to the attempts of the National Association of Manufacturers, the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, and their agents in Congress to destroy the Labor Relations Act was voiced by Senator Robert F. Wagner, father of the act, in his testimony at the opening hearings on proposed amendments before the Senate Labor Committee here.

Senator Wagner's long and careful analysis of the proposed changes, prefaced by a detailed survey of the conditions that led to the passage of the act, concluded that most of the amendments are aimed at destruction of the act rather than, as their sponsors pretend, at its improvement.

The outcry against the act heard from every reactionary side should not be allowed to stampede Congress into changing it, he declared. Every piece of social legislation ever passed has had the same outcry raised against it, precisely by those most opposed to giving labor a fair legislative break.

ANSWERS CHARGES

Wagner's testimony fully answered the hostile charge that the act is "unfair," that it is "biased" in favor of the workers, that employers and the public "suffer" from its operations.

The employer has plenty of protection now, he pointed out, and all the Labor Act does is to redress this unbalanced situation by guaranteeing the worker the right to organize and bargain collectively.

"In addition to a legal system weighted heavily in his favor, the employer has at his disposal superior economic staying power, more money, better legal counsel, and better access to the instruments of public opinion," he said.

"Against all this, the Labor Act gives the worker nothing but the right to institute a lengthy legal proceeding to protect his right to organize and bargain collectively, a right theoretically recognized by our law for 100 years. To call this act 'unfair' is to my mind to evince a case of economic astigmatism."

CRITICIZES WALSH

In addition to criticizing Senator Burke's amendments, Wagner struck out particularly at two of the proposed amendments of Senator Walsh which are sponsored by Pres. Green of the AFL.

He objected to the Walsh proposal to remove the present provision that employers shall not "interfere" with the self-organization of their workers, saying that this would remove a form of protection afforded not only under the Wagner Act, but under the Railway Labor Act and a number of other federal and state laws.

"The amendment allowing 'interference,'" Wagner said, "would therefore have serious consequences not only under the Natl. Labor Relations Act, but might well serve as a dangerous precedent for amendments to other statutes won by labor only after hard-fought battles in state and nation."

Wagner also objected to another of Walsh's amendments which "would authorize the District Courts to issue proper writs at any time to compel the Board to perform its functions and duties.

'COURT SHUFFLE'

"This," he said, "would enable a party to shuffle every point in a case back and forth continually between District Court and Labor Board, to the eternal delay of the workers seeking to vindicate their rights."

Such amendments would result in abandoning or seriously impairing accepted principles of administrative law, which work in the people's interest, Wagner explained.

"In a very vital sense," he said, "these administrative agencies have come to be regarded as the people's instruments of government, created to effectuate a particular policy more expertly, more sympathetically and more efficiently than was possible under the rigid formalism of court procedure.

BASIC RIGHTS

Senator Wagner's defense of the act against its enemies, which required almost two hours to deliver, was based on the issue of fundamental workers' rights and their recognition by the U. S. government, with resultant gains in industrial peace and democracy.

He pointed out that government fact-finding commissions have again and again found that "the denial of labor's right to be heard in the councils of industry" was the root cause of industrial struggles.

The purpose of the act, he pointed out, was to remedy this condition—to guarantee that workers' basic rights would be recognized, and through that to promote industrial peace.

CODIFY RIGHTS

"The present law as adopted by Congress was simple in outline and sound in conception," he said. "It did not propose to establish compulsory arbitration, to fix hours, wages or working conditions.

"All it did was to codify and clarify the age-old bill of industrial rights, and to prohibit the specific practices that were antagonistic to the realization of these rights.

"The discriminatory discharge, the yellow-dog contract, and the company dominated union were proscribed. The law required the employer to bargain collectively with representatives chosen by a majority of employes in the appropriate unit, and authorized the holding of elections to determine employe representation."

The act's effectiveness was at first impaired by the bitter fight and court actions launched against it. But the Supreme Court finally declared the act constitutional, giving the Labor Board authority to enforce its decisions through the Circuit Courts.

The results were immediately beneficial, for the workers, for employers, and for the general public. Illustrating his points by a series of charts, Senator Wagner showed that strikes began to decline as soon as the act was cleared by the high court.

STRIKES DECLINE

"In 1938, the first full year of operation under the Supreme Court's mandate, there were only about half as many strikes, one-third as many workers involved, and less than one-third as much working time lost, as in the year 1937," he said.

"Not only does 1938 show a tremendous improvement over 1937, but it represents the best record in recent years. The steady upward trend in the number of strikes, over a period of eight successive years, was definitely reversed.

"Fewer workers were involved in strikes during 1938 than in any year since 1932. Less aggregate working time was lost through strikes than in any year since 1931.

"There is ample evidence that this solid improvement in labor relations is due largely to the operation of the Labor Act."

OTHER GAINS

Workers, employers and the public have made other great gains under the act, Senator Wagner pointed out, such as thousands of new agreements, elections involving representation, petitions for certification, and the like.

"Almost entirely through the informal method of achieving compliance, the law has provided a peaceful forum for about 20,200 cases involving more than 4,500,000 workers," he said.

"The Natl. Labor Relations Act has thus played a notable, constructive role in our national life. To millions of workers it has brought a better understanding of their employer's problems, and the material and spiritual value of participating in a free organization of their fellows for mutual aid and protection.

"To most employers who have given the act a fair trial, it has brought labor peace, and beyond that, a more human relationship with workers based on the mutual respect and understanding that grows out of free bargaining between free men. These employers—and they now represent the overwhelming majority—are among the chief beneficiaries of the Labor Act."

Defends His Act

Senator Robert Wagner of New York, shown as he opened hearings on amendments to the Act which bears his name, with a stirring defense of the charter of labor's rights. His hour-and-a-half speech rejected most attacks on the Act as unsound or prejudiced.

7-Point Defense Of Labor Law

WASHINGTON, Apr. 15.—Below in summary form are the seven points on which Senator Robert F. Wagner, author of the National Labor Relations Act, based his defense of the Act against proposed amendments at the first session of the Senate hearings here this week.

1. "The proof is overwhelming that the Labor Act, in its broad outlines, has proved an effective instrument for economic peace and industrial justice.

2. ". . . a very small but amazingly compact and powerful minority has fought the main objectives of the act tooth and nail at every turn, in Congress and in courts, day and night.

". . . they are trying to destroy rather than to perfect the act, and those who want to preserve it must of necessity deal with them accordingly.

3. "Every worker who wants to remain free should look long and searchingly at each proposal designed to change the act that has helped so much to make him free.

4. "The amendments pretending to make the act 'fair' by placing new restraints on labor would in true effect upset labor's new equality of bargaining power, and resign labor to its earlier status of the economic underling.

5. "Amendments proposing drastically to change the administrative provisions of the act would, I believe, weaken the traditional type of informal tribunals where the average man has a better chance to be heard.

6. "Reckless tampering with the act will substitute uncertainty for certainty in the law . . . will shake the stability and the surer blessings of industrial peace that thousands of employers enjoy under the present act as interpreted by the courts.

7. "Within a comparatively narrow field, there may be some changes in the act which the hearings before this committee will reveal to be sound in principle and practical in operation. If the need for such changes emerges as a product of this full and open-minded inquiry, I shall feel it my duty to introduce or support the substance of such amendments, and to help enact them into law."

NLRB Tells Position On Act

Washington, Apr. 15. — The Wagner Act does not "require amendment at the present time" in the opinion of the National Labor Relations Board, made public today in its report to the Senate Committee on Education and Labor now considering proposed amendments.

Amendments proposed by Sen. Walsh and endorsed by Pres. Green of the AFL drew strong criticism in the Board's report, especially those that would permit employers to interfere with the workers' free choice of a union; would legalize contracts made in collusion between an employer and a union he favors; would force the Board to certify splinter craft groups in industrial plants; and would turn the Board's decisions over to endless delays in the courts.

MINOR CHANGES

The Board mentioned several minor changes which it says "merit further consideration" although the amendments relating to them are "objectional in their present form" and although in general their objectives "could be achieved through administrative regulations without requiring legislative amendments."

"The remaining proposals in the bills before the committee are, in our opinion, definitely objectionable," the report says. "Many are not only in conflict with the basic purposes of the act but would, taken singly or in combination, effectively nullify the right of self-organization and collective bargaining which the Act is designed to protect.

"The others, while not striking at the roots of the Act, would drastically curtail the rights now guaranteed by the Act or substantially impair its effective administration."

[The NLRB report was released while The CIO NEWS was going to press. A more complete summary of the Board's findings will appear in next week's issue.]

CIO Charges Green, Bosses In Conspiracy

WASHINGTON, Apr. 15.—President William Green of the AFL, the National Association of Manufacturers and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce have entered into a "definite conspiracy" to smash the Wagner Labor Relations Act, the CIO charged this week in a leaflet sent to every member of Congress.

Released just as hearings on Wagner Act amendments started before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, the CIO accused "anti-union manufacturers and certain leaders of the AFL" of attempting to "break down the act which protects labor's rights for the purpose of making it serve their own special selfish interests."

The charge of "conspiracy" is based on a comparison between the amendments demanded by the N. A. M. and the Chamber of Commerce, and the proposed amendments in the Walsh bill, sponsored by Green, which are declared to be "startlingly similar."

ALMOST IDENTICAL

The CIO statement notes that the proposals of the NAM, the Chamber of Commerce and William Green are almost identical in regard to employer expressions to influence their employes' choice of a union; giving employers the right to call for elections; bringing in the courts to interfere with the administration of the act, and in a number of other respects.

It notes further that Senator Burke, "whose amendments follow in the line of the NAM," agrees with Green on the subject of craft amendments.

In joining with the NAM and Chamber of Commerce to break down present protections against company unions and other employer-favored types of organization, the CIO statement says that "the AFL leaders are perhaps shortsighted."

NO GUARANTEE

"They expect employer influence, as a part of the deal, to be used on behalf of their organizations, whereas they have no guarantee it will not be used to break down all forms of union organization."

The NAM and Chamber of Commerce do not represent the interests of employers who have accepted the Wagner Act, the CIO statement declares. If their amendments are passed, it says, "they will disturb existing collective bargaining relations in many industries, create disorder and confusion in the whole matter of labor relations, and promote industrial strife in place of industrial peace."

DOES NOT REPRESENT LABOR

William Green similarly does not represent the sentiments of the AFL membership, the CIO claims, citing evidence of their desire to defend the present Wagner Act.

The NAM, C. of C. and Walsh-Green amendments, it says, "represent in fact a conspiracy on the part of selfish, minority interests against fair employers, against labor and against the welfare of the general public."

The CIO leaflet, entitled "Conspiracy Against Labor's Rights", may be obtained from the Publicity Department, CIO, 1106 Connecticut Ave, Washington, D. C. It sells in quantities of 100 for 45c; 500 for $2.00; 1,000 for $3.75.

New York, Apr. 15—All locals of the International Fur Workers are preparing for the thirteenth biennial convention to be held at the Hotel President, Atlantic City, N. J., beginning May 7. The IFW has a total membership of more than 45,000.

CIO Hits Pay Law Changes

Washington, D. C., Apr. 15—Proposed employer amendments to the Fair Labor Standards Act were denounced by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, in letters to Mrs. Mary Norton, chairman of the House Labor Committee and to Senator Ebert Thomas, chairman of the Senate Education and Labor Committee.

Referring to the amendments proposed in House Bill 5435 and Senate Bill 2008, Pressman said:

EMPLOYERS BENEFIT

"Practically every one of these amendments are for the benefit of employers and constitute an attempt to relax the standards of the law in order to meet claimed cases of hardship on the part of employers.

"There is no attempt made by these amendments to strengthen certain provisions of the wage-hour law necessary to secure for workers the protection which the law purportedly confers upon them.

"We feel that no attempt should be made to amend this important piece of labor legislation without holding hearings at which all interested parties will be given a full opportunity to discuss the proposed amendments."

Pressman asked that a definite time be set for hearings, and that the CIO be allowed to express its views on changing the law.

Machinists Union Raps AFL Policy On Wagner Act

WASHINGTON, Apr. 15. — The International Association of Machinists, AFL, is in disagreement with the top leadership of the executive council in its drive to destroy the Wagner Act through amendments. Early last month, Vice-President Laudemann wrote to John P. Frey warning him of the dangers to labor contained in the proposed amendments backed by Green.

This month the Machinists Union has made its reply to resulting charges of "disloyalty" to the AFL, pointing out several things of interest to the AFL and the entire labor movement in doing so. The reply is contained in the leading editorial of the current issue of the Machinists Monthly Journal, official IAM organ.

The editorial declares that the union officers had no opportunity to examine the amendments before they were submitted to Congress. Changes were discussed at the Houston convention of the AFL, the editorial says, and a committee appointed to draw them up on the lines suggested by the convention.

"When the committee appointed to prepare the amendments made them public," the editorial says, "the officers of the IAM found themselves in disagreement with some of the proposed amendments, and so stated their position in a letter addressed to John P. Frey, president of the Metal Trades Dept. of the AFL."

CONSTRUCTIVE CRITICISM

"The IAM is and always has been loyal to the AFL. However, its officers, who had no opportunity to examine the proposed amendments before they were submitted to Congress, respectfully made known their objections to certain language contained therein."

"The IAM has no quarrel with the AFL," the editorial repeats. "Its criticism of the proposed amendments was of a constructive character, offered in a most friendly spirit, and the IAM should not be condemned in its endeavor, by legitimate and fair means, to influence those in charge of the measure to accept the changes it proposes.

"Surely no fair-minded persons will find fault with such action and declare it inimical to the best interests of the organized labor movement as represented by the AFL."

AFL Hotel Union Hails WagnerAct

Washington, Apr. 15.—The Hotel and Restaurant Employes, third largest AFL international, reminded Congress this week that it is still opposed to all changes in the Wagner Act, in a letter sent to the House Labor Committee by James McNamara, international vice-president.

The letter recalled the resolution adopted at the 21st convention of the union in San Francisco last summer, "to the effect that the enemies of labor are seeking to deprive labor of its right to organize and bargain collectively without employer interference, and that they will seek to accomplish their purpose by introducing in Congress legislation to amend and emasculate the Wagner Act."

"This is to remind you of the position of our international union, the third largest in the AFL, and to state that we are opposed to the proposed amendments and changes in the Wagner Labor Act."

Gulfport AFL Lauds Act

Gulfport, Miss., Apr. 15—AFL workers in the Central Labor Union here have joined the growing number of AFL groups opposed to any changes in the Wagner Act, in a letter sent to state AFL Secretary J. C. Bullock.

BE ON GUARD!

Look for the union label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America when buying men's and boys' clothing, overalls, shirts, undergarments, neckties, lumber jackets, gloves, and all other kinds of men's wearing apparel.

The Amalgamated Label is your guarantee that the articles you buy are of the best workmanship and produced under one hundred percent union conditions by members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

By insisting on the Amalgamated Label you will help to guard against a return of sweatshop conditions to the industry. By helping the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America you help the labor movement generally.

Ask for the Amalgamated label on each part of the suit, coat, pants and vest. There are different Amalgamated labels for coats, pants, vests, shirts and undergarments, work clothes, neckwear and gloves.

Negotiate Soon, Union Warns Armour & Co.

CHICAGO, Apr. 15.—Pres. R. H. Cabell of the powerful Armour meat packing firm was today studying a demand from the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee that he enter contract negotiations with the CIO union by May 10.

Representatives of 18 Armour locals of the PWOC, meeting here, authorized their national officers and bargaining representatives to take any steps necessary to win the Armour contract.

Four locals unable to send delegates—Los Angeles, New York, Providence, R. I., and Spokane, Wash.—sent telegrams to the meeting pledging support to whatever decisions might be made.

CERTIFIED

The PWOC has already been certified by the National Labor Relations Board as the sole collective bargaining agent in every one of the big packing firm's plants, which are scattered in every section of the country.

Van A. Bittner, PWOC chairman, who has been active in negotiations for a new coal mine contract, was unable to attend. He wired the delegates that a "loyal, determined membership supporting the policy of the PWOC, your national and local officers, will guarantee success for a national contract with Armour & Co."

PWOC Director Don Harris urged the union officials to build strong discipline among the membership in order to avoid provocation by company agents who may seek to force premature strikes aimed at weakening the organization.

A strongly-worded resolution condemned un-American and anti-union Armour policies, and charged the company with numerous instances of coercion and intimidation, as well as stabbings and shootings.

Beg Pardon

The Labor and the Law column in the Apr. 10 issue of The CIO NEWS stated that Judge William Kirkpatrick of the Federal District Court in Philadelphia erred in ruling the anti-trust law applies to labor unions in the Apex Hosiery case.

Judge Kirkpatrick had originally ruled that the anti-trust law was inapplicable in the case, but had been over-ruled by the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Order Strike Against Six Tanker Fleets

New York, Apr. 15.—Failure of six oil tanker companies employing some 8,000 men to renew a contract after five weeks of negotiations caused the National Maritime Union today to begin preparations for a strike called for midnight, April 17.

After exhausting every possible means of reaching a peaceful settlement, the CIO union declared it was forced to break off negotiations because of the arbitrary stand taken by the oil tanker operators who refused "to recognize the basic principles of union rights and to consider any wage increases or proposals for better living and working conditions."

The companies involved are: Standard Oil of New Jersey, Socony Vacuum, Gulf Refining, Pennsylvania Shipping, Tidewater Oil and C. D. Mallory.

Pontiac CIO Keeps Black Legion Off Police Force

By SWANSON C. SHIELDS

PONTIAC, Mich., Apr. 15.—CIO unions in Pontiac strengthened democracy in this city recently by crushing the attempt of three ex-Black Legion leaders to win reinstatement on the local police department from which they were ousted two years ago for membership in the murderous cult.

When a Circuit Court Judge ordered the trio of cultists returned to their old jobs, CIO members in Pontiac immediately launched an "anti-Black Legion drive." Aided by other progressive groups, the CIO'ers exerted such tremendous pressure that the city council appealed the case to the Michigan State Supreme Court.

BLOW TO TERRORISTS

A few days ago the high tribunal ruled that membership in the Black Legion barred the three officers from police work. The decision — a crushing blow against the terroristic band—was hailed as a victory for the Pontiac CIO affiliated unions.

If Pontiac labor under the banner of the CIO had not blocked the apparent latest effort of the Black Legion to recapture power in local government, it is likely that other former public officials removed from office in the grand jury probe three years ago would have been instated.

LIKE HITLER

Pontiac was the hotbed of the Black Legion, the hooded cult that waged violence on Catholics, Jews, Negroes and trade unionists. Patterned after the same underground organizations that paved the way for the rise of power of Hitler and Mussolini, the Black Legion was a fascist-inspired movement bent on overthrowing the United States government.

Close to 40 prominent officials in city and county government—including the chief of police—were exposed as ringleaders of the Black Legion. Most of them were later removed from office, either by court action or at the polls.

Although outlawed following the grand jury investigation, it was common knowledge that the Black Legion was never completely dissolved and the effort of the three ex-policemen to regain their jobs was considered a "trial case."

Had they won, the Black Legion would have again been in a position to grab the reins of the local government as it did several years ago. But this time they had a militant CIO with which to reckon.

USED BY MAGNATES

Disclosure that Pontiac industrialists had used the Black Legion as a weapon to beat labor into submission was among the startling evidence uncovered by the grand jury. Kidnapping and flogging of a Negro labor leader, the burning of a workers' social center and other acts of violence against unions were traced to the night-riding band.

Plan 'Work Camp' For Refugees

New York, Apr. 15—Young refugees from foreign dictatorships will attend a four-week summer "Work Camp for Democracy" at West Park, N. Y., on the Hudson, according to plans announced last week by Algernon Black, chairman of the camp's executive committee.

American as well as foreign youth, both men and women, will be enrolled, including college students, trade unionists and representatives of Negro youth organizations.

AT BRYN MAWR

The camp will be located at the new home of the Bryn Mawr Summer School for Workers, which will be in session earlier in the summer. The camp will be held from Aug. 7 to Sept. 4.

The students who will be restricted to 60, will have opportunities to work, study and play together. A number of projects will be undertaken, such as making an athletic field and improving the buildings, to contribute toward making West Park a permanent center for workers education.

Cost of the four weeks session will be $65. A limited number of scholarships will be available, the committee announced. Inquiries about the school may be addressed either to the Intercollegiate Committee to Aid Student Refugees, 100 East 42nd St., New York City, or to Mr. Black, Society for Ethical Culture, 2 West 64th St., New York City.

Seek Two W. Virginia Steel Pacts

Charleston, W. Va., Apr. 15—Negotiations between the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and two important steel fabrication companies were under way here today.

Following a 218-190 Labor Board election victory at the American Fork & Hoe Co., the company agreed to meet with the union. Organization of the plant had been supervised by Pres. John Easton of the West Virginia Industrial Union Council.

Shortly after the victory at the polls, employes of the Midwest Steel Corp. formed an SWOC lodge and won recognition from the management.

Ask $800,000,000 For U. S. Housing

WASHINGTON, Apr. 15. — The United States Housing Authority should be granted the right to authorize another $800,000,000 in loans to further its slum clearance and low-cost home building drive, Administrator Nathan Straus told the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

Some 180,000 new homes will be constructed if Congress votes the funds, Straus said. He pointed out that during the past three months, four new states have passed legislation making them eligible for USHA loans, and similar bills are being pushed in five other states.

"Unless additional funds are made available, those states which enact legislation this year cannot enter the program and would be penalized," he pointed out.

Private contractors, Straus told the committee, have admitted that "private enterprise cannot earn profits by construction to meet the housing needs of the lowest income group."

Textile Union Names McMahon To Post

New York, Apr. 15.—Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers from 1921 to 1937 and state labor commissioner of Rhode Island for the past two years, has been appointed a national representative of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, by Emil Rieve, executive director.

As former president of the United Textile Workers, McMahon was one of the eight original founders of the CIO. He has been in the labor movement for 40 years and served in various official positions before being elected head of the UTW.

According to Rieve's announcement, McMahon will serve in New England for the present, being directly responsible to the national TWOC office. He lives at Cranston, R. I.

Remove Pickets In Coast Truce

San Francisco, Apr. 15 — Pickets have been removed from the Alaska salmon industry shipyards here pending the result of negotiations now in progress. If the conferences show signs of bogging down, the pickets will be restored, the Maritime Federation of the Pacific declared.

Six fish packing plants in Benicia, Contra Costa county, employing 400 men, are closed because employers refused to renew their contracts with the fishermen, alleging a jurisdictional dispute between CIO fishermen and AFL fish handlers as the reason.

The CIO union declares that this is merely a trumped up excuse to keep from signing a contract, as the AFL union has no appreciable representation among the workers.

New Orleans Priest Defends CIO, Assails Critics

NEW ORLEANS, Apr. 15.—Vigorous support for the CIO and denial that it is in any way un-American came today from Father James A. Drolet in an article appearing in the New Orleans States, a local daily paper usually anti-CIO in its attitude.

Answering charges that the CIO is "Communistic", Father Drolet said: "I feel that I am pretty well acquainted with the pronouncements of Catholic authorities on labor and on the CIO in particular, and your unfavorable comment on that union is completely at variance with their statements relative to it.

"Msgr. John Ryan of Catholic University and Msgr. Haas, director of the school of social science at Catholic University, and many other similarly competent leaders in that field, disagree with you and recommend the CIO and have defended it time and again against charges similar to those which you state or insinuate.

NOT COMMUNISTS

"Neither Lewis himself, nor Hillman are Communists; other officials such as Carey, Brophy and Kennedy are good, sound practical Catholics who are simply better read up on Catholic social teachings than the average editor of our great dailies."

Father Drolet goes on to tell what the CIO really is: "The CIO is a straight trade union movement along industrial lines rather than along craft lines, holding firmly to the principles of private property for all, and the ordinary democratic decencies which are denied to many in our advanced era in America. Neither in principles nor in leadership can it be intelligently charged with being Communistic."

HAS HELPED UNIONS

During the big CIO teamster strike here last year, Father Drolet actively aided the CIO workers. In reply to attacks on the local CIO, he said, "You accuse the CIO locally of being guilty of undemocratic practices. You are careful not to mention any specific cases. There were none such.

"The undemocratic stuff was all pulled off by the AFL, which you seem to like not a little. The AFL has been using all sorts of gangster stuff in order to keep up its racketeer and undemocratic character in and around New Orleans since the start of the CIO."

Father Drolet added, "Your paper was despicable all during the teamster strike. Your headlines tried to foment CIO violence and when the AFL alone perpetrated violence, you hushed it up or even made it appear that the CIO had committed it."

The New Orleans Industrial Union Council publicly thanked Father Drolet for "the stand he is taking to bring about a true picture of the labor movement in New Orleans."

Plan Meeting In Denver To Protect Act

Denver, Colo., Apr. 15. — The Wagner Act Defense Committee is planning a mass meeting here on April 23 to protest proposed amendments in Congress.

"Employers are trying to take away the workers' one protection by amending the Act to make it possible to use the power of the federal government to regiment workers into unions of the employers' choosing," the Committee said in calling the meeting.

Grace Church and Community Center, the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers (CIO), Machinists Local 47 (AFL), Packinghouse Workers Local 21 (CIO) and American Federation of Teachers Local 559 (AFL) are among the groups helping the Wagner Act Defense Committee.

Msgr. Ryan Raps Wagner Act Foes

Washington., Apr. 17. — The Right Reverend Msgr. John A. Ryan, Director of the Social Action department of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, announced his opposition to amendments to the Wagner Act last week.

Father Ryan said:

"I am opposed to all the changes in the National Labor Relations Act which have been proposed by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and by Senator Burke, for it seems to me that these modifications would deprive the Act in greater or less degree of the power which it was intended to have, that is, to give labor an adequate opportunity to organize, to carry on effective collective bargaining, and to be represented in collective bargaining by its own freely chosen representatives."

Ruling Hits Gas Company

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Apr. 15—The Brooklyn Union Gas Co. was found to have violated the Wagner Labor Relations Act in a ruling handed down by a Labor Board trial examiner today.

He found that 28 members of Local 142, Utility Workers Organizing Committee, had been discharged for union activities, and recommended their reinstatement with full back pay. The amount totals about $150,000.

CIO Radio Union Files Charge Against Westinghouse

WASHINGTON, Apr. 15.—Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., second largest corporation in its field, has been charged with violation of the Wagner Act in a complaint filed with the National Labor Relations Board by the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

The union charged the company with refusing to bargain in good faith, refused to enter into a written agreement with the UERMW and adopted a "dilatory course of conduct in negotiations."

Decision to press NLRB charges against Westinghouse was unanimously voted at a meeting of representatives of locals in the company's plants, and was later ratified by the UERMW general executive board.

The case is expected to be important because it is based solely on the refusal of the company to sign a contract, and contains no accompanying features of discrimination or discharge of employes.

Uruguay Confab Helps Strengthen Democracy Throughout Americas

By JACK O'DONOHUE

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay. — Several hundred delegates from both the western hemispheres gathered here late in March for the International Congress of American Democracies. Among the delegates was Miss Kathryn Lewis, daughter and secretary of CIO Pres. John L. Lewis.

Miss Lewis was chief of the American delegation to the meeting, and was elected one of the congress' vice-presidents. On her trip back to the United States, she will visit various countries in South and Central America in order to get first-hand reports on their labor situations.

DISCUSSED CIVIL LIBERTIES

The congress met less than three months after the Pan-American Conference at Lima, where matters relating to labor were considerably hushed. On the agenda of the Montevideo meeting were many subjects discussed at Lima by the government representatives, but the main point of interest was the discussion of political and social trends affecting civil liberties, democratic institutions and labor organizations.

The problem of maintaining peace, the recent development of fascist penetration and the possibilities for united action by labor in the Americas were important points on the congress program.

Considering the fact that the delegates represented rank-and-file movements which have suffered the effects of economic and political depression, it can be taken for granted that the results will be of vital interest to the people in both the United States and Latin America.

The organization of the Montevideo congress was largely in the hands of prominent Uruguayan progressives, some of whom have helped to create the social legislation for which Uruguay is so well-known.

Delegations were present from Argentina and Chile, where labor is still able to work for better conditions. Other representatives from Cuba, Venezuela, Mexico, Peru and Colombia gave reports on conditions in their countries, where labor's status ranges all the way from open and militant action with full enjoyment of civil rights to complete suppression.

Particular point was given to the labor discussions through the fact that during its closing sessions, word came from Venezuela that labor unions in that country had been banned.

EXCHANGED KNOWLEDGE

American labor's growing interest—and representation—in meetings like this will inevitably bring a broader understanding of the problems which labor faces in the Americas. The personal contacts and confidence which grow out of congresses will make up to some extent for the lack of channels for the exchange of information among the various labor movements.

At the present time labor leaders in the United States do not have at their disposal any agency which will report to them accurately and frequently on labor developments among our southern neighbors. This is in sharp contrast with practices in the fields of education, science, agriculture, trade, finance, and manufacturing, where agencies supported by public funds handle this important function

Textile Union To Resist Speed-Up

New York, Apr. 15.—Union delegates from locals of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee in 11 velvet centers decided last week at a conference with national TWOC leaders, to contest any attempts to increase the work-load in the velvet industry.

The TWOC representatives expressed the conviction that Cheney Bros., Manchester, Conn., which has announced it will increase the loom-load in its velvet branch from two to four looms beginning April 17, is being used as a spearhead in the campaign by other manufacturers to increase the loom-load.

The CIO union, which has a contract with Cheney Bros., is demanding that the company arbitrate the matter.

MORE VACATIONS

New York—(FP) — Organized labor's drive for vacations with pay in union contracts has proved remarkably successful, judging from the results of a survey conducted by the National Industrial Conference Board.

LABOR BOARD OPPOSES AMENDING WAGNER ACT

The News In Brief

Coal

New York. — Pres. John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers threatened a nation-wide shutdown of the entire coal industry if bituminous mine operators persist in their lockout, aimed at weakening the union.

Security

Washington.—The CIO Social Security Committee has suggested a 6-point program of changes to liberalize the federal social security act.

Liberalism

Washington. — A definite swing back to the New Deal is seen by Labor's Non-Partisan League as the keynote of recent city elections throughout the country.

Bargains

New York.—The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. defeated in a long court case, has started to bargain collectively with the CIO union of its agents.

Convention

Utah Industrial Union Council, Park City, Utah, Apr. 26.

New York Unions Aid Labor Act

New York, Apr. 21.—Hundreds of labor leaders, from shop stewards to international presidents, met at the Hotel Center today for an emergency conference aimed at strengthening the "Save the Wagner Act" campaign.

Vice-Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO; City Councilman Michael Quill, who heads the Transport Workers Union; Allen Haywood and Gustave Strebel, chairman and secretary of the state's Industrial Union Council; Elmer Brown, president of the Big Six Local of the AFL Intl. Typographical Union; and the Rev. John P. Boland, chairman of the State Labor Relations Board, addressed the gathering.

Representatives of both AFL and CIO unions were present.

"You know all about the conspiracy afoot to amend the Wagner Act to death," the call to the meeting said. "An immediate marshalling of all labor's forces is essential to prevent this calamity."

QUICK STRIKE

Sea-Going Picket Line

Naturally enough, striking members of the National Maritime Union take their picket lines right on to the water. Frank Stockmal (with megaphone) shouts a message about the NMU's strike to the crew of an incoming oil tanker on the Delaware River at Philadelphia. Seaman Frank Glassman is at the rudder.

Mid-Continent Oil Frames Strikers; Uses Finks

TULSA, Okla., Apr. 22. — Indictment of 140 members of the Oil Workers' International Union, Local 217, on conspiracy charges by the Tulsa county grand jury in connection with the Mid-Continent Petroleum corporation strike was interpreted here as another brazen step by corporation dominated politicians in prostituting the law and legal procedure to destroy effectiveness of unionization.

Among those indicted was Jack N. Hays, president of Local 217. Hays and other union leaders were named in the conspiracy charges. Others were accused of unlawful assembly and directing a riot.

The grand jury report said a "mob collected inside the Mid-Continent and held the property for some six hours."

The wholesale indictment was not unexpected by union leaders. It had been apparent from the day the grand jury was called that it would be used as a weapon against the union.

LOP-SIDED JURY

The jury was dominated by Dixie Gilmer, county attorney, according to those who were in contact with the hearings. Gilmer is a member of the Tulsa county political machine which has been accused of political collusion with Mid-Continent.

A list of the names of the grand jurors indicates the lop-sided role in which it played to discredit striking oil workers.

Heading the list as foreman was Frank W. Johnson, tax agent for the Oklahoma Pipe Line company. Other oil company executives and corporation officials who served were Lewis P. Myers, Oil operator; Rus Stamper, sales manager for a Tulsa Oil company; E. F. Moran, drilling contractor; H J. Klinger, operator of a mill works; Frank H. Mathey, machine company president; Roy R. Rush, salesman; C. B. Morton, sales manager of a supply company; Joe Leder, a barber; V. G. James, warehouseman; L. L. Jones, salesman, and W. C. Bunn, listed as a trucker.

'Liberty League Decision'

Washington, Apr. 22 — The American Newspaper Publishers Assn., trade body for the big boys in the history, was sharply criticized this week by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, for its interpretation of a Wage Hour ruling on newsboys.

Elisha Hanson, association mouthpiece and bitter-end foe of trade unionism, claimed that the ruling exempted all newsboys from the Wage Hour law except those that actually came to the plant for their papers.

"This interpretation by the publishers is just another 'ruling' like the one in which the notorious 58 lawyers of the Liberty League long ago declared the Wagner Act unconstitutional—without consulting the Supreme Court," Pressman said.

Pressman advised CIO affiliates that the CIO considers all newsboys employed by newspapers to be under the section of the act forbidding child labor. The CIO will ask for a re-definition of the Wage and Hour ruling.

Madden On Stand 3 Days

WASHINGTON, Apr. 22—J. Warren Madden, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, sees no need for amendments to the Wagner Act at this time.

Appearing before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, he read a long statement which showed evidence of careful preparation, and answered innumerable questions from committee members. Senators Taft of Ohio, Ellender of Louisiana and Holt of West Virginia, all of them foes of the Act and of the CIO, did most of the cross-examination.

Their questions were easily taken in stride by the NLRB head, however, and the persistent attempt to show that the Labor Board has given preference for the CIO wilted under the barrage of facts which Madden had at his finger tips.

Madden told the committee that the people who most want to amend the Act are those who are the most outspoken foes of the labor unions.

He said that the Board felt that four minor changes in its procedure might be worthy of consideration, but flatly denied that the Walsh-Green or Burke amendments could have any effect but to harm the nation's workers.

To nullify the Act's effectiveness, he asserted, would be to destroy the workers' newly-found liberties, and would scarcely provide a fitting celebration for the 150th anniversary of the Bill of Rights.

Call Gulf Unfair To Union

Toledo, Apr. 22.—The Gulf Refining Co. will be faced with a "state of non-production" before many more months have passed unless it executes an about-face and agrees to deal with Local 346 of the Intl. Oil Workers Union.

This was the warning given by Clyde Shamblen, president of the local. He said:

"We have attempted to convince the company to bargain in good faith and enter into an agreement with the union since May, 1937.

DICTATOR POLICIES

"At each meeting the company agreed to bargain until an agreement was reached, only to change its mind later by attempting to foster upon us a dictatorial employer-employe relations policy."

CIO Backs Housing Fund Plea

Washington, Apr. 22.—The CIO Housing Committee today urged all CIO unions to support a proposed amendment to the U. S. Housing Act which would allow the Housing Authority to borrow and lend for low-cost housing projects up to $800,000,000.

Anthony Wayne Smith, executive secretary of the CIO Housing Committee, asked all CIO affiliates to write to their Congressmen and Senators requesting favorable action on these bills.

He pointed out that it is necessary to act quickly because the proposed amendments will be discussed in the Senate in the next few days and very soon afterward in the House.

CIO Union Saves Pay Rate for Boys

Washington, Apr. 22—Prompt action by the American Communications Assn., CIO, has saved thousands of telegraph company messenger boys from going back to the $4.00 weekly wage scale in effect before the wage-hour law was passed.

The threatened cut came in the form of an amendment the companies tried to sneak by the House Labor Committee which would have exempted the messengers from the act.

Telegrams and letters from ACA members aided by joint action with the Commercial Telegraphers Union, AFL, induced the committee members to withdraw the amendment after it had passed almost unnoticed.

Plan Party

Philadelphia, Apr. 22.—Three parties for the price of one is the way the Philadelphia Newspaper Guild is describing its fifth anniversary party in Town Hall on May 13.

Three separate bands will be on the job, and numerous stage and radio stars have promised to entertain.

Invitation

"Will you join your striking employes at dinner Wednesday night at 6:30 at the basement of strike headquarters, 188 West Randolph St., serving stew, bread, butter, coffee, and address the group briefly on 'Labor Pains.'"

Priest Urges Fight On Intolerance

Erie, Pa., Apr. 22—Catholics should not let themselves be stampeded by the reactionary wave that is forming throughout the nation today, and must at all costs avoid anti-Semitism, Father Charles O. Rice of Pittsburgh declared at a rally here.

"A definite wave of reaction is sweeping the country and it will not do for Catholics to be stampeded into a herd-like following of this trend," Father Rice said.

"Among the nastiest features of this reactionary surge," he said, "is a pronounced anti-Semitism. Anti-Semitism is stupid, vicious and un-Catholic.

All Nations' Workers Send Help to Chile

By JACK O'DONOHUE

American labor solidarity has been shown recently by the support given the Chilean labor unions in their effort to cooperate with the government of that republic to rebuild the provinces striken by the recent earthquake. Relief committees have been set up in Mexico, Argentina and Cuba, to mention only a few. These committees are collecting funds and, what is perhaps more important, are explaining the importance of backing up Chilean labor at this particular time.

The present administration of President Pedro Aguirre Cerda is the first ever elected in that country with the open and solid support of the labor unions. In spite of the efforts of reactionaries, union ranks held fast under the leadership of the Chilean Confederation of Workers (Confederacion de Trabajadores de Chile).

They supported a program of better living conditions, higher income for the workers of field and factory, fairer tax laws, and control of the corporations, banks and shipping companies that had run the country for years.

BIG TASK AHEAD

To carry through such a program under normal conditions would have been hard enough. But the shock that killed and injured over 100,000 people, destroying millions of dollars worth of property, placed a double burden on the friends of the government.

Besides going ahead with the program on which he was elected, Aguirre Cerda has to relieve suffering, get the wheels of industry turning and the six provinces rebuilt from the ground up. His enemies in the Chilean Congress have been trying to hamstring him on both counts, hoping that the people will get disgusted with everything, including labor, and turn to the reactionaries for help.

So far, the government has held its own. Important laws in which labor has a big stake have been passed. The plan for economic reconstruction has been drafted and, it is hoped, will soon be in operation. And it also begins to look as if the big corporations will have to pay a greater portion of their huge earnings into the national treasury.

CHILE'S NEW DEAL

From all this, labor stands to benefit.

Chile's labor laws have had a reputation for liberality but they have not been properly enforced by previous governments, some of which have been out-and-out dictatorships. The attempt to enforce these laws, which are similar in many ways to the laws in the United States which protect the right of the worker to organize and to seek better conditions, will arouse the enemies of labor not only in Chile but outside as well.

The answer which American labor, north and south, has given is expressed in the earthquake relief which is now being carried on. Contacts established in this way, strengthened by personal visits like that of Miss Kathryn Lewis, who is now in Santiago, will go a long way to show that labor is marching shoulder to shoulder from Canada to the Straits of Magellan.

Ken Says AFL Leaders 'Scared' by CIO Charge Of Tory Conspiracy

WASHINGTON, Apr. 22.—New grounds for the CIO contention that proposals to amend the Wagner Act coming from President Green of the AFL, the National Association of Manufacturers and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce come from the same litter of anti-unionism are seen in current stories of close collaboration among all three.

The latest story comes from Ken Magazine, which has just published a paragraph to the effect that "AFL leaders are scared stiff of John L. Lewis' threat to make documented exposure of a direct connection between John P. Frey, Joseph Padway and other AFL bigwigs and the NAM in a 'conspiracy' to rewrite the Wagner Act, amend the life out of it."

NOBODY KNOWS

AFL leaders are scared. according to Ken, and they "are exhibiting guilty consciences: recent executive council meetings have been taken up to a great extent with alibi-ing themselves and each other, and whistling in the dark generally."

The magazine goes on to point out that many AFL internationals, even craft unions, are strongly opposed to the amendments sponsored by Pres. Green through Senator Walsh of Massachusetts.

Transit Union Gives Safety Awards

New York, Apr. 22.—Twenty-nine employes of New York transit lines have received awards from the Transport Workers Union for having contributed the best suggestions for the promotion of greater safety and courtesy in the operation of the transportation systems.

Lieut.-Gov. Charles Poletti, President of the City Council, Newbold Morris and Judge William O'Dwyer presented the awards at the TWU's annual spring dance. The TWU campaign, aimed at helping World's Fair visitors to the city, has won widespread praise from civic leaders.

Lots of Mouths to Feed

Oil workers, their wives and children flock into the dining hall run by Local 217 of the Oil Workers International Union in West Tulsa, Okla. The local has been on strike at the plant of the Mid-Continent Petroleum Corp., refiners of DX gasoline, since December 22.

Scab Reporters Cover Chisox, Cubs' Games For Hearst Papers

CHICAGO, Apr. 22.—When the Chicago Cubs and White Sox hit the road this week, their games will be covered for the Hearst-owned American and Herald-Examiner by scab reporters, the Chicago Newspaper Guild today warned trade unionists and baseball fans.

NEAR FIFTH MONTH

The Guild strike at the two papers was still going strong as it reached its 140th day, with advertising still falling far below last year's levels.

Goldblatt's, chain department store which has aided Hearst by carrying large ads in the two publications, received labor's answer last week when unions picketed five of the stores—two of them in Chicago, and others in Gary and Hammond, Ind., and Joliet, Ill. Steel workers, packinghouse workers, farm equipment workers, oil workers and seamen helped swell the quintet of picket lines.

Angered by the display of union strength, the store management sought restraining orders in the two Indiana cities, and joined the Hearst anti-handbill fight in Chicago itself.

BIG LOSS

In the first ten days of April, a Guild statement revealed, the papers have dropped a total of 374,716 lines of advertising as compared with the same period last year. "Conservatively estimated," the Guild said, "the lineage loss to the struck papers totals up to $949,075 in lost revenue.

Further Coal Shutdown Due May 5

Strike Hits Four Oil Tank Lines

New York, Apr. 22—The employers' front cracked in the first day of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union strike against oil tanker operators on the east coast, when all but four signed contracts with the workers. Six thousand men are involved.

The strike was caused by refusal of the shipowners to bargain with the union on the preferential hiring system. This point, designed to put an end to finkhalls and favoritism in hiring seamen, is the major issue in the struggle.

CIO SUPPORT

Full CIO support for the strike was announced in Washington by National Director John Brophy, who wrote to NMU President Curran that the whole force of the CIO would back the seamen in their fight for union conditions.

President Curran described the situation when he said: "The union is seeking to do away completely with an old evil in the maritime industry—the crimping system. For the past 65 years the seamen have been victimized by notorious shipping masters, shipping crimps and boarding houses of ill repute."

MAY NAME BENSON

Washington—Rumors here say that President Roosevelt will name former Farmer-Labor Governor Elmer Benson of Minnesota to the Interstate Commerce Commission in the place of former Rep. Thomas Amlie, who asked that his name be withdrawn when tory critics raised a vicious red-scare drive against him.

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York (third from left) joins coal contract negotiators in an effort to reach a formula which will end the operators' lockout of 320,000 bituminous miners. Left to right: Walter Robinson, conference chairman; Charles O'Neill, operators' spokesman; LaGuardia; and President John L. Lewis of the UMW.

High Court Upholds NLRB

Washington, Apr. 22.—The National Labor Relations Board has won another case before the U. S. Supreme Court.

The high court ruled that the NLRB has jurisdiction over firms engaged in the processing of materials belonging to other companies or individuals. In so doing, it over-ruled a decision of the third federal circuit court of appeals.

TAILORED CLOTHING

The issue was presented in the case of Benjamin and Marjorie Feinblatt of New Jersey, who tailored various types of sports clothing for the Lee Sportswear Co. in New York City. Materials were shipped from the New York outfit to the Feinblatt firm, tailored and then shipped back.

H. Warrum, Mine Union Counsel, Dies

Washington, Apr. 22—Henry Warrum, chief counsel of the United Mine Workers of America for 41 years, died in Emergency Hospital here on April 18. He was 71 years old.

Leaders of the United Mine Workers and of the CIO attended his funeral on Thursday. Offices of both organizations were closed on the afternoon of the final rites.

CIO Pres. John L. Lewis spoke at the funeral.

BORN IN 1867

Born in Greenfield, Ind., in 1867, Mr. Warrum attended DePauw University and later attended the University of Michigan Law School.

Mr. Warrum represented the UMW in scores of important cases in all parts of the country. He fought injunctions and yellow dog contract suits, which were used as weapons to prevent organization of the workers.

In Washington he actively assisted in the passage of the National Recovery Act, the Wagner Act, the Guffey Coal Bill and other labor legislation.

Met Life Bargains With Union

New York, Apr. 22—Metropolitan Life, biggest insurance company in the world, has agreed to negotiate with the Industrial Insurance Agents Union of the CIO United Office and Professional Workers.

The opening of negotiations climaxes a two-year struggle by the CIO union to win recognition from the major insurance companies. One year ago the 2,500 agents employed by Metropolitan in the greater New York area selected Local 30 of the UOPWA as their sole collective bargaining agent in a Labor Board election.

The company resisted the consequent Labor Board order to bargain with the union by appealing to the courts. Its agreement to negotiate follows a New York State Supreme Court decision upholding the Board.

Union charges are pending before the Labor Board against Metropolitan, including domination of a company union, known as the Employes Fidelity Organization; intimidation of union members and discharge of 33 men for their membership in the UOPWA.

Sign Pact, Operators Warned

NEW YORK, Apr. 22. — A complete shutdown of the nation's bituminous coal mines threatens on May 5th, unless mine operators come to terms with the United Mine Workers before that date.

The necessary 15-day notice ending special agreements outside the Appalachian area was given Thursday.

Miners in Alabama and a number of mid-western states have been working under terms of the old agreement, while some 320,000 Appalachian bituminous miners have been idle since they were locked out on April 1. Previously Pres. John L. Lewis had indicated that the anthracite miners, just starting to negotiate a new contract, might also be called out.

The announcement of the serving of notice was made by Vice-Pres. Philip Murray. Lewis has charged that the operators, by stubbornly resisting the union's demand for elimination of a one-sided strike penalty clause, are attempting to weaken the UMW, the country's largest labor organization.

Lewis quoted Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York, who has been trying to mediate the dispute, as saying the disputed penalty clause "almost is murder" as far as the workers are concerned.

CONCILIATORS PRESENT

While the U. S. Department of Labor Conciliation Service rushed its chief, John Steelman, to the conferences here, additional reports from all sections of the country showed that the accelerating coal shortage will soon be near the crisis stage. Railroads, government offices, utilities and manufacturers have little coal left on hand as a result of the lockout. The Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio Railroads, which have extensive trackage in the coal areas and the adjoining industrial regions, reported a marked slump in business.

ANTHRACITE NEGOTIATIONS

Meanwhile, as the bituminous conferences remained stalled, Lewis and Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy appeared at the opening session of the anthracite contract negotiations, which affect about 100,000 miners, most of them in Pennsylvania.

The hard coal miners, whose present agreement expires at the end of this month, are demanding a reduction of the work-week to 30 hours; a guarantee of 200 days' work a year; equal division of work; seniority; and increases in the present wage scale.

WOULD DAMAGE UMW

At a press conference following another of the fruitless meetings with the bituminous operators, Lewis pointed out that the operators' counter-proposal would "create a condition of encouraging members of the UMWA to resign from that union, and of agents provocaturs deliberately stirring up trouble so miners could be penalized by reason of their acts.

"In addition to having the right to pay miners inadequate wages, operators want the right to fine him while they might be engaged in breaking up his union," Lewis continued. "If a settlement is to be reached here,

Bill Asks $100,000 For LaFollette Group

WASHINGTON, Apr. 22.—A bill to grant the LaFollette-Thomas Civil Liberties Committee an additional $100,000 to continue its investigations, was filed in the Senate this week.

Sponsored by Sen. Schwellenbach of Washington and Sen. Downey of California, it was referred to the Upper House's Committee on Audit and Control.

The resolution introduced by the two Senators pointed out that there has been "widespread demand" for continuation of the committee's work on the part of the Grange, the CIO, the AFL and numerous other organizations.

The committee, before its present funds were exhausted, made investigations on the west coast, and is believed to have made valuable discoveries about the anti-union activities of the Associated Farmers, big-business organization which has been increasing its power in the Pacific and Rocky Mountain states.

Unions should write or wire their own Senators and Congressmen, as well as Senator James F. Byrnes, head of the committee, asking that the funds be voted immediately.

WANT THIRD TERM

Boston—By a 135-19 vote, delegates to the convention of Massachusetts' Labor's Non-Partisan League indicated they would vote for President Roosevelt for a third time if he is nominated next year.

Martin Joins Goldfish Craze; To Swallow AFL Charter

WASHINGTON, Apr. 22 — President William Green of the AFL today prepared a hearty welcome for the approaching return of Homer Martin, discredited former president of the United Automobile Workers.

Martin and Green met in AFL headquarters here this week, and paved the way for affiliation of the Martin faction with the Federation.

THOMAS COMMENTS

In Detroit Pres. R. J. Thomas of the UAW-CIO, speaking in the name of more than 300,000 auto workers, declared:

"The old AFL charter, spurned and ignored by three international conventions of the UAW, has been fished out of the gutter again by Willie Green and has been humbly and gratefully accepted by an ousted president of the UAW.

"Both the AFL and the former president are acting in character. The AFL has not hesitated to dicker with every lame duck in a CIO international union in a futile effort to undermine the CIO. It tried in the flat glass industry with an ex-president and failed dismally. It tried it again in the textile industry with an ex-president, and its failure was equally complete.

WILL FAIL AGAIN

"The AFL will fail again in the auto industry in its attempt to stir up trouble through a discarded outcast from our union. The auto industry is a mass-production industry and must be organized on industrial union lines as represented by the UAW-CIO.

"The AFL charter will permit the aristocratic craft unions to take their pick of the workers in the industry and leave the remnants for the lame duck and his goons.

"The UAW-CIO is not concerned with the last-ditch maneuvers of a discredited former leader. We predict that the AFL will find plenty of reason to regret any deal it has made with him."

BROPHY'S COMMENT

John Brophy, CIO director, commented:

"Mr. Martin's union is largely a paper one. He now becomes the No. 1 problem child to the AFL, as he was to the CIO.

"Like Humpty-Dumpty, he fell off the wall, and all the AFL horses and all the AFL men, including Mr. Green and Mr. Woll, cannot put him back together again.

"This action will not affect the CIO. It will merely be an added burden to the AFL."

LEFT THE AFL

The automobile union, before it affiliated with the CIO, had an AFL charter. Craft raids, refusal of support for organizing campaigns and an AFL-maintained dictatorship in the union's affairs

The Right to Vote

Workers who cast their votes in Labor Board elections at this time have an opportunity to express their wishes on even wider considerations than choice of the particular union they desire to represent them.

Their very right thus freely to vote for whatever union they prefer is being challenged in Congress. Anti-labor manufacturers, congressional tories and leaders of the American Federation of Labor are combining in a drive to amend the Wagner labor act. The aim of this campaign is to restrict the workers' right of free choice, and to drive them willy-nilly into craft unions or other organizations preferred by the employers.

The CIO stands 100 per cent for preservation of the democratic rights embodied in the present Wagner act, including the right of the workers themselves to vote for whatever kind of organization they prefer.

By voting for a CIO union now, therefore, workers not only choose the protection of the strongest and most modern type of labor organization, but they also serve notice on Congress that they value their democratic right to vote as they please without interference, and are determined to defend this right.

Resistance Breaking Down

There is something epoch-making in the simple announcement last week that the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. has agreed to negotiate with the Industrial Insurance Agents Union of the CIO United Office and Professional Workers.

To be sure, this concession on the part of the company is long delayed. The CIO union won an election of Metropolitan's New York employes a year ago, and the law requires that a company negotiate with the union chosen by its workers. But the insurance company appealed to the courts, and it has taken a decision of the New York Supreme Court to make it willing even to negotiate with the union.

Before the CIO was formed, no serious effort was made to organize insurance employes. They, like millions of other white-collar workers, were regarded as outside the pale of the labor movement.

But just as the CIO organized for the first time millions of workers in the steel, auto, rubber, electrical and other mass-production industries, so it has also opened the door to better conditions for office and professional workers.

The big insurance companies have been no more willing to agree to collective bargaining than were the big industrial corporations. But the trend of the times is against them. Last week's announcement is a sign of the inevitable breaking down of this resistance, and a promise of the coming of union organization for millions of other still unorganized white-collar workers.

Name-Calling

President Roosevelt had something thought-provoking to say in his recent letter deploring the unprincipled attacks made on former Congressman Thomas Amlie.

"Those who for political reasons have called you a Communist," the President said, "do not perhaps realize that such name-calling ill serves the democratic form of government which this nation as a whole wishes to continue.

"A quarter of a century ago I, too, was called a Communist and a wild-eyed radical because I fought for factory inspection, for a 54-hour-a-week bill for women and children in industry and similar measures."

Such name-calling as has been directed against Roosevelt and Amlie has also been the stock-in-trade of anti-labor reactionaries in their efforts to check and disrupt the CIO.

The millions of true Americans who have built the CIO will agree with the President that this name-calling to which they and their leaders have been subjected ill serves the cause of labor and democracy.

Fishermen To Join CIO

Portland, Ore., Apr. 22—Workers are still flocking into the CIO from the AFL, despite President Green's periodic bleats about "the rapidly disintegrating CIO."

Two thousand fishermen on the west coast have just completed a referendum which will break a 50-year affiliation with the AFL, and join the balance of Pacific Coast workers who have affiliated with the CIO.

Only two small fishermen's locals remain outside the CIO now, one independent in Seattle and another AFL affiliate in Alaska, which is conducting a referendum at the present time.

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Goof and Goldfish

PEOPLE who look for reasons for everything are trying to explain away the latest styles in women's hats.

Adult persons of otherwise sound mind may be seen on every side with curious structures on their heads that defy description.

Nor is this type of goofiness confined to one sex.

Woman, that "ministering angel" when pain and anguish wrack man's brow, is after all entitled to wrack her own brow with any kind of hat she pleases.

But what can be said for the male sex when members of its species deliberately swallow live goldfish and mice?

The times are out of joint, say the explainers. So women wear hats that resemble every shift in the changing map of Europe; male students swallow live fish like Hitler and Mussolini swallow whole countries; and both sexes get themselves as much out of joint as the times, in jitterbug contests.

Prevailing Craziness

If women's hats and college students' habits are goofy, the psychologists explain, they are a reflection of the prevailing craziness of their environment.

What can be said, for instance, for coal operators who lock out hundreds of thousands of miners, deprive a whole country of coal and threaten to wreck their industry, rather than to reach a rational agreement with a union which has done more for the industry than they could ever do for themselves?

As for swallowing goldfish, what kinds of indigestion is William Green not inviting by gulping down that jumping Jonah, Homer Martin, whom the auto workers refused to stomach?

Or consider the Wagner act hearing in Washington. Every kind of amendment is being proposed to enable anti-labor employers to interfere with the workers' right to organize, to permit them to promote company unions, and to wreck the whole labor act in a dozen other ways—and these amendments are actually sponsored by leaders of the American Federation of Labor!

Is there any wonder that some women's hats resemble a double-cross rampant or the leaning tower of Pisa?

Rat-Swallowers

If some students swallow mice, is their appetite any more abnormal than that of the AFL when it swallows every kind of rat outfit formed to disrupt legitimate labor unions?

After the AFL leaders took in the strikebreaking Blue Card company union to fight the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers union in the middle west, anything might have been expected.

But since then, they have swallowed almost everything in sight, whether it walks or totters on two legs or crawls on its stomach, if only they think it will spite the unions of the CIO.

The students swallow goldfish for the "glory" of their alma mater, while the AFL leaders charter ratty dual unions in the name of "labor unity"!

Both are as careless of the inner convulsions they invite, as are the employers who invite industrial disorder and conflict by encouraging union-busting dual outfits and seeking to destroy the Wagner act.

Signs of Sanity

But let us not paint the picture too darkly. Most women are keeping their heads, even if we wonder how they keep their hats on them. For one student who swallows goldfish, there are a million who prefer steak and onions.

The commonsense of a peace-loving world is being aroused to a determination to check the warmania of Fascist and Nazi aggressors.

There are even signs of sanity in Congress; and recent local election trends should have a sobering effect on those reactionaries who managed to get a jag on from the timblefuls of comfort provided them by the last elections.

In Baltimore, Chicago, Los Angeles and other cities, the more reactionary old deal elements were roundly trounced by labor and progressive voters. So the tories need not count their 1940 chickens so hopefully before they are hatched.

Building the CIO

As for the labor movement itself, the signs are most encouraging.

Green is becoming almost hysterical in his efforts to whip some following into line behind his anti-labor amendments to the Wagner act. His alliance with the National Association of Manufacturers and the Chamber of Commerce on this subject has opened the eyes of many workers in the AFL, so that there is a growing labor unity in resistance to all amendments to the labor act.

As to Green's goldfish-swallowing antics in regard to splinter dual unions and rejected labor leaders, these too are causing a substantial revulsion among the workers.

All intelligent workers know that to improve their conditions they need the strength of a single united union. That is why they continue to vote their preference for the industrial unionism of the CIO, rather than the craft division of the AFL. And that is why they recognize all attempts to promote minority breakaways as anti-labor moves, even when these have the blessing of Bill Green himself.

Green may yet go down in history, against his will, as a builder of labor unity and the CIO. For if he continues his present tactics, he will drive most of his followers to seek the unity they desire within the growing ranks of the CIO.

Labor Board Discusses Wagner Act

Report Urges Defeat Of Amendments

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 22.—Proposed amendments to the Wagner Act would destroy "the basic principles of the act," would "destroy freedom of self-organization" and would make collective bargaining "impossibly complicated and wholly ineffective", the Labor Relations Board said in its long report to the Senate Committee on Education and Labor late last week.

Careful study of the proposed amendments, made "against the background of labor relations in this country, the decisions of the courts upon labor issues, the provisions and operation of the present act," has led the Board to declare that the act does not need amendment at the present time.

With the exception of four minor changes, which the Board described as "objectionable in their present form" but which merit consideration, the report said bluntly that "the remaining proposals in the bills before the Committee are, in our opinion, definitely objectionable.

NULLIFY ACT

"Many are not only in conflict with the basic purposes of the act, but would, taken singly or in combination, effectively nullify the rights of self-organization and collective bargaining which the act is designed to protect."

The amendments proposed by Senator Walsh and backed by Pres. Green of the AFL came in for sharp criticism. With the exception of the four points (employer petitions, appropriate unit, notice on contracts and time limits) noted early in the report, the Board found the Walsh-Green proposals a serious threat to the act and to genuine collective bargaining. The first three of these changes as worded had objectionable features or were "destructive of the basic principles of the act." Only the minor proposal on lengthening time limits for hearings received a clean bill of health.

The Walsh-Green amendments to allow employers to interfere with unions through propaganda or influence by supervisory employes were sharply criticised by the Board.

AID COMPANY UNIONS

Not only were they unnecessary, the report pointed out, but "they would increase rather than alleviate industrial strife, they will in the long run benefit neither industry nor any labor group, they will lead to a tremendous growth in company unionism, they will in short destroy freedom of self-organization and restore many of the conditions prevailing before passage of the act."

Proposals of Senator Burke along the same lines, and also abolishing majority rule, outlawing the closed shop and the check-off and requiring employers merely to meet with unions without negotiating, were also sharply criticized.

COLLUSIVE CONTRACTS

The Walsh-Green amendment that would allow contracts with company-assisted or company-favored unions to stand was also found "wholly in conflict with the basic principles of the act."

"The act professes to protect employes against discrimination and other unfair labor practices," the Board said. Under this proposal, an employer could set up a preferred union, sign a closed shop contract, "and thereby render himself immune against any redress the act could give. In our opinion to legalize collusive contracts in this way would simply operate to nullify most of the safeguards to self-organization the remainder of the act affords."

In line with these AFL-backed amendments are those in Walsh's bill that would force the Board to certify splinter craft units in industrial plants, whether the employes want it or not or even whether craft unions exist or not in the plant.

IMPOSSIBLY COMPLICATED

This proposal, which Pres. Green wants written into the act "would in the great majority of cases thwart rather than carry out the desires of the employes," the Board said. It would put "an intolerable administrative burden upon the Board in requiring determination of the limits of many hypothetical craft unions in each case," would involve the Board and the courts in endless AFL jurisdictional squabbles, and finally, "would make collective bargaining impossibly complicated and wholly ineffective."

Final criticism in the Board's report was made on the plan of Senator Burke and Senator Holman to destroy the present Board by substituting a commission or a supposed "impartial" Board of three—one representing the workers, one the employers and one the public.

"The Board is a quasi-judicial agency, not a mediation board. Its members should, therefore, all represent the public, rather than partisan interests," the report said.

Labor Foes Speak Up At Hearing

Washington, Apr. 22—Two outspoken foes of labor and the Wagner Act—Rep. Clare Hoffman of Michigan and Sen. Rufus Holman of Oregon, both Republicans—substituted slogans for arguments in their brief appearances before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

Hoffman, who once offered to raise a strike-breaking private army for the Republic Steel Corp., said he appeared in behalf of the "under-dog," whom he defined as the member of an unaffiliated union or the man who doesn't want to join a union.

His testimony was filled with pity for the anti-union employer directed to deal with labor by the Labor Board, and with the fate of organizations which are generally classified as company unions.

Holman, who wants to see the Board's prosecuting and judicial departments separated, hinted that the split between the AFL and CIO had been caused by the NLRB; his reason being that we never had labor rivalry before.

Senator Burke, whose amendments follow the line of the Natl. Manufacturers Assn., also testified at considerable length in the hearings on the Wagner Act.

Nothing new was revealed by the Nebraska tory, who chose to repeat stale charges that the act and the Board are "biased, unfair, ruinous," etc.

Criticize Ellender

New Orleans, Apr. 22.—The action of Sen. A. J. Ellender of Louisiana, in introducing a bill calling for amendments to the Wagner Act, won him condemnation from the New Orleans Industrial Union Council today.

Ellender, a member of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, has been markedly hostile to the CIO, and has made a point of trying to protect so-called independent unions—most of which are in fact company-dominated.

Madden's Plea: Don't Curb Liberties

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 22. — The man who knows most about the workings of the Wagner Labor Relations Act — Chairman J. Warren Madden of the National Labor Relations Board—believes that the "Act should be retained in its present form."

Appearing before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, the former law school dean read into the record a 108-page statement which answered, point by point, the generalized attack of the opposition.

Using charts and statistical tables to round out his arguments, Madden denied that the Wagner Act and the NLRB have been prejudiced against employers, that they have favored the CIO against the AFL, or that the Board has abused its privileges.

The Burke bill, which has the endorsement of the National Association of Manufacturers is a piece of "class legislation of the most intolerable kind," he said.

WALSH-GREEN BILL

The Walsh-Green bill, which has the support of the AFL's top leadership, is based on a "quite different" motive, Madden told the committee.

In hundreds of cases, the NLRB chairman recalled, AFL unions have complained about employer interference, and the Board, under the terms of the Act, has been able to end this practice.

"Now," he said, "the leadership of the AFL proposes to repeal the provision of the law under which AFL unions have so often obtained relief. They surely do not so propose out of consideration for employers who strike such foul blows, or because their unions really have not been hurt by these blows about which they have so often complained."

NEW LIBERTIES

Madden devoted considerable attention in his statement to the new liberties and the added dignity which the Wagner Act has given the American labor movement.

The question is not whether we shall cut a "new pathway to freedom," he went on, but "shall we abandon one that is now open and in use.

"Shall we do in 1939 what we so pointedly refused to do in 1935, imitate those foreign governments which began their evolution to their present condition by depriving their working people of their former liberties? In brief, shall we take away in 1939 liberties which we conferred upon our people in 1933?

"If American workmen are obliged to say, after the adjournment of this Congress: 'We have less liberty than we had last year, less freedom to belong to unions of our own choosing, less freedom to take a position of leadership in a union without economic retaliation by our employers,' that will be important. It will be the most important domestic event of 1939.

BILL OF RIGHTS

"It will mean that we have celebrated the 150th anniversary of our Bill of Rights by repealing civil liberties, easily comparable in importance with those which are found in the Bill of Rights of the Constitution.

"It will be the first time in American history that the national government has, except under exigencies of war, taken away a civil liberty deliberately granted and for a time enjoyed by millions of Americans."

Madden reminded the committee that when the Act was passed in 1935, only about three million workers were organized, whereas now at least seven and a half million belong to the AFL and CIO.

ENJOY NEW RIGHTS

"A large proportion of the millions of newly-organized workers are enjoying for the first time those civil liberties which organization often helps to secure—the right of free speech, the right of free assembly, the right of adequate protection against organized lawlessness," he continued.

"Civil liberties have become a living reality in many communities where they were not previously enjoyed. These communities are located in all parts of the country—in the steel district of western Pennsylvania, in the lumber-producing areas of Arkansas, Michigan and Wisconsin, in the California fruit and vegetable packing sheds, in the small towns of up-state New York and of the Middle West. Perhaps the most spectacular example of all is Harlan County, Kentucky.

"If the National Labor Relations Act had brought no other benefits than this rebirth of civil liberties, it still would have justified itself."

Consumers' League Joins Defense of Act

NEW YORK, Apr. 22. — The National Consumers League, whose aim is "to promote fair labor standards through investigation, education and legislation" has investigated the proposed amendments to the Wagner Act and found them all bad.

The League's findings, made public in an eight page leaflet this week, are based on a careful study of the amendments so far proposed in Congress, and an analysis of the benefits the act has brought to workers, employers, and consumers.

ON THE RECORD

On the record of the act and the Board that administers it, the Consumers League finds that both have made great contributions to industrial democracy and peace and should be retained in their present form.

Should the National Labor Relations Act Be Amended? Pamphlet, 8 pp. Analysis of amendments, concluding none should be passed. Published by Natl. Consumers League, 156 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y. 2c each, $1 per 60.

Amendments proposed by Senators Walsh, Burke and other enemies of the act are rejected by the League as "born of emotional antagonisms that run counter to the basic principles of the act."

The charge that the act is "one-sided"—one of Burke's favorites—is answered simply and briefly: "This charge," the League says, "disregards the realities of the situation. The act does nothing more than grant the worker the right to organize without interference that his employer already has."

Employers don't need this protection "for the obvious reason that employes have never interfered with the right of the employing group to organize, in corporate form or otherwise, and to bargain collectively with its employes."

so disgusted the membership that they joined the CIO.

Aligned with the CIO the union had a phenomenal growth, its enrollment spurting upward from 25,000 to 375,000 in a year, despite efforts by Green and his allies to halt its growth. Even Martin, it is recalled, called Green "the Judas Iscariot of the labor movement," when he tried—unsuccessfully — to prevent the union from reaching an agreement with General Motors.

Green's actions in denouncing UAW contracts was regarded by workers in the long-time open-shop auto industry as sheer treason to their cause, and few believed until recently that Martin would dare to make common cause with the AFL leadership in its war upon the CIO.

Vice-Pres. Philip Murray pointed out later on that the mine workers are prepared to accept renewal of the old contract, minus only the penalty provision.

"If a strike should be precipitated by men who are not members of the union," he said, "the fine would be imposed upon men who are members."

PENALTY CLAUSE

The penalty clause requires the union to pay $1 a day or more for every member who goes out in violation of the contract. The UMW contract, it is said, is the only major union agreement in the country which contains any such provision.

Certain coal operators who have been flirting with Pres. William Green of the AFL and his splinter Progressive Miners of America might be able to use the clause to help destroy the union at its own expense, it has been pointed out.

Early in the conferences, Lewis charged that the operators' resistance to removing the clause was based on pressure from "outside interests"—large corporations—which were seeking to land a blow on the CIO by hurting the United Mine Workers.

NOVEL PACT

New York—A new contract reached by the Department Store Employes Organizing Committee and Hearn's in this city provides that employes may have two days off a year on which to observe religious holidays.

They Join Fight To Protect Wagner Act

Louisiana Priest

Houma, La., Apr. 22. — Proposed amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act sponsored by Sen. Ellender of Louisiana came in for criticism from Father Drolet, liberal Catholic priest who spoke at a Knights of Columbus meeting in the Senator's home town.

Ellender is a member of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor which is now holding hearings on the Wagner Act changes.

"The amendments which he has introduced for others are unsound and misleading," the priest told members of the local Knights of Columbus.

'POSITIVELY FUNNY'

"His idea of protecting 'local, independent' unions against national unions such as the AFL and the CIO is positively funny.

"It is just a trifle more subtle than the more honest and frank attempts of the enemies of labor to outlaw any real union in the country.

"The kind of union he professes to believe in is just another form of company union, in effect if not in name. A polecat would stink just as much by any other name."

Father Drolet pointed out that the Papal Encyclicals envisage workers and employers organized on national and industrial lines, and that organized employers are trying to prevent the workers from achieving organization.

"In their crusade for social justice, the Knights of Columbus should start at once a campaign to keep the Wagner Act intact: no amendments!" he continued. "If we allow the Wagner Act to be emasculated by amendments, as now proposed, our crusade for social justice will be just a huge joke."

AFL Paper

Santa Barbara, Calif., Apr. 22— Unity is the most important requirement if labor is to defeat the tories' attempts to destroy the Wagner Act, the Union Labor News, AFL paper of this city, declared in a recent editorial.

"Employer groups have had a series of amendments introduced that amount to a complete rewriting of the Act and would make it read very much like Proposition No. 1 that appeared on the California ballots in the elections last November," the editorial said.

"Not only would the protection now provided by the Act be removed but the resulting federal law would seriously restrict all unions' activities.

"In order to defeat the Burke amendments a solid united front of organized labor is needed, for it must be remembered that the present Congress is largely unfriendly to labor."

Rubber Union

Akron, Apr. 22. — The United Rubber Workers campaign to protect the Wagner Act went into high gear today as Pres. S. H. Dalrymple assumed personal charge of the union's campaign.

Dalrymple moved on four fronts at once:

1. He issued invitations to a score of leading Akron citizens to take part in a citizens' committee to protect the act. Responses from a number of those invited indicate that a broad committee will be established.

2. He sent urgent messages to all local unions pointing out dangers in the amendments, and advising them to follow the suggestions outlined by the CIO Publicity Department. Copies of the suggestions were mailed to all URWA locals, together with copies of CIO leaflets.

TO OFFICIALS

3. Officers of companies with which the URWA has signed or verbal agreements received letters from Dalrymple and a copy of the CIO leaflet, "What Hurts Labor Hurts Business."

4. Ministers, priests, business men and civic leaders in Akron were sent letters by Dalrymple, together with the CIO leaflet addressed to business and professional people.

"From our experience in negotiations and in discussions with management I know that many employers feel the act has been of distinct service in allaying unrest and in preventing serious labor disputes," said the rubber union leader in his letter to the ministers. "Nevertheless the impression has been created that employers as a body are opposed to the act and that only one wing of the labor movement is in favor of it."

Movie Stars

Hollywood, Apr. 22.—Hollywood stars, leading directors and other big movie people who have been acquiring a well-earned reputation for progressiveness lately are joining in the fight to save the Wagner Act from crippling amendments.

Members of the League of American Writers, the Anti-Nazi League, the Screen Writers Guild, the Musicians Democratic Committee, the Actors Guild, and the Motion Picture Democratic Committee are signing a gigantic telegram protesting the Walsh proposals to destroy the act and all other attempts to amend it out of existence.

BIGGEST TELEGRAM

The telegram, put out by the American League for Peace and Democracy, will be sent to President Roosevelt and all Senators and Representatives. The League's plan is to make it the biggest wire ever sent to Washington. It asks the recipients to "defeat the Walsh amendments (S.1000) and the numerous other amendments which would weaken or destroy the effectiveness of the Wagner Act."

Labor and the Law

By Lee Pressman

CIO General Counsel

Supreme Court Reverses Itself

In January 1936, the Supreme Court of the United States ruled that federal control over agriculture was unconstitutional. In April 1939, the Supreme Court rules that federal control over agriculture is constitutional.

The difference between the two cases is purely a technical one. In substance the Supreme Court within less than three years reversed itself on a fundamental issue.

CHANGED VOTES

Two of the six justices, Hughes and Roberts, who had voted against the law in 1936, voted for it in 1939. McReynolds and Butler still think that planning agricultural production is unconstitutional.

Justice Stone, who vigorously dissented in 1936, is now on the majority side, which included in addition Reed, Black and Frankfurter. But even if there had been no changes in the personnel of the court since 1936, the first decision would have been reversed by a 5-4 vote.

Once again the Supreme Court offers convincing proof of a tendency recognized by historians, that judicial decisions do not come from some invisible majesty of the law, but are the products of economic and political conditions.

The economic conditions which brought about the planned agriculture centered about the simple fact that farmers were growing more crops than they could sell in times of industrial depression. The court's decision in 1936 did nothing to improve these economic conditions so the government continued to give a cash benefit to farmers who reduced their crops and penalized the minority who did not.

EVOKED PROTESTS

Politically, the decision of the court in 1936 evoked considerable protest and resentment. The President's court reorganization bill forcefully dramatized the swelling popular objection to judicial interference with progressive legislation.

Thus, the combination of economic and political conditions caused the Supreme Court to reverse itself and to sustain a drastic measure for control over agriculture production.

The moral to be drawn from the case can bear constant repitition, in many other important situations. As we see the courts throughout the country attacking the administration of the Wagner Act we know that these decisions will yield to the progressive struggle for the right to organize free from any interference by the employer.

A CIO Council In Action; Oregon Unions Cooperate

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

Washington, Apr. 22—An account of the activity of a lively CIO Council in the Pacific Northwest was brought to Washington last week by two members of the International Woodworkers of America from Portland, Oregon—J. Edward Laux and Verne Ryan.

Laux, who is president of the Portland CIO Industrial Union Council, and Ryan came to Washington to confer with the National Labor Relations Board on the Plylock case, in which their union, Plywood Workers Local 102 of the IWA is involved.

In describing the activity of the Portland Council, Ryan and Laux said that it represents more than 5,000 CIO members from various affiliated unions in the timber, shipping, cannery, steel, textile, clothing and communications industries. A brewery workers local affiliated with the AFL also belongs to the Council.

ASSIST UNIONS IN STATE

Union problems of all the member groups are made the common concern of the Council the men said, giving as an instance the cooperation and assistance their own union had received from the Council in a long drawn out struggle with the Plylock Corporation.

The Council went on record recently in favor of an immediate appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court in the Plylock case, calling upon Chairman J. Warren Madden of the Labor Board to make an appeal from the decision of the ninth Circuit Court of Appeals.

The Circuit Court in February reversed the ruling of the NLRB last year ordering the company to return some 300 members of IWA Local 102 to their jobs. The Board had upheld charges of the CIO union that the Plylock Corp. was aligned with reactionary officials of the AFL Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, to deprive Local 102 of its bargaining rights as representatives of more than a majority of the workers.

COUNCIL PLANS DRIVE

After the ruling was reversed by the court, the company again locked out CIO workers, replacing them by outsiders, many of whom were not even residents of the community. Local 102 is therefore now asking the NLRB to carry the case through to the Supreme Court.

Laux and Ryan also told of the Council's plans for a joint organization drive, especially in the unorganized clothing industry, which is being retarded not by lack of spirit, but by the fact that about 50 per cent of the Council members are unemployed at the present time, and funds are therefore low.

One of the ways the Portland Council has found most effective in furthering the interests of its members is a radio broadcast presented every other Monday. A serialized dialogue featuring a worker known as "Bud" is used to get across to the public some of the outstanding problems of Portland union labor.

The Council finances the program by a one cent per capita tax on its members.

ANTI-PICKETING BILL

One of the outstanding problems of CIO unions in Portland and throughout Oregon is the campaign for the repeal of the anti-picketing bill, passed last November at Initiative 131. CIO and AFL unions are cooperating in the fight to abolish the law, Laux and Ryan said.

Action to get it wiped off the statute books is now pending in the courts, with the first skirmish decided in favor of labor. Laux and Ryan said that the three judas of the Circuit Court before whom the act was brought, ruled that they could hear the main case charging that the law is unconstitutional and asking a declaratory judgment. In making this decision, the court overruled three defendant enforcement officials who had filed demurrers.

Up until the time when the state legislature adjourned, part of the Council's work was concerned with a pressure campaign for legislation favoring labor, and opposing proposed bills against the interests of workers.

The Council also has a committee working actively in behalf of its unemployed members, a very important function at the present time, Laux and Ryan said, with so many out of jobs.

Elections Show Big Swing To New Deal

By ROBERT DALE

WASHINGTON.—A definite swing back to New Deal candidates is apparent in local elections in widely scattered parts of the nation. Recent returns augur well for 1940 and indicate a change in the trend since last Fall's Republican gains.

Outstanding in the by election results thus far are those from Chicago and Baltimore. Both cities voted to keep liberal mayors in power. But even more significant was the fact that genuine New Deal candidates for lesser offices ran well ahead of their respective tickets.

In Chicago not only was Mayor Edward J. Kelly re-elected by the largest vote in the city's history, but 39 aldermanic candidates who had aligned themselves with the New Deal were also elected. One of these candidates, Prof. Paul Douglas, of the University of Chicago, carried the Fifth Ward by more than 6,500 votes as against Mayor Kelly's 2,000 votes in that ward.

LEAGUE OFFICIAL

Douglas is an executive committee member of the Cook county Labor's Non-Partisan League. He has long been a prominent figure in Chicago progressive circles. Friends are already mentioning him as a potential candidate for mayor of Chicago.

Two other well known liberals backed by Labor's Non-Partisan League who won election are Earl B. Dickerson, Second Ward, and Benjamin Grant, Third Ward, both of whom ran ahead of the Kelly ticket.

Results of the League's ward organizing work clearly apparent in the returns. Working class districts, especially those where League organization exists, went heavily for the Kelly ticket. For the first time in the history of Chicago's Negro area, there was a switch from the Republican to the Democratic column. Mayor Kelly's vote was 820,000 to his Republican opponent's 637,000.

BALTIMORE VOTE

The Baltimore result was a body blow to Maryland's Old Guard Democratic machine which had thought itself secure since it put over its candidates for Senator and Governor last Fall. The machines plans to run ultra-Tory Howard Bruce, banker, for Senator next year, were jolted by the lacing it took in Baltimore's primary.

Mayor Howard W. Jackson, a Roosevelt New Dealer who was backed by Labor's Non-Partisan League forces uniting CIO, AFL and Railway unions in a "Labor Committee for Jackson" ran 36,000 ahead of his opponent. He carried 26 of the 28 Baltimore wards.

Of the outcome, the Baltimore Sun, anti-New Deal paper, said:

"The result of the primary . . . probably will figure prominently in the forthcoming presidential campaign when Marylanders will also elect a Senator. One of the aims of the Bruce-O'Conor combination in attempting to defeat Jackson and build a new city organization . . . was the furtherance of the Senatorial aspirations of Bruce."

NATIONAL IN SCOPE

The progressive trend in 1939 voting is not limited to any particular section but is national in scope.

Voters of Omaha, Neb. gave impetus to the New Deal swing by returning a number of liberal candidates to city offices in the primary there. Mace Brown, president of the Central Labor Council (AFL) and state secretary of Labor's Non-Partisan League, was nominated to the city commission. Brown was backed by a joint labor committee including AFL, CIO and League officials and received 11,500 votes.

The central body which Brown heads recently sent a strong letter of protest to AFL president William Green in reply to a communication from Green against Labor's Non-Partisan League. Brown took a firm stand for labor unity, especially on the political field.

In addition to working together in the Omaha election, both CIO and AFL forces in Nebraska, home state of Senator Edward Burke, arch-foe of the Wagner Act, are cooperating in the drive to save the Wagner act. Resolutions against any amendments have been adopted by the Nebraska and Omaha bodies of AFL and CIO.

Los Angeles voters were also in the parade of progress as they voted in a city primary for various local offices. Two council incumbents opposed by Labor's Non-Partisan League were defeated. Two candidates endorsed by the League won places on the ballot.

CIO Backs Refugee Proposal

Washington, Apr. 22—Support for Senator Wagner's bill to admit child refugees from Nazi terror into this country was expressed at the Senate hearing here by John Brophy, national director.

Brophy appeared in behalf of President Lewis, and as part of his testimony quoted Lewis' statement of last February on the subject. President Lewis said at that time:

"Assuredly America should do its part in caring for some of the children who are the victims of religious and racial oppression in Germany. I heartily approve of any practical action necessary for the accomplishment of this purpose."

AGAINST NAZIS

Brophy added that the entire CIO was on record in condemning the atrocities of the Nazis against the German people, and especially against German minority groups.

"It is appalling that the victims of persecution include defenseless children," he said. "We know that organized labor in the U. S. lends a willing hand to aid these children, both as an expression of its common humanity and a protest against the terrible persecutions of Nazism."

Utah CIO Meets April 26

Park City, Utah, Apr. 22.—The Utah Industrial Union Council will hold its annual convention here, starting Apr. 26. Delegates from many parts of the state will attend.

The Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers has considerable strength in Utah, as do the United Mine Workers and numerous local industrial unions of the CIO. Labor was sufficiently strong to elect a number of representatives to the state legislature, who form a strong progressive bloc.

Speakers See Need For Civil Rights

Philadelphia, Apr. 22—The United States must support tolerance and labor's civil liberaties, Sen. Elbert Thomas of Utah told 450 labor, religious and civic leaders attending a banquet marking the 164th anniversary of the Battle of Lexington.

Judge Michael Musmanno of Pittsburgh, noted liberal jurist, also spoke at the affair, which was held under the auspices of the Labor Record, Philadelphia union paper. He emphasized the role of labor as a leader in the fight for racial and religious tolerance.

CIO Offers 6-Point Program To Improve Social Security Act

WASHINGTON, Apr. 22.—Six basic points for amendments to the Social Security Act were presented by the CIO in a letter sent to the House Ways and Means Committee today by Joseph Kovner, secretary of the CIO Social Security Committee.

The six points included recommendations for care of the aged; extension of coverage; disability benefits; uniform standards in assistance programs; simplification of unemployment compensation laws and keeping employe wage records. The letter's arguments:

"1. Care for the aged should provide adequate minimum benefits sufficient to assure a decent standard of living to persons over 60.

"2. Coverage should be extended as recommended by the Social Security Board, the Advisory Council on Social Security and organized labor. This would give needed protection to agricultural labor, seamen, domestics and employes of non-profit organizations.

DISABILITY

"3. Disability benefits. A system of benefits for permanent and totally disabled can be established without any substantial new costs.

"4. Uniform standards in assistance programs. Assistance programs now established under the act should contain guarantees against discrimination of any kind and for uniform benefit payments to all classes of recipients.

MORE SIMPLE LAWS

"5. Simplification of Unemployment Compensation Laws. Further federal standards are required to simplify the present cumbersome and over-complicated unemployment compensation laws and to provide minimum benefit payments for a reasonable length of time.

"6. Employe Wage Records. While every effort is now made to facilitate the task of the employer to keep social security records, nothing has been done to provide the workers with their wage records. This lack has made it impossible for workers to understand how the social security system operates and what it means to them."

Sausage Pact In Boston Won by CIO

Boston, Apr. 22.—Five of the six companies involved in a "hot dog" strike here have signed contracts with Local 11 of the United Packinghouse Workers of America, CIO.

The sixth firm, the Colonial Provision Co. at first told the New England Sausage Manufacturers Assn. that it would agree to the joint contract, but at the last minute pulled out of the agreement.

Harvey Fremming On Leave

Fort Worth, Tex., Apr. 22—Pres. Harvey Fremming of the Oil Workers Intl. Union has been granted a leave of absence, due to illness, until the union's international convention in September.

Vice-Pres. J. C. Coulter has been named acting head of the organization, and Harry Station has been appointed to fill the vacancy left by Coulter.

MidContinent FramesStriker Uses Finks

was called before the grand jury to give testimony. Witnesses were strike-breakers, police officers, and Mid-Continent executives.

The basis on which the unionists were indicted was the opening day of the walkout. The union members notified the Mid-Continent they were going on strike, effective that night. During the day, the unionists made preparations for the shutting down of the refinery. This was done to prevent damage to the boilers and other equipment. If the men had walked out without regard to property and equipment damage, they could have been charged with sabotage.

The grand jury interpreted the above safety precautions against damage as "seizures of the refinery."

VIOLENCE BY THUGS

For calling the strike, Hays and the other union leaders were indicted for "inciting to riot." The oil workers had resorted to no violence in their walkout, but the company armed guards, hired ex-convicts, many with murder and rape convictions, made an attempt to force the pickets into a fight.

Mid-Continent officials contributed to the corporation-inspired demonstration. The officials were photographed handing tear-gas bombs over the refinery fence to police officers who in turn hurled them at the pickets and friends of the strikers who had congregated some distance from the Mid-Continent gate. The Mid-Continent property is located outside of the Tulsa city limits. The tear-gas bombs were hurled at strikers within the city limits.

No attempt was made by County Attorney Gilmer to bring before the grand jury the Mid-Continent violations of both federal and state labor statutes, the suppression of civil liberties, and the hiring of notorious company guards with criminal records.

PHONEY EXPLOSIONS

A series of pipe-line explosions is another angle to the strike which has a mysterious tinge. Investigators have revealed that they have found no trace of union connections to the explosions, but that all evidence points to another source.

The strike-breaking tactics used by the Mid-Continent have been so fantastic and foul that it has taken investigators months to unravel.

Conclusive evidence has been found to show a corporation-city-county government political collusion. The Tulsa city police department was put at the disposal of the Mid-Continent despite the fact that the refinery pays no city taxes and is located outside of the City of Tulsa.

Both city and county officials are given job-patronage considerations at the refinery, and relatives of the city and county officials have been employed at the plant as strike-breakers since the strike started.

FREEDOM OF PRESS?

Large advertisements, "paid by Loyal Tulsans" have appeared in the Tulsa newspapers and as a result anti-labor editorials have appeared frequently, and favoritism was shown in the Mid-Continent in news stories on the strike.

Even the state government "was reached" and the state militia was called in on the third day of the strike. The militiamen have also been used as strike-breakers, and some of the troopers report to jobs in the refinery as soon as they complete their militia duty.

The tactics used by the Mid-Continent to fight labor and unionization are similar to those used by the Bethlehem Steel and Harlan coal mine companies in attempts to Hitlerize their communities.

The Mid-Continent-Tulsa-City-county machinations have long been a travesty of injustice, and the grand jury's action is but another incident and shows to what lengths non-federal government agencies will go after being corrupted by a corporation.

New evidence of arming of strike-breakers at the Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation here has been disclosed by Jack Hays, president of Oil Workers' International Union Local No. 217, which has been out on strike for more than four months.

Hays made the discovery after checking gun permits issued by the city during the past three months. The information, he said, will be turned over to federal authorities.

Despite the elaborate preparations made by the Mid-Continent in arming scabs, loading the plant with tear-gas bombs, machine guns and other strike-breaking weapons, there has been no violence to date to justify the corporation's actions.

Picketing At Crown Oil Big Success

Houston, Tex., Apr. 22—Picket lines which had been thrown around the Crown Central Petroleum Company here recently to halt "hot oil" coming in from the struck Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation of Tulsa proved a "double-header" success.

The employes of the Crown Central became so educated to the picketing and became so sympathetic to the union cause, they demanded admittance to the Oil Workers' Union membership.

Within two weeks more than 60 per cent signed cards, and a conference with Crown Central officials resulted in Local 227, Houston, being designated as the collective bargaining agency. The Crown Central went a step further and cancelled its contract with the Mid-Continent.

DOUBLE-HEADER

C. P. Humburg, secretary for Local 227, and B. J. Shafer, Oil Workers' International vice president, announced that the Crown Central had agreed to immediate negotiations for a working agreement covering wages, hours and working conditions.

The Oil Workers' Union has withdrawn pickets from the refinery. Pickets were thrown around the Crown Central when a cargo of Mid-Continent products was loaded on the tanker "Malay" through Crown Central facilities. The "Malay" was prevented from sailing for weeks, and it was allowed to leave port only upon agreement that the Crown Central would cease business with Mid-Continent, which has been on the "unfair list" since the Tulsa Oil Workers Local 217 went on strike on Dec. 22.

The Crown Central has about 150 employes. Practically all have now been signed up as union members.

Scab Totes Gun

A scab service man refuels a big Eastern Air Lines plane at Newark, N. J. Airport. Note the gun (in circle) tucked away in his pocket. Members of the unaffiliated Air Line Mechanics Assn. went on strike last week for a signed contract and higher wages.

Timbermen Strike In Minnesota

Cass Lake, Minn., Apr. 22.—Demanding higher wages and recognition of the union, Local 173-M, International Woodworkers of America, have called a strike at the mill and box factory of Rathborne, Ridgeway & Hair here. About 100 employes are involved.

The minimum wage at the time the men walked out was $13.07 a week, LeRoy Wright, publicity chairman said. The maximum was $16.77. "At these wages the men and their families are just existing, not living," Wright declared.

MINISTER SUPPORTS STRIKE

The Rev. Frank H. Stephens of the Cass Lake Methodist Church has appealed for public support for the strikers, charging that "such an outrageously inadequate wage is a direct threat to men's faith in democracy, to their own and public health, to all standards of human decency, and certainly is an insult to American labor."

The minister offered the strikers the use of his church for their meetings.

Detroit Dairymen RenewPact

Detroit, Mich., Apr. 22.—Renewal of a contract covering some 2,200 workers employed by 23 dairies supplying more than 80 per cent of the milk delivered in Detroit, was announced this week by the United Dairy Workers, CIO local industrial union here.

Principal terms of the new contract are: Closed shop; check-off of union dues and assessments; employment through the union office; seniority rights including bids by employes for vacancies; $35 weekly minimum guaranteed wage on routes and $36 in the plant; and two weeks vacation with pay.

SIGNED IN 1937

The CIO union signed its first contract with the companies in 1937. The renewal was negotiated by the UDW bargaining Committee at joint conferences with representatives of the 23 companies.

John W. Gibson, secretary of the union, in announcing the new contract, said that it was won "without any interruptions or strikes."

CIO Local Continues Fight At Lorillard

Middletown, O., Apr. 22—Members of Pioneer Tobacco Workers Local Industrial Union 55 are continuing their drive to win a signed contract from P. Lorillard & Co., makers of Old Gold cigarettes and other tobacco products.

As a result of the Lorillard products being placed on labor's unfair list, the company's sales have dropped to as low as 60 per cent of normal. The union has distributed handbills listing the products of the company and urging union members to keep the firm's refusal to bargain with the CIO local in mind when they buy cigars, cigarettes, pipe and chewing tobacco.

Last autumn the local called a strike to force the firm to negotiate a contract, but the strike was called off when former Gov. Davey of Ohio called out the militia and bloodshed was threatened.

LEWIS OFFERS PROOF OF AFL—EMPLOYER TIE

Hillman Offers Plan To Help Stabilize Clothing Industry

NEW YORK, Apr. 29.—Leading manufacturers in the men's clothing industry which is 95% organized, were invited this week by President Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, to cooperate with the union in a program to stabilize labor costs and eliminate cut-throat competition in the industry.

Suggesting that the manufacturers loan their technical and production experts to the union to work directly with him in the general office of the Amalgamated, Hillman assumed the responsibility of laying down a national policy of equitable labor costs between market and market, and of seeing that the policy is strictly enforced.

DECISION WOULD BE FINAL

The combined conclusions of the manufacturers' experts, the union's research and stabilization departments and staff of experts, Hillman said, will be taken by the union as final, and will be promptly applied to the ills of the industry. He expressed his conviction that labor costs can be stabilized if employers will give their active cooperation.

The Amalgamated's plan has been received with enthusiasm by leading clothing manufacturers in every principal market in the country, according to Hillman. Names of outstanding technicians and production experts who will be named to work with him during the campaign will be announced soon, he said.

Since the men's clothing industry was the first in America to set up impartial machinery for the settlement of disputes and other democratic procedure within the industry, the ACW regards the new program as "the latest in a series of harmonious employer-employe relationships which have marked the past 25 years."

Describe Progress In Steel

Gary, Ind., Apr. 29. — Progress toward 100% organization of the steel workers was reported at the Chicago-Calumet district convention of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee held here last week.

The 441 delegates, representing 85,000 workers in 55 lodges, heard reports that 75% of the membership is covered with collective bargaining contracts, that dues collections have increased 150% since last August, and that six subdistricts are operating.

HALL TOO SMALL

The convention was the largest and most successful ever held in the district, and union headquarters, where it was first planned to hold the meeting, proved too small for the crowd of delegates. A large hotel auditorium had to be hired to accommodate them.

Philip Murray, SWOC chairman, and Van A. Bittner, regional director, wired greetings and congratulations to the meeting, which was presided over by Nicholas Fontecchio, SWOC district director.

Resolutions unanimously passed by the delegates included a strong statement against attempts of anti-union employers, aided by AFL top leaders, to destroy the Wagner Act, a statement favoring the LaFollette Oppressive Labor Practices Bill, and the CIO proposal for a united American Congress of Labor.

In addition, the delegates voted to support the CIO Packinghouse Workers in their struggle for an Armour contract, voted aid to the Chicago CIO Newspaper Guild strikers, the struggle of the United Mine Workers for a union contract with the coal operators, the Oil Workers strike in Tulsa, and other labor struggles throughout the nation.

Brass Workers Vote 3-1 For CIO Smelter Union

ANSONIA, Conn., Apr. 29. — Workers in the American Brass Co. here showed their preference for the CIO by an almost three to one vote in a Labor Board election held late last week, when they cast 1,161 votes for the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and a little over 400 for the AFL Machinists.

The vote came after a year's hard work by Mine, Mill and Smelter organizers in the Naugatuck Valley plants where close to 20,000 workers are employed in normal times. Last year the CIO affiliate scored at nearby Waterbury, when 2700 workers chose it as sole bargaining representative.

FOLLOW-UP PLANNED

Over 3400 workers are involved in the Ansonia vote, and union leaders are planning an intensive follow-up campaign to secure a CIO contract and to organize the remaining brass plants in the area.

First steps in the Ansonia follow-up will be rescinding of the 10 per cent cut put over by the management when the workers were weak and unorganized. After that will come vacations with pay, ironing out of numerous grievances, and general improvements in the plant.

John Brophy, national CIO director, wired congratulations to the Ansonia local on the overwhelming victory.

Reveals Plot On Wagner Act By Green, Tories

WASHINGTON, Apr. 30.—Documentary proof of collusion between President Green of the AFL, the National Association of Manufacturers and anti-labor corporations in the preparation of proposed amendments to the Wagner Act was offered to the Senate Labor Committee by John L. Lewis, president of the CIO, today.

"I charge publicly," Lewis wrote, "that these amendments recommended by Mr. Green and his associates have been drafted with the aid, advice and counsel of representatives of the National Association of Manufacturers and of several of the most reactionary and anti-labor corporations of the country.

"In the event that Mr. Green and his associates either refuse to answer this charge or the questions suggested, or evade or deny the same, I am prepared to present to your Committee at any time documentary proof of my charges."

SIX QUESTIONS

After briefly reciting the benefits to labor and the public brought by the Wagner Act, Lewis suggested that the Committee ask Green and his associates a number of questions when they appear to testify for their proposed amendments. These questions were based on six points:

1. Were the amendments prepared solely by representatives of the AFL and in the interest of the workers of the country?

2. Were they prepared with the advice and counsel of representatives of corporations and of the Natl. Association of Manfacturers?

3. Did Green or his associates confer in secret with corporation representatives on the proposed amendments?

4. Will Green or his associates disclose the names of the corporation representatives with whom they conferred?

5. Are the corporations with which Green or his associates conferred under charges by the Natl. Labor Relations Board as the most serious and flagrant violators of the Wagner Act?

6. What accounts for the widespread revolt among many AFL affiliates throughout the country against the proposed amendments, if not their realization that the amendments were prepared to serve the interests of the enemies of labor?

"The workers of this country," Lewis said in conclusion, "whether members of the AFL or the CIO, and all citizens interested in the development of progress and democracy in our country, are entitled to a thorough probing of this situation."

Teachers on Strike

The mine lockout isn't the only labor dispute in the area around Shamokin, Pa. School teachers, unpaid for months and owed $200,000, went out on the picket lines to force action by the city fathers. Jean Troutman, seventh grade pupil at the McKinley School, shows there's nothing to the old yarn about the kids not liking teacher.

Strike Hurts Hearst

CHICAGO, Apr. 29. — Hearst's Chicago papers, the American and Herald-Examiner, have suffered a circulation loss of 221,000 as a result of the strike of the Chicago Newspaper Guild, the strike committee said today.

Basing its estimates on April 15 figures, which it said came "from various sources of unquestionable authority," the Guild listed the following figures:

U. S. Batting 100% In Courts On Wage-Hour Law

WASHINGTON, Apr. 29.—The federal government has kept a 100 per cent batting average in the courts in its first six months of administering the wage-hour law, Administrator Elmer F. Andrews reported today.

Since the law became operative on October 24, fourteen civil suits and five criminal actions have been instituted by the Wage-Hour Division of the Department of Labor, or at its request, by the Department of Justice.

The record:

1. Seven injunctions granted.
2. Four employers have pleaded guilty and have been fined a total of $31,500.
3. Six civil suits and one criminal case are now pending.

$15,000 FINE

Largest single fine was levied against Nathaniel Breath, official of the Picardy Mills in New York City, who was assessed $3,000 on each of five counts. Payment was suspended on four of the counts on the provision that he restore back pay to girl workers whom he had forced to falsify time sheets.

The Sportswear Hosiery Mills of Philadelphia, in one of the division's first cases, was enjoined from maintaining a phoney "trade school" at its Etowah, Tenn., plant. The "school," formed immediately after the Act went into effect, was used to keep wages below the 25-cents-an-hour minimum provided by law.

HALT CHILD LABOR

The first injunction issued under the child labor provisions of the Act was issued in a federal court at Harrisonburg, Va., against the DuPlan Silk Corp. The complaint charged the firm with employing minors less than 16 years of age. The company, declaring its error was unintentional, readily consented to correct the situation.

Adminstrator Andrews said that from newspaper clippings and other sources of information, it appeared that at least 25 suits have been brought by employes to recover wages allegedly due them.

WORKERS CAN SUE

The Act permits workers to sue for twice the amount of wages due them in violation of the law, as well as court costs and attorney's fees. These cases are brought by the individuals concerned, and the Wage-Hour division takes no part in them.

Andrews said he understood most of these actions have been settled or have resulted in judgments for the workers involved.

CIO Furniture Local Files Charges

Carnegie, Pa., Apr. 29—Charges of unfair labor practices under the Wagner Act have been filed with the National Labor Relations Board against Buchman Manufacturing Company. The allegations were made by the newly-formed Local Union No. 467, of the CIO's United Furniture Workers.

The charges reveal that company officials have fired employes solely for activities in the union. They expose vicious methods used by the firm to "freeze out" any "outside" union which does not meet with company approval.

COMPANY UNION

It is alleged by the employes that, with the blessing of the company, a group known as the "Independent Employes Representative Association," has sprung up in the plant for the purpose of side-tracking the bona-fide Furniture Workers Union.

Employes in the plant—a vast majority of whom are members of Local No. 467, recently elected new officers. They include:

The new officers are launching a vigorous campaign to bring every employe of the company into the CIO union. President Doak recently issued a plea that all unions in the district lend support to the drive, and to contact him at 321 Center Street, Carnegie.

F. D. R. Names Liberal To Circuit Court

WASHINGTON, Apr. 29 — Continuing his policy of placing liberals in court positions, Pres. Roosevelt has named Calvin Magruder, chief counsel for the Department of Labor's wage-hour division, to the federal circuit court of appeals in Boston.

Indiana CIO Meets

Indianapolis, Ind., Apr. 29 — An official called to the second annual convention of the Indiana CIO Industrial Union Council to be held in Evansville, June 23-24 was sent out this week to all affiliated CIO unions by John Bartee, secretary-treasurer of the Council.

Local unions which have not yet affiliated with the Indiana Council will not be eligible to representation in the convention unless they join before May 23, the letter stated.

The convention is called to elect officers and board members, to make such changes in the constitution as the members deem necessary, and to take up other business which concerns the development and progress of the Council.

The sessions which will be held in the United Automobile Workers hall, 1101 North Evans St., will open at 9:30 Friday morning, June 23.

Michigan Meet June 30

Detroit, Apr. 29.—The Michigan Industrial Union Council, whose affiliates have a membership running into hundreds of thousands, will hold its annual convention at the Rowe Hotel in Grand Rapids on June 29 and 30 and July 1.

The announcement was made by Pres. Adolph Germer of the state council following a meeting of its executive board here last week.

Activities of the council are expected to spurt ahead in the next few months as a result of the cleaning out of the Homer Martin group of disrupters in the United Automobile Workers Union, which comprises a majority of the council's merbership.

Strike Shuts Singer Plant

South Bend, Ind., Apr. 29—(FP)—A strike by 800 members of Local 917, United Electric, Radio and Machine Warkers, has halted operations at the Singer Sewing Machine Co. plant in this city.

Disregarding seniority, the company had hired new workers instead of filling vacancies from the regular waiting lists. The strike against the giant concern, which began April 15, climaxed two years of Wagner Act evasions.

Pecan Shellers Ask Enforcement Of Pay Law

San Antonio, Tex., Apr. 29—"Open and acknowledged violations of the wage-hour law continue throughout the south in the pecan industry," officials of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers charged in a telegram sent today to Administrator Elmer F. Andrews.

"Legitimate operators have either been driven out of business or are being forced to law violations to exist by mushroom operations which have sprung up and which are feeding upon law violations," the wire said.

"The pecan industry, which before the birth of our organization, had the lowest-paid workers in the nation, is today being destroyed and re-established in other cities and towns in the south at wages which are lower and under working conditions which formerly existed here.

Canadian Labor Asks 'Wagner Act' For Dominion

TORONTO, Ont., Apr. 29. — Almost identical measures have been introduced in the federal and Ontario parliaments providing for recognition by law of workmen to organize into unions of their choice.

The federal act, an amendment to the Criminal Code of Canada, was submitted to the house of commons by Minister of Justice Ernest Lapointe, which makes it certain of passage.

Mr. Lapointe's amendment is similar to the draft act proposed by the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada and presented to parliament on three occasions by J. S. Woodsworth, Cooperative Commonwealth Federation member of parliament. Mr. Woodsworth's bills have always been talked out by the members but now the government has adopted it as its own legislation.

The federal bill would "make it an offense to unlawfully refuse to employ or to dismiss a person, for the sole reason that such a person is a member of a lawful trade union or association." The bill declares further that it will be unlawful for an employer to "seek by intimidation or threat, to compel an employe to abstain from belonging to such a trade union or association, or to conspire with any other employer to do any of these things."

Violation of the law is considered an indictable offense and an individual employer is liable to $100 fine or three months in jail. Corporations can be fined $1,000 for an offense.

Similar to the federal bill is the act introduced in the Ontario legislature by Hon. David Croll, member of the legislature for Windsor-Walkerville, and former minister of labor.

RIGHT TO BARGAIN

An additional feature not contained in the federal act is a provision that employes shall have the right to bargain collectively with their employers. This is interpreted that refusal to bargain would constitute violation of the act.

The Croll bill may receive opposition from the house because of Premier Hepburn's violent opposition to the industrial unionism as exemplified in the CIO. Croll himself had to resign his labor portfolio during the Oshawa General Motors strike in 1937 when the premier demanded that he take the side of the corporation.

At that time Croll said he preferred to march with the auto workers than ride with the auto magnates. His position then placed him as the most progressive member of the Ontario house.

Brophy Tells Need Of Councils

Cleveland, Ohio, Apr. 29. — The need for the organized strength that Industrial Union Councils can add to the CIO and the entire labor movement was stressed by John Brophy, national CIO director, in speaking to the newly installed officers of the CIO Council here this week.

"This occasion is a demonstration to our opponents that the CIO is strong and united and prepared to defend its gains and to extend them," he told the officers and delegates at the ceremony.

"Unity within our internationals and locals is needed, but it is not enough in itself," he said. "We need the strength of all our CIO affiliates, organized into delegate bodies such as yours, so that it can be placed at the disposal of all.

HEAVY TASKS

"Your council, and the entire CIO, has many heavy tasks on its hands at the present time, and more looming up ahead. The forces of reaction are attacking on every front where they think they can detect a sign of weakness.

"Deceived by apparent successes in the last elections, and encouraged by the spread of fascism abroad, they are searching everywhere for a break in the labor and progressive front to push their anti-social pogram through."

Food in Stamps

Imogene Stanhope of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corp. examines one of the first batches of the new special stamps to be used in a new U. S. plan for distributing surplus farm products to unemployed through stores and merchants. Relief clients will get 50c worth of designated commodities free with every $1 outlay, and the merchant will get the stamps redeemed in cash by the government.

Maritime Strike Against Tankers Going Strong

NEW YORK, Apr. 29.—Discovery of a plot to use convicts on parole as scabs, and an appeal to foreign marine transport workers were outstanding developments this week in the tanker strike of the National Maritime Union against four big American oil companies.

Joseph Curran, NMU president, pointed out that part of the fleets of the companies operate under foreign flags. Standard Oil of New Jersey, for example, has more than 140 tankers under foreign flags, he said, and only 78 under the U. S. flag.

STRIKE 85 SHIPS

The other three companies whose tankers are on strike are Socony Vacuum, Tidewater Oil and C. D. Mallory. About 85 tankers have been struck by the NMU since the walkout was called April 17.

A plot on the part of Standard Oil to hire paroled prisoners to work on struck ships was discovered in Boston by the NMU. The union learned that the company had arranged to take a total of 21 convicts from Concord Reformatory, Charlestown State Prison and Norfolk Prison Colony into custody and give them jobs scabbing.

SCAB PLAN FLOPS

The plan failed when State Commissioner of Corrections Arthur T. Lyman, upon being informed of the plan, refused to let the men take the jobs, declaring that he would not allow "any prisoner released on parole to be used as an instrument to break a strike."

Aid of foreign transport workers was asked by the NMU in a cablegram sent this week to Edo Fimmen, executive secretary of the International Transportworkers Federation, with headquarters in Amsterdam. The message requested the ITF to inform affiliated organizations that the struck companies were chartering European ships, especially Scandinavian. "We ask pressure be brought against these companies on any tankers chartered since April 17," the cablegram read.

ASK COOPERATION

In a statement issued by the union explaining the kind of "pressure" sought, Curran said that it was the hope of the NMU that foreign seamen would refuse

Gotham Cab Tie-up Looms

New York, Apr. 29—Possibility of a taxi strike loomed here today as fleet owners and negotiators for the CIO Transport Workers Union appeared unable to reach a settlement.

Mediation efforts which have been under way since a strike last January were blocked by the refusal of spokesmen for the two largest fleets of cabs, Parmelee and Terminal, to agree to the union's demand for the closed shop and a 2½ per cent wage increase.

Outsiders Push Coal Lockout Into 2nd Month

New York, Apr. 29. — The lockout of 320,000 Appalachian bituminous coal miners neared the end of its first month today, with the United Mine Workers led by President John L. Lewis, standing firm against the anti-union drive, whose main impetus comes from interests outside the coal industry.

Three developments marked the end of the fourth week of the lockout:

1. Rapidly dwindling supplies of bituminous coal throughout the eastern states.

2. Threat of a complete shutdown of bituminous mines in the midwest and south, as well as in the east, by May 4 and 5.

3. Possibility of the closing of all anthracite mines when the present contract expires at midnight April 30.

4. Appearance of John Steelman, head of the Department of Labor's Conciliation Service, at the negotiations here.

SEES SHORTAGE SOON

Chairman Percy Tetlow of the National Bituminous Coal Commission predicted that another week of the lockout would cause severe shortages in many areas throughout the east. Bituminous production has been cut about 73 per cent by the lockout, and supplies of coal mined before March 31 are beginning to run out. Corporations which had failed to accumulate large stocks on hand will soon be forced to curtail operations, it is expected.

Miners in the midwest and south, who have been working under special agreements pending the signing of a new contract for the big Appalachian area, will become idle on May 4 and 5, when their agreements expire, thereby removing an additional 2,000,000 tons of soft coal a week from the market.

President Appoints Leiserson

Washington, Apr. 29.—The appointment of William M. Leiserson to the National Labor Relations Board was in the hands of the Senate Committee on Labor and Education today.

He was named by President Roosevelt to succeed Donald Wakefield Smith, whose term expired last summer. At that time he was reappointed but his name was never sent to the Senate for confirmation.

STUDENT OF LABOR

The new appointee has been a student of labor problems for 30 years. For many years he was an impartial arbiter in the needle and printing trades industries, and in 1934 he was appointed to the National Mediation Board when it was created under the terms of the Railway Labor Act of that year.

It is expected he will be succeeded on the mediation board by former Rep. "Davey" Lewis of Maryland, veteran liberal who unsuccessfully sought the Democratic nomination for Senator last year, but lost out to the conservative Millard R. Tydings.

Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, said that Leiserson, at present chairman of the National Mediation Board, is "a good choice," while President Green of the AFL said he had "no objections" to Leiserson.

AGAINST AMENDMENTS

Leiserson is known to frown on amendments to the Wagner Act, having declared that the Act needs strengthening, rather than emasculation.

Speaking on a radio network recently, he declared that "there is room for much improvement in the administrative methods of the Board, but the Act cannot be made to work efficiently until the opposition to it and the attempts to weaken it by revision have ceased."

The attack on the labor law, he concluded, is not because it is one-sided or unfair, but "that the proposed revisions of the Act, especially those advanced by the National Association of Manufacturers, are intended to restore the days when labor law was class legislation in favor of employers."

3,000 Vote To Quit AFL, Join CIO

SAN JOSE, Calif., Apr. 29 (FP)—The Dried Fruit and Nut Packers Union of Santa Clara County, with 3,000 members, has voted 3 to 1 to leave the AFL and affiliate with the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, CIO.

Die Casters Meet In Convention

New York, Apr. 29.—Delegates Representing 4,000 organized die casting workers in five states gathered here this week to attend the national convention of the National Association of Die Casting Workers which opened at the Hotel McAlpin April 28.

A record year of achievements will be shown in the various reports to the convention, union officials said.

The NADW has nine affiliated locals at the present time, in New York City, Batavia and Syracuse, N. Y., Newark and Garwood, N. J.; Pottstown, Pa., Kansas City, Mo., and Toledo, Ohio.

Nominations made by the locals before the convention, resulted in the following slate of candidates to be voted on by the delegates:

National President: George Peacock, Pottstown, Pa., incumbent; Frank Gallo, chairman Local 1, New York City.

Secretary - Treasurer: W. R. Ramsey, New York City, who has held the office for three years; E. Cheyfitz, Toledo, Ohio; Carl Pickar, Pottstown, Pa.

Auto Union Launches Campaign in Aircraft

TOLEDO, Apr. 29.—The newly-elected executive board of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, concluded its first meeting with announcement of plans to spur organization of the thousands of workers employed in the nation's aircraft industry.

It voted to set up an aircraft organizing committee composed of a drive director, representatives of state and city CIO councils, and local unions of aircraft workers. Pres. R. J. Thomas of the UAW said he had conferred with CIO leaders and obtained a promise of support for the campaign.

One of several resolutions on aircraft passed by the board called for "nationalization of the aircraft industry as a means of securing job security for all aircraft workers."

A "MAIN OBJECTIVE"

"Organization of aircraft workers will be one of the immediate and major objectives of the UAW-CIO," Pres. Thomas said. "We have taken this step in response to requests from many thousands of aircraft workers and because the industry is facing expansion on a large scale.

"Although work in aircraft plants is in a great many instances similar to that in automobile plants, aircraft wages are in most cases at least 50 per cent below the wage rates in organized automobile plants. This is a situation which has no justification, particularly in an industry which appears to be ready to receive the benefit of government cooperation and encouragement."

Fur Workers Report Doubled Membership As Convention Nears

NEW YORK, Apr. 29.—With the election of delegates to the 13th national convention of the International Fur Workers Union nearing completion, affiliated locals in the fur centers throughout the country are preparing to send in their lists of accredited representatives. Close to 800 delegates and visitors are expected to attend the convention which opens in Atlantic City, N. J., Sunday, May 7.

Pointing out that the IFW membership has doubled since the 12th convention held two years ago, union leaders say that the coming convention will mark the greatest gains the union has ever made.

NEVER SO POWERFUL

"Never before has our union been as powerful, as united and as successful in establishing decent working and living conditions for its members," President Ben Gold declared in a statement issued this week.

Outstanding gains won by the union include the contract concluded in the New York fur market following a general strike last summer, and the unionization of the big Hollander Fur Dyeing plants in 1937.

UNITY IN RANKS

President Gold declared that these gains were due to the "high militancy and discipline of the membership, the firm unity within our ranks and the policy of militant struggle to preserve and improve our union standards even in the face of nation-wide economic depression."

Reaction's Dual Drive

The lockout of the coal miners and the drive in Congress to destroy the Wagner Act represent two parallel attempts to achieve a similar result.

The aim is to weaken or destroy effective labor organization.

Labor's enemies use both economic and political weapons simultaneously—and ruthlessly—for their purposes.

While hundreds of thousands of miners are locked out, pressure is put upon the authorities in many states to deny to these miners and their families the unemployment compensation or relief to which they are entitled.

A disastrous coal shortage is caused by the efforts of open-shop interests to break the United Mine Workers and to bulldoze the public into tolerating their general drive against unionism.

At the same time every political string is pulled to prevent the administration from bringing the operators to reason and ending this situation in the public interest.

* * *

The same anti-labor interests that are behind the coal lockout are also behind the campaign to amend the Wagner Act.

Through the economic weapon of the lockout they hope to weaken the union which is the backbone of the American labor movement, and then to follow this up with an open-shop drive in other industries.

Through the political action of crippling the Wagner Act, they hope to curtail the workers' right to organize and bargain collectively, and so to weaken labor resistance to future wage-cutting.

* * *

Labor traitors are being used by reaction in both of these anti-labor campaigns. The individual scab we have always had with us, but now we have the sorry spectacle of organized scabbery with the official blessing of AFL leaders.

A miserable little dual union is promoted in an effort to break the miners' resistance to the lockout, while these same AFL leaders join with the National Association of Manufacturers in their drive to cripple the Wagner Act.

* * *

Labor can defeat this dual drive of reaction by being similarly active on both the economic and political fields.

The miners are solidly organized in the country's biggest labor union and they know how to deal with traitors and scabs. They are also assured of the solidarity of the whole CIO and of most of the AFL members as well.

But they need the political support of all public-spirited citizens to see that they are accorded the relief to which they are entitled during the lockout; and to impress upon the administration the importance of ending the lockout in the public interest.

The Wagner Act can similarly be saved from amendment, if Congress is given clearly to understand that the great majority of workers and of Americans generally desire the act which upholds American living standards to be preserved.

Fighters in Labor's Cause

A gallant struggle for unionism is in progress in Oklahoma, where the employes of the Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation are now in the fifth month of their fight to make the company grant them their collective bargaining rights.

Every weapon at the disposal of anti-labor corporations has been used against these oil workers and their families. The National Guard has been called out against them. Hired thugs and criminals have been used to terrorize them. All the political power of a great corporation has been mobilized in the attempt to deny their rights. But they have stood firm.

The Mid-Continent strikers, in standing firm for their own rights, are fighting like true soldiers in the cause of all American labor. They deserve the support of all lovers of freedom; and one of the easiest ways to give this support is to remember that Mid-Continent products, D-X gasoline and Diamond 760 motor oil are on the unfair-to-labor list.

The Back Seat Driver

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Lockout of the Miners

OLD KING COAL is letting others run his kingdom these days, with disastrous results.

Like some European monarchs who take their orders from Fascist dictators, American coal operators are letting Wall Street dictators and outside interests tell them what to do.

These American dictators have the same type of mania for conquest as have their Fascist brethren. To them the coal industry is just a battleground in their open-shop campaign against the CIO and organized labor generally.

The coal operators have had years of satisfactory collective bargaining relations with the United Mine Workers of America. The whole industry, as well as the miners, has benefited from the stability, higher standards and industrial peace which a powerful industrial union has brought.

If left to themselves, there is little doubt that the operators would agree to the union's reasonable requests.

But instead of this, they have locked out hundreds of thousands of miners, have created a national catastrophe by depriving the country of coal, and are threatening their own industry with disaster.

Outside Interests

After weeks of futile negotiations, President John L. Lewis explained the operators' refusal to reach an agreement as follows:

"Obviously the interference of outside interests has stopped an agreement," he said.

"It is a bad time for the operators to undertake to destroy the United Mine Workers of America in this year of 1939, to please labor-hating interests in this country who are opposed to the extension of collective bargaining.

"We assert that that cannot be done, and we say that the coal industry should not permit itself to be used as a catspaw in this situation."

Explaining further what he meant by "outside interests," Lewis declared that these include "independent steel companies, utilities, railroads and large consumers of coal—employers who detest collective bargaining and feel that the establishment of collective bargaining in the coal industry will destroy their present conditions."

An Open-Shop Drive

The United Mine Workers are fighting the battle of all organized labor in the present lockout.

The world's most powerful labor union, the UMWA is the backbone of the CIO. It has done more than any other organization to bring the benefits of unionism and collective bargaining to millions of previously unorganized workers.

In concentrating their present attack on the UMWA, the anti-labor financial and industrial interests are aiming to destroy all effective union organization.

If they attain any measure of success in the present fight, they will follow up this advantage by launching open-shop drives in every other industry.

Treachery to Labor

If the coal operators are suckers to let themselves be used as a catspaw for interests outside their industry, what can be said for alleged labor men who also play the game of these open-shop interests?

William Green's attack on the miners' demands, in the midst of this struggle, makes comparison with Judas Iscariot and Benedict Arnold seem unjust to those classic betrayers.

True, he performed a similar act of treachery against the auto workers when they were locked in conflict with General Motors. But this time his stab in the back is directed against the very union which raised him to prominence.

It is also perpetrated at a time when this union is holding back an open-shop drive which threatens every labor organization in the country, AFL as well as CIO.

Not Isolated

Fortunately, the United Mine Workers are by no means isolated in this struggle. They have behind them the strength not only of their own mighty union but also of powerful industrial unions in the steel, auto, rubber, electrical and other mass-production industries.

The UMWA was practical and farsighted, as well as idealistic, when it threw its resources into organization of these industries.

Before the CIO, the UMWA was a stronghold of unionism surrounded by a sea of non-unionism ever threatening to encroach upon it.

Now it is bulwarked by strong unions in surrounding industries, and by the more general acceptance of collective bargaining throughout the country which it has done so much to bring about.

The open-shop interests are fighting all the more desperately because now they must engage, not a single battalion but a whole army of labor. But they are fighting a losing battle.

Neither labor nor the general public will tolerate indefinitely the national disaster which these interests are ready to court for the sake of destroying collective bargaining—and those who hold public office should take note of this fact.

Lewis To Bare Deal By AFL-Employers On Wagner Changes

WASHINGTON, Apr. 30.—Documentary proof of a tie-up between President Green of the AFL and reactionary forces in the National Association of Manufacturers and other labor hating groups in the proposed amendments to the Wagner Act was offered by John L. Lewis, president of the CIO, today.

Lewis charged that Green's changes in the act were prepared "with the aid, advice and counsel of the NAM and several of the most reactionary and anti-labor corporations in the country," in a letter to the Senate Labor Committee now hearing testimony on proposed amendments to the act.

Full text of Lewis' letter to the Committee members follows:

The Senate Committee on Education and Labor is at present holding hearings on several bills proposing amendments to the National Labor Relations Act. This act represents for labor the difference between economic and political serfdom, which prevailed in many areas of our country prior to its enactment, and real freedom. Millions of Americans feel deeply the full significance of this freedom and are therefore determined to fight against the emasculation of this legislation.

The people of this country, in considering the merits of any proposed amendments to the National Labor Relations Act, are entitled to know who are the proponents of such amendments and the economic interests they represent.

SCATHING INDICTMENT

The anti-labor and reactionary views and activities of the National Association of Manufacturers and of such individuals as E. T. Weir and Tom Girdler do not require detailed recital for members of your Committee.

The facts brought to light through the investigation conducted by your Civil Liberties Sub-Committee constitute a scathing indictment against this organization and its affiliated corporations because of their vicious industrial espionage, corruption of local and state officials to deprive workers of their elementary constitutional rights, and the widespread purchase and use of instruments of military warfare against helpless individual workers during industrial disputes.

Opposition from these organizations to the National Labor Relations Act and their proposed amendments to such legislation are understood and appreciated by the public.

PIOUS MASKS

Individuals or other groups, who recommend amendments to the National Labor Relations Act at the behest or in the interest of the National Association of Manufacturers or Weir or Girdler, should have torn from them their mask of pious expression of good will for the workers, in order that the country may know the real motivation for such proposed amendments.

Mr. William Green, Mr. John P. Frey and Mr. Joseph Padway of the AFL are to appear before your Committee to testify on behalf of certain proposed amendments to the National Labor Relations Act which they have recommended.

I charge publicly that these amendments recommended by Mr. Green and his associates have been prepared with the aid, advice and counsel of representatives of the National Association of Manufacturers and of several of the most reactionary and anti-labor corporations of the country.

In order that the millions of Americans who are vitally concerned with this problem may be acquainted with all the facts, may I suggest that your Committee propound to Mr. Green and to his associates who may appear on behalf of their recommended amendments the following questions:

SIX QUESTIONS

(1) Were the amendments prepared solely by representatives of the AFL and in the interest of the workers of the country?

(2) Were the proposed amendments prepared with the advice and counsel of representatives of corporations and of the National Association of Manufacturers?

(3) Did Mr. Green or his associates confer in secret meetings with representatives of various corporations in connection with the preparation of such proposed amendments?

(4) Will Mr. Green and his associates disclose the names of the corporate representatives with whom they conferred in connection with the amendments?

(5) Are the corporations whose representatives consulted and advised with Mr. Green or his associates as to the proposed amendments under charges with the National Labor Relations Board as the most serious and flagrant violators of the Wagner Labor Act?

(6) What accounts for the widespread revolt on the part of many AFL International Unions, State Federations, local labor bodies and of locals throughout the country against the proposed amendments if not the instinctive realization on the part of the members of the AFL that the amendments were not prepared in the interest of the rank and file workers but rather to serve the purpose of enemies of labor?

The workers of the country, whether members of the AFL or the CIO, and all citizens interested in the development of progress and democracy in our country, are entitled to a thorough probing of this situation.

In the event Mr. Green and his associates either refuse to answer this charge or the questions suggested, or evade or deny the same, I am prepared to present to your Committee at any time documentary proof of my charges.

CERTIFY CIO UNION

Washington (FP) — The National Labor Relations Board has certified the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, CIO affiliate, as sole collective bargaining agency for employes of five cotton compresses in New Orleans, La. The action was based on a secret election held recently.

NLRB's Chief Counsel Defends Practices, Raps Amendments To Act

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 29.—Charles Fahy, general counsel of the Labor Relations Board, regards the Wagner Act amendments proposed by AFL leaders, the Chamber of Commerce and others as "weakening and debilitating, destructive of time-honored and established processes, and permeated with possibilities of delay and frustration."

Expressing his opinion in a 149-page brief before the Senate Labor Committee, Fahy concentrated chiefly on the administration of the act and the procedure of the Board, defending it vigorously as "fair as any ever devised for the administration of any law by any agency of government."

The chief threats to the act and to the work of the Board, Fahy pointed out, were in the proposals by Senator Burke and Senator Walsh (the latter backed by President Green of the AFL) to subject the work of the Board to endless court review and veto.

WOULD DESTOY ACT

"Clearly this would destroy the act," he said of Senator Burke's proposal to have the courts decide Board cases. "The present processes, carefully devised, molded into a proper place in the judicial system, and thoroughly approved, are nullified.

"The rights of labor to self-organization and collective bargaining would thus be lost, and the protection of commerce growing out of the present method of solving these matters could not be attained. Strikes would increase due to the frustration and delays incident to District Court proceedings.

"In some districts the act would be wholly ineffective. The net result would be interminable delays, hopelessness on the part of employes, an inharmonious and irreconcilable number and type of decisions, and a gradual defeat and blockade of the whole purposes of the act."

WALSH PROPOSALS BAD

The Walsh-Green plan to make the courts compel the Board to carry out its duties and to provide also for court review of Board decisions, was equally severely criticized.

"No statute dealing with labor relations or any other subject could stand up under these circumstances," Fahy said. "Every disinterested study made of the operations of the Board has affirmed the soundness of its procedure and practice. The Board itself is its most severe critic in this regard, because it has constantly sought, and has attained a scrupulously fair method of arriving at its decisions."

Part of Fahy's testimony was devoted to demolishing the stale charge that the act and Board have been "unfair" to the employers. "Those who might feel that the Board proceeds indiscriminately and irresponsibly to prosecute and pronounce judgment against employers . . . consistently ignore the fundamental factual situation, namely, that of the 20,192 cases handled up to March 1, 1939, 6,680 were dismissed or withdrawn without even formal hearing," he said.

MODERATE POWERS

The powers of the Board are in reality moderate, Fahy pointed out, and have been sustained by the highest courts in 100 cases. "No fines or penalties attach to its violation," he said in discussing the Board orders. "It is not self-executing and is enforceable only by the courts.

Kenosha AFL Against Act Amendments

Kenosha, Wis., Apr. 29—"Hands off the Wagner Act," the Kenosha Trades and Labor Council has warned the AFL executive council.

The local AFL body voted at its last meeting unanimously registered opposition to proposed changes in the Act.

The action followed a speech by Bertam Day, state president of the International Typographical Union conference and a delegate to the 1938 AFL convention in Houston. Day told the local delegates that the convention would have given the federation's executive council no mandate to sponsor the amendments if they had been placed before the convention.

Why Defend Act? Here's The Answer

Denver, Colo., Apr. 29. — A local businessman, presenting reasons why the Wagner Act should be amended, actually gave the best speech on why amendments should be fought by organized labor, in the opinion of an audience which attended a public hearing sponsored by the Denver Defense Committee for the Wagner Act.

Frank Fetzer, the business representative, drew howls from the audience when he declared that no one gets fired for union activities any more, so that no law to protect organization is necessary.

Reid Robinson, president of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers spoke against amendments, while John Sherwood, international secretary-treasurer, served as a member of the examining committee which plied the speakers with questions.

Schedule House Hearings

WASHINGTON, Apr. 29.—The House Labor Committee will start holding hearings on amendments to the Wagner Act on May 4, Chairman Mary Norton announced today.

The Senate Committee on Labor and Education is entering the third week of what gives promise of being extended hearings.

Printers Oppose Changes

W. Virginia

Clarksburg, W. Va., Apr. 29—Opposition to any and all Wagner Act amendments was voted here today by the West Virginia Allied Printing Trades convention.

Representing AFL printers, stereotypers, pressmen, mailers and others throughout this state, the 350 delegates to the council's fourth semi-annual convention took the position that amendments would cause definite harm to the entire labor movement.

New York

Buffalo, N. Y., Apr. 29—Add to AFL unions which oppose changing the Wagner Act—the Empire State Typographical Union.

Meeting in a week-end conference here, the New York printers endorsed the labor law, and made emphatic their wish that it not be amended. Other typographical units throughout the country have previously taken a similar stand.

Help Refugee Tots

Sen. Robert Wagner chats with Actress Helen Hayes, who appeared before a Congressional committee to urge support for the Senator's bill which would permit entry into the United States during the next two years of 20,000 German children.

New York Union Leaders Praise Act

NEW YORK, Apr. 29.—Leaders of both CIO and AFL unions in greater New York, attending a hurriedly called "Save the Wagner Act" conference here last week, adopted a resolution condemning the sponsors of proposed amendments to the National Labor Relations Act as "pro-fascist" and "reactionary corporate interests" and called upon President Roosevelt and Congress to stand firm against such attack on organized labor and the New Deal.

"The amendments being offered spell deep-rooted bias, by their sponsors, against the Wagner Act and organized labor in general," declared the Rev. John P. Boland, chairman of the New York State Labor Relations Board who was the principal speaker.

TYPO OFFICIAL

Elmer Brown, vice-president of New York Typographical Union "Big Six", largest local in the AFL's ITU, denounced "misleaders of labor who are seeking to stifle the progress of unionization through a left-flank attack on the Wagner Act and the Labor Board."

"Green and the other so-called leaders of the AFL are deserting the AFL membership when they attempt to amend the Wagner Act.

"The interests of the members of the CIO and the AFL are common interests and we must forge a unity of labor strong enough not to be divided and strong enough to cleanse from the House of Labor the misleaders.

QUILL SPEAKS

Michael J. Quill, New York City Councilman and president of the CIO Transport Workers Union told the union officials that the proposed Wagner Act amendments were part of a general attack on organized labor and the New Deal administration. He pledged the full support of the TWU, represented at the conference by 100 shop stewards and organizers, in the fight to save the Wagner Act.

Chairman of the conference, attended by more than 1,000 officials from shop stewards up to and including international presidents of unions located in New York, was Allan S. Haywood, president of the New York State Industrial Union Council. Gustave Strebel, general organizer for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, was secretary of the conference and distributed petitions calling for defeat of all proposed amendments.

Coal Lockout Enters 2nd Month

while, indicated to UMW negotiators that they will seek inclusion in their new agreement of the strike penalty clause which the bituminous miners have been fighting to remove. The anthracite operators have also asked for wage cuts and lengthening of the work week.

In face of the growing national crisis in the coal industry, the federal administration has taken no steps to end the lockout beyond sending in conciliators to whose urgings the operators have given no signs of paying attention.

The lockout was caused by the refusal of the coal operators to remove a strike penalty clause from the contract. This clause, under which miners are automatically fined by the operators at a rate of $1 a day for striking, has operated in a one-sided fashion, the union complains.

AFL LEADERS ATTACK

With AFL leaders allying themselves with reactionary employers to fight the CIO, the mine union insists upon protecting itself in future months. Retention of the penalty clause, the union said, would mean that the AFL and anti-union coal operators could form an alliance, foment strikes, and force the UMW to pay the cost of its own destruction.

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York, who sat in at the coal negotiations, was caustic in his criticism of the penalty clause, Pres. John L. Lewis of the UMW reported.

GREEN BUSY AGAIN

How correctly the UMW leadership has diagnosed the situation was proved by Pres. Green of the AFL, who during the course of the week issued another in his long series of "Judas" letters.

Repeating the same tactics he had employed during the course of the auto and steel strikes of 1937, the one-time member of the mine union attacked the UMW demands and questioned the union's right to represent the miners of the country who are almost 100% organized in its ranks.

Pledges of loyalty to the UMW, which have come in from all coal areas in the nation, provided the miners' answer to Green.

Realization that the open shoppers' fight is not merely against the United Mine Workers but against the entire labor movement of the nation was expressed in a story by Robert Allen which appeared in the "Philadelphia Record" on April 25.

ATTEMPT BLOW AT CIO

Allen declared that "open shop forces, working through financial and economic controls behind the scenes, have blocked all efforts to get together. They see in the situation an opportunity to strike a body blow at the CIO . . .

"As government executives view the ominous situation, the object of the open-shop interests is to undermine the UMW in order to lay the ground work for a nation-wide drive to destroy the CIO."

Maritime Strike Strong

to sail tankers chartered by any of the four struck companies since the strike started.

"We know that Standard Oil is preparing to put foreign ships into service wherever it can," he declared. "Since they will attempt to sail them with foreign crews, we feel that it is the duty of the International Transportworkers Federation to refuse to sail those ships.

INFORMAL ACTION

"Representatives of the Federation were in this country last year. We discussed the possibility of cooperation between American and European seamen. Of course formal joint action is not feasible at this stage in maritime organization, but informally we can help each other."

Union officials say that registry under foreign flags of American-owned tankers has long been a sore point between the unions and the oil companies. Companies sometimes register their tankers under foreign flags so that they can load them up with low-paid crews, the NMU holds, and then use this low pay as an argument to keep wages down on American ships.

President Curran of the NMU called upon President Roosevelt to halt the Department of Commerce from issuing more seamen's certificates to non-seamen. Declaring that the certificates were being issued to strikebreakers, the NMU leader said he was forwarding to Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins a series of charges against inspectors for the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation regarding violations of the law governing requirements for specific ratings.

NEW HOMES FOR OLD

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing.

By LEWIS ALAN BERNE
President, Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians

Last week the nation's capital witnessed a new variety of picket line.

It was a picket line made up of home owners whose mortgages are held by the Home Owners Loan Corporation.

From New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Pennsylvania they came, 900 of them, and marched up and down in front of the Washington office of the HOLC. They sang "Home, Sweet Home" and carried signs reading, "Save America's Homes."

Then they attended en masse a hearing of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, which was considering many bills concerning the HOLC. They buttonholed Senators and Congressmen, asking that they help to get a reduction in the interest rate charged on HOLC mortgages.

BIRTH OF HOLC

In 1933 the situation of American home owners was very serious.

Caught in the throes of the depression, many of them were unable to meet their mortgage payments. As a result, thousands of foreclosures took place every month. Thousands of families lost their homes.

To remedy this situation the HOLC was set up. The HOLC was given power to refinance mortgages of home owners who were in danger of foreclosures.

The HOLC loaned more than 1,000,000 home owners funds with which to pay off the mortgageholders. In this way more than 1,000,000 families were enabled to keep their homes.

FLY IN THE OINTMENT

But there was a fly in the ointment.

The terms under which the HOLC granted its mortgages were none too easy. The interest rate was usually 5 per cent. The money usually had to be paid back within 15 years.

For many home owners, then, the burden of meeting mortgage payments was just as heavy as ever before. The 5 per cent interest insisted upon by the HOLC was not much less than the 6 per cent interest they had previously had to make to the banks.

As a result, many of them were unable to carry on. More than 100,000 defaulted on their payments. More than 100,000 homes were foreclosed upon by the HOLC.

NEEDED REFORMS

Today, there is a growing movement on foot to make HOLC's terms much easier. Councils of HOLC mortgagors have been formed. Numerous bills have been introduced into the House and Senate.

The aims of this movement are: (1) an extension of the amortization period from 15 to 20 or 30 years; (2) a two-year moratorium on principal payments when home owners are paying both interest and taxes; (3) the right to redeem homes already foreclosed, and (4) a reduction in the interest rate from 5 per cent to 3 per cent.

The demand that interest rates be reduced carries special weight. There is ample precedent in that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has just lowered its 5 per cent interest rates. Besides, the HOLC secured its money at about 2 per cent and there is little reason why it should make such a large profit on the transaction at the expense of home owners.

Eli Oliver, vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, has expressed support for the amendments liberalizing the act, and the CIO committee on housing is urging all CIO organizations to take the following steps:

1. Go on record favoring such legislation.

2. Convey their sentiments to their Congressmen and Senators.

3. Send special communications to the chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee and to Representative Henry Steagall, chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee.

CIO Wins Praise Of Oregon Priest

PORTLAND, Oreg., Apr. 29.—Anti-CIO red-baiting has failed to impress Father Michael Mulcaire, noted Catholic priest who heads the economics department at the University of Portland.

Speaking at a CIO meeting here recently, Father Mulcaire said:

"I have known many of these men (the leaders of the CIO) personally for many years. I have known them all by reputation, and I challenge any man to name the officers of any organization, be it political or fraternal, who exhibit a finer type of Americanism than the officers of your organization.

FOLLOW CHRIST'S TEACHINGS

"(There are) those who condemn you . . . only because you have successfully challenged the citadel of entrenched privilege and entrenched power by stretching out a helping hand to the victims of an unjust economic doctrine. . . . You preach the doctrine of Charity and Justice which Christ himself preached almost 2,000 years ago. . . .

Minister Likens Coughlin, Hitler

Boston, Apr. 29—Father Charles E. Coughlin is following the example of Adolph Hitler "in alarming fashion," the president of the Michigan Conference of Unitarian Churches told a Ford Hall Forum audience here.

The Rev. Walton E. Cole compared Coughlin to Hitler because of his "unfair endeavor to couple the words Jew and Communist, his emotional appeals to prejudice and his self-glorifying theatrical entrances in mass meetings of his followers."

Coughlin, he added, continues to repeat statements of falsehood even when the truth is explained to him.

BE ON GUARD!

Look for the union label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America when buying men's and boys' clothing, overalls, shirts, undergarments, neckties, lumber jackets, gloves, and all other kinds of men's wearing apparel.

The Amalgamated Label is your guarantee that the articles you buy are of the best workmanship and produced under one hundred percent union conditions by members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

By insisting on the Amalgamated Label you will help to guard against a return of sweatshop conditions to the industry. By helping the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America you help the labor movement generally.

Ask for the Amalgamated label on each part of the suit, coat, pants and vest. There are different Amalgamated labels for coats, pants, vests, shirts and undergarments, work clothes, neckwear and gloves.

This Stooge Union Talks Through Its Hat

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 29—.This is the story of a company union with delusions of grandeur.

The outfit is the Adams Hat Employes Association, which has had two flings at publicity in recent weeks.

Its latest appearance in the public eye came last Monday when its "leaders," escorted by the reactionary Sen. H. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, took the stand for a few minutes at the Senate Committee on Education and Labor hearings on Wagner Act amendments.

Bridges told the committee that the National Labor Relations Board "fomented strikes and encouraged labor troubles." To prove his contentions, he let the company unionists speak. Their "proof" was a decided flop. They claimed that the Adams Hat chain of stores is being picketed unfairly by the United Retail and Wholesale Employes, a CIO affiliate.

But, Chairman J. Warren Madden of the NLRB reminded the stooge leaders, no complaint had ever been made to the NLRB, and the national board has nothing to do with the activities of the New York State Labor Relations Board. That was the end of their Washington episode.

ACTIVE AFTER LOCKOUT

The Employes Association began to be heard from after the company bought out the Kaufman Hat Co. and the Truly Warner Hat Co., both of which had long-standing union agreements. Fifteen men were locked out by the new management, and, when they sought to get their jobs back, were told that the company wouldn't hire "any union members."

The United Retail and Wholesale Employes promptly placed the store chain on its unfair list, and placed picket lines around outlets in New York, St. Louis, Kansas City, Rochester, N. Y., and Newark, N. J.

It was then that the company union sprung into action, placing large advertisements defending the management in every New York City paper.

COST $2,238

According to Federated Press, labor news service, the ad space cost the Employes' Assn. "exactly $2,238.32, if you take the company union's word that the employes paid for it out of their 'welfare fund.'

"But the association has only 210 members (so the financial secretary says) and dues are only 75c a month.

"So it took 14 months' dues from the entire membership to tell the public:

" 'We feel that no outside meddlers should have the right to disturb the strong bond of mutual understanding and respect that has always existed between our employer and ourselves.' "

This employer-employe amity is probably heightened by the fact that the financial secretary of the "union" is a brother-in-law of the stores' general manager.

PAY BELOW SCALE

Martin Koppel, business agent of the CIO union, has charged that while the union wage scale is $35 a week, Adams is paying its salesmen as low as $18 and $24 weekly. Reports from the cities in which the union is picketing indicate a sharp decrease in sales.

Pretty soon, the URWEA predicts, the Adams management is going to realize that though company union ads look nice in print, they don't convince workers to buy scab hats. Then the brief fling of the Adams Hats Employes' Assn. will be all over.

Nation's Accident Rate Lower; WPA Helping Promote Safety

HELPING PROMOTE SAFETY: WPA runs a check-up station for automobiles in Tacoma, Wash., (left) where car-owners may find what ails the old bus' brakes. At right: This Illinois WPA worker might have been blind in one eye, except for the safety goggles supplied to project workers to protect them from just such accidents as this.

WASHINGTON, Apr. 29. — For fifteen consecutive months highway accident fatality rates for the entire country have shown a decrease, according to the National Safety Council's latest report. This, despite the fact that the number of vehicles on our streets and highways have shown a steady increase.

A total of 8,500 lives have been saved which would have been snuffed out if accidents had continued to occur with the frequency normally to be expected on the basis of past experience. Millions of dollars in property, hospital bills, etc., also are chalked up as a direct saving from the accidents which DIDN'T happen here.

A number of contributing factors are responsible for this encouraging record. Through city-wide and state-wide safety campaigns conducted by the Safety Council, local police departments and similar organizations, the country has become safety conscious. Newspaper and magazine editors the nation over have taken up the cudgels and battled for the elimination of carelessness—responsible for so large a percentage of the annual accident toll.

WPA'S CAMPAIGN

And there is a third important factor: the WPA campaign to increase public safety. Safety on the highways; safety in industry; safety in our schools—these are three objectives of a broad program of construction and white-collar projects which give employment to hundreds of thousands of needy persons certified to WPA rolls.

The utilization of relief labor for the improvement of our streets and highways and the installation of safety signals, is perhaps the greatest contribution of the WPA to safety. Roads and streets have been widened, re-surfaced, repaired. Dangerous curves have been eliminated; death-courting grade crossings replaced by overpasses or underpasses; warning signs and traffic lights placed at strategic points.

HELP AIRPLANE LINES

Air travel has been made safer by the installation of many beacon lights along our principal air routes and by frequent markings to guide aviators, painted on the roofs of barns or other buildings by WPA workers.

Other construction projects of the WPA have resulted in greater safety for children, through the repair and modernization of public schools and in many cases, the replacement of antiquated buildings that were potential fire-traps.

In connection with traffic safety, WPA white-collar workers have been utilized in many cities and towns to survey traffic conditions. These surveys are the basis of recommendations for more efficient handling of difficult traffic problems.

One salient fact demonstrated by the WPA's own safety program on projects is that good safety records can be achieved without high cost to the employer. The WPA's remarkably good record has been brought about by the use of ordinary and familiar safety devices—platforms, guard rails, masks, goggles, ropes, safety belts, where necessary, and, in addition, by regular inspection and the training of workers in safety methods.

Book Review:

Seeds of Destruction

By John M. Blair

(Covici-Friede, New York)

Reviewed by WALTER N. POLAKOV

Anyone who realizes that most labor problems arise from the changed technology of production will find this book by Mr. Blair informative, helpful and interesting.

When the impact of machinery on the civilized world created an industrial revolution in England and Europe in the late 17th and early 18th centuries, unemployment resulted, textile and and engineering workers rioted and starved, and many workers destroyed machines on which they could put their hands.

But the machines of those days, even though they were more productive than the earlier models, were merely forerunners of the machinery of today. The changed technology of that time not only altered the economic system of enthroning the capitalist system, but it also wiped out laws affecting agriculture and the old feudalism. In successive steps it reduced working hours and limited employment of women and children in England.

Unemployment in Ireland at that time was likewise severe—so severe that it prompted the famous author of "Gulliver's Travels" to publish a satirical pamphlet advising the unemployed to roast their babies to take them out of their misery and to fatten themselves upon their flesh.

NEW SITUATION

That situation, dramatic as it was, does not measure up to the situation which has developed with our lifetime. The old machinery has been supplanted by new types of machinery powered by electricity, which have increased productivity by leaps and bounds and displaced a far greater number of workers than at any previous time.

While machinery and mass production are certainly desirable —for they could produce plenty with ease, they have turned out to be a curse because artificial scarcity is still maintained and the number of hours of work for each worker is still kept at a high level. This, despite the speedier production of men-displacing machines.

This is the picture which forms the background of Mr. Blair's book, Seeds of Destruction. But the book itself deals with factual, statistical analysis of why our capitalist system does not provide workers and farmers with a living income.

The book is divided into three main sections. First, it discusses what may be called axioms or apparent facts, which are later traced into the second part as the aggravating trends, and are studied and followed up in the third part, which analyzes the corrective measures. In that latter section of the book, Mr. Blair shows the difficulty, if not the impossibility, of making capitalism function as a sane economic system.

Blair analyzes such trends of great importance to the working classes as technological displacements in manufacturing, mining, agriculture and clerical work; real wages; the behavior of prices contrasted to wages; the inadequate use of our resources, etc.

In another section of the book he shows how the farmer on one hand and the worker on the other are exploited by middlemen who impose exorbitant disitrbution charges. He also shows how the large, monopolistic industries curtail their production and payrolls greatly in times of depression and maintain prices, while in upswings these same industries raise their prices higher and faster than their wages.

Reorganize Tenant Farm Locals

Memphis, Tenn. — Reorganization of former Arkansas Southern Tenant Farmers Union locals in the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers union, parent organization, was completed with the unanimous vote of 87 delegates here to retain their CIO affiliation.

The vote came after similar decisions by locals in Missouri and Oklahoma, which broke away from the executive board of the STFU when the latter decided to withdraw from the international and the CIO.

The break was caused by the action of the STFU officers in refusing to abide by the Cannery and Agricultural Workers' constitution and in ordering locals to stop paying per capita taxes to the international.

A three-point plan involving compliance with the constitution, full autonomy and lifting of the suspension of the STFU officers was drawn up by the national office of the CIC some weeks ago. This was accepted by the international but rejected by the officers of the STFU.

St. Louis Ladies Busy Helping Unions' Drive

St. Louis, Apr. 29—Plans and activities of the Ladies Auxiliaries Joint Committee here indicate a vigorous program of social events and legislative and trade union work.

Early in May they're planning a mass meeting to celebrate Mother's Day. Project workers, social service union members, the Harriet Hubbard Society and other groups have promised to participate.

Last month a crowd of union wives and their husbands attended the installation ceremonies and watched a program of songs and skits on union subjects.

LEGISLATIVE CORNER

In the "Legislative Corner," a feature of the monthly bulletin, first place is taken by the fight to save the Wagner Act from amendments. Over 200 letters were sent to Congressmen urging them to vote against amendments at one meeting, and the campaign is being pressed throughout the community.

Housing, social security, national health and a proper appropriation for WPA are also important items of concern to the Joint Committee. A resolution opposing the so-called Equal Rights Amendment that would abolish all protective legislation for women workers was passed, and radio time secured in the fight against this reactionary proposal.

Tories Run Amok In Wisconsin

(By Federated Press)

MADISON, Wisc., Apr. 29.—A preview of what is in store for the country should the reactionaries win in 1940 was provided in Wisconsin when the legislature approved a drastic bill limiting the right to strike, banning sitdowns, and sharply curbing picketing, the checkoff and the closed shop.

The bill, described by labor leaders as a "semi-fascist strait jacket" is now before Gov. Julius P. Heil, Republican, for signature. Approval by the comic-opera governor, himself a wealthy industrialist, is taken for granted. Labor leaders are planning an immediate test of the law's constitutionality.

PRINCIPAL POINTS

1. The present labor relations board, patterned after the NLRB, is abolished and a three-man "employment peace board" to be named by the governor with senate approval, is substituted.

2. Strikes are outlawed unless voted by a majority of the employes in a collective bargaining unit — the unit to be determined by the new board.

ATTACK CLOSED SHOP

3. Closed shop contracts are outlawed unless approved by three-fourths of the employes in a designated bargaining unit.

4. Sitdown strikes are declared illegal.

5. Secondary boycotts are declared illegal.

6. Dues checkoffs are forbidden unless unanimously requested.

7. Only employes on strike may picket, and then only if a majority in a designated bargaining unit are on strike.

8. Strikes affecting perishable commodities may be called only after 10 days' notice.

MUST REPORT FINANCES

9. Unions are required to furnish detailed financial statements to their members. In effect, this means a detailed account of union finances for the employers, since a law adopted a few weeks earlier forbids a union to exclude an employe, though a known company stooge, from membership.

10. Employers are given wide authority to file charges of "unfair labor practices" against their employes. Coercion, which may be construed as any form of persuasion by an unfriendly board, is defined as an unfair labor practice.

WEASEL WORDING

Penalties for violation of provisions of the new law are fines up to $500 or imprisonment up to one year, or both. A multitude of seemingly harmless phrases in the 7,000-word law are capable of being interpreted by an employer-controlled board with crushing weight against labor unionism.

A coalition of Republicans and Democrats in both houses of the legislature fought off all attempts of Progressives to amend the bill. In the senate one Progressive joined with the reactionaries, and one Republican fought the bill. All senate Democrats, holding the balance of power, voted for it.

CO-OPS PROTEST

The bill was officially sponsored by the Wisconsin Council of Agriculture, a federation of farm organizations, although few believe that bona-fide farmers had any hand in writing the bill. Two of the council's largest affiliates, the Midland Cooperative Wholesale and the Wisconsin Cooperative Milk Pool, quit the council in protest against the bill.

Leaders of the council are farmers only in the sense that they are owners of large dairy farms. It is commonly believed that they served as a front for reactionary industrialists.

Union Heads Form Group For Refugees

New York, Apr. 29 — Heads of a number of CIO international unions have joined the Trade Union Committee for Spanish Refugees, it was announced here by the Spanish Refugee Relief Campaign.

The CIO members include Pres. Heywood Broun of the American Newspaper Guild; Pres. Reid Robinson of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers; Pres. Joseph Curran of the Natl. Maritime Union; Pres. Lewis Allan Berne of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians; Pres. Lewis Merrill of the United Office & Professional Workers; Pres. Harold Pritchett of the Intl. Woodworkers of America, and Pres. Donald Henderson of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers.

A number of AFL union executives are also on the committee, which will put on a nationwide drive to aid the refugees from General Franco's government. Many of the half million Spanish refugees are trade union members, George Pershing, secretary of the committee, pointed out.

Steel Local Sponsors Big Banquet

Youngstown, Ohio, Apr. 29—Several hundred members of Brier Hill Lodge 1462, Steel Workers Organizing Committee, attended a banquet here, prepared and served by the Betsy Ross Women's Auxiliary. Hugh Carcella, SWOC field representative, was toastmaster.

In reviewing the progress of the lodge during the past year, President Anthony Mastopietro said he felt confident that in another year the lodge would have the Brier Hill plant of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. organized 100 per cent.

Formed two years ago, the lodge is now humming with activity, he said, with parties, dances and other social affairs being held regularly by both the lodge and the auxiliary. Although the mill is working at only 25 per cent of capacity, new members are continuing to join the union in increasingly large numbers.

Hosiery Union To Appeal Apex Damage Case

PHILADELPHIA, Apr. 29.—Appeal of the Apex Hosiery case to the higher federal courts was announced this week by the American Federation of Hosiery Workers. The appeal follows refusal of Federal Judge William Kirkpatrick to set aside the triple damage verdict in the suit of the Apex Hosiery Co. against Branch 1 of the AFHW. Damages awarded amounted to $711,932.55.

The CIO union's argument was based on the ground that the case did not properly come under the Sherman Act. The Circuit Court of Appeals for the third district is expected to hear the case late in May or early in June.

Decision in the case will hinge on the question of whether or not the damage provisions of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act can be used as an anti-labor weapon to penalize unions attempting to call strikes.

AFFECTS EVERY UNION

According to the union's attorneys, if the higher courts upholds the verdict of the District Court, no union in the country will be safe from damage suits brought under the Sherman Act, which provides triple damages. Suits would be brought on the theory that a strike is an interference with interstate commerce, and therefore in violation of the law.

Union counsel also pointed out that the newspapers have taken the point of view of reactionary interests and have tried to make the sit-down strike and violence the question before the court, failing altogether to realize that the company would have brought suit in the state courts, and not under the Sherman Act, if it were solely seeking reparation for damages to the plant.

PERVERTING SHERMAN ACT

The Apex case is one of a long series of instances in which the Sherman Act, passed to curb monopolies, has been used against the labor movement, in spite of the fact that neither the author of the act nor Congress intended it to apply to unions.

In no case, however, union counsel declared, have the courts gone as far as in the Apex suit. The strike out of which the case arose occurred in the spring and summer of 1937 at the big Philadelphia Apex plant, long a bitterly anti-union concern.

There was nothing unusual about the strike, AFHW officials declare. It was typical of hundreds of other sit-down strikes which took place during the same period. It was the attempt later to penalize the union under the provisions of the Sherman Act, they hold, which now makes the Apex strike important.

Trainmen's Head Hails LaFollette Bill

CLEVELAND, Apr. 29.—If Congress is really fired with an enthusiasm to do some "emasculating," let it forget about the Wagner Act and turn its attention to the labor spy racket, and the industrialist-strikebreaker alliance against organized labor.

This is the advice of Pres. A. F. Whitney of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen which appears in a signed article in the May issue of the union's monthly magazine.

Whitney said the BRT will cooperate with all progressive organizations in helping win passage of Senate Bill 1970, the Oppressive Labor Practices Act, which is based on the findings of the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee.

"Now that the LaFollette Committee has 'put the finger' on the vicious practices of labor-hating employers," Whitney added, "it is high time that organized labor in America, together with the progressive groups of citizens throughout the land are vitally concerned with the problem of protecting our civil liberties, took a bold stand against the fascist forces now plotting the destruction of collective bargaining."

Wagner Act Fight At A Glance

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Here is the situation in the fight to preserve the Wagner Act against crippling amendments:

1. Pres. William Green defended the AFL's company unionism in his appearance before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor. He denied that he, personally, had been in collusion with employer groups—but Sen. Burke, tory foe of unionism, congratulated Green, pledged all support possible in a "non-prejudicial" way.

2. Joseph Padway, AFL counsel, obviously worried by charges made by CIO Pres. John L. Lewis, admitted that he had conferred about amendments with lawyers whose clients are employers.

3. Sen. Robert LaFollette warned AFL leaders that their amendment to permit employer "interference" with unions would hurt all labor. Story Page Six

4. George Kidwell, state labor commissioner in California and veteran AFL leader, attacked AFL amendments. Story Page Five

Half Million Bituminous Miners Idle

NEW YORK, May 5. — All bituminous coal mines in the nation were scheduled to close today as temporary working agreements in the Mid-West and South came to an end. Over 125,000 miners will be added to those already idle as the result of the Appalachian lockout of members of the United Mine Workers of America, unless there is some unforeseen last minute development.

In addition it appeared probable that anthracite miners and operators would be unable to agree on a new contract before the deadline, and that some 100,000 men in Pennsylvania would cease working until an agreement is reached.

Coal supplies are dwindling. In New York City two of the main subway lines cut operations 25 per cent to protect their stock of fuel. From other sections of the nation reports indicated that corporations are being seriously affected by the lockout.

The union is demanding elimination of the strike penalty clause. President John L. Lewis has charged that outside corporate and financial interests have pushed the lockout in an effort to weaken the union and the CIO.

Cuban Labor Backs Tanker Walkout

HAVANA, Cuba, May 5 —The Cuban labor movement is backing the strike of the National Maritime Union, CIO, against four oil tanker lines which have refused to sign a new union agreement.

The Cuban Federation of Workers has placed all Standard Oil products on its unfair list pending settlement of the dispute. The transport workers have voted to avoid buying Standard Oil products in buses.

Set Board Hearing In Oil Strike Case

TULSA, Okla., May 6.—Intimidation and coercion was officially charged against the Mid-Continent Petroleum corporation by the National Labor Relations Board in a formal complaint issued by Dr. Edwin A. Elliott, regional NLRB director, this last week.

Dr. Elliott set the date for the hearing into the Oil Workers' International Union's four-month old strike for May 15. It is the same date that Jack N. Hays, president of the local union, is scheduled to go on trial in district court on a grand jury indictment charging conspiracy.

The formal complaint charges that the Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation, through its foremen, sought to coerce and intimidate its employes beginning March 1, 1937, and continuing through December 22, 1938; that it placed armed guards inside the refinery for the purpose of accomplishing such intimidation, and that after the strike had been called it sponsored, through its agents, a 'back to work movement' designed to break the strike, and that on December 31, 1938, it discharged, by formal notices signed by George Bush, personnel director, 222 of its employes "because of the fact that they had joined and assisted . . . . the Oil Workers' International Union, and had engaged in concerted activity in its behalf."

Die Casters Elect New Secretary

NEW YORK, May 6. — With the unanimous re-election of George C. Peacock of Pottstown, Pa., as national president and the selection of Edward T. Cheyfitz of Toledo, Ohio, as national secretary-treasurer, the fifth convention of the National Association of Die-Casting Workers at the McAlpin Hotel in New York City adjourned early this week.

Delegates representing locals from eastern and middle-western states were in session for six days during which time they listened to CIO leaders and discussed outstanding problems facing the union.

The adoption of an extensive organizational program with the objective of 100 per cent organization of the Stewart Co. in Chicago, the Alemite Co. in Woodstock, Ill. and the Precision Co. in Cleveland and Syracuse, marked the high-point of the proceedings.

UNION LABEL VOTED

Delegates gave the Organizational Committee a rousing ovation as they unanimously adopted the plan to organize Stewart, Alemite, and Precision. As an aid to the organization of the unorganized, the use of a union label on tools, dies, and castings was referred to the incoming national officers.

Among the various resolutions adopted was one opposing any amendments to the Wagner Act. Delegates voted to support the the Chicago Newspaper Guild strike and to adopt a Guild striker.

Maritime Strikers Flee Gas

Members of the National Maritime Union flee a barrage of tear gas laid down by Everett, Mass., cops as they broke up picketing at the Beacon Oil plant there. The pickets, pressing the union's strike against four oil tanker lines, later re-appeared at the scene garbed in gas masks. Several children were injured by the police attack.

Engineers Win Poll

Baltimore, May 5—The Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn., CIO affiliate, zipped through to an easy National Labor Relations Board victory among the men employed on the 16 tankers of the Pennsylvania Shipping Co.

Ernest McCallum, assistant business agent for the MEBA local, said that the CIO union had gained 41 votes to 25 for no union and none for the United Licensed Officers Association.

Many CIO Groups Hold Conventions

Pennsylvania CIO Convention Meets; Joins Apex Fight

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 6. — Over 600 delegates, representing miners, steel workers, newspapermen, textile workers and other CIO groups gave added impetus to the industrial organization movement in Pennsylvania here the past three days under the shadows of tory-minded legislation seeking enactment via a machine-controlled state Republican regime. They represented over a half-million CIO workers.

With emasculating amendments, introduced by the score in both state houses, now in session, delegates renewed their faith in the CIO and pressed forward to eliminate and correct the measures boding ill for unions, either CIO or AFL.

ACTION ON APEX

The convention voted to fight the $700,000 Apex decision against Philadelphia Branch 1 of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

It sought to block enactment of a measure which would cut by over 20 per cent compensation to injured workmen, fought against abolition of the state's Civil Rights Bureau; condemned legislation aimed at shearing the teeth in the state's "Little Wagner Act" covering intra-state workers; rounded up opposition against the Van Allsburg bill which would throw relief cases back into the maelstrom of county politics and allow publication of clients' names; hit proposed amendments to the Anti-Injunction Law and voiced opposition against "ripper" acts which would again make civil service regulations jokes in Pennsylvania. Dozens of progressive bills, aimed to aid labor, were also endorsed.

Opposition to any and all changes in the Wagner Labor Relations Act were voiced and Congress was urged to pass the "Oppressive Labor Practices Act," introduced by Senators La-Follette and Thomas, banning strike-breaking agencies and tactics.

PROMINENT SPEAKERS

John Brophy, national CIO director; Emil Rieve, president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers and director of the TWOC; and Paul W. Fuller, international president of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers, flayed William Green and the top AFL hierachy for its anti-labor stand on the Wagner Labor Act and other progressive legislation.

Brophy said the CIO was for unity of labor but that it would be realized only when "more of the AFL rank and file recognize the fact that their top leadership is determined to prevent effective unity." He said the AFL leadership has "long grown callous and indifferent to rights and needs of a larger labor movement."

RIDICULES GREEN

Rieve ridiculed Green's statements that his proposed amendments to the NLRB would not weaken labor's ranks and said it was to the everlasting disgrace of the AFL leaders to join hands with the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and National Association of Manufacturers in seeking to amend the Wagner Act. "The CIO wants unity," he said, "but prefers a divided labor movement to none at all."

Fuller traced the rise of the Glass Workers, told of its compactness and solidity and gave the CIO credit for the position it now holds. He revealed that the union will shortly enlarge its jurisdiction into other glass fields and that the name of the group will be changed to a more inclusive name.

ASK HOUSING DRIVE

John W. Edelman, former regional director of the CIO in Philadelphia and now with the U. S. Housing Authority, spoke on labor's need to solidify its forces to gain proper housing facilities for workers.

The convention also went on record urging passing of the state Thompson Bill, which would construct more schools; against confirmation of Major Lynn Adams as superintendent of State Police due to his alleged labor-baiting in the past; sought more funds for the Wages and Hours Administration to eliminate chiselers.

Father Charles Rice of Pittsburgh, noted liberal Catholic priest, urged all workers to unite to fight the forces of reaction let loose as a result of the last election.

The 1940 convention will be held at Reading on May 4.

Teamsters Get Pact In New Orleans

New Orleans, May 6.—Efforts of the CIO to organize teamsters here, carried on in spite of concerted terror from city, state and county agencies, as well as by AFL goon squads, were rewarded with a union contract won this week.

The contract was negotiated by Arthur Leary and Bob Robertson, organizers from the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, who put in months of hard work before the agreement was won.

Last year a strike was met with organized violence by police and employers, who attacked picket lines at will, wounding and forcibly deporting scores of workers.

Council's Position On Apex Case

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 5. — The $711,932.55 damage award won by the Apex Hosiery Co. against Branch One of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO, was based on "an outrageous distortion of the original Sherman Act, passed to control trusts and monopolies."

This was the charge made in a resolution passed by the convention of the Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council here.

The delegates asserted that "the lack of precise definition in the Sherman Act permits anti-labor judges to distort the Act in this fashion so as to make it an anti-labor measure and to include within its terms legitimate activities of labor, particularly strikes which succeed in stopping production."

The Circuit Court of Appeals ruling on which the Apex decision was based was "unequivocably condemned" by the council.

The statement ended with a resolution that the state CIO council "petition Congress to amend the Sherman Law so that it shall be stated in such clear, unequivocal, unmistakable terms that even judges can understand that the Sherman Act shall never again be applied to trade unions."

The council urged "all branches of the labor movement to join with us in supporting Branch One, of the AFHW in its fight to overturn the Apex verdict; and to join us in the fight to amend the Sherman Law so its meaning and intent shall be clearly stated and so that never again shall labor be included in its terms."

700 Delegates Expected At Textile Meet

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 6.—Some 700 delegates from 32 states are expected to attend the five-day national convention of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee scheduled to open here May 15. Main objective of the convention will be the formation of a permanent national union to complete the organization of the 1,250,000 workers employed in the textile industry.

Formed March 9, 1937, by an agreement between the CIO and the United Textile Workers, the TWOC has already brought more than 200,000 textile workers under union contracts and is now negotiating for additional agreements covering 176,000.

709 CONTRACTS

Officers will report to the convention that TWOC now has 709 contracts with employers while negotiations are under way for 520 more.

CIO President John L. Lewis and Frances Perkins, U. S. Secretary of Labor are the principal guest speakers scheduled to address the convention. Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and TWOC chairman, and Emil Rieve, president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers and TWOC executive director, will direct the convention proceedings.

Both the UTW and TWOC will open their respective conventions May 15. The TWOC is expected to vote to merge with the United Textile Workers, following which the consolidated organizations will proceed with a joint convention.

TO PUSH CAMPAIGN

Extensive plans will be presented at the convention for spreading union activities throughout the cotton, silk, rayon, woolen and worsted, synthetic yarns, carpet and rugs and other branches of the textile industry.

The Hosiery Workers' Federation and the Dyers' Federation, both powerful union groups in their respective industries, will take part in the convention proceedings. A number of important independent textile unions are said to be planning to send fraternal delegates.

SIGNED BIG COMPANIES

Outstanding among the agreements won by TWOC since it was formed two years ago by the CIO in response to an appeal from the UTW, are contracts with the American Woolen Co., the Viscose Corp., the Celanese Corp. and other giants in the textile industry.

At present it is on the point of negotiating agreements with Marshall Field & Co., and other important mill chains.

LIFTED WAGE RATES

TWOC was chiefly instrumental in obtaining the proposed 32½c an hour minimum for textiles, exclusive of woolen and worsteds, under the federal wage-hour act, which will mean wage increases for 120,000 textile workers around July 1. The hosiery workers obtained a 40c hourly minimum in the full-fashioned branch, and 32½c in seamless hosiery under the act.

Final preparations for the unity convention which will be held at 150 Broad Street, formerly Scottish Rite Temple, were made at a joint meeting of the TWOC advisory committee and the UTW executive council.

CIO Council Planned In N. Carolina

Greensboro, N. C., May 5.—Looking forward to the formation of a North Carolina Industrial Union Council, CIO leaders from more than a dozen industrial cities in the state met here and discussed a program of future activities.

E. L. Sandefer of Winston-Salem, CIO director for the Carolinas, presided at the meeting. Delegates told of CIO union activities in all parts of the state, and of major gains in recent months.

Necessity of forming city industrial union councils throughout North Carolina was stressed by the delegates in attendance. Greensboro's CIO unions, it was announced, will meet May 7 to form a city central body.

Seamen Defend Unions Against Employers' War

NEW YORK, May 6.—Twenty-five CIO seamen, all of them members of the National Maritime Union, got medals for heroism at sea from Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, presented on the front steps of the Marine Building at the World's Fair today, and heard themselves praised as true representatives of the best American marine tradition.

The medals were designed and struck by the National Maritime Union.

Six of the heroic seamen are now on strike against the Standard Oil Co. and other tanker operators, because Standard Oil wants to break the union. These are members of the crew of the S.S. Esso Baytown, who rescued passengers of the unlucky British airliner Cavalier from the cold Atlantic last January.

PRAISED THEN

Standard Oil was full of praise for these seamen then, when their courage and seamanship won the admiration of the entire country. Today Standard Oil joins with the other operators in calling them—and the 5,000 of their fellow workers on strike with them — "un-American," "Moscow agents" and the like because they walked off the tankers to save their union and their living and working conditions and the welfare of 12,000 workers employed in the industry.

Standard dominates the industry, and usually carries on negotiations for the other companies as well as itself. Negotiations for the industry were stalled by Standard until the union approached other companies individually. Most agreed, and are negotiating today. Standard, Socony-Vacuum, Tidewater and C. D. Mallory decided to hold out—and their ships are struck today.

The blank refusal of the companies to negotiate in good faith is described by the NMU as a

Shutdown Closes All Soft Coal Mines In Nation

NEW YORK, May 6.—A national shutdown of the nation's bituminous coal industry was in effect today, as temporary working agreements in the midwest and south expired and more than 100,000 members of the United Mine Workers joined the 320,000 locked out in the Appalachian fields.

Meanwhile, it appeared likely that a shutdown of the anthracite mines in Pennsylvania would follow on Monday, placing the total number of idle well over half a million.

Pres. John L. Lewis of the UMW had called back into session the union's National Policy Committee, composed of more than 150 representatives, to discuss operators' last-minute proposals. Four attorneys of the UMW and the CIO were on hand to advise the union.

OUTSIDE INTERESTS

The operators have stubbornly refused to grant the union's demand for removal of the penalty clause. Lewis has charged that outside Wall Street influences have been at work to prevent a settlement of the lockout, in order to weaken the UMW and with it the CIO.

The United Mine Workers Journal, official union magazine, charged this week that "the sinister hand of outside interests" is to blame for the prolongation of the stoppage.

"'Stop labor!' became the battlecry of the opposition," the magazine continued. "They meant to put a stop to the progress that the labor movement has made in the last few years, a degree of progress the like of which never before was seen in the American labor world."

Reports from various sections of the country indicate that the coal supply is reaching the short-

River Shipping Tied Up

That "ole man river" does know something, the song notwithstanding — he knows that Mississippi steamers and tow-barges won't be moving until the Federal Barge Lines in St. Louis agrees to sign a closed shop contract and grant pay raises to the Inland Boatmen's Union, CIO affiliate. Green Forgets

WASHINGTON, May 5—Bill Green is still dreaming about the good old days. He slipped for a minute in his testimony before the Senate Labor Committee, and referred to the United Mine Workers as an AFL affiliate. While the audience and the committee roared with laughter, Green stammered, blushed and rushed on to the next sentence.

Leather, Fur Unions To Merge

Atlantic City, May 8—Proposed merger of the Intl. Fur Workers Union and the Natl. Leather Workers Assn., both CIO affiliates, is expected to win the approval of delegates to the fur workers convention, which opened here yesterday.

The union's general executive board, meeting just before the convention opened, voted unanimously to recommend the amalagamation plan to the delegates.

NLWA APPROVED

Previously the membership of the leather association voted in a secret ballot for the merger. The association, which held its convention at Lynn, Mass., last week, has a membership of well over 4,500 in several tanning centers throughout the east. The fur workers have close to 50,000 members.

The new organization will be known as the Intl. Fur and Leather Workers Union of the United States and Canada, and will consist of two divisions, one for each industry.

CIO approval of the merger has already been given to the two unions, which have had the matter under discussion for several months. The action, it is pointed out, will eliminate jurisdictional disputes arising from the overlapping work of tanning fur skins and tanning leather hides, both of which processes are often carried out in the same factory.

The leather workers' union's national committee is headed by James Chenery and its secretary-treasurer is Daniel J. Boyle. Ben Gold is president of the fur workers.

Pledge Aid To Miners

New York, May 6—A resolution pledging full cooperation and support to the United Mine Workers in their present dispute over a contract in the Appalachian field, was voted unanimously by the four regional councils of the Industrial Insurance Agents Union, composed of 300 office chairmen representing 3000 agents in greater New York.

The union is affiliated with the United Office and Professional Workers, CIO.

Akron Cops Attack Strikers, Injure Four

AKRON, May 6.—Striking rubber workers demanding wage cut restorations were savagely attacked by police as they picketed a trainload of goods leaving the Loewenthal Co. plant here.

Police surrounded the pickets, arbitrarily ordered them to disperse, and suddenly swept down on the strikers when they maintained their lines.

Steve Oziomek, president of Local 41, United Rubber Workers, was clubbed to the ground by three policemen and then kicked into a ditch.

Estel Nay, a one-armed striker, was clubbed into a ditch and was unconscious when he was removed to the hospital.

Two others were injured so badly as to require hospital treatment.

LIKE STORM TROOPERS

Oziomek declared that "the actions of the police were more like those of Nazi storm troopers than American guardians of law and order."

"WILL NEVER FORGET"

"The workers at Loewenthal will never forget this morning. Last year we believed the company's statement that it needed a wage reduction to stay in business and keep the workers employed. We granted them the cut—which wiped out all our gains of four years—and then, two weeks later, 30 men were laid off.

"We have tried almost daily in the last two months to get that cut restored. We even offered a compromise on restoration, but the company refused to listen to our proposals.

"Against our wishes we were compelled to strike. We are going to stay on strike until our wages are restored.

"If this treatment is what we get for cooperating with the company, it is going to be a long, long time before we do it again."

25 Awards

To Open Hearings On LaFollette Bill

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Hearings are expected to open within the next week on the Oppressive Labor Practices Act of 1939, introduced in the Senate by the LaFollette-Thomas Civil Liberties Committee.

Based on the committee's findings during the last two and a half years, the bill would post heavy penalties on those who employ and those who hire out labor spies, strikebreakers, industrial munitions and private armies.

Named to the subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, which will conduct the hearings, were Senators LaFollette and Thomas, as well as Pepper of Florida, Hill of Alabama and Borah of Idaho.

Hearings are expected to last only a short time. Union members should send letters to members of the committee asking for an early and favorable report on the bill.

CIO Attacks Concentration Camp Bill

Washington, May 6—The CIO is opposed to a bill just passed in the House of Representatives calling for the arrest of deported aliens who can't get passports from their native lands, according to a letter sent to all Congressmen by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel.

The result of this bill, Pressman said, "would be that such individuals would be placed in concentration camps for the rest of their lives. This procedure is a violation of the fundamental principles of justice and in contravention of our constitutional guarantees."

THREAT TO LIBERTIES

Pressman pointed out that adequate federal and state police regulations already exist to take care of aliens who have violated the laws of the U. S.

"We feel that the civil liberties of all citizens of our country are menaced when such unconstitutional measures are directed against aliens," he continued, "and we know that frequently alien bills are used to intimidate and threaten workers who are exercising their ordinary rights to join with their fellow workers in the improvement of their living conditions."

Labor Is Yet To Be Heard

The alliance of AFL leaders with the worst enemies of labor in the campaign to amend the Wagner Act becomes more and more obvious as the Senate hearings progress.

The Walsh amendments, sponsored by William Green, are similar in so many respects to those advanced by the National Association of Manufacturers that some kind of an alliance has been long suspected.

Now CIO President John L. Lewis has announced he has documentary evidence that the Green-Walsh amendments were prepared in actual collaboration with representatives of anti-labor manufacturers.

At the hearings, Senator Burke, who has embodied the NAM demands in his own documents, has not hesitated to show his friendliness for Green and his amendments.

The more reactionary Senators act like father-protectors for their little friends, the AFL spokesmen.

And well they may, for the amendments which Green advances would weaken if not destroy the Wagner act, by allowing employers to interfere in many ways with the workers' free choice of union representation.

Green and some of his associates have testified — for the manufacturers. But the true voice of labor is yet to be heard.

Labor's voice will be heard when the opposition to all proposed amendments of the Wagner Act is expressed by CIO, AFL and railroad brotherhood spokesmen.

Apex Case Threatens All Labor

The $700,000 damage verdict won by the Apex Hosiery Company of Philadelphia against Branch 1 of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers represents a threat to every labor union in the country.

If this verdict is upheld in higher courts, no union can feel free to exercise its lawful rights in strikes without danger of possible prosecution and triple damage suits under the Sherman anti-trust act.

The issue involved in the Apex case is not the sit-down strike, nor the claimed damages to the company's plant. It is whether the Sherman act is to be prostituted to union-busting purposes, or to be used as it was intended to curb the predatory powers of big corporations which use monopoly control to prey upon the people. The anti-trust law itself specifically states that it shall not apply to labor unions.

Where corporations are concerned, the courts have frequently held that they must control nearly 100 per cent of an industry to be found guilty under the Sherman act. Yet in the Apex case, which involved only 3% of the industry, the union was found guilty of "restraint of trade."

The CIO has pledged its full support to the Hosiery Workers to aid in winning a reversal of this vicious anti-labor decision. It is launching a movement for amendment of the Sherman act to protect union rights. Every labor union in the country should join in the protest and in demanding protection against such suits which are designed to bankrupt and destroy them.

Heroes And Strikers

When the crew of the SS. Esso Baytown rescued the passengers of the Bermuda air-liner Cavalier, which sank in the sea, the papers were full of accounts of their heroism.

Their pictures were seen in movie newsreels as well as the press, the radio told their story, and the whole world rightly acclaimed their brave deeds.

But when these same heroes, all members of the National Maritime Union, CIO, are compelled to go on strike for their union rights, a veil of silence falls over them.

The Esso Baytown heroes are demonstrating their courage today on the picket line. They have joined with the 5,000 seamen on strike against Standard Oil of New Jersey, Socony-Vacuum, Tidewater Oil and C. D. Mallory.

Standard Oil, their employers, which not long ago acclaimed their heroism, now denounces their activities and seeks to break their union. They picket with banners saying "Heroes Yesterday, Strikers Today," but the business press does not now consider their pictures and their banners newsworthy.

Yet yesterday these heroes saved the lives of but a few persons; today they are fighting to preserve the living standards and the rights of thousands of workers and their families.

Little Sir Echo

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

On the Spot

WILLIAM GREEN was on the spot when he testified before the Senate committee for his amendments of the Wagner Labor Act.

Red-faced and flustered, he was like a small boy trying to recite but not sure of his lines. His attempts at emphasis sounded more than unusually mechanical and misplaced.

The Senators were courteous and friendly. Senators Taft and Walsh made a point of helping him out when he got in a jam. AFL attorney Joseph Padway was there to prompt him. And he had the moral support of organized manufacturers and the reactionary press.

But still Green looked as if he were on the spot—and he was.

He was on the spot, because he knew the CIO had the goods on him when John L. Lewis charged his amendments were prepared in collaboration with anti-labor manufacturers.

He was on the spot, because he knew the rank and file of the AFL were not with him.

Above all, he was on the spot because he knew he had a hopelessly bad case which all his shouting and arm-waving could not conceal.

Lewis had charged publicly, offering documentary proof, that Green's amendments had been prepared with the aid, advice and counsel of the National Association of Manufacturers and of several of the most reactionary and anti-labor corporations of the country."

Green tried to bluster his way out with an attack on Lewis and with a denial that he personally had conferred or counseled with representatives of NAM corporations.

Padway, however, admitted he had consulted "lawyers with employers as clients" and said that some of them had suggested "excellent amendments."

Both tried to offset in advance, by partial denial and partial admission, the documentary evidence which the CIO will produce in support of its charges.

Green claimed that all his amendments, except the proposal for a new five-man labor board, were authorized by the Houston AFL convention.

Yet comparison of the amendments with the convention decisions which Green put in the record, will show a number that are not in any sense covered by the Houston authorization.

In any case, all the convention did was to authorize certain changes in general terms. The specific amendments in the Walsh bill were never submitted to any convention.

Representatives of anti-labor manufacturers were consulted in their drafting, as the CIO will show, but AFL unions like the Machinists have complained they had no opportunity to pass on them.

Even if actual evidence of collusion were not available, the Green amendments are so similar to those of the NAM that they are on their face more a manufacturers' than a labor program.

Senator Burke, bitterest foe of the Wagner Act, whose amendments embody the maximum program of the NAM, did not conceal his fellow-feeling for Green.

When the AFL president said he had heard "my good friend, Senator Burke" was allied with the NAM, Burke replied: "I've heard rumors to that effect. I'm glad to welcome you to the company."

Burke welcomed Green even more cordially to the anti-labor ranks when he shook hands with him after the hearings and said:

"Now that we are laboring in a common cause I want to congratulate you on your fine presentation. I will be glad to support you in any way that is not prejudicial to your cause."

Green waxed more than usually emotional when he sought to deny that AFL unions could play the role of company unions.

For that is what he is actually proposing.

His amendments would allow employers to "interfere" with their employes' choice of a union. They would allow company strawbosses to influence elections. They would forbid the Labor Board to outlaw contracts signed by an employer with an organization which he and not the workers has chosen. And they would remove a number of other protections against company unionism.

What other motive could an AFL leader have in proposing such amendments than the hope that employers will use their new power to pick AFL unions for their company purposes?

Green attempted to deny that there is a widespread revolt among AFL members against his program. But the evidence is increasing daily, and will be submitted to the Senate committee in detail, that AFL as well as CIO workers strongly prefer to choose their own unions, and are opposed to the Green-NAM amendments which would permit employers to tell them which union to join.

Murray On Radio May 9

WASHINGTON. — Vice-President Philip Murray of the CIO will discuss "Why the Wagner Act Should Not Be Amended" in a nation-wide broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System on Tuesday, May 9, at 9:45 p.m. Eastern Standard Time.

Minneapolis AFL Body Lauds Wagner Act

MINNEAPOLIS, May 6.—The Central Labor Union here, representing more than 25,000 members of the AFL, is opposed to any changes in the Wagner Labor Relations Act, describing proposed amendments as acting "in behalf of the employers and not of labor."

The position was taken in a resolution unanimously passed at a recent meeting, which said in part:

"The Wagner Relations Act has proven to be an instrumentality which has definitely aided labor.

"The employers throughout the nation are now seeking to amend the law so as to transform it into an instrument against labor.

"The Minneapolis Central Labor Union goes on record against any amendments to said Wagner Labor Relations Act which will only act in behalf of the employers and not labor."

Principal affiliates of the central body are the Teamsters and the Building Trades Workers.

CIO Asks Nationwide Campaign To Reverse Apex Decision

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 6.—Citing the record of William Green and the top leadership of the AFL in siding against the workers in the Apex Hosiery case, in the Wagner Act fight, in the struggle of the United Mine Workers with the coal operators, and in swallowing Homer Martin, and other renegades John Brophy, national CIO director, charged here that Green and his henchmen "have deliberately tried to hold down the living standards of millions of American workers."

The assertion was made in the keynote speech delivered by Brophy to the second annual convention of the Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council, and was heard by 600 delegates representing more than 500,000 CIO workers in the state.

"This is a serious charge," Brophy said. "It is made seriously, and it is the essence of our criticism of those leaders in the AFL. The record proves the charge."

Green's suspicion and hatred of the CIO go back to 1935, Brophy pointed out, and all his subsequent actions bear out the record. "When the courts lent themselves to tory interests in an effort to stop the march of organized labor," he declared, "we find Bill Green stupidly and blindly exulting over the decision in the Apex case because he thought it was confined to the CIO But it goes much further than that.

"The $700,000 damage suit which was won by the Apex Hosiery Co. against Branch 1 of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers constitutes a threat to the entire labor movement of America.

1,000 Sign Telegram, Laud Act

Cleveland, May 5.—A telegram containing nearly 1,000 signatures of Clevelanders demanding no amendments to the Wagner Act was sent to Senator Elbert D. Thomas, chairman of the Senate Education and Labor committee this week by the Cleveland Union Leader, weekly newspaper of the Cleveland Industrial Union Council.

The flood of signatures poured into the office of the newspaper after it called upon trade unionists to fill out a coupon and mail it along with a nickel to add their names to the telegram.

Not only CIO members, but AFL unionists and small business men added their names and nickels for the sending of the big telegram.

STATE PAYMENTS

At Baltimore, the Maryland Unemployment Compensation Board released payments of about $85 to each of 1,400 idle miners, with the payments to be made in weekly allotments. The state's action follows similar steps in Pennsylvania and Tennessee, although West Virginia and Virginia have ignored the union's plea that the present idleness is not a strike but a stoppage of work pending the settlement of terms in the new agreement.

Pennsylvania's Republican administration, however, has forced the relief recipients to sign a bond of $5,000 so that, if they have earning power of more than $90 a month, they will be forced to return the money to the state or forfeit the bond.

upon the terms of a new contract. The mine owners have been seeking abolition of the 30-hour week and other improvements won by the union in recent years.

The anthracite shutdown will result if union and employer negotiators are unable to agree

Joint CIO-AFL Action Hits Mississippi Barge Lines

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 6.—Joint CIO - AFL action on the Federal Barge Lines here is putting up stiff resistance against attempts to return this government owned company to open-shop conditions, as the Inland Boatmen's Union, CIO, and the International Longshoremen's Ass'n, AFL, keep 5,000 dock and river workers on strike along the Mississippi.

The strike, called by the Joint River Workers Council, was provoked by refusal of Major General T. Q. Ashburn, Barge Lines head, to negotiate for contract renewal unless the unions agreed to drop all mention of union hiring and by a flat refusal even to discuss wage increases.

PROVOCATIONS

Other provocations by the management, according to the Joint CIO-AFL Council, include attempts to ship scab crews, refusal to pay agreed scales, firings for union activity, blacklisting workers, promotion of company unionism, and breaking of seniority rules, all in violation of the agreement with the unions.

Signing of the Mississippi Valley Barge Lines by the Council was hailed by Felix Siren, CIO, chairman of the Council and Harold Spies, AFL, secretary, as evidence that the unions will work with the employers when the latter are willing to cooperate.

A letter has been sent to Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war, outlining the situation and demanding the removal of the reactionary Major - General and other anti-union officers of the lines.

California Labor Official Attacks Green's Proposals

San Francisco, May 5—George G. Kidwell, California commissioner of industrial relations and longtime leader of the AFL Bakery Wagon Drivers Union of this city, is on record today as flatly opposed to all amendments to the Wagner Act.

Kidwell made it plain that the changes suggested by the AFL's top leadership are included in his denunciation of the suggested changes in the Act.

MEMBERS OPPOSED

"I do not believe that the changes sought by the Federation will meet with the approval of the members of the unions affiliated with the AFL," the commissioner wrote to the Commonwealth Club, liberal organization here.

"I believe these amendments were conceived in a fit of anger during what I consider to be an abnormal state of mind in the labor movement.

"They are sought in order to kill a rival labor movement. I believe that a calmer view and a more comprehensive view of the labor movement in its relations to America should and will prevail.

"Nothing I have read or seen inclines me to the view that the National Labor Relations Act needs an amendment."

Defend Union

frontal attack on the life of the union. Chief issue involved is the preferential hiring system and wage increases. Preferential hiring has been in effect for some time in all ports except New York.

Preferential hiring gives the union a voice in the way men shall be hired—it isn't the closed shop, as the companies try to claim. It does protect the union, and this is why the companies had to eliminate it if their attack on the union was to succeed.

"It was therefore absolutely necessary for the union," according to a recent statement of the NMU," in order to halt this contemplated attack to get preferential hiring firmly planted in the proposed contract. We could not retreat from this position, although we did agree to certain exceptions in the preferential list. The crews demanded that the negotiators stand fast."

So Standard, that had nothing but praise for its workers when they rescued the passengers of the Cavalier, has nothing but scabs and police clubs and tear gas for the same men when they go out on strike to protect their union and their livelihood.

In Boston, Mass., Republican police opened fire with tear and vomit gas and started swinging billies on NMU pickets. Dozens of men were hurt, more arrested, and a playground full of kids in the neighborhood put to flight.

Push 'Baby' Wagner Act

Providence, R. I., May 6.—Aided by joint action with the state AFL, the CIO Industrial Union Council here is pressing hard for enactment of a state "baby Wagner Act" in the Rhode Island General Assembly, according to Joseph Mayo, CIO subregional director.

The bill has already passed the lower house, and labor is working to get it out of the Senate Finance Committee where it is now under consideration.

CERTIFY UAW

Washington, May 6—Based on cards signed by the employes naming as their desired union, Local 80, United Automobile Workers, CIO, the National Labor Relations Board has certified the union as sole bargaining agency for hourly rated production employes and gang leaders of the Germer Manufacturing Co., Detroit, Mich.

Ohio Typo Union Raps Amendments

MANSFIELD, Ohio, May 6—Delegates to the semi-annual Ohio Typographical conference held here recently, representing practically every Typographical local in the state, went on record in favor of disregarding the wishes of AFL President William Green, and voted to oppose any change in the Wagner Labor Act.

Green Defends AFL's Stooge Unions, Has Poor Case Against Act

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Pink-cheeked President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, wound up a two-day assault on the Wagner Labor Relations Act with a spirited defense of AFL company-unionism and a plea that Congress change the labor law to help the federation's leaders continue more effectively their flank attack upon industrial unions.

Green's testimony was pleasing to foes of the Act. As he concluded his speech, Sen. Burke of Nebraska, most outspoken foe of the Wagner Act, whose amendments embody the program of the National Association of Manufacturers, rushed over to the AFL president to shake hands.

"Now that we are laboring in a common cause I want to congratulate you on your fine presentation," he said. "I will be glad to support you in any way that is not prejudicial to your cause."

Green had just finished reading a lengthy reply to charges by CIO president John L. Lewis that the Walsh amendment, which Green sponsored, were "prepared with the aid, advice and counsel of the Natl. Association of Manufacturers and of several of the most reactionary and anti-labor corporations of the country."

Green's reply was an attack on Lewis and a denial that he personally had conferred or counselled with NAM representatives. Joseph Padway, AFL counsel, who followed Green on the stand, admitted that he had consulted with "lawyers with employers as clients" and that some of them had suggested "excellent amendments."

OFTEN FLUSTERED

Green proved an uncertain champion of his amendments. While he stuck to the text of his 38-page statement, he seemed on reasonably safe ground, but when peppered by questions from Senators Thomas and Ellender, Green often appeared to be badly confused and very much on the defensive.

Frequently, Sen. David Walsh of Massachusetts, who introduced the Green amendments, was forced to rush to his rescue and to place the answers to questions in Green's mouth.

TAFT HELPS GREEN

It was Sen. Ellender of Louisiana who most frequently embarrassed Green with his questioning about AFL company-unionism. Sen. Robert Taft, Ohio tory Republican, several times sprang to the AFL president's defense.

Green was particularly weak in his attempts to defend his amendments which would permit employers "to interfere" in their employes' choice of a union and would permit foremen to use their influence to sway the workers' votes. Some of the senators were frankly skeptical of Green's claims that foremen who campaigned for one particular organization could not unduly influence the workers on the employers' behalf, since there is a secret ballot.

LaFOLLETTE TAKES ISSUE

Sen. LaFollette took issue particularly with Padway, when he followed Green, on the Green-Walsh amendment that would remove the word "interfere" from the list of actions forbidden to employers.

"Congress must guard against taking any steps which will play into the hands of that powerful but recalcitrant minority of employers who have refused to accept in good faith the principles of the Act," LaFollette said.

"It seems to me that the net effect of your amendment would be to free an employer to use his influence where employes are faced with the choice of two unions. Because of their past experience, employes often feel that is is best for them to do what the employer prefers they should do."

Affidavit By Lewis Hits Martin

Detroit, May 5.—Charges by Homer Martin that CIO leaders entered into a conspiracy against the former leader of the United Automobile Workers were described as "untrue and perversions of facts" in an affidavit filed in Wayne County court here by attorneys acting for John L. Lewis.

The affidavit is part of the proceedings in the injunction suit brought by Martin against the UAW-CIO. Court action has been postponed until May 9.

REVELATION

Lewis makes a hitherto unpublished revelation in the affidavit when he stated that it was Martin, who asked him to appoint an administrator over the union to cure internal troubles. Martin made the request, Lewis charged, in his hotel room at Lansing, Mich., on April 6, 1937. The CIO leader said he replied that he would be glad to consider any request from the UAW board.

He likewise made it clear that he intervened in the union's affairs only on request from its leaders, and that he attended the Milwaukee convention of the UAW in 1937 at Martin's invitation.

Times Head Refuses To Sign Pact

New York, May 5—Like the girl who would rather die than say "yes," Publisher Arthur Hays Sulzberger would rather sell his New York Times than recognize the American Newspaper Guild.

Hearings ended this week, in their second month.

As one of the paper's three trustees, and committed to preserving its "impartiality," Sulzberger told a National Labor Relations Board hearing of his opposition to a Guild agreement.

COSTS $750 A DAY

The hearing, now in its 57th day, is based on a Guild complaint of discrimination against union members, and the firing of two of them. During the almost daily sessions, which are costing the Times an estimated $750 in fancy legal fees, charges of espionage and firm opposition to unionization of the editorial staff have been heard.

The Times staff has taken a position that it would show "bias" towards labor by signing a Guild contract. This argument, frequently used by publishers in the early days of the Guild, has been heard in diminishing frequency in recent months.

FIRED MEN LISTEN

"We've never opposed unionism," Sulzberger said, while only a few feet away sat Fred Jaeger and Leonard Goldsmith, both of whom have charged that their discharge from the paper was due to their union activities.

Though the paper claims it prints all the news fit to print, no story on the NLRB hearing has appeared in its columns.

Chicago Typo Union Offers Strike Mediation

CHICAGO, May 6. — The Chicago Typographical Union, AFL affiliate, moved today to bring about a settlement of the five-month strike of the American Newspaper Guild against the two Hearst papers here.

President Ralph Fischer of Local 16, ITU, invited representatives of the Guild and the Hearst management to avail themselves an offer from the printers' union to cooperate in "any way" to settle the strike.

Guild leaders immediately accepted the printers' offer.

The action followed a stormy meeting of the ITU local in which it over-rode demands of AFL Pres. William Green and John Fitzpatrick, head of the Chicago Federation of Labor, that it condemn the Guild and declare the Herald-Examiner and Evening American "fair" to organized labor.

On motion of Henry Rosemont, a printer employed on the Hearst papers, the membership voted down a resolution prepared by its local executive board and substituted one merely "deploring the prolongation" of the long Hearst strike.

The typographers and other mechanical workers on the American and Herald-Examiner, respecting their contracts, have continued to work on the two papers, but in almost every case have indicated sympathy for the Guild's strike for job security.

GREEN RESENTED UNITY

The fact that three members of the typo union are members of the "AFL Committee to Aid the Guild Strikers" infuriated Green and Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor. In refusing to repudiate the action of its members, the typographical local—second largest in the country—is risking expulsion from the city AFL body.

The Chicago Teachers Union, which had taken similar action in the face of Green-Fitzpatrick threats, has already been ex-expelled.

AFL big-wigs have tried to pass the Guild strike off as a "jurisdictional dispute" with a fake company-dominated AFL editorial workers organization, but few bona fide AFL unions in the Chicago area have heeded their arguments.

ADVERTISING SLIPS

In his attempt to help the management fight the Guild, Fitzpatrick lent his name to an advertising promotional circular prepared by the Hearst management. The letters, addressed to prospective advertisers, denies the existence of any bona fide labor dispute on the papers and declares that AFL unions have no dispute with the Hearst management.

Advertising space amounting to 2,826,798 agate lines has been lost by the two struck papers since last December, the Guild's Strike Committee estimates, with an estimated drop in revenue of $1,130,719.

Poll In Oregon AFL Area Shows Amendments Unpopular

PORTLAND, Ore., May 6.—A poll on the question of revising the Wagner Labor Relations Act conducted here by the News-Telegram, showed that two out of every three persons voting were opposed to any changes being made in the law.

Taken in a county where the membership of AFL unions outnumbers that of the CIO, the poll showed 66.7 per cent of the voters in favor of keeping the Labor Act as it is, to 33.3 per cent in favor of changing it, indicating that the majority of the AFL rank and file is definitely opposed to amendments.

Added significance is given to the poll from the fact that a vicious anti-labor initiative law was passed last November in Oregon, while in California and Washington, similar measures were defeated.

Spokesmen for labor point out that the newspaper which conducted the poll cannot be considered friendly to the Wagner Act, as "it has consistently published the usual misstatements about the Act and the National Labor Relations Board," in its attempt to influence its readers against the law.

INFORM COMMITTEE

Results of the poll were called to the attention of Senator Elbert D. Thomas, chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, by Lee Coe, editor and manager of the Labor Newdealer. In a letter sent to the Senator, Coe said that it was his considered opinion the people of the United States want the act left as it is.

Some of the reasons for preserving the law listed by participants in the poll were:

"The Wagner labor act is the first national labor legislation ever enacted in the interest of wage earners."

"It was inevitable when this enlightened piece of legislation was passed that the forces of reaction would muster their ranks for an attack upon the law."

'NO TINKERING'

"No tinkering with the Wagner Act. The 'big boys' have had things their own way long enough."

"The figures of the National Labor Relations Board recently submitted to the Senate committee examining the act are sufficient argument for no revision at the present time."

"Amendment would take teeth from the Act."

"AFL amendments are based on partisan disgruntlement rather than on principles of justice."

"Testimony"

WASHINGTON, May 6—Representative Fred Hartley, Jr., of N. J., one of the sponsors of the AFL amendments to the Wagner Act in the House, was the first witness in House hearings on the Act.

His testimony consisted almost entirely of letters from anti-union manufacturers.

Mr. Dooley:

On The Open Shop

"'What's all this that's in the papers about the open shop?' asked Mr. Hennessey.

"'Why, don't ye know,' said Mr. Dooley. 'Really, I'm surprised at yer ignorance, Hinnissey. What is th' open shop. Sure, 'tis where they kape the doors open to accommodate th' constant stream av min comin' in t'take jobs cheaper than th' min what has th' jobs. 'Tis like this, Hinnissey. Suppose wan av these freeborn citizens is workin' in an open shop f'r th' princely wage av wan large iron dollar a day av tin hours. Along comes anither son-av-a-gun and he sez t' th' boss, "Oi think oi could handle th' job nicely f'r ninety cints."

'"Sure," sez th' boss, and th' wan dollar man gets out into th' crool worould t' exercise his inalienable roights as a freeborn American citizen an' scab on some other poor devil. An' so it goes on, Hinnissey. An' who gits th' benefit. Thrue, it saves th' boss money, but he don't care no more f'r money thin he does his right eye.

"'It's all principle wid him. He hates t' see men robbed av their indipindence. They must have their indipindence, regardless av anything else.'

"'But,' said Mr. Hennessey, 'these open-shop min ye menshun say they are f'r unions if properly conducted.'

"'Shure,' said Mr. Dooley, 'if properly conducted. An' there we are; an' how would they have thim conducted? No strikes, no rules, no contracts, no scales, hardly iny wages an' dam few members.'"

H. Martin's Democracy

Pontiac, Mich., May 5.—Add to Homer Martin's concept of democracy:

Speaking at a freak Martin mass meeting in Pontiac recently, Pat McCartney, Martin goon leader and notorious Dies Committee witness, shouted, shaking his fists:

"Any man in this hall who disagrees with our president, Martin, will be kicked out of here."

FLANKED BY FLAGS

McCartney was flanked by three American flags—symbols of free speech! Discredited Homer Martin, sitting on the platform, smiled his approval of McCartney's inflammatory language.

One unionist was chased out of the hall and threatened with bodily harm because he tried to ask why Martin had changed his views on the AFL.

Gotham's Wholesale Employes Keep Their Union Activities Moving At A Merry Clip

NEW YORK, May 6.—The history of the CIO is essentially a story of workers' actions, of workers' initiative, of workers' capabilities.

The spot where these equalities can best be seen is in the local unions themselves — and Local 65 of the United Retail and Wholesale Employes of America is as good a demonstration as any of a livewire CIO local in action.

To show what it has been doing, the local's educational department has just issued a well-designed pamphlet called "Local 65 In Action," which tells the story in words and pictures of the union's growth from 84 members in January, 1934, to 4,017 members in January, 1939.

The United Wholesale and Warehouse Employes—as the union calls itself—is proud of the fact that its membership constitutes an "army of volunteer organizers" which carries the message of unionism "through the wholesale and warehouse industry of the New York area."

EVERYBODY ORGANIZES

It continues: "Led by a general staff of six business agents, more than 300 rank and file leaders—the shop stewards—are steadily at work in the wholesale centers, bringing to unorganized workers the message of Local 65. . .

"But that tells only half the story. Behind this company of organizers stands the membership, 4,000 strong, practiced pickets, most of them, ready to volunteer their service in crucial times when contracts hang in the balance. At the call of the union, in their free time, from hundreds of offices, stock rooms and shipping rooms pour these minute men on the picket line—the most potent argument any employer knows for signing a contract with his employes."

Organizing and protecting gains is naturally the most important phase of Local 65's work—but it's by no means the only one.

A BIG PROGRAM

An educational program based on the motto of "study and play in the organized way" reaches just about every member. Take a look at some of Local 65's extra-curricular activities:

1. A school where members can bone up on labor history, learn how to improve their union.

2. A weekly dance class, with a paid instructor, for jitter-bugs, would-be jitter-bugs and just plain wall-flowers.

3. A dramatic group which brings to the members some well-produced presentations of skits and short plays.

4. A library where Mr. Unionman can browse in best-sellers or old classics.

5. A lively monthly newspaper. "New Voices," which gives a picture not only of the union's work, but the whole pattern of national and international events.

You think that's enough for one union? You're wrong. For you're forgetting about the Local 65 camera club, about the Local 65 orchestra, about the Local 65 sports program—basketball, swimming, baseball, ping-pong, bowling.

Parts of the Program

YOUR WPA JOB

By Ralph Hetzel, Jr.

Secretary, Committee on Unemployment

The Reorganization Order

The President's first order under the Reorganization Act of 1929, sent to Congress on April 25, is a very important one for the unemployed. Among other provisions, it sets up two coordinating agencies which deal directly with their problems.

The first is the Federal Security Agency, which is to consolidate the activities of the Social Security Board with those of the United States Employment Service. It will also have supervision over the National Youth Administration, the CCC, the Office of Education and the Public Health Service.

The second is the Federal Works Agency, which will include the PWA and the WPA, as well as the United States Housing Authority, the Bureau of Public Roads and the Public Buildings Branch of the Procurement Division.

CIO FAVORS MOVE

The CIO is decidedly in sympathy with this attempt to coordinate and make more efficient the activities of the various agencies created to alleviate unemployment. A resolution calling for such consolidation was part of the general unemployment program adopted at the CIO Convention.

Moreover, since this order calls for the transference of all the functions of the WPA to the new agency, it is decidedly superior to the Byrnes' Bill which it has replaced. The Byrnes' Bill would have seriously limited the functions of the WPA.

The reorganization order is a decided step forward in preserving the non-construction projects on the WPA, since they are transferred into the new agency as an integral part of the WPA. When the appropriation for the WPA for the next fiscal year comes up, it will be more difficult to dislodge them, since they have been recognized in this manner as being necessary for the full functioning of the work relief program. The new name of the WPA is the Work Projects Administration. It is a name which promises a broad program of projects.

HELPS FEDERAL PROGRAM

The reorganization order will also make it more difficult to turn over the work relief program to the states, as was suggested in the Byrnes Bill and various other similar bills which have been introduced this session. The present system of administering work relief through the Federal Government seems to have beeen considerably strengthened by this consolidation of the two largest work relief agencies.

As soon as it becomes more clear in detail how the reorganization order will affect the unemployed and the present WPA program, we expect to prepare a pamphlet which will explain it in detail.

As a solution of the problems of the WPA and the unemployed, however, the reorganization order is inadequate in itself.

STILL MUST FIGHT

Under the provisions of the Reorganization Act of 1939 the President cannot continue any activities or agencies beyond the limit set for them by law. The appropriation—and therefore the life—of the WPA ends on June 30, 1939. And the fight to gain an adequate appropriation for the WPA for the next fiscal year and to continue it in its present form is still to be fought.

At the present, however, there does not seem to be any substantial change in the function of the WPA. And the necessity for fighting for an adequate appropriation for the next fiscal year is, if anything, more urgent at the present time than ever.

The order enables the government to establish a coordinated long-time program. The blueprints are drawn. It is now necessary to create such a program by adequate appropriations.

Plan Drive In Cleveland

Cleveland, May 5.—An organizing drive which will concentrate all the best organizing forces of all CIO unions on certain key plants was being prepared here today by the Cleveland Industrial Union Council.

Under the plan all full-time organizers and volunteers from various unions will make up one large committee. This city-wide committee will be divided into districts near their homes. Subcommittees will be responsible for visiting unorganized workers in their particular district.

In addition, union members of various nationalities will hold city-wide mass meetings for workers of their particular nationality in a drive to get them all organized.

Papers Stuck with Yarn As Unions Stay in CIO

NEW YORK, May 5 — Incipient efforts to take a section of the organized barbers and beauticians in New York out of the CIO and into the AFL, boomeranged into a movement strengthening CIO organization and inaugurating a new unionization drive here recently.

Following newspaper reports headed "BARBERS READY TO QUIT CIO" a conference of representatives from each of the nine Barbers and Beauty Culturists local industrial unions in New York was held at the office of CIO Regional Director Allan S. Haywood.

The conference pledged unswerving fealty in the CIO, decided to set up a new joint council and a special organizing committee, headed by Haywood, to launch a new drive in the city. All locals were fully and officially represented.

Big Rayon Firm Signs TWOC

New York, May 6.—The Duplan Silk Corporation, one of the largest rayon weaving and silk throwing concerns in the country, signed an agreement this week with the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, covering 3,500 workers in its plants at Hazleton, Wilkes-Barre, Berwick and Kingston, Pa.

The pact was signed on behalf of the union by Emil Rieve, executive director, and George Baldanzi, assistant director, following its ratification by the workers involved. It provides for a preferential union shop, an eight-hour day, 40-hour week, time and a half for overtime, and machinery for settling disputes.

Haling the agreement as being a substantial improvement over the previous contract which it replaces, Rieve said: "We have obtained a preferential union shop after a year's contractual relation with the Duplan Silk Corp., where previously we were simply the sole collective bargaining agent."

Nab Pay Law Chiseler In Baltimore

Baltimore, May 5—The first detected wage-hour law chiseler in Maryland, Leon J. Mogel, operator of the Eastern Shore Hosiery Mill at Berlin, has been permanently restrained from violating the law by a United States District Court injunction issued here.

The order, signed by Judge W. C. Chestnut, provides that Mogel must restore some $1,400 to his 45 underpaid employes. Mogel consented to the decree. He was also told to pay one worker fired for complaining of wages as low as 10 cents an hour, some $39.

Leo H. McCormick, Maryland wage-hour division representative, told the court that employes of the hosiery mill had been working as long as 50 and 60 hours a week, and that time-and-a-half for overtime, as required by the law, had not been paid.

Chemists Get Pact

San Francisco, May 5.—The first union contract in San Francisco for workers in chemical laboratories has been signed by the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians, CIO affiliate, and the Pacific division of the Consolidated Chemicals Co.

It gives a 5-day, 40-hour week, 2-week vacation, 15-day annual sick leave, a month's dismissal pay, seniority and a union shop.

Support LaFollette Committee

Washington, May 6 — Prompt action to allot additional funds to the Senate Civil Liberties Committee was asked today by E. L. Oliver, executive vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

In a letter to the Senate Audit and Control Committee, which is now holding a resolution giving the LaFollette-Thomas subcommittee $100,000 to continue its investigating work, Oliver wrote:

"Our democracy has no greater protection than the right and duty vested in the Congress to pursue such investigations. They are our best means of safeguarding the welfare of our people from damage or destruction by powerful forces that do not or will not reveal their methods of operating to the public sight."

CIO Wins Oliver Plow Poll

CHARLES CITY, Ia., May 6 —A big victory was won by the United Farm Equipment Workers local here this week in an election conducted by the National Labor Relations Board among 1,000 Oliver Plow employes.

Negotiations for a contract, postponed until after the poll, were resumed this week with the union now in a strong position to win a good agreement.

150-VOTE MARGIN

With almost every eligible worker casting a ballot — 954 out of 1,003 employes were entitled to vote—Local 115 of the UFEW won out, 551 to 403, in spite of the fact that after the date of the election was announced, it had only one day in which to explain the issues to those still on the fence.

A sound truck and leaflets were used to carry the CIO union's message to all Oliver Plow employes during the few hours available. Local 115, a newcomer to the union field, was organized this year in a whirlwind 60-day campaign.

SEEK CONTRACT

Gerald Fielde, secretary-treasurer of the Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee, and George Eldridge, organizer, aided Local 115's negotiating committee in bargaining for a new contract.

Oliver Farm Equipment plants in South Bend, Ind., and Battle Creek, Mich. are already under CIO contracts. When an agreement is signed covering the Charles City works, all the company's plants will be 100% CIO.

WPA Cuts 200,000: Reorganization Lauded

WASHINGTON, May 6. — Some 200,000 WPA workers will lose their jobs in the next few days.

As a result of the cut in WPA funds engineered by Congressional tories, Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, sent wires to all state WPA officials ordering reduction in the payroll to be accomplished by May 8. Some 2,600,000 workers will be left on WPA projects, but their number will be successively cut in coming months.

Meanwhile, Pres. Roosevelt has requested Congress to appropriate one and three-quarters billion dollars for work relief for the next fiscal year, most of it to be allotted to WPA.

MILLION LESS JOBS

The sum will be sufficient to keep an average of 2,000,000 workers on WPA jobs during 1940—about a million less than the average for the 1939 fiscal year.

As a result of the President's reorganization plan, WPA will be brought into the new federal works agency, along with the PWA, the U. S. Housing Authority, the Bureau of Public Roads and the Public Buildings Branch of the Procurement Division.

HELPS WPA PROGRAM

In a letter to CIO representatives, Ralph Hetzel, unemployment director, pointed out that "the CIO is decidedly in sympathy with this attempt to coordinate the activities of the various agencies created to alleviate unemployment. . . .

"The reorganization order is a decided step forward in preserving the white collar projects in the WPA since they are transferred into the new agency as an integral part of the WPA. It also makes it more difficult to turn over the work relief program to the states."

Priest Tells Catholics To Aid Labor

Washington, May 6.—Catholics should "get into the parade and go down the road with the laboring man" in the opinion of the Most Reverend Robert E. Lucey, Bishop of Amarillo, Tex., in a statement made public here.

"Our attitude toward labor appears at times to be aloof and detached," Bishop Lucey said. "As organized labor marches down the highway of its destiny, we seem to stand by the roadside, offering comment and criticism. Sometimes we hand the men flowers, sometimes brickbats. In either case, our position is wrong.

"I think we ought to get into the parade and go down the road with laboring men. We should be with them, for them, of them. They belong to us and we to them."

Win Taxi Contract

Heads of the Transport Workers Union's taxi division mapping out plans for discussions with owners of New York City's cab fleets. The union won wage increases in the new agreement, signed shortly before a strike was to start.

Labor Board Moves Against Bethlehem

SAN FRANCISCO, May 8.—The National Labor Relations Board regional office will open hearings today on a complaint charging the Bethlehem Steel Corporation with violating the Wagner Act in four of its Pacific Coast branch plants.

The company, according to the Board's charges, initiated, supported, dominated and interfered with its "Plan of Employe Representation," the company union at factories in South San Francisco, Alameda and Los Angeles, Calif., and Seattle, Wash.

Some months ago an NLRB trial examiner found the company guilty of Wagner Act violation on much the same charges at its main plant in Johnstown, Pa. The examiner's report is now awaiting formal decision by the Board.

Charges against the company were filed by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

West Coast Auxiliaries Growing Fast

San Francisco, Cal., May 6—Activities of the women's auxiliaries in the International Longsoremen's and Warehousemen's Union were spurred up following the second annual ILWU convention held here in April. For the first time, the women's groups were represented at the convention by 12 fraternal delegates.

Auxiliary representatives pointed out to the men the need of supporting the women in their efforts to organize and strengthen their groups.

Many of the men delegates reported that they would go back to their ports prepared to aid in the formation and development of ladies auxiliaries, the need of which they had not previously appreciated.

Ruby Heide, representing ILWU Ladies Auxiliary 9, and Maritime Federation of the Pacific Auxiliary 2, in reporting on the convention said, "we feel sure that the auxiliaries will become a powerful force in the trade union movement and that our trade union brothers will feel there is not one, but two shoulders to the wheel."

ILWU ACTION

San Francisco, May 6.—Resolutions in favor of the social security laws and requesting that James B. McNamara, labor prisoner who has been in Folsom prison for 28 years be transferred to San Quentin, were referred to the national CIO for action at its next convention, by the delegates to the convention of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union which met here in April.

CASKET STRIKE

Erie, Pa. — Members of the United Furniture Workers, CIO, struck the Erie Casket Co. here, when the company refused to negotiate. The plant employs 70 workers.

Hearst Signs Guild Pact In Los Angeles, Lifts Pay

LOS ANGELES, May 5.—William Randolph Hearst's payroll on the Los Angeles Evening Herald & Express zipped up $140,000 a year today as the result of a new contract won by the Los Angeles Newspaper Guild.

The agreement broadened a previous pact covering editorial workers alone, and brought advertising and commercial department workers under Guild protection. Almost 475 workers are covered by the contract.

The five-day, 40-hour work week was established throughout the paper, with a few minor exceptions, while the minimum salary rate for editorial workers with five years' experience jumped from $50 to $55 a week. Display advertising salesmen will receive a minimum of $60 a week—which in some cases means a raise of $25 weekly.

Rhode Island CIO Tells Congress Stand on Bills

Pawtucket, R. I., May 13—The Rhode Island State Industrial Union Council paused in its successful organizing activities at its meeting here to swing all affiliates behind the CIO state and national legislative programs.

The Council urged Congress to appropriate adequate funds for the continuation of WPA, called for the continuation of the La-Follette Committee, opposed all amendments to the Wagner Act and endorsed the United Mine Workers stand in the present coal negotiations.

'As It Was And Ever Shall Be'

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Homer Martin, former leader of the United Automobile Workers who is trying to lead a slender rump of that organization into the AFL, is bumping into expected difficulties.

AFL President Green pointed out here that the charter to be presented to Martin will not be completely industrial, but will be the same as the one against which the nation's auto workers rebelled three years ago.

Thus, Martin's "union" will not be granted jurisdiction over tool and die makers, pattern makers, independent parts manufacturing plants, the aircraft industry or farm equipment plants. The UAW-CIO has almost completely organized most of these industries.

Steel Pacts Help Men In War Service

Buffalo, N. Y., May 13.—Protection of workers' seniority in event of wartime military service is being written into Steel Workers Organizing Committee contracts in this area.

The contract declares in part:

"In the event an employe of the company terminates his employment because of war, he shall retain his seniority and his rights for rehire and same shall be accorded to him on request."

Nathan E. Cowan, SWOC subregional director here, points out that "we deem the provision very important and necessary when one considers present unsettled conditions throughout the world."

Labor Board Report Hits Wilson Line

Philadelphia, Pa., May 13—Recommendation that a company union backed by Wilson Line, Inc., operator of excursion steamers, be ordered abolished was made in an intermediate report issued by a trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board here.

The examiner also recommended that the company be ordered to stop discouraging membership in two CIO unions—the Maine Engineers' Beneficial Association, and the Harbor Boatmen's union of the Inland Boatmen, and one AFL group, the Masters, Mates and Pilots.

Pres. Lewis Secures Union Shop

(See Story Page Three)

NEW YORK, May 12.—The United Mine Workers of America, led by President John L. Lewis, today swept to a mighty victory, smashing a 7-week lockout of 340,000 men and winning the union shop and exclusive bargaining rights.

An agreement providing for the union shop was reached by the subcommittees representing miners and operators, and was awaiting ratification late Friday evening.

Settlement of the lockout came less than 48 hours after representatives of the union and the operators had conferred at the White House with President Roosevelt.

The UMW has demanded the union shop and recognition as sole bargaining agency in order to forestall attempted chiselling by the AFL Progressive Miners, who have sent organizers into eastern coal fields in the hope of creating disruption in the ranks of the country's largest and most powerful union.

Lewis Urges WPA Jobs For Three Million

WASHINGTON, May 13.—CIO President John L. Lewis today called upon Congress to insure an average of at least 3,000,000 WPA jobs during the next fiscal year.

Declaring that this number constitutes "a minimum of safety," Lewis said that "the four million members of the CIO, and, I believe, the great mass of AFL members and of the unemployed will join the CIO in support of such a minimum program."

The Lewis letter was addressed to Rep. Edward Taylor, chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, and requested that that group take immediate action to cope with the problem of unemployment.

'MOST URGENT' TASK

"Reports reaching my office from all parts of the nation indicate that the obligation to provide jobs for America's unemployed is still the most urgent one before Congress," he said.

The CIO leader emphasized that the request for 3,000,000 jobs was a minimum demand, though taking into consideration the effects of other government spending programs.

"Any attempt to establish an effective program fully to meet the need of the unemployed in this country would find itself speaking in terms of far vaster figures," he reminded Rep. Taylor. "We ask for 3,000,000 jobs not as a figure to be reduced by bargaining with those who would destroy the WPA but as figure based upon the real floor of unemployment."

Lewis urged Congress to abolish the "degrading means test" for eligibility to WPA, guarantee jobless workers the right to organize, allow WPA to develop projects suited to the "needs and skills" of all unemployed workers, provide that all projects be "socially useful and productive" and maintain wages at a level high enough to protect the American standard of living set by labor organizations.

Thugs Defended by Green

The men with the guns in the truck are members of the AFL-company union at Westwood, Calif. The truck, as indicated on the door, is the property of the Red River Lumber Co. The unionists shown here were out looking for CIO members, scores of whom they ran out of town last year with their wives and families when they tried to fight a 17½% wage cut.

In Washington, Pres. Green of the AFL and Joseph Padway, its general counsel, defended this union, attacked the National Labor Relations Board for suspecting it of company domination. (See Story Page Six)

Montana, Utah CIO Councils Hold Conventions

Montana

GREAT FALLS, Montana, May 13.—Delegates representing more than 10,000 Montana members of CIO affiliates completed a two-day convention at the Carpenters Hall here. More than 50 delegates attended and represented locals of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, United Mine Workers of America, State, County and Municipal Workers of America, Newspaper Guild, Agricultural and Cannery Workers' and a number of local industrial unions.

The convention was presided over by Sylvester Graham, president. Other officers include: Mike Ryan, vice-president; John Clark, secretary; Frank Holman, Paul Fall, Jr., and Randell Carpenter, board members.

The report of the officers showed a substantial gain in the growth of the Council in the past year. Several locals of the State Employe's were established, along with a number of local industrial unions in the smaller communities of the state.

ASK POLITICAL ACTION

The report also brought out the fact that the CIO in Montana would have to step out and take the lead in organizing in the political field for the 1940 elections if organized labor wishes to make any possible gain or even hold what it already has in Montana, for the Chamber of Commerce, Associated Industries and their allies are already laying plans to crush labor in the next elections.

The convention mapped out an organizational drive among the State Employe's and in the oil fields and refineries. The State Employe's have a potential membership of approximately 2,500, and if solidly organized would make one of the strongest organizations in the state.

LAUD WAGNER ACT

One of the resolutions adopted protested against the importation of gas from Canada. Acting on a request from the United Mine Workers, the council delegates authorized efforts to procure the use of coal in public buildings in preference to gas, as a means of aiding the coal industry in the state.

Opposition to change the Wagner Labor Relation Act was expressed in another resolution. Unity of Montana labor so that labor of the state may present a solid front in pressing its own problems and encouraging a similar unity in the ranks of labor nationally was urged in a resolution adopted.

Officers and board members were nominated, with the election to be held in the first week of June. Sylvester Graham is opposed for re-election for president by Glen Zorn and Richard Rodgers of Butte; William A. Boyle of Great Falls, vice-president, and John Clark of Great Falls, secretary, are unopposed.

Utah

PARK CITY, Utah, May 13—The Utah Industrial Union Council ended its third annual convention here after mapping out a legislative program for the defense of workers' rights both in the state and in the nation.

Harmonious discussion marked the three-day meeting, which brought together CIO representatives from every part of the state. The Utah congressional delegation will be informed of the convention's resolutions, one of which called for preservation of the Wagner Act in its present form.

ELECT PETERSEN

Offices of the president and secretary-treasurer were merged, and A. M. Petersen was elected to the new position. Five vice-presidents were named: Stanley Duffing, of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' division of mills; Ed. Scherer, United Mine Workers; Emil Strom, Oil Workers Intl. Union; Ray Leavitt, Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' mine division; and Vern Bullough, representing the miscellaneous trades.

Minnesota Council In Session

DULUTH, Minn., May 13—Representatives from practically every CIO local in the state will attend the second annual convention of the Minnesota CIO Industrial Union Council, which will meet at the Spalding Hotel here May 12 to 14, according to Joe Van Nordstrand, president of the Council.

The Duluth Council has arranged a dance to welcome the delegates and visitors, to be held on Saturday night at the hotel.

Maritime Federation To Meet

Everett, Wash., May 13—The annual convention of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, made up of CIO, AFL and unaffiliated unions in the West Coast maritime industry, will open here on June 5.

H. F. McGrath, of the AFL Machinists Union, recently became president of the Federation following the resignment of J. W. Engstrom. Bruce Hannon, of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, CIO, is secretary.

The largest union affiliated to the Federation is the ILWU, which has a total membership of some 33,000, a large part of which is on the West Coast. Other CIO affiliates are the Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn., the Inland Boatmen of the Pacific, the Marine Cooks and Stewards, the American Radio Telegraphists Assn., a branch of the American Communications Assn., the Alaska Cannery Workers and the Alaska Fishermen.

Michigan Convention June 29

Detroit, Mich., May 13—An official call to attend the first annual convention of the Michigan CIO Industrial Union Council has been sent out this week to all CIO affiliates in the state. The convention will open June 29 in Grand Rapids, Mich., at the Rowe Hotel.

The Council was set up in April last year, at a convention held in Lansing, at which time Adolph Germer, CIO regional director, was elected president, and R. T. Leonard, of the United Automobile Workers, was elected secretary-treasurer. More than 800 delegates attended the 1938 convention.

Maury Maverick Elected San Antonio Mayor; Liberals Win In L. A.

San Antonio, Tex., May 13.—Maury Maverick, leader of the Congressional liberal bloc in 1938 emerged the victor in a three-cornered race for mayor of San Antonio.

Backed by labor and progressive groups in the city, Maverick polled 3,000 more votes than Mayor C. K. Quin, head of the San Antonio corrupt political machine. With only one exception the fusion ticket headed by Maverick was swept into power in the voting.

Maverick had the backing of the CIO, whose pecan workers' local has several thousand members; the Workers Alliance; the rank-and-file of several AFL unions, who defied anti-Maverick speeches by an AFL southwestern representative, the National Negro Congress and Mexican citizens' groups.

The election may have important effects on future Texas and national politics, for the former Congressman now controls the San Antonio Democratic party. His opposition to Vice-President Garner and other reactionaries in the Lone Star State political machine may seriously impede possible efforts of the Uvalde squire to use the Texas delegation at next year's Democratic national convention as a lever for whipping New Deal forces in the party.

Los Angeles, May 13 — Backed enthusiastically by organized labor, liberal reform groups delivered a body-blow at the reactionary Shaw city machine here electing six progressive members to the City Council and two to the Board of Education.

A definite majority on the Council was assured to support Mayor Fletcher Bowron, reform mayor who was elected last year, and who had been opposed by reactionaries on the city's executive body. As a result of the voting, Brown will be able to continue his fight against graft and toryism in the city government.

The mayor has been ardently attacked by the Los Angeles Times, leading west coast labor-baiting newspaper, and by open shop employers.

BALTIMORE

Baltimore, May 13—Mayor Howard Jackson, supported by Baltimore unions, won an easy election victory in the city voting here, and will serve another term as chief executive of the city.

Maritime Heads Rap Stand Of U. S. Commission

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Refusal of the U. S. Maritime Commission to support the Wallgreen Bill, which safeguards union hiring of seamen on Commission-owned ships, was characterized as "ridiculous in the extreme and unsupported to any degree by technical, legal or practical arguments and circumstances" by a delegation of west coast maritime workers who visited this city.

The delegation was composed of Harry Bridges, International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union; R. Meriweather, Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn.; Jack O'Dornel, Marine Cooks and Stewards; William Welsh, Marine Firemen, Oilers and Watertenders; and Bruce Hannon of the Maritime Federation.

West coast maritime unions have frequently criticized the Maritime Commission, which operates a number of commercial steamships, to follow union regulations on hiring of crews and longshoremen.

The delegates said they had used "every effort to find a practical solution to the hiring hall controversy of the U. S. Maritime Commission.

EFFORTS IN VAIN

"All efforts of the delegates have been to no avail. The Maritime Commission has flatly rejected every attempt to settle this matter peacefully.

"We feel confident that the President, if able to hear both sides of the question, can agree with the practical solution offered by the unions, namely that the Maritime Commission operate its ships from the West Coast in the same manner that every other privately or government owned ship is operated on the West Coast, by procuring their personnel from the union hiring halls.

"The attitude of the Commission convinces the maritime unions once again that they are determined to give maritime labor organizations no voice in labor problems of the maritime industry, but we must merely take orders and carry them out, regardless of consequences. This the unions will not do!"

Steel Union Wins Poll

Pittsburgh, May 13—By a vote of 364 to 168 the Steel Workers Organizing Committee won an election supervised by the National Labor Relations Board at the Hubbard & Company plant here.

"We hope the result of the election will cause the company to modernize their labor relations and end the continuous bickering that has been the history there since 1936," said Clinton S. Golden, SWOC regional director.

On May 4, 1937 the company signed a contract with the SWOC, and renewed it on Oct. 24, 1938. In spite of the contract, the company refused to deal with the union in complete good faith and there was an almost unending series of differences.

This condition resulted in the SWOC asking for certification by the Labor Board as exclusive bargaining agent on Jan. 28, 1939.

United Mine Workers Smash Long Lockout, Get Union Shop

Textile Union Lifted Wages $1,200,000 a Week

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 15.—Wage increases totalling $1,200,000 weekly have been won for textile workers under CIO union contracts, according to a report submitted to the first constitutional convention of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee by Sidney Hillman, chairman, and Emil Rieve, executive director. The convention opened here at 150 North Broad St., formerly Scottish Rite Temple, Monday morning, May 15.

The report was also submitted to the United Textile Workers convention, meeting at the same place, by George Baldanzi, president, and James Starr, secretary-treasurer.

About 235,000 textile workers employed by 950 companies are now working under contracts signed by the TWOC, the officers' report states. In addition, 150,000 textile workers have signed membership cards, and agreements covering some 39,000 are being negotiated by the TWOC as sole bargaining agency.

$13,800,000 More

Minimum wage recommendations for the textile industry, under the Wage-Hour Act, will bring an annual increase of $13,800,000 for 181,000 workers, the report states. Vacations with pay have been obtained for 50,000 workers by TWOC.

EMIL RIEVE
Director
Textile Workers Organizing Committee

Contracts won by the TWOC include the following big concerns: American Woolen Co., covering 13,000 workers; American Viscose Corp., 20,000 workers; Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co., 6,000 workers; J. & P. Coats, 4,000 workers; Cheney Bros., Celanese Corp. of America, Munsingwear, Utica Knitting, Liberty Throwing Co., Duplan Silk Corp. and American Bemberg.

Since it was organized two years ago, the CIO textile union has disbursed $1,780,797, while sister organizations spent an additional $300,000 on its behalf, and affiliated locals and joint boards have spent $350,000, the report states.

Contributions from other CIO unions were received totalling $916,000. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers gave $523,000, the United Mine Workers, $198,000; International Ladies' Garment Workers (no longer a CIO affiliate), $110,000, and the CIO, $85,000.

GREAT GAINS

The report points out that when the CIO made its agreement with the UTW in March, 1937, setting up the TWOC, it had only 25 union contracts and a nominal membership not exceeding 73,877, including 20,702 hosiery workers and 11,094 dyers.

The actual per capita paid membership was 60,446, when Francis J. Gorman, then UTW president, signed an agreement on behalf of the UTW with John L. Lewis, Sidney Hillman and the late Charles P. Howard, CIO secretary, under which TWOC undertook the task of organizing the unorganized among the 1,250,000 workers in the textile industry.

AFL Try For 'Deal' Fails

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Top leaders of the AFL, caught like pigs under a gate by the CIO exposure of their alliance with reactionary employers to emasculate the Wagner Act, cried for mercy this week and attempted a back-door deal with the Labor Board to get themselves out of a serious jam.

The maneuver was scotched by the CIO, which protested sharply against the attempted deals as a barter "to save the faces of these discredited belly-achers."

CIO protests were voiced by Lee Pressman, general counsel, when he said: "If the AFL representatives want to backwater on their amendments, let them do so before the Senate Labor Committee where the public can be fully advised of the whole situation and where matters can be adjusted through the democratic machinery which Congress provides."

Lewis Leads Organization To Big Gains

NEW YORK, May 12 — The United Mine Workers, led by Pres. John L. Lewis, smashed a seven-week lockout today, winning their chief demands, it appeared as The CIO NEWS went to press.

The union has demanded the union shop and exclusive bargaining rights in the Appalachian area.

Details of the contract will indicate whether it was signed with the entire Appalachian conference of operators, or with individual operators or groups of operators.

The agreement will end chances of the AFL Progressive Miners to chisel their way into the coal industry in an effort to weaken the nation's most powerful union, and with it the entire CIO.

Announcement of the approaching end of the 7-week dispute which caused over 340,000 miners to be locked out, was made by W. L. Robison, Cleveland mine operator and head of the Joint Bituminous Negotiations Committee.

HIS STATEMENT

His statement said: "The joint subcommittee has completed its consideration of the subject matter to go into a new Appalachian contract and has appointed a drafting committee to edit such a new document. This drafting committee will promptly complete its work and report back to the joint subcommittee."

The joint subcommittee, he said, will then take action on the contract.

As he was talking to reporters, John R. Steelman, head of the U. S. Conciliation Service, interrupted to say that all of the miners' chief demands had been met.

The union shop provision will mean that all employes must join the United Mine Workers as a condition of work.

OUTLYING DISTRICTS

A day earlier, on May 11, Pres. Lewis had dispatched telegrams to presidents of all bituminous districts outside the Appalachian area, ordering them to sign contracts as soon as possible, with the stipulation that the new agreements must provide for the UMW as sole bargaining agency and establish the union shop.

Within a few hours, six thousand Kentucky miners were back at work under such contracts.

Mines employing some 126,000 men in the "outlying" districts were shutdown on May 4 and 5, when extensions of the old agreements expired. The mines had been in operation pending the signing of a new contract covering the Appalachian area, where 320,000 men have been idle since the expiration of the last agreement on March 31.

CIO Asks Change In Sherman Act To Protect Labor

WASHINGTON, May 13. — A campaign to secure amendment of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act for the protection of labor unions, was launched with the appointment by Pres. Lewis of a committee of CIO leaders to rally support for the American Federation of Hosiery Workers in its appeal against the $700,000 damage verdict won by the Apex Hosiery Co. in Philadelphia.

The CIO committee was formed to mobilize a nation-wide protest against the Apex verdict, as a serious threat to all labor organizations. It will also start a move to petition Congress to amend the Sherman law "so that it shall be stated in such clear, unequivocal, unmistakable terms that even judges can understand that the Sherman Act shall never again be applied to trade unions."

COMMITTEE PICKED

The CIO committee includes James B. Carey, secretary of the CIO and president of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers; Emil Rieve, executive director of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee; R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers; Heywood Broun, president of the Newspaper Guild; Reid Robinson, president of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers; Bruce Hannon, secretary of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific; Sherman H. Dalrymple, president of the United Rubber Workers; John C. Lawson, secretary-treasurer of the Quarry Workers; John Green, president of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers; Michael Quill, president of the Transport Workers; and Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union.

"The verdict of $711,932.55 won by the Apex Hosiery Co. constitutes a threat to the entire labor movement of the country.

"The issue involved is not the sit-down strike, nor the claimed damages to the company's plant, but whether unions can exercise their lawful rights in strikes free from possible prosecution and triple-damage lawsuits under the Sherman Act, regardless of the effect on interstate commerce.

"If this verdict is upheld, no union can feel safe in exercising its right to strike without danger of lawsuits designed to bankrupt and destroy it.

"It is outrageous that the Sherman Act, which was intended to curb the predatory powers of big corporations to prey upon the people, should be prostituted to union-smashing purposes as in the Apex case.

CIO PLEDGES AID

"The CIO committee just appointed will seek to mobilize all unions in the country, whether CIO, AFL or unaffiliated, and to arouse public opinion in such a way that the Sherman Act may be amended and never again used for union-breaking purposes."

Unity Up to AFL, Furriers Hear

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 13.—Doubling of the union membership, chartering of 30 new locals and renewals with pay boosts, and a 10 per cent pay increase after a 15-week general strike in New York during the past year highlighted the report of the General Executive Board to the Fur Workers Intl. Union convention here this week.

Commenting on this record, John L. Lewis, CIO president, wired greetings to the 129 delegates, saying that the union had made a notable contribution to the CIO and to the entire labor movement by its accomplishments in spite of a severe depression in its industry.

John Brophy, national CIO director, also complimented the union, pointing out that its record was a symbol of the strength and stability of the CIO. Brophy contrasted this record with the history of the labor movement in depressions before the CIO came into existence, declaring that previously employers had always been able to pass the costs of their economic blunders onto the backs of the workers.

SPEAKS OF UNITY

A portion of Brophy's speech was devoted to the question of unity, in which he said: "Peace

Textile Labor on the March

The Textile Workers Organizing Committee of the CIO meets for its first convention in Philadelphia with a splendid record of achievement for one of the most exploited groups of workers in the country.

Chairman Sidney Hillman and Director Emil Rieve can report that in two years the benefits of union agreements have been won for 235,000 textile workers employed by 950 companies, including the giants of the industry. In addition some 150,000 workers have signed up in the union, and the TWOC is sole collective bargaining agency for 39,000 additional workers for whom agreements are now being negotiated.

Wage increases of $1,200,000 weekly, vacations with pay and many other improvements in conditions are among the benefits which TWOC agreements have brought to the workers.

All of this progress is a far cry from the small union membership and general sweatshop conditions which obtained before the United Textile Workers joined with the CIO to form the TWOC.

In the South, through the efforts of its native Southern organizers, the TWOC is playing an important part in the emergence of a new liberalism.

"Cotton textile employers are loosening their hold on politics, church, thought and life in the South," says the TWOC officers' report. "In place of the cotton 'feudal systems', slowly the new liberal South is building genuine democracy founded on a recognition of the rights of the workers."

The TWOC still has much opposition to unionism to overcome. It still has far to go to its goal of a completely organized industry. It has also for the moment to contend with the pitiful sniping of some union-splitters who are trying to mislead a handful of workers into the AFL, which so long and so sadly neglected and betrayed the textile workers.

But the TWOC has now a sufficient record of achievement and a sufficiently solid basis of organization among hundreds of thousands of textile workers, to be able to proceed on its way with confidence until all the workers have joined its ranks and a better era has dawned for the whole textile industry.

An Anti-Labor Commission

The struggle of the maritime workers to protect their union rights against the anti-labor policies of the U. S. Maritime Commission, is one which deserves the support of the whole labor movement and of all others who believe in collective bargaining.

A delegation representing the West Coast marine unions has spent some time in Washington doing everything in its power to arrive at a reasonable and peaceful solution of the hiring hall controversy.

All the union representatives ask is that the Maritime Commission operate its ships from the West Coast in the same manner that every other privately or government-owned ship is operated there, by procuring its crews from the union hiring halls.

The unions' efforts to arrive at a peaceful and practical solution are supported by the Department of Labor, the Department of Commerce, the Maritime Labor Board and the Treasury Department, according to the delegation.

But the Maritime Commission, it declares, "has flatly rejected every attempt to settle this matter peacefully." The Commission seems determined to force a showdown in its fight against union rights long established in the West Coast maritime industry.

It is a public scandal that a government commission should thus use its powers in an attempt to break down union organization and collective bargaining, in defiance of the policy of the United States. And the maritime unions are rendering a public service when they resist such encroachments on labor's rights.

All liberty-loving Americans will applaud the statement of Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach in a recent radio speech, when he said: "I believe the Civil Liberties Committee of the United States Senate should be a permanent institution."

Labor is united in its demand that the Senate Civil Liberties Committee be voted an adequate appropriation to continue its vigilance. It joins with all progressives in urging this action on Congress, and in asking speedy enactment of the Oppressive Labor Practices bill which the Committee recommends to check the liberty-destroying forces which it has already exposed.

But This Isn't Troy

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Labor's Turn to Advance

THE miners have again proved themselves the backbone of the American labor movement. Their successful resistance to the coal lockout should prove a turning point for the whole labor and progressive cause.

Compelled to battle on many fronts at the same time—against an open shop drive in industry, against a campaign to destroy the Wagner Act, and against hostile court decisions, as in the Apex case—labor has recently had all the disadvantages of being on the defensive.

But in stopping the open-shop offensive, the United Mine Workers of America have furnished protection to every genuine union in the country. With its base thus safeguarded, labor can advance once more to new gains.

* * *

The Wagner Act hearings already indicate that the big business foes of the act and the AFL craft leaders allied with them are finding it their turn to be on the defensive. And last week saw an attempt by some of the AFL leaders to run to cover, after a letter from Gilbert H. Montague to Colby M. Chester, head of General Foods and former chairman of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, became public.

Montague, a corporation lawyer who has been associated with both the N. A. M. and the U S. Chamber of Commerce, reveals in this letter that even before the Houston AFL convention he was confidentially supplying AFL Counsel Joseph Padway with material on the Labor Act; and that during the convention he "responded to his hurry calls for additional legal memos and data."

Montague then states that Padway had asked him "confidentially to prepare for him draft amendments of the act," covering some points on which he had received instructions from the AFL executive council.

* * *

This exposure and the knowledge that even more damaging evidence was in CIO hands threw panic into the AFL headquarters camp.

On the eve of an executive council meeting, at which they feared the revolt of the AFL membership against the amendments might find expression, Padway and John P. Frey sought and held conferences with the Labor Board in the hope of working out a backstairs deal to save their faces.

The CIO was not consulted on this maneuver and immediately denounced any such attempt to "barter away labor's interests" in private conferences.

"If the AFL representatives want to back water," said CIO Counsel Lee Pressman, "let them do so before the Senate committee, where the public can be fully advised of the whole situation and where matters can be adjusted through the democratic machinery which Congress provides."

* * *

In connection with the Apex case, labor's enemies are also showing alarm at the campaign launched by the CIO for amendment of the Sherman anti-trust act, so that it may be used, as it was intended, against business monopolies and not against labor.

The verdict of more than $700,000 damages against the Philadelphia Hosiery Workers in the Apex case, is shocking the whole movement into a realization that such misapplications of the Sherman anti-trust act are a threat to every union in the country.

So the CIO has had to set up a committee and to launch a nationwide campaign, both to support the Hosiery Workers in appealing this vicious verdict, and to seek amendment of the Sherman act so that it may not again be used for union-breaking purposes.

The big business press has gone to great lengths to confuse the issue thus raised. In so doing, it shows its fear that labor, with its base now protected in industry, will not be content merely with preserving present conditions, but is strong enough to go forward organizing new industries and in demanding a real legislative square deal.

Issue Pamphlet On Apex Case

Washington, May 13—Following the formation of a committee to press for amendment of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act to exempt labor unions and to mobilize public opinion against the Apex verdict, the CIO is publishing a leaflet "A New Blow at Labor" which analyzes the case and discusses it as a threat to the whole labor movement.

"Labor cannot afford to rest until it is made so clear that even judges can understand that the Sherman Act does not apply to unions," the pamphlet says.

"This is not an issue affecting any one section of the labor movement. No branch of the labor movement can afford to sit quietly by until the Apex decision has been reversed, until the Sherman Act has been amended so that it will never again be applied to labor organizations."

MUST BARGAIN

Washington.—The International Shoe Company of Hannibal, Mo., was ordered by the Labor Board this week to throw out its company union known as the Western Brotherhood of Shoe & Rubber Workers, Inc.

Board were held, at the end of which it was announced that they had arrived at no conclusion and would be dscontinued.

The CIO criticized this procedure from the beginning, as giving the AFL leaders a chance to run down a rabbit-hole, after the wild charges they had made against the act, the Board and the CIO "have been exposed as ridiculous and lying misrepresentations."

The maneuver came shortly after publication of a letter proving that Joseph Padway, AFL chief counsel, asked for and got advice and aid from corporation attorneys in drawing up the AFL amendments to the act, and interrupted several days of inept testimony by AFL leaders at the Senate Labor Committee.

It also came on the eve of an AFL executive council meeting, where the rank and file revolt of AFL members against the proposed amendments was expected to break through even the iron censorship imposed on council gatherings.

"It is natural they should now whine for mercy," Pressman said. "But we know of no reason why the Labor Board, after the exposures which have already been made, should give them an opportunity to work behind closed doors to avoid the penalties of their treachery.

"We assert that the public interest demands that this whole matter now should be threshed out in open hearings, where Congress and the public can have a full opportunity to decide the merits of the case."

UNFAIR TO CIO

Pressman also wrote to Chairman Thomas of the Senate Committee describing the attempted face-saving as "exceedingly unfair to the CIO," since the AFL had been allowed to testify at length, as well as the Board.

"In other words," he said, compromise is being suggested at a time even before the Senate Committee has heard from the CIO and its many affiliates."

Survey

WASHINGTON, May 13 — Fifty-five senators are opposed to major amendments to the Wagner Act at this time, according to a poll made by Congressional Intelligence, a Washington information service. Only 29 of the senators questioned indicated favor for drastic changes in the Act, while two others were uncertain.

AFL Leaders Join Tories In Hope of Defeating New Deal, Murray Says

WASHINGTON, May 13.—A line-up of reactionary Republicans, tory Democrats and anti-New Deal AFL executive council members looking to defeat of the New Deal in 1940 was described as politically responsible for the drive to emasculate the Wagner Act in a coast to coast radio speech by Philip Murray, vice-president of the CIO and chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

The same forces, Murray said, also want to keep labor divided to promote this aim. "The reactionary politicians are fully aware of the effect their amendments will have in keeping the CIO and AFL divided," he said, "but they desire to continue this labor division in the hope that it may lead to a victory for reaction in 1940.

"In this hope they are joined by reactionaries on the AFL executive council who have been constantly trying to throw the AFL weight on the tory side, regardless of the overwhelming pro-New Deal sentiment of the AFL membership."

"There is no reason in the world why the American Federation of Labor should seek to change the Wagner Act, which has brought so much freedom and so many benefits to all working people," Murray said.

"Great gains in membership have been made by both the AFL and the CIO under the act. And if the workers in the mass production industries have voted chiefly for the modern industrial unions of the CIO, when given a choice between them and the craft unions of the AFL, this is certainly not the fault of the act," he said.

"As a matter of fact, there is every evidence that the great majority of the AFL membership are fully as much opposed to amendment of the Wagner Act as are the members of the CIO."

BACKWARD LOOKING

Murray, speaking over a coast to coast network of the Columbia Broadcasting System, pointed out that the demand for amendments to the act comes from big business in alliance with "backward-looking craft union leaders" in the AFL, who are willing to sacrifice the interests of all labor for the sake of their own petty concerns.

"These anti-union industrialists could make little progress in their campaign to destroy the act, if they could not claim some labor support," he said. "This they get from backward-looking craft union leaders who place their own narrow special interests above the general welfare of labor and industry."

Pres. Lewis is prepared, he said, to offer documentary proof that this NAM-Chamber-of-Commerce-Green axis against the Wagner Act is real, and that the "so-called AFL amendments were prepared with aid, advice and counsel of representatives of the NAM and several of the most anti-labor corporations in the country."

"To sum up," he said, "the CIO contends that the present Wagner Act has proved a most effective instrument in giving American workers the freedom to organize and better their conditions through representatives of their own choice.

"It has also benefited fair employers and the general public in many ways; is in line with American traditions of freedom and justice for all; and has made a great contribution to the preservation and expansion of our country's democratic institutions.

Letter on Wagner Act Changes Shows AFL-NAM Ties

WASHINGTON, May 13.—One item in the documentary evidence of collusion between William Green and his associates and anti-labor employers in the attempt to wreck the Wagner Act was disclosed this week with the publication of a letter from one NAM tycoon to another on the subject of the AFL backed amendments.

The letter, published in the Washington Merry-Go-Round syndicated column, shows that Gilbert Montague, NAM attorney, conferred at length with Joseph Padway, AFL chief counsel, on the proposed amendments, and that Padway asked Montague to prepare draft amendments covering the changes wanted by the executive council of the AFL.

"CONFIDENTIAL MATTER"

The letter reveals that Padway asked Montague repeatedly for his advice, and during the Houston convention sent hurry calls "for additional legal memos and data." Montague was of course delighted to help—as the letter, addressed to NAM Pres. Colby Chester, indicates:

"Dear Chester: When can I confer with you regarding the following confidential matter:

"During July, August and September I supplied confidentially to Judge Padway various legal memos and data he requested regarding certain National Labor Relations Act questions, and during the AFL convention in Houston this month I responded to his hurry calls for additional legal memos and data.

"Judge Padway has now asked me confidentially to prepare for him draft amendments of the act covering the following points, on which he has now received instructions from the AFL executive council:

"'First: Jurisdiction shall be granted appellate courts to review the facts as well as the law to determine whether the decisions conform to the weight and credibility of the evidence.

"'Secondly: Separate the administrative functions from the judicial functions of the board, lodging the judicial functions in a tribunal wholy independent from the National Labor Relations Board.'

"I will thank you if on receipt of this you will write or telephone my office when I can confer with you regarding the above.

"GILBERT H. MONTAGUE."

Trainmen Condemn All Amendments

CLEVELAND, May 13. — Repeal of workers' liberties is "the first sign of fascist tyranny and constitutes a threat to a free and democratic America," the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, meeting here in convention, declared in a strong resolution condemning all attempts to amend the Wagner Act.

Enemies of the act, the resolution said, "are those labor-hating, anti-union employers who have never respected labor's democratic rights. They are now engaged in a shameful campaign of false propaganda, designed to discredit the Wagner Act and the NLRB."

UN-AMERICAN

All proposed amendments, the resolution continued, are thoroughly un-American, and would promote company unionism, allow employer interference with unions, and would nullify the whole spirit and purpose of the act. They would, if passed by Congress:

"Promote a nation-wide program of dishonest, un-American and un-democratic company unionism by which the employer, through collusive contracts and union domination, would sit on both sides of the conference table;

CRUSH UNIONS

"Give legal sanction to the concept that employers may be active in crushing labor unions and preventing their formation, as employers are in forming and maintaining them;

"Nullify the purposes of the act and paralyze the Board by schemes to defeat the free choice of employes and impose delay through ridiculous and unprecedented court technicalities."

The resolution was ordered sent to all Congressmen, to Pres. Green of the AFL and Pres. Lewis of the CIO, to Labor's Non-Partisan League, and to Pres. Roosevelt.

CIO Issues Pamphlet On Act

Washington, May 13—"Whose Amendments," new CIO pamphlet on the Wagner Act, discusses the proposed changes endorsed by Green, Woll, John P. of the AFL executive council, and Frey and Co. in the higher circles points out that the amendments are not approved by the AFL members.

"The majority of labor, CIO and AFL, is united against amendment of the Wagner Act," the pamphlet says. "The Green-Walsh amendments are objectionable to labor everywhere and are not approved by many hundreds of thousands of AFL members."

LISTS AFL GROUPS

The pamphlet lists scores of AFL affiliates, internationals, state and city bodies, and locals that are opposed to any or all changes in the act. It also quotes a letter from a big corporation lawyer in the Natl. Manufacturers' Assn. proving collusion between the top leaders of the AFL and anti-labor interests to emasculate the act.

California Official Attacks AFL Company Union

Washington, May 13.—The AFL union at Westwood, Calif., ardently defended by Pres. William Green of the federation, is nothing more nor less than a company union, George Kidwell, California state industrial commissioner told the Senate Committee on Education and Labor this week.

Both Green and Joseph Padway, AFL general counsel, have exhibited pained expressions before the committee at any hint that the Westwood outfit, which ran CIO members out of the company-dominated town and then accepted a 17½% wage cut, is anything but a bona fide union.

RAPS WESTWOOD OUTFIT

"I wish to make it clear, as I have stated, I am and long have been a member of the AFL," Kidwell said. "I am proud of the AFL's glorious record of militant and courageous struggles for the rights of workers.

". . . The union in Westwood which calls itself AFL is in fact a company union. Neither it nor its leadership is in the true AFL tradition."

Kidwell recounted how the Intl. Woodworkers of America, CIO, held a meeting in the town on July 12, 1938, attended by 1,400 of the 2,000 workers employed by the Red River Lumber Co. The next day, he said, "a purge of CIO workers was staged by company agents." The day after that every union member had been chased out of town.

AFL GAVE CHARTER

"During this reign of terror," he continued, "an AFL union charter was installed at the direction of Mr. Vanderleur, secretary of the California Federation of Labor, and the workers who remained, as will later be shown, were coerced into joining this union."

Kidwell defended the action of the National Labor Relations Board in postponing an election among the employes until a peaceful, undominated poll can be held.

Opponents of the Act and "certain misleaders of labor" have seized upon the case in an effort to smear the NLRB, he asserted, adding:

PRAISES WAGNER ACT

"I consider the Wagner Act one of the greatest pieces of social legislation in the history of America, and its administration by the present Board has been an outstanding achievement of integrity and effectiveness."

Other witnesses before the Senate Committee included Padway, the AFL attorney, who droned through a few more pages of his 160-page statement, and William M. Leiserson, recently-appointed but not yet confirmed as an NLRB member.

LEISERSON ON STAND

Leiserson grouped the Wagner Act, the Railway Labor Act and the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction act as the cornerstone of labor's rights in this country, and protested against any attempt to whittle away the gains made by labor in the last few years.

He was especially critical of the amendments introduced by Sen. Burke of Nebraska, which are supported by the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers.

HOUSE HEARINGS

Meanwhile, the House Labor Committee studied a 100-page brief against amendments filed by the Labor Board. The NLRB vigorously opposed suggestions for a five-man board—a proposal being pushed by the AFL top leadership.

It levelled considerable fire at the Barden bill, which also has AFL support, and criticized in particular its attempt to allow employers to "interfere" in their workers' choice of a bargaining agency.

WOULD HELP SPIES

"If this proposal is adopted," the NLRB pointed out, "it would become very doubtful whether it would still be an unfair labor practice for an employer to engage undercover operatives to spy upon the union activities of his employes, to bribe union representatives or to circulate 'missionaries' to circulate among strikers false rumors with a view to breaking the morale of the strikers."

Two days earlier Reps. Keller and Fries, both Illinois Democrats, had assailed big business groups seeking amendment of the Act. Keller suggested that the committee might do well to invite "three or four Liberty League lawyers" for questioning to determine whether they had engaged in a "conspiracy" to destroy the Act.

Schwellenbach Asks Funds For Probe

WASHINGTON, May 13.—An investment of $100,000 a year in the Senate Civil Liberties Committee is a small amount to spend for protecting rights guaranteed the American people in the Constitution, Sen. Lewis B. Schwellenbach of Washington declared in a nation-wide radio broadcast here.

"We don't hesitate to spend many times that amount to build a battleship to defend us against a foreign foe," the Senator pointed out. "I consider that the maintenance of this committee is just good insurance to protect us against foes from within. . . . I believe the Civil Liberties Committee of the U. S. Senate should be a permanent institution."

The Senate Audit & Control Committee, headed by Sen. James Byrnes of North Carolina, is now considering a bill to allot the committee $100,000. An investigation of the Associated Farmers, west coast tory group, was halted when the committee's funds gave out.

"There is no place in America for private armies, private spy systems, private arsenals. If eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, now is surely the time when we should know at what points and from what sources our liberties are being attacked.

"When a Senator of the United States frankly confesses upon the floor of the United States Senate that he believes that concentration camps should be set up in this country for persons of whose ideas he disapproves, when a dignified member of the Congress actually introduces a bill providing for concentration camps, the time has come when we should worry about the future of democracy in this country."

Fur Union Told Unity Up to AFL

in the American labor movement will come when the rank and file of the AFL assert their desire for unity.

"The hope for unity lies with the workers of the AFL, who will force their reluctant leaders to abandon their fight against the CIO, who will force them to break their alliance with reaction. This is the hope for unity, this and our vigilance in building our own organizations and strengthening our own lines."

CAREY SPEAKS

James B. Carey, CIO secretary, told the delegates that the present strength of the AFL is due to the organization of the CIO. "The CIO woke up the AFL," he said. "Organized labor is no longer a dismal swamp. A new day has dawned for labor, both organized and unorganized."

Jacob Potofsky, vice-president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, urged the delegates to carry on political activity, to be "prepared for the test when the time comes."

KNOCKS SPLITTERS

Allan Haywood, New York CIO regional director, said that within the ranks of the CIO there had been one act of disunity—"the act of a man who couldn't stand the gaff, who had his office workers do what he didn't have the courage to do himself, pull out of the CIO and join the AFL."

Other speakers addressing the convention included Louis Boudin, labor lawyer, and Len DeCaux, publicity director of the CIO.

Final major action of the convention was the enthusiastic approval of the merger plant with the Natl. Leather Workers, which will bring a potential membership of 65,000 to the union, 15,000 of whom are already organized.

Mine Union Gets Contract, Beats Lockout

you are directed to propose to your operators an extension for two years of the old wage agreement, which expired April 1, in all of its terms, scheduled and conditions, with the addition of two sentences in its enabling clause reading as follows:

"'It is agreed that the United Mine Workers is recognized herein as the exclusive bargaining agency representing the employes of the parties of the first part.

"'It is agreed that as a condition of employment, all employes shall be members of the United Mine Workers of America except those exempted classifications of employment as provided in this contract.'"

SENT LETTER

Earlier in the week Lewis had sent a lengthy letter to John R. Steelman, head of the U. S. Conciliation Service pointing out that the union had offered to keep the mines opened, but that the government's attitude had encouraged a minority of the operators to believe they could seek destruction of the UMW.

Lewis has estimated that 80% of the mine operators in the Appalachian area are willing to sign a new contract abolishing the strike penalty clause. However, he has charged that a minority group, backed by corporations, financial combines and utilities, have been trying to destroy the nation's most powerful union.

PENALTY CLAUSE

The penalty clause to which the union has been objecting provides that the union must pay a dollar a day a member for those participating in strikes in violation of the agreement. With the AFL Progressive Miners seeking to spread company unionism throughout the coal fields, the UMW leaders held that in effect their union would be forced to pay through the nose for its own destruction.

Meanwhile, leaders of the three anthracite districts of the union were continuing their negotiations with operators. A threatened shutdown on May 8 was averted when both sides agreed to a week's extension of the old agreement.

Labor Board Issues Complaint Against Mid-Continent Oil

TULSA, Okla., May 13.—A formal complaint issued against the Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation by the regional office of the National Labor Relations Board here bears out the charges of intimidation and coercion made by the Oil Workers International Union which has been conducting a strike against the company for more than four months.

A Board hearing on the charge has been set for May 15, the same date that Jack N. Hays, president of the local oil workers union is scheduled to go on trial in the district court on a grand jury indictment charging conspiracy.

Hays is now free on $2000 bond, the amount set for each of the 106 strikers who were indicted by a grand jury made up of executives of oil corporations and other concerns.

The complaint against Mid-Continent charges that the company through its foremen from Mar. 1, 1937 to Dec. 22, 1938, tried to keep its employes from belonging to the union; placed armed guards inside the refinery, and after the strike started, started a "back-to-work" movement designed to break the strike.

Following the announcement of the date set for the Labor Board hearing, 143 strikers were jailed. This mass indictment was interpreted as another form of intimidation against the strikers. The Union accuses both county and city officials of collusion with the company.

How You Can Help Preserve Our Civil Rights

1. Have your local send a resolution to Chairman Byrnes of the Senate Audit & Control Committee asking that the La-Follette-Thomas Civil Liberties Committee be granted an additional $100,000.

2. Tell your Senators and Congressman to support the Oppressive Labor Practices Act, aimed at outlawing strikebreaking, labor spies, private armies and industrial munitions.

BE ON GUARD!

Look for the union label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America when buying men's and boys' clothing, overalls, shirts, undergarments, neckties, lumber jackets, gloves, and all other kinds of men's wearing apparel.

The Amalgamated Label is your guarantee that the articles you buy are of the best workmanship and produced under one hundred percent union conditions by members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

By insisting on the Amalgamated Label you will help to guard against a return of sweatshop conditions to the industry. By helping the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America you help the labor movement generally.

Ask for the Amalgamated label on each part of the suit, coat, pants and vest. There are different Amalgamated labels for coats, pants, vests, shirts and undergarments, work clothes, neckwear and gloves.

YOUR WPA JOB

By Ralph Hetzel, Jr.

Secretary, Committee on Unemployment

3,000,000 WPA Jobs

The CIO has fired the opening gun in its national campaign to make the WPA adequately serve the needs of the unemployed during the next fiscal year. President Lewis has just written to Congressman Taylor, Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, asking for a guaranteed minimum of three million WPA jobs for the next fiscal year.

Such a guaranteed minimum employment is absolutely essential, President Lewis points out, if the WPA is to accomplish the objectives for which it was established. There is serious danger, for example, that if the present trend of reduction continues and an appropriation is passed which will further reduce the rolls to an average of two million jobs, the present, insecure recovery will be wiped out. We will have failed to learn the bitter lesson of 1937. Then a much stronger recovery was blown up by a sharp and unwarranted cut in Federal expenditures for work projects.

NO RELATION TO NEED

Such a guaranteed minimum employment is necessary, also, if we are to avoid a repetition of this year's series of unwarranted and inhumane cuts on the WPA. These cuts have been made without any consideration of the need of the relief workers, without any relation to the extent of unemployment and the huge number of eligible unemployed who had already been certified to the WPA.

The CIO's plan for maintaining such an average, guaranteed employment is quite simple and effective. As President Lewis says in his letter, we ask for a "guarantee that the rolls will not be reduced below three million until there are no further persons eligible for WPA."

He says further, "this type of guarantee provides a device whereby the rolls may be reduced just as quickly and as extensively as the employment situation justifies."

OUTLINES NEEDS

President Lewis also outlines the conditions which are necessary to make fully effective this guarantee of employment on the WPA. They are:

(1) That in order to be eligible to the WPA, workers need only to be out of work and ready and willing to work.

(2) That full rights to self-organization be accorded to workers on the projects and that there be no discrimination for any reason.

(3) That the WPA be empowered to establish such projects as may be necessary to get the kind of employment needed by the unemployed. That means that all workers should be employed on work suited to their needs and skills.

(4) That all projects shall be socially useful and productive. This means the continuation of the present types of WPA projects and authorization to do such work as public housing, slum clearance, flood control, building of schools and hospitals, health measures, cultural and white collar projects, and vocational training.

ESSENTIAL PROGRAM

The adoption of a guaranteed minimum employment of three million people on a program operated under these conditions is an essential prerequisite to full economic recovery and a healthy national life. Its adoption can be assured only by backing up President Lewis' letter with effective local action throughout the nation.

FDR Lauds WPA Culture Projects

New York, May 13.—Endorsement of WPA's projects for white collar and cultural wrokers was contained in a letter sent by Pres. Roosevelt to Pres. Heywood Broun of the American Newspaper Guild.

"In a recent message to the Congress, I expressed my conviction that the program of the Works Progress Administration should, as at present, include some projects of -the non-construction type to meet the needs of those unemployed workers whose training is such that they are not adapted to employment on construction projects."

Fishermen OK New Constitution

Portland, Ore., May 13—A constitution to govern the proposed International Fishermen and Allied Workers of America, submitted to a referendum, has been accepted by the membership of the United Fishermen's Union.

On May 2, the executive board of the UFU met in Seattle for the purpose of taking steps to set up the international union, according to Martin E. Olsen, secretary-treasurer of the Federated Fishermen's Council of the Pacific Coast.

TransitUnion Denounces Wicks Bill

New York, May 13—Passage of the Wicks bill to deprive transit workers of seniority, pensions and collective bargaining rights was denounced by Austin Hogan, president of the Transport Workers Union of New York, CIO, as "an abberant, insidious attack" on the rights of labor, in a letter sent to all 150 members of the State Assembly.

"The Wicks bill," Hogan said, "has been condemned and is opposed by every civic-conscious organization in this state. We have, under separate cover, sent you a list of more than 800 organizations, representing more than 2,000,000 voters throughout the state, which have resolved against the bill.

"These organizations included affiliates of both the CIO and the AFL, the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Catholic and Jewish War Veterans, chapters and branches of the Holy Name Society, Knights of Columbus, and other church, civic, political, labor, fraternal and small businessmen's groups."

BACK HEALTH LAW

New Orleans, La., May 13—The CIO Industrial Union Council here went on record recently in favor of pressing for passage of Senate Bill 1620, which sets up a national health program.

Brophy Calls For Defeat Of Tory Bills

Washington, May 13—John Brophy, national CIO director, told the Natl. Emergency Conference on Repressive Legislation, meeting here this week-end, to rally public opinion against 70 anti-alien bills now in Congress, the source of the bills was :"The same sinister groups that want to destroy American democracy by destroying the labor movement, by destroying the social legislation of the last seven years, by putting the clock of American progress back to the fascist hour set by Hitler and Mussolini."

Other speakers at the meeting included Monsignor John A. Ryan of the Natl. Catholic Welfare Conference, Senator James E. Murray of Montana, and Judge Patrick H. O'Brien of Detroit.

ALL "ALIENS"

Discussing the part aliens have played in building our nation, he said: "All American workers are of alien stock, were at one time foreigners. From the time when the first Negro workers were brought here in slave ships in the 17th century, from the time of the first indentured servants of colonial times, to the present, labor in America has been performed by men and women our reactionaries have been pleased to call 'aliens.' "

The American people have dealt with such moves before, Brophy reminded the conference. "When reactionaries slipped through the Alien and Sedition laws of 1792, the people swept them away as a blot on democracy, as a contradiction of the freedom that America brought to the world," he said.

Hearst Stubborn

CHICAGO, May 13—Publishers of the Hearst-owned Chicago Herald-Examiner and Evening American have ignored a mediation offer by the Chicago Typographical Union, AFL affiliate.

The Guild had previously accepted the proposal.

Summer Will Find Workers Enjoying WPA Play Centers

Recreation used to be a sort of five-dollar word. It represented a luxury to be indulged in only by those with time and money to spare. It suggested expensive country clubs, private golf courses, yachting or riding to the hounds.

Today recreation is beginning to be the working man's word, too. It means play in publicly owned parks and on municipal links. Fresh air, sunshine, exercise—essential fuel for the human engine if it is to function efficiently — this is what recreation means to everyone today. Although we still do not have enough facilities to meet the needs of America's millions, we are making rapid strides in that direction.

EMPLOYERS LEARNING

Employers are recognizing the fact that recreation periods increase the output of their workers. Many provide facilities for healthful recreation as a part of their plant equipment. Some have trained leaders to conduct a regular program of activities.

Practically all employers operating under standard working conditions now grant vacation periods to salaried workers. Since the organization of the CIO, many employers are giving one or two weeks' vacation with pay to wage workers in the large industries.

But in a country of this size employers' efforts alone could not begin to provide adequately for all workers and their families. Federal and local governments have cooperated for many years on a recreation program that has received tremendous impetus during the depression—at a time when it would have been least expected.

THE FIGURES

The Works Progress Administration, cooperating with existing municipal, county and state welfare groups, has constructed in its first three years, 16,851 new recreational facilities of various kinds and restored over 16,859 additional ones to public use by improvements or repairs.

The new play places provided include 5,500 gymnasiums, auditoriums, stadiums, community houses and so forth; 1,067 parks, 1,787 athletic fields, 1,594 playgrounds, 471 swimming pools, 440 wading pools, over 4,582 tennis courts, 1,037 ice skating rinks, 143 golf courses, 41 ski jumps, 73 outdoor theatres and 116 bandshells.

HELPS JOBS, TOO

Playgrounds require the attendance of trained leaders to supervise and instruct; swimming pools need life guards who are also capable instructors, community houses need leaders and teachers of recreation. The WPA has furnished such workers.

MANY ACTIVITIES

The WPA recreation program includes social and cultural features as well as games, sports and other physical activities. In addition to providing outdoor and indoor facilities and leadership, the WPA and other progressive public recreational bodies have expanded the opportunities for dancing, discussion, arts and crafts; all kinds of dramatic work, community pageants, hiking and nature lore, all of which have a wide appeal for young and old alike.

MANY NEW CAMPS

A survey revealed that during the last four years the WPA and the CCC have constructed a number of vacation camps in National Park Service and Recreation Demonstration Areas. These camps are accessible to large industrial centers and are being constantly used by Boy and Girl Scouts and other welfare groups.

In the nation there are now 40,000 recreation leaders employed by the WPA. They aid in solving the leisure-time problems of at least 5,000,000 persons each week. Most of these millions now have a shorter working day and more leisure time than ever before, hence stand in greater need for planned recreation programs and for adequate facilities for carrying out the plans.

While the WPA cannot provide all that is needed, it can and does take the lead in both planning and providing more abundantly for the recreation needs of all American workers.

Struck Oil Tanker Lines Meet With Union

Strike Cripples Firms' Sales In Many States

NEW YORK, May 13.—Negotiations between the National Maritime Union and the four oil companies whose tankers were struck by the NMU in April are being reopened. The Standard Oil of New Jersey, Socony-Vacuum, Tidewater and C. D. Mallory agreed this week to resume conferences, the union announces.

Picketing of gas stations operated by three of the companies has cut sales drastically throughout the eastern states, NMU leaders revealed.

At Everett, Mass., a tear-gas attack on the sailors failed to halt picketing at an Esso (Standard Oil of New Jersey) plant. A few hours later union men re-appeared, wearing gas masks.

'SCABS' STICK COMPANY

Efforts of the company to enlist strikebreakers in the middle west are also proving unsuccessful. At Toledo, Ohio, 11 NMU members, keeping their identities secret, signed up as scabs, received cash advances, deluxe meals and private Pullman car transportation to New York. There they confounded the company by refusing to work, and instead reported to Pres. Joseph Curran of the NMU, volunteering for strike activity.

Their jaunt cost the company close to $500.

Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union has asked Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins to take away from the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation the power to suspend and revoke seamen's certificates for activity in strikes or other labor disputes.

Curran charged in his letter that the bureau had intervened in labor disputes on the side of the operators, using its power to suspend certificates in an attempt to deny seamen their right to strike. Every case of certificate suspension and revocation, all of which grew out of a labor dispute, he said, was outlined in the prepared memoranda.

Characterizing the use of this power by the bureau as a "sort of refined strike-breaking," Curran said that in every case the vessel involved was tied to a dock in a safe harbor.

WPA Lauds Longshore Work Plan

Washington, May 13—A work-rotation system set up for longshore work in San Francisco in 1935 to lessen interruptions in employment, is proving remarkably successful, according to a report of the WPA National Research Project made public recently by Colonel F. C. Harrington, Works Progress Administrator.

The International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union is given the right to appoint the hiring hall officers who assign the men jobs under this system, which developed as an outgrowth of the award made by President Roosevelt's arbitration board in the West Coast longshoremen's 1934 strike.

WAGES HIGHER

The report, a 157-page booklet called "Decasualization of Longshore Work in San Francisco," shows that during 1937 the weekly earnings of longshoremen averaged $37.50, and that irregularity of employment has been greatly lessened.

Traditionally, the report explains, a large part of the labor force had been dependent on work too intermittent to give the men an adequate income.

FEW NEED RELIEF

In a letter of transmittal, Assistant Administrator Corrington Gill points out "that few longshoremen now apply for emergency relief in San Francisco and the longshoremen will probably represent a relatively light burden on the California unemployment compensation fund."

Declaring that "the underlying problem of insecurity due to intermittency and casualness of work is one which is characteristic of many American industries," Gill adds that the study should be of interest not only to other ports but also to other industries.

Pact Raises Pay $17,000

Waterbury, Conn., May 13.—Seventeen thousand dollars is going into the pocketbooks of 65 CIO workers at the main plant powerhouse of the Scoville Manufacturing Company here as result of a contract signed by the Brass Workers local of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers with the company.

Packinghouse Union Maps Big Campaign

CHICAGO, May 13.—Plans outlined by Don Harris, director of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, indicate an intensive drive to bring 100 per cent organization to the packing industry within the next few months.

"A series of moves, plus the addition of several new organizers, have paved the way for sweeping PWOC gains in a dozen key cities throughout the midwest," Harris declared. "As a result, we can look forward to increased membership, new organizing triumphs and general progress in the next few months."

SIX-POINT DRIVE

The drive will be centered on six main points, Harris explained, covering:

1. Increased organization at Wilson in Oklahoma City and Kansas City.
2. Filing of a Labor Boad petition for certification at Wilson's big Chicago plant.
3. An increased drive at Cudahy in Wichita, Kans.
4. A drive on Cudahy at Newport, Minn., aided by two new organizers.
5. A drive on Cudahy at Omaha, Neb.
6. A drive on all major Swift and Co. plants in Illinois, Missouri, Iowa and California.

OVER THE TOP

"This is a major campaign," Harris said, "one that will need the cooperation of every packinghouse worker in the industry. With the mighty strength of the CIO behind us, we should soon go over the top—with a bang that will be heard around the nation."

Chamber of Commerce Runs Wild, Attacks Wage, Wagner Act

WASHINGTON, May 13. — The U. S. Chamber of Commerce went on a rampage at its annual convention here, slashing out at a half-dozen pieces of New Deal legislation.

When the smoke had cleared away, the embattled businessmen had demanded:

1. Outright repeal of the wage-hour law.
2. Drastic amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act.
3. Sharp reductions in government relief expenditures.
4. Revision of federal tax policies to aid business.

The chamber's actions seemed to indicate that a government "business appeasement" program must be based on a complete return to Toryism if it is to satisfy the industrialists.

The dual attack on the wage-hour act and the Wagner Act showed that the Chember is less interested in how the laws are enforced than in the statutes themselves. While the National Labor Relations Board has been criticized for its vigorous enforcement of the Wagner Act, the Wage-Hour division has been extremely cautious in its first few months of operation.

Administrator Elmer F. Andrews has taken the position that employers should be given time to familiarize themselves with the new law, and has only recently announced more strict enforcement plans.

C of C Prexy Has Record Of Reaction

Washington, May 13 — Nature must have intended W. Gibson Carey, Jr., to be president of the reactionary U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

Highlights of the new C of C executive's career, as shown in reports of the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee, show that Carey has done just about everything you'd expect a C of C executive to do.

Head of the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Co., he was a director of the National Assn. of Manufacturers in 1935-36-37. In addition, he served on the National Industrial Information Committee, an NAM offshoot which raised a slush fund of $750,000 to influence public opinion along NAM lines of thought.

EMPLOYED SPIES

Yale & Towne is a member of the National Metal Trades Assn., which has been exposed by the LaFollette Committee as one of the major employers of spies and strikebreakers. The corporation had two metal trades spies working in its plants between April, 1935 and July, 1936. One of them managed to become vice-president of Local 1557 of the International Association of Machinists (AFL) and won the unenviable distinction of helping to cut the local's membership from 243 to 21 during his term of office.

While Carey was thus using the labor espionage service, he obtained U. S. government contracts from the treasury, war and navy departments totaling close to $1,000,000.

List of Union Shoes Printed

Washington, May 13—A revised issue of the listing of shoes made by CIO members has just been released by the United Shoe Workers of America, affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

In addition to the "brand names of shoes made by members" of USWA, CIO, the booklet contains a list of all shoe firms under contract with that union.

Copies have been distributed to locals containing over 2,000,000 members and an increasing demand for these shoes has already been felt. Additional copies may be obtained by writing to: Research Department, United Shoe Workers of America, CIO, 917—15th St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Germer Raps Tory Foes Of Wagner Act

Detroit, May 13—Amendment of the Wagner Act will destroy worker's rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, Adolph Germer, CIO director here, declared in an address broadcast by Station WXYZ.

"There is irony in the oft-repeated claim of after-dinner speakers at employers' banquets that the interests of labor and capital are identical, that the coupon clipper, the stock gambler, the dividend grabber and the humble working man are business partners," Germer said.

"What a humbug such claims are in the light of constant conflict forced upon labor by union-hating employers. What an insult to the intelligence of thinking people.

"The Wagner Act must not be amended unless we as a nation are willing to return to the guerilla warfare of the past."

Prepared

Members of the National Maritime Union, striking against four oil tanker lines, showed up on an Everett, Mass., picket line prepared for any eventuality after police had used tear-gas the previous day. Several children were injured during the police attack.

Gold Workers Vote to Join CIO

VANCOUVER, B. C., May 13—Workers of Pioneer, second largest gold producer in British Columbia, voted three to one to join the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, CIO.

Plan Meetings In Cleveland

Cleveland, May 13—A series of meetings designed to appeal to this city's Hungarian workers is being sponsored by the Cleveland Industrial Union Council.

A group of prominent Hungarian CIO members from the auto and steel unions will be in charge of the meetings.

The series is part of a program now being started by the Council to build and strengthen the CIO movement in Cleveland. Meetings for other nationality groups are being planned.

New York, May 20.—Two outstanding victories in the carpet industry have been won by the CIO textile workers.

In Yonkers, N. Y., the Textile Workers Organizing Committee won an election conducted among 5,000 employes of the Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Co. by an overwhelming vote. In addition it signed an agreement with the Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co. covering the firm's big plants at Amsterdam, N. Y. and Thompsonville, Conn., and affecting some 6,000 workers.

The election at Yonkers, held by the National Labor Relations Board resulted in 2,682 votes for the TWOC; 1474 for the Independent Smith Workers, called a company union by the CIO union, and 439 for no union.

Lewis Hits Chandler's Treachery

(See Stories Page Three)

PHILADELPHIA, May 20.—Unity of all the country's 1,250,000 textile workers in a single CIO industrial union, was the goal set by the 750 delegates who met in Philadelphia to form the Textile Workers Union of America.

Formed through a merger of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee and the United Textile Workers, the new CIO union already has contracts with 1,014 companies covering 274 thousand workers, and an additional 150,000 have signed membership cards.

Highlight of the convention was a speech by CIO President John L. Lewis, who told of the great victory of the United Mine Workers in winning union shop agreements covering 435,000 soft coal miners.

Lewis told the story of Governor Chandler's treachery to the Kentucky mine workers, and denounced his attempt to drive the Harlan county miners back to work at the point of the bayonet.

Insurance Firm Signs Agreement

New York, May 20—Signing of a nation-wide contract with the Sun Life Insurance Co. of America was followed two days later here by an announcement that the United Office and Professional Workers, CIO affiliate, would start negotiations with the Unity Life Insurance Co.

The Sun Life Pact, signed in Philadelphia, marked the first contract of its kind for the industrial insurance agents' division of the union.

TO BE EXTENDED

Only the Philadelphia district offices of the company, employing about 120 people, are covered by the agreement at the present time. Union and company negotiators agreed, however, to extend its provisions "to any city or area in which the union represents or shall in the future represent a majority" of the employes. The firm operates in ten states.

Vacations with pay, arbitration of dismissals and establishment of grievance systems are established in the contract.

Philadelphia—Wages are raised seven per cent as a result of a new city-wide contract signed by the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers covering tool and die workers in this city.

Transit Union Gets Contract; Fights Bill

NEW YORK, May 20. (FP) — The Transport Workers Union today was working under a new two-year, closed shop contract with the Third Ave. Railway System, covering 3,500 street-car workers and increasing their pay an average of $100 per man per year.

The agreement is retroactive to April 1, expiration date of the 90-day extension of the previous contract.

The $350,000 wage boost came in the form of hourly increases running between two and four cents an hour. Other gains include the granting of four paid holidays a year and extension of sick leave benefits from one to two weeks.

Negotiations are still under way for renewal of contracts covering 29,000 workers on the two privately operated subway lines.

FIGHT WICKS BILL

Working on another front, the TWU demanded that Gov. Herbert Lehman veto the Wicks Bill, which would rob several thousand workers of seniority and other union benefits when the city acquires title to the IRT and BMT subway systems under the transit unification program.

Pres. Michael Quill charged in a wire to the governor that the bill had been jammed through both houses of the legislature by Republican and Tammany Hall leaders in the hope of embarrassing Mayor LaGuardia of New York City. He cited a letter written by the mayor describing the Wicks measure as ill-advised and premature.

Representatives of some 800 civic and fraternal organizations which have endorsed the union's fight against the bill, met at TWU headquarters and discussed plans for the continuation of the fight until the governor's veto is secured.

$6,500 Job

Washington, May 20 — Applications are being accepted by the U. S. Civil Service Commission for the $6,500-a-year position as regional director of the Social Security Board in the seventh region, the SSB announced here.

Applications, which are obtainable from the Civil Service Commission in Washington, are limited to people whose legal residence for the past six months has been in the states of Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina and Tennessee. Requirements include five years' experience in the field of social welfare, industrial relations or labor legislation.

Mine Union Backs Bill to Probe Deaths, Accidents

WASHINGTON, May 20—Provision for annual government inspecton of health and safety conditions in the nation's coal mines with the aim of giving a more complete picture of mine hazards, is made in bills filed today with the House of Representatives and the Senate.

The bills, sponsored by Rep. Kent Keller, Illinois liberal Democrat, and Sen. Neely of West Virginia, longtime friend of labor, have the backing of the United Mine Workers. The bills are numbered H. R. 6352 and S. 2420.

TO GET INFORMATION

They provide that the Secretary of the Interior be authorized to obtain information relating to health and safety conditions in the mines, the causes of accidents involving bodily injury or loss of life and causes of occupational diseases originating in the mines.

The government studies would be employed to determine the best methods of using public funds to prevent such conditions, for publishing reports, studies and statistical exhibits, for use by the Bureau of Census and by Congress in considering health and accident legislation.

Studies by the statistical department of the UMW have shown that mine fatalities are 10 times more frequent than those in manufacturing industries, permanent disabilities twice as frequent and temporary disabilities four times more frequent.

Since the U. S. Bureau of Mines was established in 1906 down to the end of 1937, mine fatalities totaled 58,600, and the number of injured is conservatively estimated at 3,516,000.

SHOW HIGH RATE

Other facts brought out by the union:

1. The American mine fatality rate exceeds that of Europe.
2. Larger mines have greater death rates than small mines.
3. The rate of mine fatalities is decreasing only in the Appalachian area, rising in other regions.
4. Anthracite accident rate exceeds that in bituminous.
5. Fatalities caused by dynamite and explosions is decreasing, with the rate of deaths due to mechanization, transportation and electricity showing a great increase.
6. No progress has been made in cutting the rate of deaths caused by falls of coal and roof structures.
7. The cost of mine accidents exceeds a half billion dollars annually.

CIO Asphalt Union Gets Pact For 250

Louisville, Ky., May 20—A contract covering 250 workers of the Kentucky Rock Asphalt Co. was announced this week by Peter Campbell, CIO regional director in this area.

Signed with the United Asphalt Workers Local Industrial Union 430, the contract provides for a 2½c hourly wage increase for 90 per cent of the workers, and a five to ten per cent for the other ten per cent.

As conditions improve, Campbell said, some 500 men will ultimately be given employment in the firm's quarries and will be covered by the terms of the contract.

Picket For Wage-Law Enforcement

San Antonio, Tex., May 20—CIO pecan workers here started picketing wage-hour law chisellers today in a drive to force them to obey the law of the land.

The workers, members of the Pecan Workers Union, an affiliate of the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers, put lines around two plants that have consistently violated the law and the orders of Administrator Andrews.

These two firms, both small ones, have been paying their workers four and five cents an hour — a fraction of the 25 cents they are entitled to under the law.

Renew 44 Steel Pacts

CHICAGO, Ill., May 20—Forty-four contracts with steel corporations located in the midwest area have been renewed in the last two months, according to Van Bittner, regional director for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

In addition, nine new contracts have been secured, and more than a half a dozen others are now in the process of negotiation.

Phoney Compensation Bill Attacked By Maryland Unions

CUMBERLAND, Md., May 13.—Organized labor in Maryland is launching a signature campaign to prevent enactment of an occupational disease bill described by John T. Jones, President of the Maryland - District of Columbia Industrial Union Council as "calculated only to protect insurance companies." The announcement was made after the last quarterly meeting of the State Council.

Jones, who is also president of District 16 of the United Mine Workers, warned Maryland labor that it "takes a great responsibility if it accepts this law without a fight."

SEEK REFERENDUM

The Maryland legislature has already passed this bill and it now awaits the governor's signature. Under terms of Maryland law, however, 10,000 signatures are sufficient to force the submission of any law to statewide referendum before it may become a statute.

Pointing to some of the harmful results labor may expect from the bill, Jones said: "Workers who get diseases which on first reading seem to be covered in this law will find themselves getting very little if anything out of it. The proposed administration by a group of doctors from whose findings of fact there is no appeal is not a very comfortable prospect.

"Enlightened employers should join with labor against this bill. Management will find itself paying high premiums under the illusion that they are protecting the working people."

PETITIONS READY

"We are getting our petitions ready and are sure that we can obtain 10,000 signatures within a week after we start getting them," Jones said.

The state CIO organization also voted support to the National Maritime Union in its strike against the Standard Oil Company; endorsed H. R. 5909 in the U. S. Congress to liberalize the unemployment compensation system in the District of Columbia and voted full endorsement of the movement in Washington for an elected city council.

AFL Official Gets $5,000; Little Work

Cumberland, Md., May 20. — Meet Joe McCurdy, the multiple job man who "allegedly represents the Maryland-District of Columbia Federation of Labor," is the subject matter of the leading editorial this week in the "Voice of Labor," union paper of Western Maryland.

McCurdy, the editorial explains, holds down a $5,000 job on the Maryland Unemployment Compensation Board, supposedly a full time affair. He is also a paid business agent for the United Garment Workers in Baltimore.

He is president of the state and D. C. AFL federation. He also heads the Baltimore AFL body.

WASTE OF MONEY

And now, says the editorial, McCurdy has just been re-appointed by Gov. O'Conor to the compensation job for another six years, during which time he will take $30,000 of the taxpayers' dough for supposedly full time work.

"May we ask by what authority state officials pay McCurdy $5,000 a year for full time service when he already holds four other jobs," the editorial says.

Canada Passes 'Wagner Act'

Ottawa, Canada, May 20 — Canadian workers, after months of persistent struggle, have pushed a national labor protection act through Parliament that guarantees the right to collective bargaining and provides penalties for employers caught violating it.

The act is an amendment to the Dominion criminal code, and sets fines up to $1,000 for any individual or corporation refusing to employ or firing workers because of union membership.

Seven of the nine Canadian provinces have similar laws, and the present Dominion act will reinforce them. Big business in Ontario, which has no provincial act, is already contending that the new law does not apply to them, and are laying lines for a court fight on "provincial rights."

Leaders in the fight against the labor protection act are the big industrialists in the Canadian Manufacturers Assn., counterpart of our NAM, and the big mining barons dominated by English and American capital.

Coal Union Fights Harlan Operators; Textile Workers Form New CIO Union

Plan Big Drive For Members; Elect Rieve

PHILADELPHIA, May 20.—A giant new CIO textile union, with hundreds of thousands already in its ranks, laid plans to push forward organization of the country's 1,250,000 textile workers, at the first constitutional convention of the Textile Workers Union of America.

The new union was formed by a merger of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee and the United Textile Workers of America. At separate conventions on May 15 both groups voted unanimously to merge and thereafter met in joint session. About 750 delegates, representing all textile centers of the country, attended the five-day convention.

Highlights of the convention were the keynote speeches of CIO Pres. John L. Lewis and TWOC Chairman Sidney Hillman, who were accorded resounding ovations.

TELLS OF VICTORY

Lewis told of the great victory just won by the United Mine Workers and brought the greetings of the whole movement to the textile workers. Pointing to the destructive competition that ravages the textile industry and impoverishes and exploits the workers in it, he said that the industry sorely needs "the stabilizing and benificient effects of modern collective bargaining."

"The law of the jungle obtains in the textile industry, the law of tooth and fang," Lewis said. "The only protection you have against continued exploitation is your union."

RAPS APEX VERDICT

Lewis denounced the use of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act to destroy unions, as in the Apex Hosiery Company verdict, on the grounds of interfering with interstate commerce, as "a fantastic absurdity."

"If decisions of this character are to be sustained by our judicial tribunals," he said, "then labor must demand of Congress that it be relieved from the strictures of an act that was intended to restrain the rapacity of great combinations of capital that were exploiting the people."

He told the story of Governor Chandler's betrayal of the Kentucky Miners, and called for federal action to prevent his misuse of the national guard. "It will take more than a Chandler, or an ungrateful governor," Lewis

Mine Workers Overcoming Last Holdout

NEW YORK, May 19. — Harlan County, Kentucky, coal operators, supported by a governor who doublecrossed the state's workers and called out the National Guard for anti-union activities, today were the sole holdouts against the union shop contract offer of the United Mine Workers.

Efforts to herd the miners in the county were bearing out assertions by UMW Pres. John L. Lewis that "machine guns won't mine coal."

Pres. John L. Lewis of the UMW called for an investigation of the use of troops in a county where a LaFollette Committee probe two years ago showed unparalleled disregard for civil liberties and close ties between the mine operators and the law enforcement agencies.

"Those troops are armed with equipment furnished by the federal government," Lewis pointed out, "and part of their pay as soldiers comes from the federal treasury, and I believe there is an obligation upon the federal government to ascertain what Happy Chandler is doing with those troops in Kentucky. And I believe there is an obligation upon the federal government to ascertain what suppression of civil liberties is taking place in those mining camps behind the cordon of troops."

TREMENDOUS VICTORY

Events in Harlan temporarily obscured the magnitude of the mine union's tremendous victory at the end of the seven-week lockout. The UMW was granted sole bargaining rights throughout the entire Appalachian area, and later in other bituminous fields, as well as the union shop. Under this provision, every worker in mines covered by the contract must join the UMW as a condition of work.

Thus the nation's most powerful union emerged from its weeks of negotiations and from the operators' lockout, stronger than ever before in its history. The agreement spelled doom for efforts of top leaders of the AFL and anti-union interests to inject dual or craft unions as a wedge to disrupt the UMW.

Fur Workers OK Merger With Leather Union

ATLANTIC CITY, May 20. — Merger of the Fur Workers International Union and the National Leather Workers Assn., together with election of Ben Gold, president, and other officers, were the final major actions of the 13th convention of the CIO union here this week.

The new union, formed with the approval of the CIO and with the overwhelming support of the membership of both groups, will be known as the Intl. Fur and Leather Workers Union of the U. S. and Canada. It has a potential membership of 125,000, of whom more than 65,000 are already enrolled in the CIO.

MUCH IN COMMON

Speaking to the convention before the merger vote, Pres. Gold told the delegates: "This is a great moment for both unions, for both the Leather Workers and the Fur Workers have much in common. The merger will be of benefit to the entire membership of the international.

"Our organizers have a great deal of ability, knowledge and experience. Together with the fighting leather workers we will in no time organize the unorganized sections of the leather industry.

"If you are ready and willing to make your union stronger and larger, give the Leather Workers your cooperation financially, morally and organizationally."

Seek Steel Pact In Nova Scotia

Halifax, N. S., May 20 — Regional CIO Director, Silby Barrett, is leading negotiations on behalf of 3,500 steel workers at Sydney to secure a signed wage agreement with the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation.

Belief that a satisfactory contract would soon be signed was expressed by Mr. Barrett just before his departure from Halifax recently to arrange a conference to discuss terms.

Lewis Discusses Apex Case

PHILADELPHIA, May 20.—Discussing the Apex Hosiery damage suit case at the Textile Workers Union of America convention here, CIO Pres. John L. Lewis said:

"Here in Philadelphia, the hosiery workers have been judicially attacked in the courts, and the U. S. court here has handed down a decision in the Apex case assessing hundreds of thousands of dollars of damages against the local union under the theory that the strike in which those men engaged was intended to be and was in fact an interference with the interstate commerce.

BROKEN PROMISE

"When the Sherman law was enacted in this country, labor was promised by the Congress that the Act would never be used as an instrumentality to destroy labor unions. It was presumed to be directed at the great combinations of capital, openly and obviously undertaking to combine, to fix prices and establish monopolies in essential commodities. It is indeed a sad commentary that now the Sherman Act is to be used as an instrument of oppression against labor.

NEED AMENDMENTS

If decisions of this character are to be sustained by our judicial tribunals, then labor in this country must organize, and labor in this country must demand of the federal Congress that it be relieved from the strictures of an Act that the nation knows was intended to restrain the rapacity of great combinations of capital that were exploiting the people."

The Miners' Triumph

The United Mine Workers of America has won one of the most sweeping victories in labor history, in its new agreements with the soft coal operators of the country.

Every unionist knows that the strength of his labor organization is the basic factor which will determine all improvements in conditions which he can win.

The union shop clause written into the new contracts establishes the basic power of the UMWA beyond challenge and beyond dispute. It insures against the employers promoting dual unions to divide and destroy the miners' united strength. It provides that every miner employed shall join the union, so that all alike pay their fair share for the benefits the union wins and non-unionists do not ride free on the backs of dues-paying members.

In defeating the long lockout, designed to break their union, the mine workers have rendered a signal service to the whole labor movement.

They have broken the back of an open-shop drive which, had it succeeded in the coal industry, would have threatened every other labor organization. For it was well established that it was outside anti-union industrial and financial interests that caused and maintained the lockout, against the wishes of most of the operators themselves, for the purpose of undermining the whole CIO and labor organization generally.

The coal lockout was but part of a general offensive on the part of anti-labor reaction. Politically this offensive finds expression in the drives to amend the Wagner labor relations act, to starve the unemployed by strangling WPA, and to destroy the social legislation of the New Deal.

The success of the miners is a major defeat for this reactionary offensive. For organized labor is the backbone of the whole liberal and progressive cause.

The miners have turned the tide of battle. They have placed reaction on the defensive. They have rallied the labor and liberal forces, lending them new courage and confidence. Now it is our turn to advance.

The CIO Spirit

The great convention in Philadelphia which combined the Textile Workers Organizing Committee and the United Textile Workers in the new Textile Workers Union of America, furnished living testimony of the validity and vitality of the CIO program for organizing the unorganized.

Hundreds of thousands of textile workers have been brought into the union ranks in the last two years, and have won the benefits of union agreements. The 750 delegates came from north and south, from east and west, from every textile center in the country. Such a large and representative convention was never before possible in the whole history of the industry.

The week before, the International Fur Workers Union met in convention to ratify a merger with the National Leather Workers Association. One of the main purposes of this merger is to throw the full weight of a long-established and well-organized union behind organization of the unorganized in related fields, just as has been done by such unions as the United Mine Workers and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in the cases of the steel and textile industries.

Both of these conventions manifested the spirit of the CIO—the will to organize, the willingness of older unions to help new organizations, and the realization that the organization of the unorganized is the main job to which all unions must devote themselves in their own interests as well as in those of the whole movement.

A Minimum of Safety

In calling for an average of three million jobs on the WPA for the next year, Pres. John L. Lewis of the CIO described this as a "minimum of safety."

The present tory drive to throw large numbers of unemployed off WPA, and to strangle the whole program through reduced appropriations, is not only callous in the extreme but it is playing with dynamite.

Business recovery, Lewis says, "will not come if federal investment in the form of WPA expenditures is seriously cut at the present time. Not only does the reduction of WPA employment at this time threaten economic reversals but it also carries with it political dangers."

In pressing for useful work for all unemployed at wages "sufficient to maintain an American standard of living," the CIO is following the course of true patriotism. The tories who oppose such a program are as much enemies of their country as were the tories of 1776.

You Can't Dig Coal With Bayonets

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Another Judas

WHAT has been happening in "bloody" Harlan county today, brings to mind another "field of blood."

The Bible relates that when Judas Iscariot repented and took his thirty pieces of silver to the temple, the chief priests would not put them in the treasury because they were the "price of blood."

Instead they bought with them the potter's field, to bury strangers in; "wherefore that field was called the field of blood unto this day."

Bloody Harlan has its Judas today in the person of Governor Chandler.

Alongside the miners killed in the fight for unionism, whose memory and whose living fellows he has betrayed, Chandler has dug his own political grave in Harlan's "field of blood."

The slow, deliberate words of John L. Lewis at the textile workers' convention were the soil thrown over the remains of Chandler's political career. He left only a double cross to mark the spot.

A Night of Betrayal

Like Judas, "Happy" Chandler broke bread with and swore his loyalty to those he was to betray, on the very evening he was planning a deal with their enemies. Like Judas, he betrayed them with a kiss.

Lewis related how Chandler pledged himself to give a square deal to the miners and to all labor, at a meeting of 35,000 miners in Pikeville, Ky. That night he came to Lewis' hotel room, and when he left at three o'clock in the morning, with tears streaming down his cheeks he swore that he would never forget what the miners were doing for him and would always keep the faith with them.

Chandler must have heard the cock crow in that early morning after he left Lewis' room, just as Judas heard the cock crow on the morning of Christ's betrayal.

For at half-past eight that very morning he left the hotel on his own Judas mission. "It was several months after," Lewis said, "before I found out that when he left the hotel that morning he drove to a secret rendezvous to meet a committee of Harlan county operators with whom he made a dishonorable deal."

Doublecross Chandler

While Lewis was speaking, the newsboys outside edged in to hear what he was saying.

And when the audience left the hall, they were greeted with the newsboys' cry: "Read about Doublecross Chandler! Doublecross Chandler sends more troops!"

More troops—that was the only answer that the grinning "madman of Kentucky" could make to the exposure of his treachery.

The artificial smile must have cracked on his face when he read of Lewis' speech.

The man who unsheathed the sword where peace prevailed—who sought to drive the Kentucky miners back to work with bayonets on the eve of the nationwide coal agreement—must have seen in the newspaper headlines the handwriting on the wall.

The now unhappy Chandler must know his political days are numbered. For the political Judas, like the scab, is despised by those who use him as well as by those he betrays, and is scorned by all honest men.

Little Men in Office

The United Mine Workers of America, fresh from the greatest triumph in its history, has little to fear from the Chandlers and other "dishonorable little men in office," as Lewis called them. The potters field of politics is strewn with their bones.

The miners of Kentucky will know how to deal politically with their Chandler, just as the West Virginia miners will know how to deal with their Rush Holt at the polls.

But each such story of labor betrayal deserves repeating and remembering, for the lessons it teaches of the need for union and political organization, so that the workers may not have to "depend upon the whims and the caprices and the mad impulses," as Lewis put it, of the Chandlers and their ilk.

To Honor Massacre Victims

CHICAGO, May 20—Chicago workers will once again pay tribute to the ten Republic Steel Corp. employes who lost their lives in the Memorial Day massacre of 1937.

Van A. Bittner, midwest regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, will be principal speaker at the exercises, to be held on Sunday, May 28, at 2 p. m. Thousands of workers from the city's steel plants and from other important industries will be present and will observe a minute of silence in honor of the victims of police brutality.

Typo Leader Brands AFL Attack 'Moronic'

WASHINGTON, May 20.—AFL "alleged labor leaders" allied with employers to amend the Wagner Act are bluntly described as "moronic" and accused of seeking special privilege or trying "to defeat the purposes of the act" in the leading editorial of the May Typographical Journal, organ of the AFL Typographical Union, issued today.

The editorial, signed by Woodruff Randolph, Journal editor, defends the Board from the charge of unfairness repeated ad nauseam by AFL top leaders, and declares:

FAIR AND ACCURATE

"In protecting the rights of workers to organize and bargain collectively it was found necessary to designate some authoritative body to rule as to the appropriate collective bargaining unit.

"In the main, the Board has no doubt done as fair and accurate a service as has been possible. Perfect justice and perfect wisdom can only be expected when we have passed beyond this vale of strife and tears."

Pointing out that the record of the Board shows only five per cent of cases coming before it for final decision, the editorial says; "The decisions of the Board can only be enforced through court action, which can only delay and defeat the purposes of the act."

MORONIC

Board decisions have been upheld by the Supreme Court on every vital issue, the editorial declares.

"Therefore those who would defeat the purposes of the act are resorting to amendments. It is moronic for alleged labor 'leaders' to join the employer campaign for amendment.

"Neither the AFL, the CIO nor both combined can control any governmental agency either appointed or elected to administer any law. Fair and impartial administration is all we can hope to get.

OUR DUTY

"Those who seek amendment to the Wagner Act are either seeking special privilege or they are trying to defeat the purposes of the law. Either course is inimical to the welfare of the millions who must work for wages and who can protect themselves and advance their own interests only through unionism."

Sen. Wagner Opposes AFL Amendments

WASHINGTON, May 20—Sen. Robert Wagner is staunchly opposed to all the AFL-sponsored amendments to the National Labor Relations Act, he told the House Labor Committee. He also specifically opposed the proposal for a new five-man Labor Board.

The Walsh-Green bill, as well as other proposed changes to the labor relations law, appear to him "inadvisable" at the present time, the veteran New York liberal told Chairman Mary Norton of the committee.

Only change he would consider, Wagner added, would be to permit employers to petition for a Labor Board election in certain limited cases. But this, he made clear, requires no amendment to the Wagner Act, being easily possible through a change in the NLRB's regulations.

BARGAINING UNIT

Wagner slashed into another AFL proposal that bargaining units be limited to one employer, thereby outlawing geographical units such as that of the west coast longshoremen, who were certified for all ports on the Pacific.

Citing how the clothing workers and other established unions deal with more than one employer in their bargaining, the Senator said that to limit the Board's authority in this respect would be "undesirable."

Employer Finds Wagner Act OK

Chicago, May 20—Sewell Avery, chairman of the J. P. Morgan-controlled Montgomery, Ward & Co., feels that objectives of the Wagner Act are "sound and must prevail," he said here.

Voice of the AFL

Waukesha, Wis., May 20 — AFL Machinists local 1377, largest union in this city, today called on the AFL executive council and Joseph Padway, AFL attorney, to "cease their attacks" on the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

Stating that we "have had an example in Wisconsin of what happens to liberal labor laws when labor-haters have an opportunity to change them," the union accused the AFL council of joining hands with the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers and the U. S. Chamber of Comerce in a campaign to "emaciate" the Act "because in that way they are convinced they can destroy a rival labor organization."

Pres. Emile Jacquet of the local pointed to Padway's lack of "consistency" in attempting to save Wisconsin's "baby Wagner Act" while at the same time "he turns right around and tries to change the National Labor Relations law to conform with those vicious Wisconsin laws."

Five Locals

San Francisco, May 20 — Five more AFL locals here were on record today against amending the Wagner Act.

The unions: Electrical Workers Local 6; Machinists Local 68; Cooks, Pastry Cooks and Assistants, Local 44; Lumber Clerks and Lumbermen Local 2559 and Brewers and Maltsters, Local 7.

SIGN PACT

Indianapolis, Ind.—The Philco company has signed a contract with the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers covering employes at its new refrigerator plant in this city.

Mediation Chief Criticizes AFL Amendments

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, May 20. — Practically every amendment suggested for the Wagner Act is unnecessary or inconsistent with federal labor policy, William Leiserson, National Mediation Board chairman and a prospective member of the National Labor Relations Board, indicated in his appearance before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

Leiserson vigorously criticized the aims of the Burke bill and others endorsed by reactionary manufacturers' groups.

Efforts to take away the workers' property rights in their jobs would leave them helpless before the onslaught of anti-union employers, he pointed out.

"The fact that the Labor Relations Act deals only with employe's rights does not take away the protections that employers already have under existing statutes and court procedures," he told the committee. "But if the Act is amended as proposed by S. 1264, there would be no law or court to protect the legal rights of the employes.

WOULD HURT WORKERS

"Employers would again be in a position to punish and discharge employes for exercising their right to organize and bargain collectively. They could do this arbitrarily and without a hearing. The employer would be prosecutor, judge and jury, and no court would be available to hear the employes' case or to review the employers' judgment.

Leiserson revealed himself in disagreement with the AFL top leadership over its demand that interference on the part of employers with their workers' choice of a union no longer be considered an unfair labor practice.

"The railway labor organizations, most of whom are also affiliated with the AFL, have always insisted to the National Mediation Board that employers' opinions when stated to their employes . . . are in fact intimidating and coercing since they come from men who have the right to hire and discharge employes," Leiserson said.

"Such expressions of opinion, they have insisted, interfere with the freedom of employes to form and to participate in labor organizations and make a free choice of representatives by the employes impossible when elections are held.

"The labor organizations have argued that just as many states prohibit employers from telling their employes what candidates or parties to vote for in political elections, so the employers should be prohibited from telling employes what organizations or candidates to vote for in elections or representatives for collective bargaining."

CRAFT UNION PROPOSAL

The newly-appointed member of the Board also took a whack at another AFL sacred cow — the demand that the NLRB be required by law to set up craft bargaining units in every case.

Under the Railway Labor Act, catering as it is to an industry filled with craft unions, the majority of workers in any "craft or class" have the right to select representatives for that group.

the delegates that he was proud to have joined the leadership of the new international.

"We hope that plans will be devised where we may be helped to organize the thousands of unorganized leather workers who are looking to all of us for leadership," he said.

"Ours is the greater responsibility to you fur workers. We pledge ourselves to live up to the confidence which you have shown us. We are mighty proud to become a part of this organization."

LEADERS ELECTED

The merged union will be divided for organizational purposes into two sections, one for fur workers and the other for leather workers. Ben Gold, elected president of the entire union, Pietro Lucchi, secretary-treasurer and 16 vice-presidents will also head the fur division.

James Chenery, chairman of the Leather Workers Assn., and Daniel Boyle, secretary-treasurer, will serve in the same capacities as leaders of the leather section of the international.

The first meeting of the international executive board ordered a fund of $20,000 to be set up as a starter for the drive in leather. The drive will begin as soon as all locals have ratified the merger formally.

FEATURES OF THE DRIVE

Features of the drive in addition to the campaign to organize the unorganized, will include establishment of uniform rates and hours, a standardized union label, a credit union loan fund for members, a rest home of workers in the New York area, vigorous prosecution of the health program, and other points designed to advance the welfare of workers in the fur and leather industry.

The joint executive board will meet every six months.

Ben Gold of the union and CIO Director John Brophy discussing problems at the union's convention, which wound up its sessions at the resort city last week.

Textile Union Plans Big Campaign said, "to stop the onward progress of the mine workers and organized labor in this country.

HILLMAN SPEAKS

Hillman told the delegates that "in the very near future you will be representing every worker in the textile industry." He denounced the dumping policy of the dictator nations of Europe and Asia and demanded government action to tighten the barriers against an invasion of goods "made by countries which have become national prisons."

Hillman also called for the establishment of a national economic council, with government, industry, labor and agriculture participating, to increase purchasing power at home and to raise 12,000,000 Americans now out of jobs above "starvation or bare subsistence level."

Referring to the gains made by the CIO textile union within two years, Hillman said that 274,000 workers employed by 1,014 companies have been placed under union agreements and an additional 150,000 have signed membership cards.

FRATERNAL DELEGATES

Evidence of the increasing movement to bring all organized textile workers into a single union was brought to the convention by a fraternal delegation representing the Independent Textile Union of Woonsocket, Rhode Island, an unaffiliated organization of some 10,000 members.

Lawrence Spitz, secretary of the organization, told the delegates that he hoped his union would soon affiliate with the Textile Workers Union of America.

Among the resolutions passed was one presented by the UTW delegates approving the agreement signed with the CIO in March, 1937, endorsing the expulsion of Francis J. Gorman, and extending "warmest thanks and appreciation for the splendid assistance" rendered by the CIO to the textile workers.

The convention went on record opposing all amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act and denouncing the conspiracy of "certain officeholders in the AFL" with "the most notorious open shop reactionaries."

RIEVE OUTLINES PLANS

Emil Rieve, executive director of the TWOC, who was later elected president of the union, laid before the convention a plan for a consumers' group retail trades department within the CIO, through which clothing, textile, foodstuffs, footwear and retail employes could combine for such purposes as eliminating the sales of goods manufactured in sweat shops and non-union establishments.

The convention went on record endorsing the proposal of the CIO for unity with the AFL in a united trade union movement, condemning the tactics of those AFL leaders "who place their personal advantages and success over the most vital needs of American labor," and calling for the negotiation of an honorable peace between the CIO and the AFL.

Strikebreaker

A Kentucky National Guardsman stands on duty outside a Harlan County mine as Gov. A. B. 'Happy' Chandler tries to force men back to work in face of refusal of Harlan operators to sign up with the United Mine Workers.

Form Defense Group In W. Virginia

Parkersburg, W. Va., May 20—CIO unionists in this city formed a Wagner Act Defense Committee and have launched a big telegram drive to get their sentiments registered with Congress.

Several hundred signatures will be affixed to a wire addressed to Sen. Elbert Thomas, chairman of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, telling of the unions' opposition to all amendments.

Harlan Mine Owners, Militia Fight Union

the union's demands. Within less than a week, however, five of these had reversed their earlier decisions and signed. They are: the Virginia Coal Operators Assn., the Southern Appalachian Coal Operators' Assn., the Hazard Coal Operators' Assn., the Southwest Virginia Coal Operators' Assn., the Big Sandy-Elkhorn Assn., and the Kanahwa Associated.

As a result only the small group of Harlan County employers continue to fight the union. Of the 450,000 bituminous miners locked out, about 425,000 are now working under contract.

Anthracite operators and union representatives are still negotiating a new agreement at meetings in this city.

Only a handful of workers had trickled back to work in the mine pits of Harlan's valleys. William Turnblazer, president of UMW District 19, estimated that less than a thousand men—including bosses and maintenance workers—were back in the mines, leaving the ranks of the union's 25,000 members in the area holding fast against a return to their jobs except under a union shop agreement.

1,200 GUARDSMEN

Gov. A. B. 'Un-happy' Chandler increased the number of militia on strikebreaking duty to more than 1,200. Bridgadier-Gen. Ellerbe Carter, in command of the National Guard detachment, announced:

"The troops are under orders to shoot, and shoot to kill, when necessary. There'll be no pushing around of soldiers on this duty."

TITLER RESIGNS POST

George Titler, secretary-treasurer of the UMW district, resigned from the Kentucky Unemployment Compensation Board in protest against Chandler's actions.

"I do not want my 30 years as a labor leader contaminated by your administration," he wired Chandler.

Judge C. E. Ball, who relayed the operators demand for use of troops to the governor — after Sheriff Herbert Cawood had previously refused to make the request —is a large Harland landowner and holder of stock in two of the affected mines, it was revealed.

LEWIS GIVES WARNING

Speaking in New York at the final session of the bituminous negotiations, Pres. Lewis warned that "he who thinks the mine workers are going to be starved back into the operation of these mines on a non-union basis or on the terms of the operators is a fool. . . . The time has gone by in the United States of America when the coal miners can be shot back into the mines."

10 FREED

Newton, Ia., May 20—Ten CIO workers, members of the Electrical and Radio Workers, were acquitted here on charges of kidnapping growing out of last year's strike against the Maytag Washing Machine Co.

Intl. Vice President Sentner was held, however, on charges of "criminal syndicalism."

Lewis Attacks Gov. Chandler's Doublecross

PHILADELPHIA, May 20—Following is the section of the speech delivered at the convention of the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, by Pres. John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers, in which he referred to the use of the Kentucky National Guard against strikers:

"You men and women from Kentucky know about Harlan County. So do I. There is nothing wrong in Harlan County, except that there is a group of operators there who do not want their men to enjoy collective bargaining.

"The operators have found themselves a Governor who is willing to carry out their orders and use military power of the Commonwealth of Kentucky to try to drive the miners back to work. But they will not succeed, and 'Happy' Chandler will not be able to destroy the United Mine Workers of America in Kentucky.

"I know 'Happy' Chandler. When he decided to run for Governor he came to Washington to see me.

ASKED SUPPORT

"He told me he believed in collective bargaining, against the suppression of civil liberties in Harlan County by the Harlan operators, through their employment of gunmen and deputy sheriffs, suppression of public assemblage, or their exploitation of the mine workers; and if the mine workers would give him some support and he could be elected Governor of that Commonwealth, he would see that the mine workers of Harlan County had just the same rights of citizenship that any other citizen of Kentucky enjoyed, and we asked no more than that.

"So 'Happy' Chandler said that his uncle had been killed by falling down a coal mine when he was a small boy, because the operators did not have proper safety devices and that burned deeply in his soul and he would never forget it. He said he had been an orphan boy, and knew what it was to work for a living and that his heart beat in sympathy with the toilers of the country and mine workers of Harlan County.

"So we believed 'Happy' Chandler because we did not know that he talked with his tongue in his cheek. He invited me to come down to Kentucky with him and open his campaign in the coal fields, in great public meetings. He said he knew if I came down there that our miners would come to the meeting and he would make a lot of votes.

PLEDGED SQUARE DEAL

"So, I went down to Pikeville, Ky., in the heart of the coal fields, and 35,000 mine workers came to that meeting. 'Happy' Chandler came to that meeting, and standing with me upon the platform he pledged himself to give a square deal to the impoverished miners of Kentucky and to all labor in Kentucky.

"He said he was the champion of the common people. We did not know at that time that he was lying. That night after the meeting was over 'Happy' Chandler came to my room in the hotel. Various people came in and it was 3 o'clock in the morning before they left my room.

"With tears streaming down his cheeks he swore to me that he would never forget what the miners were doing for him and that, come what may, no representative of special interests would ever cause him to fail to do the right thing by those citizens of Kentucky who worked for a living, regardless of who they may be.

"It was several months after that before I found out that when he left the hotel that morning he drove to a secret rendevous to meet a Committee of Harlan operators, with whom he made a dishonorable deal.

"So the time went on and 'Happy' Chandler became a friend of the Harlan County operators, and became known as the enemy of the mine workers of Kentucky. When he ran for Senator last year the mine workers of Kentucky did not vote for 'Happy" Chandler. They voted for Senator Barkley. Senator Barkley won and 'Happy' Chandler is angry. As he has a lust for vengeance he is using the power of the State to appease his lust for vengeance against the mine workers of Kentucky and the UMWA.

FEDERAL EQUIPMENT

"He has ordered out the militia to block the highways in Harlan County and today the highways are blocked away from five mining communities.

"I said in New York to the coal operators of this nation but a few days ago that soldiers and guns and troops will not mine coal in America. That the time has gone by to shoot men back into the mines, and if this madman in Kentucky, who happens to hold for the moment a position of power, is unable to restrain his capacity for vengeance, then I think there should be some authority in this country that will restrain it for him.

" 'Happy' Chandler says that he does not want people coming from other states into Kentucky telling Kentuckians what to do. 'Happy' Chandler did not believe that when he invited me to come down to tell Kentuckians to vote for him. And he didn't believe it last year when he was running for Senator when he sent his confidential lady lobbyist to see me in Washington to beg me to support 'Happy' Chandler. And I refused because Chandler had betrayed us once and he will never have an opportunity to do it again.

"He has been unfaithful to his promise. He has been unfaithful to the obligation of his office. He has ordered out the troops in Kentucky in advance of any breach of the peace, or necessity for their utilization. And Chandler must be responsible before the people of this country and the people of Kentucky for his actions.

"But it will take more than a Chandler, or an unfaithful Governor, to stop the onward progress of the mine workers and organized labor in this country. These Chandlers, these Girdlers and others of their ilk are simply living demonstrations before the people of this country of the necessity of organizing to protect themselves so that they do not have to depend upon the whims and the caprices and the mad impulses, nor the unhealthy reactions of little men or dishonorable men in office."

Several thousand Harlan, Ky., miners defy Gov. Chandler's double-cross attack on their union and rally to demand that operators sign a union shop agreement.

NEW HOMES FOR OLD

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing.

By THOMAS HUMPHRIES

Legislation is now being considered by Congress which, if passed, will double the $800,000,000 low-rent housing program which is now being carried on under the wing of the United States Housing Authority.

S-591, introduced by Senator Wagner, and H. R.-288, introduced by Representative Steagall, propose to authorize an additional $800,000,000 in loans and an additional $45,000,000 in annual rent contributions. These new loans and contributions would enable local housing authorities to build a grand total of about 350,000 or 375,000 dwellings for use by low-income families now living in the slums.

But that is not all. Housing also means jobs.

The passage of S-591 and H. R. 2888 means reemployment for thousands of unemployed workers and steadier employment for thousands of part-time and seasonal workers.

JOBS FOR WHOM?

Occasionally, I have heard CIO members complain that public housing was no interest of theirs. And why? Because it didn't mean any jobs for them.

There is no excuse for such an attitude. First of all, low-rent housing would deserve our support even if it didn't provide employment for the CIO unions. Second, the public housing program IS providing jobs for workers in the CIO organized industries, far more jobs than it provides for the building trades workers.

The real job of building a house goes on behind the scenes, often hundreds of miles from the actual site of construction. The real job of building homes goes on in the forests where timber is cut and the mills where it is processed, the steel mills where nails and girders are produced, the kilns where bricks are baked, the factories where glass is poured. . . .

Under the present $800,000,000 housing program about 1,500,000,000 board feet of lumber are being used. Also—about 250,000 tons of reinforcing and structural steel.

—about 6,000,000 barrels of cement.

—about 600,000,000 bricks.

—about 20,000,000 square feet of window glass.

If S-591 and H. R. 2888 become law, all of these figures will be doubled.

Under the present program it is estimated that enough jobs will be created in the building materials industries to keep 220,000 men steadily at work 40 hours a week for an entire year. If the housing program is doubled, this figure will become 440,000—a sizeable figure, indeed!

NO COMPROMISE!

Since labor is in dire need of both the new jobs and the new homes that would be provided for by S-591 and H. R. 2888, it is important that these bills be passed in their present form.

No sums less than an additional $800,000,000 in loans and an additional $45,000,000 in annual rent contributions!

And no crippling amendments—such as further restrictions in cost or prohibitions against use of vacant land!

The CIO unions and individual members should all let their Senators and Congressmen know the importance of having S-591 and H. R. 2888 enacted without being whittled down and without having jokers attached to them.

Picketing In Portland

Oregon's anti-picketing ordinance hasn't dimmed the spirits of union members and their wives. When the Luckenbach steamship company refused to obey an NLRB order to reinstate three members of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, workers refused to load the ship, took to the picket line. In retaliation, operators closed down the entire port.

Portland Lockout Defeated

By LEE COE

Portland, Ore., May 20—(FP)— The Waterfront Employers Association, which locked out 1,500 members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union on May 11 after charging violations of contract, backed down five days later when West Coast Arbiter Wayne L. Morse ruled that it was the employers who had broken the contract by ordering the lockout.

The port has been reopened, but the controversy is not yet settled. Key to the difficulty is the Luckenbach Steamship Co., which for more than a year has ignored an NLRB order for reinstatement of three men.

When George Cron, member of the Maritime Office Employes, an ILWU affiliate, maintained a one-man picket line to protest the steamship company's violation of the law, the dock workers refused to go past him to their jobs.

Chicago Guild Leaders Negotiate With Hearst

CHICAGO, May 20 — Negotiations between the Chicago Newspaper Guild and the management of the two Hearst newspapers here, looking towards a settlement of the six-month long strike of 500 newspapermen, started here May 15.

The conferences followed offers by Pres. Ralph Fischer of the AFL, International Typographical Union local 16, and Miss Charlotte Carr, head of the world-famous Hull House, to help mediate the dispute.

No announcement has yet been made of the progress of the negotiations.

Previous meetings between Guild officials and the publishers broke up some time ago when the union accused the employers of offering a "settlement" denying all Guild demands.

Further aid from liberal church groups came to the Guild, meanwhile, as the Christian Register, official national paper of the Unitarian Church, declared that "any liberals who can aid the strikers in any way will be doing a real service to society . . . seldom have we heard of a strike where public opinion was more solidly behind the strikers."

'SOCIAL JUSTICE'

A similar pledge of support came from Dr. Herman Sander, professor of philosophy at the Elmhurst Evangelical College. Speaking at a strike meeting, he said:

"You're not only helping yourselves, but you are helping all others in labor, both organized and unorganized, and advancing the cause of social justice."

Salary figures released by the U. S. Treasury Department for the year 1937 have provided the strikers with some juicy reading material, the Guild committee revealed.

The Ladies Talk

Mrs. Alice Belester of Chicago, secretary of the United Conference Against the High Cost of Living, tells the government's anti-monopoly committee of some of the difficulties faced by Mrs. Public in her effects to get best quality goods at the best possible prices. It's a hard job, she told the committee.

Minnesota CIO Maps Campaign

DULUTH, Minn., May 20.—Laying chief stress on a united, well-functioning state body for coming struggles with reaction, the Minnesota CIO Council concluded its convention here today with the election of Buford Easton of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers as president and Joe Van Nordstrand as secretary.

Resolutions passed urged a third term for President Roosevelt and a vigorous campaign for unity of farmers with labor to carry the state for the New Deal and progress in 1940.

Other actions included resolutions urging CIO-AFL unity on the basis of the American Congress of Labor Plan outlined by Pres. Lewis and the CIO committee which met with the AFL earlier in the year, defending the Wagner Act and sharply attacking the reactionary Governor Stassen.

Speakers pointed out that Stassen's first use of the new anti-labor state law was against the farmers who had supported him in 1938, when it was invoked against farmers picketing cut-rate mill plants.

Next convention will be held at Austin, Minn., which was described as a 100 per cent union town.

Ask Protection For Workers In U. S. Aircraft Program

Washington, May 20—Suggestions to train a force of 60,000 new mechanics for aircraft production were criticized here by Ralph Hetzel, Jr., CIO unemployment director, unless proper safeguards for skilled workers already available are included.

The plan, suggested by a government committee on aircraft production, would ignore the claims of thousands of skilled workers who are unemployed or at work on unskilled and semi-skilled jobs, Hetzel pointed out.

Hetzel urged that labor be guaranteed participation in the defense program on three points: (1) recruitment of workers; (2) wages and working conditions; (3)collective bargaining guarantees in all contracts.

He pointed out that several concerns receiving fat government contracts were consistent violators of the Wagner Act, and demanded provisions requiring compliance in all contracts.

"We are opposed to the government creating a vast pool of aircraft mechanics to be used by anti-labor manufacturers in order to bring down wage standards in industry," he concluded.

Struck Tanker Lines Fined $50,000

Violated Laws By Using Scab Crews, Is Charge

WASHINGTON, May 20. — Fines totalling more than $50,000 have been levied against strike-busting owners of scab-operated oil tanker fleets, the Department of Commerce revealed to a National Maritime Union delegation today.

The penalties were based on violations of the "safety-at-sea" laws, Allan D. Jones, acting director of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation said. Principal reason for the fines, he explained, was the signing on of crews as able-bodied seamen when applicants held only ordinary seamen papers.

Announcement of the Department's action came after a delegation of several hundred strikers had picketed the mammoth Washington building for several hours in protest against inaction on the part of the federal officials.

The master of one of the scab operated tankers will be asked to show cause why his master's papers should not be revoked by the government, Commerce Dept. executives said, in order that his case may serve as an example.

FIVE LINES INVOLVED

Companies involved in the strike which have had to pay at least $200 for every violation of the law include Standard Oil of New Jersey, Socony-Vacuum, Tidewater-Associated Co., C. D. Mallory and Maltsen Co. The two Standard Oil firms have had to pay about 85 per cent of the fines.

Pat Whelan, NMU official from Baltimore, told the federal officials that U. S. inspectors are handing out certificates of inspection "like leaflets," and demanded that the "bureau force the inspectors to enforce the law or remove them from office for negligence."

The government's action is expected to cripple the scab-herding practices of the struck lines, and help force a speedy settlement of the strike.

Settle River Barge Tie-up

St. Louis, May 20.—An agreement signed by the Federal Barge Lines today ended the three-week strike of 5,000 barge and riverfront workers that tied up Mississippi River shipping from New Orleans to Chicago.

The agreement provided that questions of wages and hours would be settled by conference with the Department of Commerce. The strike was called by the Joint Council of River Workers, composed of CIO Inland Boatmen and AFL Longshoremen's unions.

Present Play About Drug Store Union

New York, May 20 — "Professional Men"—a play dealing with conditions in a chain drug store and the events leading to organization of its employes—will open a three day run here next month.

Because of the working conditions in the drug store field, rehearsals have been taking place at midnight, but despite the awkward hours, the cast's enthusiasm and spirit have kept up.

Plan Picnic

Youngstown, O., May 20. — The second annual picnic sponsored by SWOC Lodge 1418 at the Campbell plant of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. will be held Sunday, June 4 at Berkley Woods here.

John Burns, chairman of the union picnic committee, has arranged a full program of sports, dancing, music and speaking, and predicts a bigger and better affair than the 1938 picnic.

Gov. Olson Backs State Label Week

SACRAMENTO, Calif., May 20.—Union label week in California got off to a good start with a proclamation signed by Governor Olson which declared in the preamble:

"Inasmuch as the union label is the consumers' best assurance that the article so marked is made in America, under fair working conditions, by adult workers receiving the American standard of wages," and then proclaimed the week to be observed throughout the state.

Condemn Anti-Alien Measures

Washington, May 20—Leaders of organized labor, church, education, science and culture, and progressives of all groups united in an emergency conference here to condemn the series of vicious anti-alien bills now in Congress or in preparation by reactionary Congressmen.

Over 60 such bills are now in the mill, the conference learned, and all of them are aimed at harassing and persecuting workers of foreign birth and extraction in the U. S.

John Brophy, CIO national director and one of the principal speakers, pointed out that such repressive laws were prompted not by patriotism, or even so much by a hatred of national or racial minorities as by a deliberate design to injure the organized labor movement.

AIMED AT WORKERS

"As we defend our racial and national minorities, so do we defend ourselves," he said. "The cause of freedom is indivisible. Lincoln said a long time ago that a nation cannot live while one part of it remains in slavery.

"We cannot live as a free people while we permit the oppression of any group, whether a fraction or a section of our population. That is why the labor movement defends the rights of all men and women, whatever their race or color or belief or national origin."

Msgr. John A. Ryan of Catholic University compared the present series of bills to the anti-alien witch-hunting madness that seized the country shortly after the war, when the notorious Mitchell Palmer tried to climb into the presidency on the backs of persecuted aliens—and citizens, too, as Msgr. Ryan pointed out.

Esso Blotto

This dealer in Marcus Hook, Pa., realized that customers wouldn't care for Esso products because of the National Maritime Union tanker strike affecting Standard Oil of New Jersey and three other companies. So he blotted out the Esso sign, switched to another make of gasoline which is on labor's "fair" list.

New Pact Protects Workers From Job Loss By Machines

NEW YORK, May 20.—Loss of jobs through the introduction of new machinery, one of the most serious problems facing workers, is one of the points taken up in the new contract signed last week between the American Communications Association, CIO, and RCA Communications, Inc.

The contract extends the previous one by covering all the company's employes, numbering about 1320, instead of "live traffic" department workers and messengers only. The new agreement becomes effective after it is ratified by the employes involved. It is being submitted to a referendum by the union.

A clause in the contract aimed to protect workers against loss of their jobs when new machinery is introduced, provides that the company shall notify and confer with the union before making any technological changes that will throw employes out of work, in an effort to eliminate this wherever possible.

Employes are to be notified six months in advance when it is found necessary to do away with their jobs, and opportunities provided for them to train themselves for other clasifications before the change goes into effect. They are to retain their seniority rights for appointment to new jobs.

SEVERANCE PAY

In cases where workers are laid off permanently due to technological changes, they are to receive severance pay on the basis of their length of service with the company. Employes with five or less years service are to receive one weeks' pay for each year of employment; those with more than five years, will receive two weeks for each year.

A reduction of hours of work is also provided for in the new agreement. Live traffic employes will have a 40-hour week, while other departments will have a 37½-hour, five day week. Employes with five years' service record will receive three weeks' vacation with pay; those with ten years, four weeks.

Union officials also announced the signing of a new contract with the French Telegraph Cable Company, covering some 85 employes in New York City.

Certify CIO Steel Lodge For 2nd Time

Chicago Heights, Ill., May 20.—For the second time the National Labor Relations Board has certified Lodge 1027 as sole bargaining agency for all production employes of the Calument Steel Co., Borg-Warner division.

Negotiations for a new contract will start in the near future.

The lodge's organizing committee announces that with 270 members already signed up, the lodge hopes to have a 100% union shop by July, in spite of opposition encountered in a few departments where the bosses have tried to stop the union's progress by intimidating the workers.

Hospitals On Wheels

Following the crops, two trailer units of the Agricultural Workers Health and Medical Association arrive at a migratory workers' camp near Fresno, Cal. The trailers carry drugs and medical supplies for the treatment of general ailments and minor surgical cases.

Harlan, Ky. — Resistance to the United Mine Workers' demand for a union shop contract was crumbling here. Nine operators, employing 6,000 workers, have already signed agreements, and the Harlan County Coal Operators Assn. is soon expected to follow suit.

Civil Rights

Washington. — Passage of the Oppressive Labor Practices Act was urged by Sen. Robert LaFollette at Senate committee hearings as a method of protecting democracy.

Wagner Act

Washington. — At least one million members of the AFL oppose Wagner Act amendments, the CIO charged in a new leaflet. Latest AFL international union to oppose Green-employer tactics was the United Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers, which called for defense of labor's Magna Charta.

President

Pres. Samuel Wolchok of the United Retail and Wholesale Employes, which is celebrating its second anniversary as a CIO international union.

Alaska Mine Signs Pact

Juneau, Alaska, May 27.—First contract signed with any union by the Alaska-Juneau Gold Mining Co. went to Local 203 of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers here.

The contract, won after months of hard organizing work against bitter company opposition, covers time and a half, double time for holidays, new wage classifications, and pay bonuses for 260 days or over of employment.

DISTRICT MEETING

Henryetta, Okla., May 27 — The Federation of Flat Glass Workers will hold a District Conference here on June 2 and 3, District President Robert McVay announced.

Trust Law Campaign Growing

(See Stories Page Six)

Washington, May 27.—The CIO's campaign to amend the Sherman Anti-Trust law to protect organized labor gained additional support here, following the $7,500,00 suit filed against the CIO and the Steel Workers Organizing Committee by Tom Girdler's Republic Steel Corp.

Sen. Elbert Thomas, head of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, and Rep. Mary Norton, chairman of the House Labor Committee, both expressed belief that the anti-trust law was being perverted by anti-union employers into a weapon to be used against labor.

Previously, Sen. Norris had called for amendment to the act in a letter to Labor's Non-Partisan League. The veteran champion of liberal causes was caustic in his comment on the Apex Hosiery Co. verdict of $711,000 levied against the American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

A pamphlet appealing to all unions, regardless of affiliation, to join the campaign against the Philadelphia court's verdict, was sent out by the CIO this week.

Insurance Union Wins Poll

Pittsburgh, May 27. — Gaining another victory in its drive to organize the insurance field, the United Office & Professional Workers scored a hands-down win in a State Labor Relations Board poll of Eureka Maryland Assurance Corp. employes.

All 44 active employes voted for the UOPWA, while nine ex-workers entitled to vote did not cast their ballots.

Protests

Sen. George W. Norris, dean of Capitol liberals, who attacked the circuit court decision in the Apex case, under which the American Federation of Hosiery Workers was found guilty of violation of the Sherman anti-trust act and held liable for damages amounting to $711,000.

Nip Michigan 'Baby Dies Bill'

Detroit, May 27.—Organized labor in Michigan prevented passage by the state legislature of a "baby Dies bill" which would have given a commission of five almost unlimited powers to investigate allegedly "subversive" activities.

In a wire to the State Senate, Pres. Adolph Germer of the Michigan Industrial Union Council called the bill itself "unAmerican and subversive" and warned that "it makes it possible for every bigot and fanatic and Black Legionnaire to have honest and respectable citizens annoyed."

The legislature has passed a state labor relations act, which, though far from satisfactory in the opinions of union leaders, is nevertheless better than a previously offered bill.

Map Drive To Secure Enactment

(See Story Page Three)

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Support for the Casey Bill, H. R. 6470, which calls for appropriation of $2,250,000,000 to provide three million WPA jobs during the 1940 fiscal year was pledged by the CIO today.

Sec. James B. Carey and Unemployment Director Ralph Hetzel said every possible means of backing the measure would be put forth by CIO unions.

"This bill does not contain everything that is necessary to provide a real program for the unemployed," a statement by the two CIO officials said, "but it does establish the WPA on a much sounder basis than it has ever had before."

Elimination of the degrading "means test", under which prospective WPA workers must declare themselves paupers in order to get jobs, is eliminated in the proposed statute.

Rep. Joseph Casey of Massachusetts introduced the bill in the House.

Auto Strike Hits Body Plant

Detroit, May 27 — Fifteen thousand striking workers at the Briggs Body Co. today held the upper hand in a strike which closed down all seven plants of the big auto body corporation here.

Faced with a solid front by the members of Local 212, United Automobile Workers, CIO — largest unit in the international — the company made no effort to resume production. As the strike ended its first week, the plants were as deserted as on the first day of the walkout.

The strike was brought about by refusal of the corporation to consider serious grievances which have accumulated in the plant. Spokesmen for the employers also insisted on blocking discussion of a new contract which has been demanded by the membership of Local 212.

55,000 AFFECTED

By Wednesday, the company's stand had forced 55,000 employes of Chrysler and Ford, to whom Briggs supplies bodies, out of their jobs. Worried by the unemployment brought about by the corporation, the U. S. Department of Labor sent James F. Dewey, its chief conciliator, to the scene.

Support from other UAW and CIO locals, as well as from the AFL teamsters union, has been pledged to the union

CIO Officials Warn Of Wire Monopoly

WASHINGTON, May 27. — Testimony revealing the attempts of the telegraph companies to form an unregulated monopoly at the expense of their workers and of the public was given before the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate by Lee Pressman, general counsel of the CIO, Mervyn Rathborne, president of the American Communications Association and various government departmental officials here.

The hearing was held on SR-95 proposing an investigation of the telegraph industry, introduced by Senator Burton K. Wheeler. Senator Wheeler was the first witness to testify on the bill. He read letters from Secretary of Commerce Hopkins and Attorney-General Murphy favoring the ACA sponsored investigation.

WORKERS SPEAK

Following the government witnesses, nine ACA workers, employed by Western Union and Postal Telegraph, told about terrible wages and working conditions in the industry and the sweatshop and anti-labor policy of Western Union which ranks as one of the worst labor hating outfits in the country.

Members of the newly-formed Textile Workers Union of America, CIO affiliate, cheer heads of the organization—Pres. Emil Rieve and Sidney Hillman, chairman of the executive council—who are shown in center on stage. The TWUA convention at Philadelphia mapped plans for a militant organizing drive to unionize the industry's 1,000,000 workers.

Stooge Blames CIO For 'Assault'; Doctors Call Him Drunk!

NEWARK, N. J., May 27.—Attempts to smear the CIO and discredit the Wagner Act by the anti-labor Congressman F. A. Hartley of New Jersey were defeated when New York City and Bloomfield, New Jersey police refuted statements that Joseph Donnelly, president of the Westinghouse company union at Bloomfield, N. J. could not testify in Congressional Wagner Act hearings because he was beaten by CIO members.

CONGRESSMAN AGREES

Joseph Donnelly's wife informed Rep. Hartley that Donnelly could not testify because he was in the hospital suffering from a beating and Hartley then issued a statement implying that CIO members were responsible for Donnelly's condition and gave this as a reason why the Wagner Act must be amended.

However, a check with Detective Brady of the Eighth Precinct, New York City Police revealed that Joseph Donnelly of Lake Hiawatha, N. J. was picked up by the police Saturday night, May 13th at MacDougal and 3rd Sts.

He was taken to Columbus Hospital where he was treated by Dr. Diacara for injuries described as follows, "positive fracture of the skull and acute alcoholism." Due to his intoxicated condition Dr. Diacara had him sent to the psychiatric ward at Bellevue Hospital and authorities there reported that he was suffering from a hemorrhage brought upon by acute alcoholism.

FELL ON HYDRANT

Donnelly has been active in organizing company unions at the Weiss Cutlery Co., Standard Oil of N. J. in Bayonne and the Western Electric Co. in Kearny.

Steel Contract Brings Wage Increases

Oakland, Calif., May 29—Wage boosts, vacations, strict seniority, sole collective bargaining rights and a minimum of 65 cents an hour are the results of 100% organization by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in the California Wire Cloth Co., here.

These gains, plus time and a half for overtime and double time for holidays and other benefits were won when the old contract was renewed by Lodge 1798 SWOC.

Lumber Union Files Charge On Minnesota

Cass Lake, Minn., May 27—After the strike-bound Rathborne, Hare & Ridgeway Company here had flatly turned down all proposals to negotiate the dispute which closed down the firm's box factory here early in April, Local 173-M of the International Woodworkers of America filed formal charges of unfair labor practices with the National Labor Relations Board.

On May 15, the Grinois Implement & Fuel Co., brought court action against the union, following several unsuccessful attempts to send trucks through the picket lines to haul from the plant premises a stack of logs and tie bolts which were bought after the strike started.

50% LESS WAGES

The timber workers' local in a statement issued to the citizens here, charges that the Cass Lake box company is paying wages nearly 50% lower than box factories in Minneapolis.

"With the wages the company is paying in Cass Lake, it is impossible for us to buy the simple necessities of life," the statement read. "If we continue to work at these miserable wages, we will be in debt to every merchant in town, which in time will not only bankrupt the merchants and ourselves but will leave another ghost town in northern Minnesota."

Mechanics Win Strike In Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh — A 24-week strike involving auto mechanics at the Pittsburgh - Chrysler Company came to an end recently when the company agreed to recognize and deal with Local Union 521 of the United Auto Workers. The firm is a Pittsburgh subsidiary of Chrysler Company.

Hearst Thugs Assault Guild Strikers

Chicago, May 27 — As negotiators discussed a possible settlement of the Chicago Newspaper Guild's strike against the Hearst papers here, union officials charged that the publishers had launched a new wave of terror against the 500 striking newspapermen.

Hearst goon squads are once again roaming Chicago streets, damaging strikers' cars and threatening attacks, the Guild said. Notices assuring scabs and strikebreakers that no settlement will endanger their jobs have been posted in the Herald-Examiner and American offices.

Radio time formerly used by the union has been refused by the stations involved, and is now devoted to management blasts against the Guild.

SEEK TO BREAK STRIKE

"All these methods are being mobilized by the management in a further effort to break the strike," CNG leaders charged.

Negotiations were stalled, reports indicated, by the unwillingness of the management to accept the Guild's three major demands:

1. Discharge of all strikebreakers.
2. Full back pay for all strikers.
3. Job and union security.

Guild Strikes In Chattanooga

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 27—(FP)—All but a handful of the approximately 50 editorial, business and circulation workers on the Chattanooga News were on strike today to win a Guild shop contract and reinstatement of three members.

The walkout was voted by the News unit of the local Guild when negotiations for a contract renewal were complicated by the dismissal of two active union members. A grievance committee protested the discharges, the result being dismissal of one member of the committee.

Co-Op Mill Signs Pact

Kenosha, Wis., May 27 — A three-year contract was signed here recently between Branch 6 of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers and the Kenosha Full Fashioned Mills, a cooperative run by the workers.

The contract provides for arbitration by a three-member committee consisting of a representative of the union, another for the firm, and a third chosen jointly by both parties.

The firm which was set up cooperatively by the workers after Allen-A went out of business here last Spring, has three of the union members on the board of directors. The employes are paying off loans negotiated to launch the cooperative venture which employs 533 workers.

DISTRIBUTION COSTS

New York, May 27 — Less than one-fifth of the total cost of distributing goods from producer to consumer goes to the "middleman," according to figures released this week by the Twentieth Century Fund as the results of its study just completed of the costs of distribution in the United States.

Packinghouse Union Knocks 'Corned Beef War'

CHICAGO, May 27.—Necessity for Pres. Roosevelt buying Argentine canned corned beef for the Navy was blamed on "big American meat packers" today by Henry Johnson, assistant director of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee.

The President's action brought forth criticism from certain groups in the cattle-raising states, but the reason for his action is "very simple," Johnson said.

"There just isn't any good corned beef packed in the United States. The packers moved their meat-canning plants to South America when they found that they could make higher profits because of the extremely low wages paid there.

HUNDREDS LOST JOBS

"We packinghouse workers ought to know, because in Armour & Co. alone, hundreds of us lost our jobs when they took the corned beef plant to South America.

"Neither the President nor anyone else," he added, "can buy corned beef made in the United States in any large quantities. We suggest that some of the people who have been attacking the President go to their corner grocery store and try to buy American-made canned corned beef.

"They will se the familiar brand names on the cans, but in small type at the bottom of the label, they will see 'Made In Argentina.'"

INDUSTRY MOVED

Chicago was once the world's largest meat-canning center, the PWOC official pointed out, but now canning here is restricted entirely to the use of third-grade beef, with the first-grade meat being sold as fresh meat.

Packinghouse workers join with farmers in resenting the loss of markets and jobs, he added, "but we know who is to blame. And it is not the President.

"By their removal of their business to South America, the packers seem to show that they care nothing about the American worker or farmer. I think it is a little unfair to attack the first President ever to have an operating farm program over something for which the packers are responsible."

Strike Shuts Allis-Chalmers

West Allis, Wis., May 27 — A strike by the United Automobile Workers Local 248 at the Allis-Chalmers Co. plant here started this week, as union negotiators and management representatives failed to reach an understanding on terms of a new contract.

The steward body of the big local, whose membership runs in the thousands, recommended the taking of the strike vote and set up a strike committee to prepare for eventualities.

REFUSED DEMANDS

The demands call for the union shop, a joint agreement covering the plant here as well as the Pittsburgh and Boston plants, wage increases and adjustments and an increased vacation-with-pay plan. Company officials turned down the first three and offered an unsatisfactory compromise on the fourth.

Local 248 leaders maintain that the union shop clause is necessary to prevent the company from utilizing Wisconsin's new anti-labor laws to chisel away the union's strength in order to institute speed-up, wage cuts and mass layoffs.

Wisconsin CIO Plans Convention; To Fight State Anti-Labor Law

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 27.—Official call for the second annual convention of the Wisconsin Industrial Union Council, to be held at Danish Brotherhood Hall in Racine on June 23, was sent out today from state headquarters.

Plans have been worked out for "installment paying" of back per capita in order to allow small locals to send accredited delegations to the meeting, it was announced.

The convention will have added importance this year because of the passage by a Republican legislature of a vicious anti-labor bill aimed at crippling the activities of unions throughout this state, which for years has led the nation in social reform legislation.

To discuss methods of dealing with the new bill, which received Gov. Julius Heil's signature a week ago, the state executive board of the CIO council has called for an emergency meeting of CIO local leaders and their attorneys.

The state CIO executive group pointed out that no matter whom Heil appointed to the new board, no appointee could function with justice toward labor since the law under which the board functions is a 100 per cent anti-labor instrument.

New Textile Union Names Officers

PHILADELPHIA, May 27. — Officers to head the newly merged CIO textile union were elected unanimously at the concluding sessions of the constitutional convention of the Textile Workers Union of America which closed here the end of last week.

Emil Rieve, executive director of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee and president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, was elected president, and Sidney Hillman, TWOC Chairman, was chosen chairman of the general executive board.

George Baldanzi of the Dyers' Federation is the new executive vice-president, and William Pollock, manager of the Philadelphia joint board of the union, is secretary-treasurer. Baldanzi succeeded Francis Gorman as president of the United Textile Workers until the UTW voted at the convention to merge with the Textile Workers Organizing Committee to form the new TWUA.

19 VICE PRESIDENTS

In addition to these four officers, 19 vice-presidents were elected at the convention. The 23 officers will compose the general executive board.

WANT MILLION MEMBERS

Achievements of the convention were summarized by Hillman, who called in his concluding remarks for "a million members by the next convention." Referring to the contracts already signed numbering more than a thousand, Hillman said, "let us determine that by our next convention there will be 6,000 contracts."

An outstanding event of the closing sessions was a "Southern Day" demonstration staged by more than a hundred delegates from eight southern states. The program included songs, cheers, and a series of short talks by a number of outstanding union leaders from the South.

Four resolutions dealing with southern problems were adopted unanimously by the convention. They called for organization of the south as the union's "No. 1 problem"; support for the anti-lynch bill; abolition of the poll tax, and a fight against the stretch-out system.

Leader

Pres. William Turnblazer of District 19 of the United Mine Workers, who is leading the fight for a union shop contract in Harlan County, Kentucky, only hold-out area in the nation against the agreement.

Lewis Calls Juarez 'Great Film'

Washington, May 27.—"This is a most magnificent production, masterfully executed by great artists, which will assuredly promote the bonds of unity and affinity between our two republics," John L. Lewis, CIO president, declared after seeing the new moving picture, "Juarez," just released by Warner Bros. throughout the nation.

The picture, in which Paul Muni stars as Juarez, concerns the struggle of the Mexican people for freedom from domination by the foreign Emperor Maximilian, whose power rested on French bayonets in the middle of the 19th century.

Juarez, leader of the Mexican workers and peasants, has been compared to Lincoln as an emancipator of his people and a builder of democracy.

CONFESSIONS

Another Hollywood movie, also just released, and titled "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" also puts in a strong word for democracy. According to critics, it names names, shows German Nazi methods in this country, and does a thorough job of exposing anti-democratic, un-American methods employed by Hitler's agents in the U. S.

Sign Nine Pacts In Harlan

HARLAN, Ky., May 27 — Nine new contracts lifted to 6,500 the number of United Mine Workers members back to work in troubled Harlan County, as Gov. A. B. Chandler and his state militia fought a losing battle to help the Harlan County Coal Operators Assn. avoid signing a union shop agreement.

Latest to sign the UMW contract was the Black Mountain Coal Corp., operating two bituminouns mines. Other agreements have been won with the U. S. Coal and Coke Co. and the Black Star mines.

Negotiations have been proceeding between the union, led by President William Turnblazer of District 19, and the operators' association.

Turnblazer said that only a handful of men were working in the association's mines.

U. S. OFFICIALS PRESENT

Harlan was a veritable beehive of activity, however. Twelve hundred National Guardsmen called out by the Governor, patroled roads throughout the area and prevented miners from exercising their normal civil liberties.

Brien MacMahon and Henry Schweinhaut of the U. S. Department of Justice are here observing the situation. MacMahon, who led the government's legal staff in its conspiracy case against 42 operators last week has indicated that another trial will soon be forthcoming. A split jury ended the first attempt to convict the operators of conspiracy against the workers' rights. Schweinhaut heads the recently-created civil liberties division of the Department.

Representatives of the Labor Department's Concilliation Service are also on hand, as are WPA officials who have been distributing food to the locked out miners.

Frank Hall, UMW field representative and Kentucky Industrial Union Council vice-president, declared:

"I am of the opinion that the coal operators would have signed a contract with the UMW as the other operators have done, had it not been for the statement of Gov. Chandler that he would give the operators protection if they wanted to reopen the mines without a union contract."

3,000,000 WPA Job Demand Backed by CIO

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Support for the Casey Bill, providing for three million WPA jobs during the next fiscal year, was pledged by the CIO today.

The bill, H. R. 6470, was introduced by Rep. Joseph E. Casey, Massachusetts Democrat, and follows out recent demands by President John L. Lewis that Congress establish "a minimum of safety" in handling national relief problems.

James B. Carey, secretary of the CIO and chairman of the CIO Committee on Unemployment, and Ralph Hetzel, CIO Unemployment Director, announced today that every facility of the CIO would be put behind the bill. The statement said: "The enactment of this bill would be the greatest step forward in the provision for the unemployed since the establishment of the WPA itself.

"This bill embodies most of the important points set forth by President John L. Lewis in his letter to Chairman Taylor of the House Appropriations Committee.

The statement pointed out further that: "The Casey Bill is a sound, practical bill, fully in accord with the aims and principles of the New Deal. The appropriation of $2,250,000,000 carried by the bill is no more than was spent by WPA last year."

"This bill does not contain everything that is necessary to provide a real program for the unemployed," the statement went on, "but it does establish the WPA on a much sounder basis than it has ever had before.

"It will give the WPA an opportunity to provide the kind of program that is really needed. The sound principles which have been established previously under the WPA are retained and certain new principles of great importance are added in this bill."

THREE POINTS

The statement called special attention to several points in the bill:

(1) The provision whereby employment on the WPA should not be reduced below three million until such time as there were less than three million eligible for such work.

(2) Workers who are out of work and able and willing to work should be certified as eligible without being forced to pauperize themselves.

(3) It provides that the Commissioner of Work Projects shall be directed to make such upward revisions in the monthly wage rates as may be necessary to give some kind of a decent living to WPA workers.

Pact Raises Pay $50,000

New York, May 27 — Pay increases amounting to $50,000 a year were gained by the United Wholesale & Retail Employes in a closed shop contract signed with Cushman's Sons., Inc., New York's largest chain bakery.

The pact covers 850 retail employes in 200 stores throughout New York City and nearby New Jersey and Connecticut. With 82 per cent of its agreement. The company's bakers and teamsters are covered by an AFL union agreement, won after a bitter 14-week strike in 1935.

Rubber Strike Near End

Kitchener, Ont., May 27—Early settlement of the strike of 750 employes of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company plant here was predicted as United Rubber Workers' Union negotiators continued their conferences with the management.

The strike was called April 25 when shoe department employes walked out for a 3.2 cents wage increase. A sympathy walkout in other departments brought the number on strike to 750.

THREE MONTHS OF TALK

Employes walked out after conferences held over a period of three months with the management failed to result in the demanded concessions.

Departure of M. S. Campbell, federal labor conciliator, for Ottawa was considered here as indicating that most of the points had been ironed out and a settlement was in the offing.

EXPECT REPORT

Meanwhile, the arbitration committee conducting hearings into the five-cent wage raise demand of the Dominion Tire and Merchants Rubber Company employes was expected to issue a report shortly on its findings.

The employes of the two factories were on strike during February and March. They won all their demands but the wage raise, which was referred to a three-man committee headed by Prof. Norman MacKenzie of the University of Toronto.

Sing For Their Union

Factory Fortresses

"There are still factories which stand like fortresses, bristling with machine guns and modern chemical weapons. There are still private armies which are drilled and trained by certain corporations for active combat during industrial disputes. There are still large industrial centers, like urban Harlans, where the constitutional rights of citizens are trampled down by selfish powerful interests."

These are the words of Senator LaFollette, describing conditions which still obtain in the United States in the year 1939, despite all the progress that has been made in extending industrial freedom, collective bargaining, and democratic principles generally.

Testifying on behalf of the Oppressive Labor Practices Bill, which he and Senator Thomas of Utah have introduced, LaFollette spoke with authority on the subject of violations of civil liberties. For the Senate committee which he heads has made the most thorough and extensive study of this subject that has ever been attempted.

The bill on which hearings are now being held was drafted by the Senate civil liberties committee to right some of the most glaring wrongs which it uncovered.

It is designed to prohibit: (1) the use of labor spies and labor espionage; (2) the use of strikebreakers and strikebreaking agencies; (3) the use of privately paid armed guards off the premises of an employer; and (4) the possession and use of industrial munitions such as tear gas and sub-machine guns.

Such anti-labor practices, LaFollette pointed out, "spring from an unyielding hostility both to freedom of association for employes and to the principle of collective bargaining."

The LaFollette-Thomas bill merits the active support of everyone who believes in collective bargaining, industrial peace, civil liberties and democratic principles.

A Sound Program for WPA

At least three million WPA jobs will be needed during the coming fiscal year to prevent the plague of unemployment from wreaking havoc in the homes of America's jobless workers, according to CIO estimates presented to Congress by President John L. Lewis.

Rep. Joseph E. Casey of Massachusetts has introduced a bill which provides for this many jobs, under an appropriation of $2,250,000,000, which is no more than was spent by the WPA last year.

The CIO is giving its full support to the Casey bill, not because it represents all that a rich country like the United States should do for its unemployed, but because it embodies the minimum program which Congress should be expected to pass.

The Casey bill also provides that WPA jobs should not be reduced below three million until such time as there are less than three million eligible unemployed; that the unemployed who are able and willing to work should be certified as eligible without having to pauperize themselves; and that upward revisions in WPA monthly wage rates be made where necessary to maintain a decent standard of living.

But against even such a modest program to provide for the jobless are lined up all the tory forces who are pushing the drive to "soak the poor." That is why the CIO is having to urge all labor and progressive groups to get busy at once, to impress on Congress the need for passing the Casey bill.

Congratulations!

The United Retail & Wholesale Employes of America deserves the congratulations of the whole labor movement, on the occasion of its second anniversary which it celebrates this week.

Before this CIO union was formed, there was virtually no labor organization in the great department stores of the nation, and very little throughout the retail and wholesale business generally.

Today the biggest department stores in New York and other cities are operating under CIO union agreements, and the message of union organization is being brought to every retail and wholesale establishment in the country.

Young as it is, the URWEA has already proved the validity and power of industrial union principles in one of the greatest of our previously unorganized industries. It has also proved that so-called white-collar workers have as much to gain from union organization as have the manual workers in production industries.

The United Retail & Wholesale Employe deserves not only congratulations but also the wholehearted support of all other labor and progressive organizations in continuing the work so successfully started, until the benefits of collective bargaining are brought to all the millions of employes engaged in distributive work.

Looking Ahead

Court Attacks on Labor

TOM GIRDLER is making himself better known for his brass than his steel.

After having carried on a bloody war against the steel workers with thugs and gunmen, with spies and provocateurs, with gas and machine guns, it takes a peculiar kind of brass to be capable of demanding $7,500,000 damages from the victims of this reign of terror.

And to pick the anniversary week of a massacre in which ten steel workers were shot in the back, as the time for entering such a suit, reveals a brazen callousness that is in a class by itself.

Guilty Party Sues

The Republic Steel Corporation has been convicted by the LaFollette civil liberties committee and by the National Labor Relations Board of nearly every crime of intimidation, coercion and violence of which an anti-labor corporation is capable.

Its name is associated with one of the most atrocious massacres in modern times. The horror of that Memorial Day in 1937 when steel workers gathering to picket Republic's South Chicago plant were shot down by the score, and ten were killed outright, will never be forgotten by American Labor.

Having been found guilty of illegal discharges, refusals to reinstate and countless other discriminations in its war against Union labor, Republic Steel is today being sued by the CIO for $7,500,000 in back wages for as many as 6,200 workers.

It is to counter these claims of the workers that Republic has retaliated with its suit against the CIO for a like amount.

Abuse of Anti-Trust Laws

But peculiar as are such circumstances surrounding this suit of Republic Steel, its chief long-range significance for labor lies in another direction.

Encouraged by the triple damage verdict of more than $700,000 against the Philadelphia Hosiery Workers in the Apex Co. case, Republic Steel has also invoked the anti-trust laws as its pretext for claiming triple damages against the steel workers' union.

These laws, which were never intended to apply to labor unions, have also been invoked against AFL unions since the Apex verdict.

The CIO sounded the alarm at once, after the Apex verdict, pointing out that the sit-down strike was not the issue, but that the existence of every union would be threatened if such verdicts were upheld.

It launched a campaign for amendment of the Sherman anti-trust law, so that it may never again be misapplied to labor unions.

Republic Steel has now proved the CIO's contentions by invoking the anti-trust laws in connection with a strike in which there were no sitdowns, and by showing that the Apex precedent might be used against any other labor organization.

A Shift in Tactics

What we are witnessing at the present time is a shift in tactics on the part of anti-labor reaction.

Republic Steel failed to break the union through industrial conflict, just as did the Apex Hosiery Co. The Apex hosiery workers won a union shop agreement, and the Steel Workers Organizing Committee has made such progress since the Little Steel strike that it may soon be strong enough to establish collective bargaining throughout the entire industry.

The back of the open-shop drive has also been broken recently by the magnificent victory of the United Mine Workers in winning their union shop agreement.

Having failed to break the unions in the industrial field, reactionary employers have been seeking to achieve their purpose by amendment of the Wagner labor relations act.

But here too, they have met with a definite setback. The CIO, with the aid of most of the rank and file of the AFL, has put on such an effective campaign of resistance to emasculation of the Wagner act, that the tories are beginning to doubt that they can enact their amendments at this session of Congress.

So now the main attack against labor seems to be shifting to the courts.

A Chance to Advance

If labor mobilizes to meet these court attacks, it has no cause to be discouraged at the suits already filed for the purpose of breaking and bankrupting unions, nor at the other similar suits which are doubtless in store.

The suits filed thus far have only the flimsiest legal basis, and the courts will have to be prejudiced indeed to uphold them.

But the dangers to labor are very real nevertheless in this whole campaign to use prejudiced courts for union-breaking purposes.

Labor will have to mobilize all its resistance on the political field against this line of attack. If it does so, even setbacks in the courts (as happened in England at the beginning of this century) may prove a springboard for great political and legislative advances on the part of American labor.

Million AFL Members Oppose Amendments, CIO Pamphlet Charges

WASHINGTON, May 27. — At least 1,000,000 members of the AFL are already on record against the Walsh amendments to the Wagner Act sponsored by their President, William Green, the CIO announced today, in launching a drive to inform all AFL members of the dangers to labor involved in the proposed amendments.

Detailed evidence of the extent of the revolt within the AFL against the amendments is made public for the first time by the CIO in a pamphlet entitled, "Whose Amendments?" and subtitled, "The AFL versus William Green and the Natl. Association of Manufacturers."

Ten big AFL international unions and scores of state, city and other AFL organizations are listed as having taken a stand against the Walsh-Green amendments. Statements and correspondence of AFL officials are quoted, expressing their opposition. Evidence that the amendments were drafted in collusion with manufacturing interests is also produced in the pamphlet.

REACH AFL MEMBERS

The pamphlet was mailed today to every Senator and Congressman. It is also being circulated to every CIO affiliate with the request that CIO unions in every locality mail a copy to each AFL local in their area, and see that all AFL members are informed of its contents.

In a covering letter to CIO affiliates, Lee Pressman, general counsel and secretary of the CIO Legislative Committee, declares: "The pamphlet shows conclusively that the membership of the AFL does not want to see the Wagner Act amended, and that it is in sharp opposition to the stand for amendments taken by Green and his associates in collusion with the NAM and other reactionary corporation interests."

The pamphlet reveals that the Walsh-Green amendments were introduced in Congress without ever having been submitted to either the AFL annual convention or its Executive Council. It quotes excerpts from letters of AFL officials who complain because they were not shown the amendments in advance.

AFL NOT TOLD

All that the AFL convention ever saw, the pamphlet points out, was a general attack on the Wagner Act by the resolutions committee, of which Matthew Woll is chairman. It never passed on specific amendments. Some of the proposed amendments put forward by Green were never even among the subjects mentioned at the AFL convention. One of these was the key amendment to eliminate the word "interference" from Section 8 of the Wagner Act.

The pamphlet concludes:

"When the voices of the thousands of AFL members opposing the Green amendments are added to the 4,000,000 members of the CIO, and the thousands of progressive-minded Americans who stand with labor in this fight, it is readily apparent that the majority of labor and liberal opinion is against amendment of the Wagner Act.

"Spokesmen of reaction, whether from the ranks of business or labor, do not represent the nation's workers when they demand the junking of this law which, in the words of the Supreme Court, protects a 'fundamental' right of labor.

LABOR STANDS FAST

"The majority of organized labor stands fast with President Roosevelt, with Senator Wagner, with the majority of Congress that enacted the law, with the Labor Board itself, and the many eminent legal and labor authorities who endorsed the Wagner Act.

"It is altogether clear from the many AFL endorsements of the Wagner Act that the question of amending the act is not an issue between the AFL and the CIO. It is, rather, an issue between labor and anti-union employing interests. That certain labor officials choose to line up with employers is shameful, but must not be permitted to confuse Congress or the public. There are only two sides to this basic issue, not three, as Green, Woll and company would have Congress believe.

"It is possible to be either for or against collective bargaining and the Wagner Act which protects it. It is not possible to be for the Wagner Act and for amendments to destroy it at one and the same time."

California Liberals Form Wagner Act Committee

SAN FRANCISCO, May 27.—Formation of a California Committee to Support the Wagner Act revealed many of the state's outstanding liberals had joined the fight against destructive amendments.

Head of the committee is George Creel, noted publicist and U. S. Commissioner to the San Francisco Exposition. Lieut.-Gov. E. E. Patterson is another member of the group.

Madden Calls Act Bulwark Of Civil Rights

Washington, May 27.—Reaffirming his defense of the Wagner Act before the Senate Labor Committee, J. Warren Madden, National Labor Relations Board Chairman told the House Committee considering amendments that AFL and other proposals to change the Act would "repeal civil liberties easily comparable in importance to those found in the Bill of Rights."

"If American workmen are obliged to say, after the adjournment of this Congress: 'We have less liberty than we had last year, less freedom to belong to unions of our own choosing, less freedom to take a position of leadership in a union without economic retaliation by our employers,' that will be important," he said.

REPEAL OF RIGHTS

"It will mean that we have celebrated the 150th anniversary of our Bill of Rights by repealing civil liberties easily comparable to in importance to those found in the Bill of Rights of the constitution. It will be the first time in American history that the national government has, except under the exigencies of war, taken away a civil liberty deliberately granted and for a time enjoyed by millions of Americans."

Madden had severe criticism for the AFL proposed amendments, particularly those that would allow employers to interfere with the workers' free choice of a union.

WANT PRIVILEGES

The only motive AFL leaders could have for pressing these amendments, he pointed out, was their hope of special privilege for the AFL. "That would be the only justification for their making this proposal," he said, "since there is nothing so inherently mortal about permitting employers to interfere with the unionization of their employes that anyone would advocate it merely for the public good."

COULD BLOCK UNIONS

Employers could block unionization if they used this amendment to its full advantage, as many would do, he pointed out. If it passed, they could favor weak, unaffiliated unions "which would be as feeble an adversary as possible in case of disagreement with the employers," or promote a union "which happened, at the time and place, to be least unwelcome to the employer."

The workers' only answer, he said, would be to strike. Under an amended act, they would look in vain for relief, "for they would find the law emasculated."

BLASTS AFL CHARGE

Madden disposed of the stale AFL charge of Labor Board "bias" in favor of the CIO by again citing the Board's record in AFL-CIO cases, disproving for the tenth time one of the main points of the AFL leadership's attack on the Board and the act.

The Board Chairman also vigorously condemned the wrecking bills of Reps. Hoffmann of Michigan and Anderson of Missouri, both of which would destroy the act completely if passed.

"These bills would, in my opinion, emasculate the act and take away the liberties it affords. They would make of working people and their unions a caste of legal pariahs and untouchables, outlawed by the Federal government upon the slightest deviation from the requirements of the most absurd or reactionary village ordinance, or the terms of an injunction granted by any labor-hating judge, local, state or Federal."

Stooge Says His Union Is Fake

Washington, May 27—Angus Duncan Chisholm, president of the Industrial Employes Union, proved to be a frank and truthful witness when he appeared before the Senate Labor Committee in favor of amendments to the Wagner Act.

His outfit, notorious for the gun squads it set on the CIO at Westwood, Calif., is an outgrowth of the "Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen," he testified, which was set up by the government and the employers at the time of the World War to fight organization of timber workers in the northwest.

NEVER ON STRIKE

Chisholm was more than frank—in fact, he boasted about his company connections. He was proud of the record of the IUE. Asked by Senator Ellender if he had ever had a strike, he replied:

"No sir, we have not, and I am quite sure that we never will have."

Mr. Chisholm wants the Wagner Act amended, particularly those sections that forbid employers to take part or interfere in the formation of unions.

Note: The AFL proposals would take care of this for Mr. Chisholm.

AFL Hatters' Meeting Defends Wagner Act

NEW YORK, May 27. — Opposition to all Wagner Act amendments was voiced today at the convention of the AFL United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers Intl. Union.

Passage of the Wagner Act resolution—which puts the union squarely in opposition to the AFL executive council—followed a report by the general executive board and remarks by Pres. Max Zaritsky.

The board report recalled that the union had won obvious benefits through the act, and that the National Labor Relations Board had been of great assistance in helping it to win signed contracts with employers.

"A BASIC LAW"

"The Wagner Act is the Magna Charta of labor," Pres. Zaritsky said. "Changes in such a basic law can be considered only with the greatest care and should be subject to most thorough scrutiny.

"Very little will be lost if no changes at all are attempted and the entire law may be destroyed by hasty and ill-considered changes."

The action of this AFL international with 37,000 members came less than 24 hours after Pres. Green of the AFL had alleged in a radio speech that only the CIO, the National Labor Relations Board and the Communists support the Wagner Act as it now exists.

Leiserson Confirmed By Senate

Washington, May 27.— William M. Leiserson today had won Senate confirmation of his appointment to the National Labor Relations Board, succeeding Donald Wakefield Smith.

The new NLRB member formerly headed the National Mediation Board, created under the Railway Labor Act to help avoid stoppages in the railway industry. A one-time college professor, he told the Senate Committee on Education and Labor a week ago that he was opposed to chiseling away workers' rights gained under progressive laws.

OPPOSED CHANGES

During the course of his appearance on the stand, he indicated opposition to practically all amendments to the Wagner Act.

The Leiserson appointment was passed by the Senate without opposition after Sen. Taft of Ohio, who had previously asked for delay in order to study his record, withdrew all objections to the new NLRB member.

King George VI Signs Canada's Wagner Act

OTTAWA, Ont., May 27—One of the first acts of King George VI on his arrival in Canada's capital was to sign the law which guarantees labor freedom of trade union association without interference from employers.

Royal assent to the measure was considered of great significance to the labor movement in its organizing drives since it indirectly carries the King's approval of the act and throws his influence behind the law.

The King gave his assent to the bill in a crowded senate chamber while senators and members of parliament and distinguished visitors looked on.

Labor has hailed the amendments to the criminal code which the King signed as a cornerstone in the edifice of a bill of rights for Canadian labor.

The act makes it a criminal offense for employers to interfere with the rights of their workers to belong to a labor union and climaxes a struggle of over 100 years of Canadian workmen to assure themselves the right to combine to improve their living standards.

Labor is preparing to utilize the King's signature to the bill by organizing additional thousands of unorganized.

This is the first time in Canada's history that the King has given personal assent to a bill. His resident deputy, the governor-general, performs this function.

Against Changes

Toronto, Canada, May 27—Sentiment against Wagner Act amendments was voiced at the convention of the AFL Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, though no formal action was taken by the delegates.

A resolution condemning changes in the labor law was filed by the freight forwarding section of the brotherhood, whose members are covered by the Act. Pres. George Harrison sidetracked any action on the matter, however, by stating that most of the union's membership is protected by the Railway Labor Act.

Girdler Takes War On Labor Into Courts

$7,500,000 Suit Hit By Senator

CLEVELAND, May 27. — What his army of spies and thugs had been unable to do—smash the powerful Steel Workers Organizing Committee — Tom Girdler of Republic Steel today was attempting to accomplish in the courts with the help of the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust acts.

Immediate public and Congressional reaction indicated that Girdler will fight an unpopular war against the nation's industrial workers.

Girdler's $7,500,000 suit against the SWOC, the CIO and 700 union leaders and strikers, charged the workers with restraint of trade during the 1937 Little Steel strike. Less than a fortnight previous the SWOC filed a suit in the National Labor Relations Board office here asking the company be forced to pay out about the same amount of money in back pay to 6,200 workers who had been deprived of wages as a result of company actions after the strike in the steel firm's Ohio plants.

DEFIED LABOR BOARD

The CIO claims are based on refusal to reinstate workers as demanded by Labor Board, illegal discharge of workers and discrimination resulting in loss of pay.

Last autumn the Board issued an order requiring the company to reinstate on application, all of its striking employes as operations permit.

LaFollette committee studies of the strike showed clearly, however, that it was Girdler guns, Girdler spies and finks, Girdler tear gas and Girdler-controlled police who caused the strike violence.

Filing of the court action by the nation's leading hater of labor may well spur Congressional moves to amend the anti-trust laws to prevent their further misuse against labor it is believed.

SEN. THOMAS SPEAKS

Sen. Elbert Thomas, chairman of the Senate Education and Labor Committee, declared:

"Everybody knows that when the Sherman and Clayton Acts were passed, no one ever dreamed that they would be turned to a purpose of this kind. Pending action by the higher courts in the Apex case, an attempt at protective legislation might be out of place. But there will be such legislation if the final court decisions uphold these misapplications of the anti-trust laws against labor."

NOT INTENT OF CONGRESS

Chairman Mary Norton of the House Labor Committee took a similar stand:

"This is a most extraordinary situation when they try to use the anti-trust laws against labor organizations. Certainly, that was not the intent of Congress."

The Philadelphia Record predicted that the public's reaction to the suit will be:

"What about those ten strikers who were massacred by Chicago police on Decoration Day, 1937, for daring to congregate near a Republic Steel plant? How can anyone, after those killings which horrified the entire country, enter the courts and ask blandly for 'damages'? Is this a deliberate attempt by the leading anti-labor figure in America to rub it in?"

Wants More Cash

Tom Girdler, shown with a couple of his lady friends, still hates labor. He has sued the CIO and Steel Workers Organizing Committee for $7,500,000, charging violations of the Sherman anti-trust act.

Pass Oppressive Practices Bill, LaFollette Urges

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Warning that "temporary publicity can never take the place of permanent and enduring legislation," Senator Robert LaFollette called for passage of the Oppressive Labor Practices Act of 1939 at the opening session of hearings before a Senate Education and Labor subcommittee.

The bill, based on findings of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee during the last three years, would prohibit the following practices:

1. Use of labor spies and labor espionage.

2. Use of strikebreakers and strikebreaking agencies.

3. Use of privately paid armed guards away from the premises of an employer.

4. Possession and utilization of industrial munitions, such as tear gas and sub-machine guns.

DECADES OVERDUE

The proposed law, Senator LaFollette told the committee, "is several decades overdue," and is "another forward step in Federal labor legislation designed to promote the peaceful settlement of industrial disputes through collective bargaining.

"The four types of anti-labor practices prohibited by the bill spring from an unyielding hostility both to freedom of association for employes and to the principle of collective bargaining. . . . The bill will stand with the Wagner Act and the Walsh-Healey Act as a guide post to liberty and industrial freedom."

Other democracies which have allowed privately-controlled private armies to exist and flourish have been themselves destroyed, he warned.

STRONG HOSTILE FORCES

"There are forces within the country which openly clamor for the destruction of civil liberties through the perversion of governmental power," the Senator pointed out to his colleagues.

"There are still factories which stand like fortresses, bristling with machine guns and modern chemical weapons. There are still private armies which are drilled and trained by certain corporations for active combat during industrial disputes. There are still large industrial centers, like urban Harlan, where constitutional right of citizens are trampled down by selfish powerful interests."

Union members are urged to send letters to Senator Elbert Thomas, chairman of the Senate Education and Labor Committee, and to Representative Mary Norton, head of the House Labor Committee, urging speedy and favorable action on the bill.

CIO Asks to Enter Apex Case

Philadelphia, May 27.—Declaring that "the issues in the Apex case are of vital importance to the entire labor movement in the United States" the Congress of Industrial Organizations, through Lee Pressman, general counsel, filed petition today with the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals of Philadelphia for leave to appear in the case as "amicus curiae".

CIO Asks Unions To Protest Apex Decision

WASHINGTON, May 27.—A call to labor and progressive forces to protest against "high-handed judicial attempts to break unions through distortion of the Sherman Act," was issued today by James B. Carey, CIO secretary and chairman of the CIO Committee for Amendment of the Sherman Act, which was set up by President Lewis following the $700,000 verdict against the Philadelphia Hosiery Workers in the Apex case.

Carey issued his statement with the release of a CIO leaflet describing the Apex verdict as "a new blow at labor." One hundred thousand copies of this leaflet are to be circulated as part of the CIO campaign for amendment of the Sherman Act, so that it may not again be used for union-breaking purposes. The leaflets are free.

ATTACK ON RIGHTS

"If this decision is allowed to stand, it will lead to a wave of similar attacks on basic American labor rights," Carey said.

"Already reactionary corporations and judges are following up the Apex decision, as in the suit filed by Tom Gordler's Republic Steel Corporation for $7,500,000 against the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, and a similar suit recently filed against the AFL Teamsters in Boston for $900,000."

The CIO leaflet declares that the issue in the Apex case is not the sitdown strike, nor violence. "The single issue in the Apex case," it says, "is whether a strike in a manufacturing plant, which necessarily stops production, is in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, and subjects the union to treble damages suffered by the employer."

UNIONS HELD EXEMPT

The leaflet points out that the Sherman Act was not intended to apply against labor unions, and that the Clayton Act, passed in 1914, was written with the specific intention of exempting unions from the anti-trust laws.

Nevertheless, it says, the Philadelphia court "by a monstrous piece of judicial distortion, . . . took the enactment of the Wagner Act as an excuse to expand the meaning of the Sherman Act to include all strikes."

The leaflet concludes with a warning to all labor to fight not only to reverse the Apex verdict, but to secure an amendment to the Sherman Act making it "so clear that even judges can understand that the act does not apply to trade unions."

Would Kill Unions, Says Sen. Norris

Washington, May 27. — Senator George W. Norris, veteran Nebraska liberal, today joined labor and progressives in condemning the $700,000, fine levied against the American Federation of Hosiery Workers for a strike against the Apex Hosiery Mills in June, 1937.

"If the decision stands," Sen. Norris said, "The threat of being thus penalized for ordinary trade union activities, not alone for strikes, but for any concerted action which might be construed as a 'conspiracy in restraint of trade' would hang over the head of every American union, officials and members alike.

"This would paralyze collective bargaining and labor organizations throughout the entire country."

SHERMAN ACT

Commenting on the anti-trust act whose provisions were used as a legal peg for the fine, Norris declared: "There is no doubt that the Sherman Act was not intended to apply and cannot properly be applied to the activities of trade unions.

"That point has been so clearly decided, not only by the Clayton Act but by subsequent court decisions, including the Supreme Court, as to be beyond decision or doubt."

BE ON GUARD!

Look for the union label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America when buying men's and boys' clothing, overalls, shirts, undergarments, neckties, lumber jackets, gloves, and all other kinds of men's wearing apparel.

The Amalgamated Label is your guarantee that the articles you buy are of the best workmanship and produced under one hundred percent union conditions by members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

By insisting on the Amalgamated Label you will help to guard against a return of sweatshop conditions to the industry. By helping the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America you help the labor movement generally.

Ask for the Amalgamated label on each part of the suit, coat, pants and vest. There are different Amalgamated labels for coats, pants, vests, shirts and undergarments, work clothes, neckwear and gloves.

YOUR WPA JOB

By Ralph Hetzel, Jr.

Secretary, Committee on Unemployment

The Casey Bill

At last we have a bill which really deserves our support.

Congressman Casey of Massachusetts has introduced into the House of Representatives his Work and Recovery Bill, H. R. 6470, which embodies many of the principles contained in the letter President Lewis sent last week to the House Appropriations Committee.

The bill calls for a minimum of three million jobs on the WPA during the next fiscal year as long as there are that many unemployed workers eligible for employment on the program.

2¼ BILLION DOLLARS

It provides for an appropriation of $2,250,000,000. This sum will be sufficient to insure three million jobs at a monthly wage high enough to provide a minimum standard of decency and good health.

The bill eliminates the necessity for unemployed workers to pauperize themselves in order to get a WPA job. All unemployed workers who are able and willing to work will be eligible for work relief if this bill is enacted into law.

A well rounded program of work suited to the needs and skills of the unemployed on projects of a socially useful character is provided for in the bill. Prevailing hourly wage rates are to be paid and a minimum of thirty cents an hour is to be maintained throughout the program.

SOUNDER BASIS

Although this bill does not contain everything that is necessary to provide a real program for the unemployed, it does establish the WPA on a much sounder basis than it has ever had before. The best features of the WPA are retained and new principles of great importance are added.

Of course, this bill should have the whole-hearted support and strong backing of the CIO and all other progressive organizations. But time is of the greatest importance.

The House Appropriations Committee has already started hearings on the WPA Bill for 1940. These hearings have been closed to the public but sufficient information has seeped out to indicate that the reactionaries are once more sharpening their knives for an onslaught on the relief program.

TELL THE COMMITTEE

The House Appropriations Committee should be informed in no unmistakable terms that it is the Casey Bill which answers the needs of the unemployed in this country. The House Appropriations Committee should be informed that it is the Casey Bill which has the support of the workers of our nation.

If the Congressmen from your district is on the House Appropriations Committee, write to him directly. It not, write to Chairman Edward T. Taylor. Get the local officials, the church people, the merchants and tradespeople in your town to do likewise.

President Lewis has requested an opportunity for representatives of the CIO to be heard at the hearings of the House Appropriations Committee on the 1940 WPA bill. At that time the CIO will strongly urge the passage of the Casey Bill.

Auto Mechanics Win Contracts

New York, May 27—Fifty automobile mechanics went back to work today in the Mab Motors Co. after Local 259, United Automobile Workers, won a five-day strike.

Wage increases up to 10 per cent, the closed shop, vacations and holidays with pay and the 44-hour week were contained in the agreement. Another walkout is still continuing against the Midtown Chevrolet Co., while a drive is under way to organize collision shop workers in Manhattan and Bronx.

Mine Union Official, Attacked As 'Red', Wins Libel Suit

Facsimile of $500 check given to Jones

CUMBERLAND, Md., May 27. — Indiscriminate abuse of CIO leaders doesn't pay—in fact it can be costly—anti-union forces are learning from the settlement of a libel suit against the local radio broadcasting station here announced today.

The settlement, calling for a public apology by the Associated Broadcasting Co., payment of $750 in cash, and $500 worth of radio time, ended a libel suit brought by John T. Jones, president of United Mine Workers District 16 and president of the State Industrial Union Council, for wild statements by an anti-CIO speaker who called John L. Lewis, Jones and other CIO leaders "Communists."

VICIOUS SERIES

The libels came in a vicious series of broadcasts by one McNally, alias Joe Kenny, ex-convict and so-called "evangelist" who was imported to Cumberland to smear the CIO and all labor during a mayoralty campaign.

Jones announced on receiving the $750 check that the money would be used to buy glasses for children of miners unable to afford proper eye treatment. "My suit was not taken for personal gain," Jones declared. "It was taken to show the public that the attacks of a disreputable ex-convict could never be substantiated by the attacker or the radio station.

"The apology of the station to John L. Lewis and myself is a vindication in the minds of the people of western Maryland."

Minnesota CIO Elects Eastman

DULUTH, Minn., May 27.—A ten-point program to guide the activities of CIO unions throughout the state was adopted at the second annual convention of the Minnesota CIO Industrial Union Council, which elected Buford Eastman, young leader of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, as president.

Nominated by Joe Van Nordstrand, former head of the Council, Eastman was elected by acclamation at Van Nordstrand's suggestion. The nominations committee previously was deadlocked for several hours over the question of nominees for president, when Van Nordstrand, favored by many of the delegates for re-election, called for the nomination of a candidate who would be elected unanimously.

VanNORDSTRAND NAMED

The former president was unanimously elected secretary-treasurer. An executive board was chosen by the delegates representative of every section of the workers in the state. The proposals of the nominating committee for six vice-presidents and the Board were adopted without a dissenting vote.

The program adopted called for: Consolidation of CIO councils of miners, packing house employes and white collar workers; more effective legislative work; an intelligent public relations policy to clear up misrepresentations of the CIO; closer relationship and understanding with farmers and businessmen; and defense of the Wagner Act and the President's recovery program.

BACK HOUSING PROGRAM

Other points included promotion of low-cost housing through the Federal Housing Authority; unity with the AFL in opposing the Stassen anti-labor bill; support of Roosevelt's efforts to protect democracy and maintain peace and preparation for the 1940 election campaign.

Test Food Stamp Plan

Scene in a Rochester, N. Y. grocery store as relief clients swapped new orange and blue "relief stamps" for food in the U. S. government's test of a method of relieving want in the midst of plenty. Local grocers reported satisfaction with the method, which may be spread to all parts of the nation.

Picket Wins False Arrest Verdict

Toledo, May 27 — Herbert Rice members of United Automobile Workers Local 12, was $650 richer today after winning a false arrest case against the owners of the City Laundry Co., where he was nabbed on a picket line in February, 1938.

Rice charged in his suit that Samuel Rudick, president of the company, had been responsible for his arrest on "assault and battery" charges during an Amalgamated Clothing Workers strike. He was forced to spend about six hours in a local police station after his removal from the picket line, but was acquitted when his case came to trial in April, 1938.

"This will have a wholesome effect on restraining employers from maliciously having workers arrested during labor difficulties."

Shipyard Campaign Progresses

Baltimore, Md., May 27—An organizing drive being conducted at the Sparrows Point plant of the Bethlehem Shipyards is nearing completion, the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, CIO, announced this week.

National President John Green will present a charter to Local 33 at a meeting to be held June 2. "It is expected that the establishment of the new local in Sparrows Point will prove a stimulus not only for the remaining Sparrows Point workers to get in the IUMSW, but also for the men at Key Highway, Bethlehem's big repair yard," the union stated.

Demand Safety at Sea

Members of the National Maritime Union picket Dept. of Commerce offices in Washington demanding enforcement of safety-at-sea laws, being flouted as struck oil tanker lines sign up scabs. Picketing forced U. S. to take action, levy $50,000 fines against the four lines involved.

Maritime Union Asks U. S. Probe Of Conspiracy

NEW YORK, May 27.—Investigation of "a conspiracy undertaken by the shipowners to wreck and destroy the National Maritime Union", was asked in a letter sent to Attorney General Frank Murphy by Joseph Curran, NMU president.

Charges on which eight officers and members of the union were recently suspended were outlined in the letter and a copy of confessions by two former members of an alleged "shipowner group" within the union was enclosed.

"The activities of Frank J. Taylor, president of the American Merchant Institute, and other steamship company officials," the letter stated, "not only spell out the crime of bribing a union official, under New York State laws, but the attempts of these officials to frustrate the collective bargaining undertakings of maritime workers as guaranteed by the National Labor Relations Act also spell out a conspiracy under Section 51 of the U. S. Criminal Code, Title 18."

AFL Union Defends Big Utility

New York, May 27.—Siding with the Consolidated Edison Co. in a suit brought against the firm by the Amalgamated Utility Workers, CIO affiliate, the AFL electrical workers union declared in U. S. circuit court of appeals that no union has a right to bring proceedings against an employer who violates a court order enforcing a decision of the National Labor Relations Board.

Affidavits from scores of employes showing that the company had ignored most of the points of the enforcement order issued against it, were filed with the court by the CIO union. It asked that the company be found guilty of contempt of court, and that it be forced to obey the order.

AFL ENTERED CASE

Company lawyers asked for dismissal of the plea, charging that the Wagner Act gives the union no right to start such proceedings. The Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers intervened in the case to make a similar motion, although they were not even a party to it.

Commenting on the IBEW action, Edward Shedlock, chairman of the CIO union, said the case was "but a continuation of the AFL group's policy of defending the management of Con-Ed, a policy to which they have adhered since the deal between Chairman Carlisle of the company and IBEW Pres. Tracy was effected."

Lewis Joins Appeal For Palestine

Washington, May 27. — CIO Pres. John L. Lewis joined with a group of liberals here in sending a cablegram to Premier Neville Chamberlain, urging the British government to abide by the Balfour Declaration establishing a national homeland for Jews in Palestine.

Britain "made a pact with the conscience of mankind which won the hearts of the whole civilized world" when it signed the Declaration, the cable said.

ASK 'FAIR PLAY'

"In this most tragic hour in the history of the Jewish people, it is our hope that in keeping with British traditions of justice and fair play, the policy of His Majesty's government with regard to Palestine will carry out the letter and the spirit of the covenant contained in the Balfour Declaration."

Negroes Win Long Walkout

New York, May 27 — The Spring Products Corp. which for nine months refused to deal with the CIO United Furniture Workers because its 367 Negro workers "would become lazy under union conditions," changed its mind today.

It signed a contract with UFWA Local 91, granting a 5% wage increase, the 40-hour week, overtime pay, seniority rights and a one-week vacation with pay. Pres. Samuel Marcus of the company previously had claimed that Negroes did not need more than the previous weekly minimum of $11 to keep alive.

The plucky fight of the Negro unionists brought them wide support from AFL and CIO unions throughout the metropolitan area. During the walkout there were 48 sympathy strikes by workers in other plants who refused to handle the company's scab-made goods.

CIO Sec. James B. Carey, Pres. Muster of the UFW and Allan Haywood, CIO regional director, were among the CIO officials who marched on the strikers' picket line.

REACTIONARIES BUSY

Phoenix, Ariz.—(FP)—In keeping with its anti-labor program, the Associated Farmers is seeking an anti-picket ordinance for this community. This same law, almost word for word, has been presented to scores of state legislatures and city commissions throughout the country by either the Associated Farmers or one of its many counterparts.

Labor Unity Won Victory for River Barge Workers

ST. LOUIS, May 27.—A union shop, improved working conditions—paid vacations, an increase in working personnel which will mean more jobs, and an agreement to discuss wage increases have been won by approximately 3,500 dock and river workers employed by the government-operated Federal Barge line.

The advances were won through united action of the CIO Inland Boatmen's Division of the National Maritime Union and the AFL Longshoremen's Association.

The two unions wrung their victory from the Barge Line after a three-weeks strike which tied up shipping on the Mississippi, Missouri, Illinois and Warrior rivers.

UNITY IN ACTION

The strike, officials of the two unions declare, was a brilliant example of what can be accomplished by labor unity when carried into action. While rank and file members of the two unions marched the picket line side by side in cities up and down the Mississippi valley, officials of the two organizations co-operated closely in carrying on negotiations in which all the demands of the two unions were won.

Actual conduct of the strike, which stretched from St. Paul, Minn., to New Orleans, was handled by the General Council of River Workers, a federation on which local unions of the AFL and CIO are represented. The General Council of River Workers handles all problems affecting both unions on the Mississippi river and in river ports.

The Federal Barge Line strike began on April 27 after the General Council of River Workers had negotiated with barge line officials for exactly one month. The negotiations got nowhere and so the crews of several boats then tied up in St. Louis struck. The strike spread to the dock workers and boat crews of all terminals of the line.

UNION DEMANDS

Both unions were demanding that the line agree to hire dock and men for boat crews from lists furnished by the union; vacations, with pay, of 26 days a year; 15 days a year sick leave; improved working conditions and wage increases. The Inland Boatmen's Union — which represents the men who man all the tug boats of the line — also demanded that the number of men be increased for each boat.

Since the Federal Barge Line has earned more than $1,000,000 profit during the past year, both rank and file members and officials of the two unions are confident wage increases will be granted.

The unions also expect that the relations between the organized workers and the company will be vastly improved when the line is transferred from control of the War Department to the Department of Commerce.

2,500 CIO MEMBERS

The Inland Boatmen's Division of the NMU represents the unlicensed members of the crews of the Barge Line boats and the longshore workers at New Orleans, Vicksburg, Miss., Baton Rouge, La., Helena, Ark., and Mobile, Ala. The CIO union represents about 2,500 Federal Barge Line workers. The AFL International Longshoremen's Association represents 1,000 longshore workers at Memphis, Cairo, Ill., St. Louis, East St. Louis, Ill., and Peoria, Ill.

Members of the two unions declare that the anti-labor, anti-union attitude of Major-General Ashburn, company president, and his stooges forced the workers to strike. During the negotiations, before the strike, the barge line officials, under Ashburn, took an insistently anti-union attitude and blocked any possibility of a settlement.

DEMAND OUSTER

After the strike was called, the General Council of River Workers, by official resolution, demanded the removal of Ashburn and opened a campaign to have other labor groups join in their demand.

By forcing the workers of the line to strike, it is pointed out, he lost tens of thousands of dollars for the barge line and diverted business to competing river lines or to the railroads. It will be hard for the line to get this business back, on which the livelihood of barge workers depends.

The CIO Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association, representing the licensed engineering department workers of the Federal Barge Line, is negotiating for a new contract. Its demands are backed by the General Council of River Workers. Members of the MEBA were not involved in the strike of river and dock workers. They stayed on the boats, with the approval of the other two unions, to take care of the vessels.

Jury Frees 93 Oil Workers in Tulsa

TULSA, Okla., May 27—(FP)—Ninety-three oil workers, who with their wives filled a common pleas court room to capacity, heard a jury verdict of not guilty on charges of unlawful assembly growing out of the strike against the Mid-Continent Petroleum Corp., producers of DX gasoline.

Angered by the 9-3 vote for acquittal after only six hours' deliberation, County Att. Dixie Gilmer called the jurors a "bunch of weak-kneed puppets."

He said he would proceed with prosecution of Jack N. Hays, local president of the Oil Workers Intl. Union, CIO, and 36 unionists on the more serious charge of conspiracy.

143 INDICTED

A Tulsa county grand jury—composed largely of business men and anti-unionists — indicted 143 strikers last April, charging 106 with unlawful assembly and the remainder with conspiracy. Many of the strikers, unable to provide the high bail demanded, went to jail.

At the court trial Defense Atty. J. D. Lydick warned that Mid-Continent had instigated the prosecution in order to strengthen its position in the current National Labor Relations Board proceedings.

"The state has atempted to prove these defendants intended to do violence and they haven't proved anything," he said. "This thing was intended to pave the way for Mid-Continent's position in the Labor Board hearing. If these defendants are guilty, give 'em the works. If not, they should be acquitted. We don't want any compromise."

Mooney In New York June 5

New York, May 27—Tom Mooney, recovered from a serious operation, will open a nationwide tour here at a monster mass meeting on June 5 which is expected to jam every available inch of space in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Leaders of CIO, AFL and independent unions, as well as the railroad brotherhoods, will greet the labor martyr who spent 22 years in California state prisons. Mayor F. H. LaGuardia will be one of the principal speakers at the meeting.

Numerous organizations have invited Mooney to attend dinners in his honor. The American Communications Assn.' CIO, has asked him to be its guest at the first annual telegraphers' ball.

Mooney's purpose in making the tour is to campaign for labor unity and to raise funds for the release of Warren K. Billings, who is still in San Quentin. He will appear in a number of eastern cities, and will speak at the Coliseum in Michigan's State Fair Grounds, Detroit, on June 11.

Memorial

Chicago.—Fifteen thousand union members gathered here to pay tribute to the ten steel workers who were massacred near Tom Girdler's Republic Steel plant during the 1937 Little Steel strike.

Defeated

Springfield, Ill.— United labor pressure brought about defeat for the Lantz bill, aimed at curbing union activity in this state.

Health

Washington. — Passage of the Wagner Health Bill and the Keller-Neely coal mine accident inspection bill was demanded at committee hearings by representatives of the CIO and the United Mine Workers.

Wagner Act

Dromedary Dates Signs With CIO

WASHINGTON, June 3. — Every food processing plant in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania is under closed shop contract with District 7 of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers, CIO, now that Hills Bros., employing 800 workers, has signed, it was announced here.

Hills Bros., largest date and fig packing firm in the U. S., ("Dromedary" brand) agreed to a closed shop provided 60 per cent of its workers so voted in a State Labor Board poll. The vote, conducted this week, showed that 95 per cent wanted the closed shop.

2 Courts OK Board Rulings

WASHINGTON, June 3.— The National Labor Relations Board today rolled up two more court victories, winning enforcement orders from federal judges in two important cases.

As a result of the decision, the Stackpole Carbon Co. of St. Mary's, Pa., and the Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. of St. Louis will be found in contempt of court if they refuse to comply with the Labor Board orders.

The Pennsylvania firm was ordered in March 1938, to bargain with the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, to drop a company union and to stop interfering with the union activities of its employes.

186 WORKERS

Clyde Armstrong, counsel for the company, has also represented Ernest T. Weir's National Steel Corp. in its long-drawn out fight with the NLRB.

The midwest shoe company was told by a St. Paul circuit court of appeals to rehire 186 workers, pay them $150,000 in back wages and allow the employes to vote whether they wish the United Shoe Workers, CIO, or an AFL union as sole collective bargaining agency.

Sponsor

Sen. James Murray of Montana who has sponsored in the Senate the 3,000,000 WPA job bill introduced in the House by Rep. Joseph Casey of Massachusetts. The CIO has endorsed the bill and is calling for its passage.

Striking members of the United Automobile Workers picket the Briggs Manufacturing Plant in Detroit and remind Briggs who owns the Tigers ball team—that he'll have to play ball with the union.

100,000 Covered By New 2-Year Agreement

(See Story Page Three)

NEW YORK, June 3.—Ratification of the two-year union shop agreement signed by employers of 100,000 anthracite coal miners and the United Mine Workers was expected to be quickly voted by the three districts affected.

Coming at the end of several weeks' negotiations, the UMW added to the victory which it had won less than two weeks earlier for the half-million bituminous miners throughout the nation. Unlike the bituminous operators, the anthracite employers agreed to keep the mines in operation during the course of the negotiations.

The previous contract expired at midnight, April 30, but was extended by mutual agreement.

Under the union shop clause, the United Mine Workers is recognized as sole bargaining agency, and all workers must join that union as a condition of employment.

Wage-Hour Violations Bring Fines for Two

WHEELING, W. Va., June 3.—Sanford Lerner, vice-president of the Standard Pants Co., today had the dubious distinction of being the first federal wage-hour violator to face a jail term.

Federal Judge William Baker fined the company $500 and costs and sentenced Lerner to six months in jail. The term will be suspended if the fine is paid by June 7 and records which Lerner was accused of not keeping are produced at the Pittsburgh office of the wage-hour administration by the same date.

The sentence was based primarily on contempt of court, but charges of direct violation of the act may be filed if the missing records show non-observance of its regulations.

Workers Share Profits In New Pact

New York, June 3.—Union participation in a novel profit-sharing plan is provided for in a new contract signed by Henry Romeike Inc., press-clipping firm, and Local 16 of the United Office & Professional Workers.

A portion of the profits, after officials' salaries and a 4 per cent return on investment have been deducted, will be turned over to the employes, while additional funds will be put into a welfare fund to be managed jointly by the head of the company and the union shop committee.

The agreement, which covers 117 office workers, also provides for a $1.50 weekly wage increase, a shorter work week, sick leave and paid vacations.

PLAN MEETING

San Francisco. — The State, County & Municipal Workers, CIO, will hold its first California state convention here next month.

Shoe Firm

Boston, June 3—Pleading guilty on six counts to violation of the Fair Labor Standards Act, the Arlington Shoe Manufacturing Co. of Methuen was fined $4,000 in federal court.

John Karelitz, corporation executive, said full back pay due to 60 of his 180 employes would be given immediately. The firm was accused of paying lass than 25c an hour and falsifying payroll records.

The Ladies' Rights

DETROIT, June 3 (FP) — What may be called employer recognition of woman's right to powder her nose is found in a new contract signed with the United Automobile Workers, CIO, by the Detroit Lubricator Co.

The clause permits women workers to leave three minutes before closing time. Another section of the contract provides that union members who serve in the next war will be entitled to their jobs and cumulative seniority upon return.

Cannery Contract Lifts Wages $500,000

SEATTLE, Wash., June 3.—Pay increases totaling more than $500,000 were won by 7,000 CIO cannery workers through an industry-wide agreement signed between Local 7, United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers and employers in the canned salmon industry.

The wage increases average 15% above the 1938 scale.

Reached after months of heated negotiations, the new agreement provides for a closed shop with the CIO cannery union and also recognizes the Maritime Federation of the Pacific in a clause stating that no member of the cannery union shall be required to go through picket lines established by the Federation.

WON ELECTION

Local 7 first won bargaining rights in the Alaska canned salmon industry by carrying a hard fought Labor Board election in May 1938, in which an AFL union competed. Union officials say that this year the AFL group, having largely disintegrated, were no threat to the CIO union.

The cannery contract, keystone of all agreements in the canned salmon industry, provides for shop committees on the job and stipulates that UCAPAWA members working during the 1939 season shall be classed as employes until February 1940, although the salmon season closes months earlier.

Local Signs 1,781 Pacts In 5 Months

New York, June 3. — Contracts with 164 wholesale and warehouse firms covering 1,781 union members have been signed by Local 65, United Wholesale & Warehouse Employes, since the beginning of the year, it was reported at a general membership meeting here this week.

The Local's organizational department stated that it had set as its goal the unionization of 2,000 new members by the end of the fiscal year. Organization is proceeding in a number of large wholesale and warehouse firms.

Negotiations for contracts are in progress with the Glemby Co., largest distributor of hair goods and accessories in the country; National Shoe Co., and May Knitting Co. About 1,500 workers are employes in these big wholesale and warehouse establishments.

Marine Union Appeals to US Against Firm

New York, June 3. — Claiming that the civil rights of union members on strike against the tankers of the Standard Oil Company are being violated in Port Arthur, Texas, the National Maritime Union has asked Attorney-General Murphy to step into the situation and remove the police force from the control of the company.

In a letter to Murphy, Joseph Curran, NMU president, said that "since the tanker strike is coastwide, we feel that the abolition of civil liberties, even though temporary, in any port where the strike is in effect comes well within the purview of your newly-created Civil Rights Division."

Mooney In Washington June 6

Washington, June 3. — Tom Mooney, labor's most famous prisoner, will speak in Washington, Tuesday, June 6, it was announced here today by the Washington Tom Mooney Committee.

The Mooney meeting is sponsored by a list of prominent labor, Congressional, religious and other leaders, including John Brophy, CIO director, Msgr. John A. Ryan, Sen. Sheridan Downey of California, and Sen. Murray of Montana.

Sen. Murray will introduce Mooney, who will speak on "Labor and Civil Rights."

Oil Union Strikes Gulf Co.

Toledo, June 3.—Ready to "stay out on strike for a year, if necessary," members of Local 346, Oil Workers Intl. Union, threw a 24-hour picket line around the Gulf Refining Co. plant until the company agrees to a signed contract with the union.

Clyde Shamblen, union president, said the local had been negotiating for two years and had been able to win only a "bulletin board statement" of policy from the management. More than 90 per cent of the employes at the Toledo refinery are members of the CIO union.

PICKET SUES

Shortly after the strike was called, company officials called in union representatives for negotiations, but no announcement was made concerning progress reached in the discussions.

Meanwhile, Charles Petrit, picket captain at the struck plant, has filed a $30,000 damage suit against the company and its local superintendent. Petrit was hit by a car driven by Dennis E. Hart, the company executive, and claims he was struck "maliciously, wantonly and willfully."

Maritime Union Signs Three Tanker Lines

NEW YORK, June 3. — Strengthening its position in the tanker field, the National Maritime Union signed new contracts last week with the Gulf Refining and Pennsylvania Shipping companies. The union also announced that it is expected to sign soon with the Kellogg Steamship company.

All three agreements are similar, providing for improvement over last year's contracts. They include wage increases, an additional holiday; three more days severance pay and improvement in the general working rules.

OTHERS EXPECTED SOON

Conferences have been scheduled with the Pan American and National Bulk Carriers, the union stated, and contracts are expected to be signed with these firms shortly. Amsco Navigation, B & L Shipping, and Commercial Molasses, have also signified their willingness to sign the agreement concluded by the other companies.

Meanwhile the NMU continues to clamp down tightly on the tankers of four companies against whom a strike was declared on April 17. A conference with Socony officials, one of the struck companies, yielded no results.

The Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation recently levied fines totaling $67,000 against the four companies, the largest chunk of which was against Standard Oil.

Chattanooga News Strike Ends, Guild Wins

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., June 3.—(FP)—Striking members of the American Newspaper Guild won a quick victory here when the Chattanooga News signed a contract and reinstated two discharged employes. The walkout called May 23, ended four days later.

The one-year agreement covers Guild members only, but guarantees against economy firings or pay cuts in the white collar departments of the newspaper, which has been in financial difficulties.

Bus Anderson, copy boy who was fired when he refused to sign a loyalty petition circulated by a management stooge, is one of the men reinstated. The other is George Londa of the editorial staff, who was discharged while he was serving on a grievance committee to protest Anderson's dismissal.

AFL UNIONS HELPED

The strike provided an unusual demonstration of assistance from other newspaper unions. When Managing Editor, Harry P. Clark wrote a story saying that the printers had had to fight their way through Guild picket lines, linotype operators refused to set the copy. Clark had to revise his story.

T. R. Cuthbert, secretary of the Tennessee State Federation of Labor and a member of the AFL Intl. Typographical Union, refused to cross the picket line with the forms of The Labor World, which he edits and which is printed at the News plant. The issue was run off at an Atlanta shop.

War Insurance In New Pacts

New York, June 3 — Protection for American Newspaper Guild members who may be called upon for war service is being written into new union contracts.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer agreement contains a clause on the subject, one has been agreed to in the New York Journal-American pact, and the Guild is seeking their inclusion in contracts with the Cleveland News and the New York Mirror.

The Journal-American clause reads:

"In the event of war involving the U. S. A., the publisher agrees that all employes who leave their posts to serve in the armed forces of the United States or their adjuncts shall be granted the same posts immediately upon their return, with severance pay rating and other rights under the contract unimpaired."

It also provides that in case of death in the armed service, severance pay under the Guild agreement shall be made.

Avert Strike

Stockton, Calif., June 3 (FP)—The Stockton Independent signed a union shop agreement with the American Newspaper Guild, averting by less than an hour a strike called because of the publisher's delay in coming to a settlement.

Hearst Withdraws Offer To Settle Chicago Strike

Hearst once had a man called Joe Connolly

He'd say "Yes" and mean "No."
He'd say "Stop" and mean "Go."
"Holy Joe" was a perfect anomaly.

Chicago, June 3.—Hopes for a quick settlement of the six-month strike on Hearst's Chicago papers were dashed today following withdrawal by the management of every "offer" which it had tentatively advanced at earlier conferences with American Newspaper Guild negotiators.

Local Guild leaders expressed little surprise at the sudden termination of the meetings with the union and charged that the Hearst "peace" tactics were aimed at disrupting the strike and broadcasting the impression that the strike was about over. The meeting had been arranged by Joseph Connolly, Hearst general manager.

It was believed that the curiously erratic activities of the management negotiators was due in large degree to internal conflicts in the Hearst executive force, with each man seeking to get out from under any decisions that may be unpopular with the new boss of Hearst enterprises, John S. Brookes.

Meanwhile, Guild units on Hearst papers in Detroit, Boston, New York and Albany are fighting "economies" which they charge are being attempted in an effort to help bolster the Chicago managements anti-Guild fight.

Note the machine gun in the foreground; Kentucky national guardsmen are helping a handful of Harlan County operators fight the United Mine Workers' demand for a union shop contract.

Ten Senators Pledge Support To Casey Bill

WASHINGTON, June 3—Support of leading New Deal senators for the Casey-Murray bill was announced today by Sen. James E. Murray of Montana, co-sponsor of the measure aimed at providing at least three million WPA jobs during the next fiscal year.

CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League have already endorsed the bill, which was introduced in the House by Rep. Joseph E. Casey of Massachusetts.

In addition, the Workers Alliance of America, organization of the unemployed, announced that its forthcoming "National Right-To-Work Congress" will undertake to launch a movement for economic recovery with emphasis on support of the Casey-Murray Bill.

HETZEL STATEMENT

Full support for the Casey bill was reiterated in a statement to the House Appropriations subcommittee on WPA by Ralph Hetzel, CIO unemployment director.
1939 fiscal year."

Hetzel sharply criticized the refusal of the House sub-committee to grant hearings to other than government agency spokesmen, pointing out that "there is no issue before Congress which so vitally affects the welfare of our citizens and upon which Congress ought carefully to seek the opinions of the great organizations representing the people."

Citing the need for passage of the bill, he noted that "there is increasing evidence, especially from state officials and mayors and very recently from the American Assn. of Social Workers that the capacity of local governments for providing assistance, even at the brutally low levels heretofore provided, has decreased."

NAMES BACKERS

Sen. Murray listed the names of Senators Schwellenbach, Pepper, Downey, Guffey, Mead, Lunden, Wagner, LaFollette and Ellender as among those who have assured him of support for S. 2507.

A new depression faces the country unless the principles of the $2,250,000,000 work relief bill are incorporated into the law, Sen. Murray warned.

MURRAY STATEMENT

"This is a bill which would establish the WPA on the sound basis which its friends and the

Transit Union Cracks Down On Sabotage

New York, June 3—Reports by a special union trial committee on the cases of 28 members of the Transport Workers Union who are accused of plotting acts of sabotage which interrupted service on IRT subway and elevated lines last February, were in the hands of the international's executive board for action today.

Ten of the men have been suspended by the company, and expulsion by the union, which has a closed shop contract, would mean loss of jobs for the others.

NAME RINGLEADER

The trial committee charged Thomas Stack with being the "ringleader of a vicious disruptive clique which planned and directed acts of sabotage calculated to create chaos in the industry and discredit and destroy the collective bargaining organization of transit workers . . .

"The affidavits show that Stack and his clique gathered these men at meetings held under the auspices of a 'Social Justice Club' and cajoled them into violent acts in defiance of a court decree and the contract between the union and the IRT."

100,000 Anthracite Miners Win Pact, Get Union Shop

NEW YORK, June 3.—The United Mine Workers today had rolled up its second union shop victory in a month, as union negotiators and representatives of anthracite mine owners employing more than 100,000 reached agreement on terms of a new two-year contract.

Coming on the heels of the agreements covering half a million miners in the nation's bituminous fields, the anthracite contract makes complete the biggest union victory of the year, and puts the UMW in an impregnable position throughout every important coal producing area.

TWO CLAUSES

Like the bituminous contract, the anthracite agreement contains these two clauses:

"It is agreed that the United Mine Workers of America is recognized as the exclusive bargaining agency. . . .

"It is agreed that as a condition of employment, all employes shall be members of the United Mine Workers except those in classifications recognized in the industry as exempt from such membership during the terms of the agreement of May 7, 1936."

The exempted groups compose office, technical and managerial staffs of the mine companies.

35-HOUR WEEK

Continuation of the 35-hour week and the old minimum daily wage rate is also provided. The contracting system, which has been sharply criticized by the miners, was abolished.

Anthracite negotiations were in progress for more than a month. The old contract, which expired at midnight April 30, was temporarily renewed several times during the conferences as the union and employers struggled over terms. Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy headed the UMW Anthracite delegation, while Maj. W. W. Inglis, president of the Glen Alden Coal Co., was chief of the operators' negotiators.

LEWIS STATEMENT

"We believe that the operators, the workers and the population of the anthracite region will commend this agreement," declared Pres. John L. Lewis of the UMW. "It is constructive. It contributes to the industrial and social life of the Atlantic seaboard, and I predict overwhelming confirmation of the document by the miners when they vote soon."

Both sides approached the problem "with due regard for economic conditions of the industry

CIO Executive Board To Meet June 13

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The regular semi-annual meeting of the CIO Executive Board will be held here beginning Tuesday, June 13, it was announced today by President John L. Lewis.

The meeting, Pres. Lewis said, will take up administrative matters, reports of special committees, legislative program and plans for the expansion of CIO organizing efforts. It will be held in the United Mine Workers building in this city.

BOARD'S SECOND MEETING

The meeting will be the second held by the Executive Board. The first, convened immediately after the CIO convention of last November, was held in Pittsburgh after the Board's election.

The Board was elected in compliance with the CIO constitution adopted at the convention, which provided that it consist of one representative from each affiliated national and international union and organizing committee.

The duties of the Board were defined to include enforcement of the constitution and carrying out of instructions of the convention, and directing the affairs of the CIO between conventions.

Each Board member has as many votes in Board meetings as there are members of his national or international union or committee, as provided for conventions of the whole CIO.

Canadian Miners Join CIO, Topple Old Stooge Union

TRAIL, British Columbia, June 3. — A one-time company union stronghold toppled recently when nearly 2,000 employes of the Canadian Pacific Railway-controlled Consolidated Mining and Smeltering Co. braved a blazing sun to attend a union open-air meeting for the first time in 20 years.

Trail miners and their wives crowded Butler park while hundreds more, seated in the 240-odd automobiles parked around the meeting place, and on verandas of nearby homes, to hear the message of industrial unionism from speakers of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' Union which is conducting an organizing drive in this company-dominated town.

Not since 1918, when Ginger Goodwin and Rome Albo, organizers of the union, led the strike of the smelter company's mechanics and chain gang men for the eight-hour day, have the employes been able to meet under auspices of a legitimate union.

CIO DRIVE

It was only a few months ago that the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' Union began its unionizing drive in Trail. It now counts 1,000 of the company's employes as members. The drive is under direction of Arthur H. Evans, well-known west coast labor leader.

Evans told the meeting how the company had rejected the union's offer for negotiations to reach amicable relations between the union and the smelting plant. No reply, he also said, had been received to the union's request that a secret ballot vote be held among the firm's employes to determine what union they desire.

SECRET BALLOT

The union can request the secret ballot under British Columbia law which provides for such elections. Hon. G. S. Pearson, Provincial Minister of Labor, has already promised to appoint a government representative to supervise the poll. The next move, Evans declared, is up to the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company.

The Consolidated is one of the biggest metallurgical enterprises in Canada. Its net earnings for 1937 were listed as $22,004,512. It owns considerable property and holdings in this area and in other parts of the province.

ORGANIZE PLANT

Oakland, Calif. — The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers has completed a successful organizing campaign at the El Cerrito plant of the Technical Porcelain & Chinaware Co. and is asking for Natl. Labor Relations Board certification.

See Briggs Strike End Nearing

Detroit, June 3.—Settlement of the week-old strike at the Briggs Manufacturing Company, which completely shut the big automobile body plant, loomed today as federal negotiators, union leaders and company executives appeared to have reached an understanding on 28 grievances.

Once these sources of friction are removed, it is expected the negotiators can soon reach an understanding on the new contract.

ARBITRARY FIRINGS

The strike was a protest against arbitrary firings of active unionists on trumped-up charges while discussions on the new contract were under way. Though close to 70,000 workers are idle in the strike, there is nothing but sympathy for the Briggs employes, who have been heartlessly discriminated against and vicitimized by the Briggs management.

UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas appealed to local law enforcement officials to help preserve the civil rights of the strikers. Gangsters associated with the Homer Martin rump outfit have been responsible for violations of the peace, he charged.

PICKET TIGERS PARK

Novel picketing was in order during the strike. Strikers paraded around the Detroit American League Ball Park, owned by Briggs, and told the public that "the Tigers chief was unfair to the UAW."

Set Hearings For Hosiery, Textile Wages

Washington, June 5.—Hearings on proposed minimum wage rates for the hosiery and textile industries have been scheduled by Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews.

Hearing on the rate recommended by the hosiery industry committee—40c an hour for the full fashioned workers and 32½c for employes of seamless hosiery manfacturers—will be held at the Dept. of Commerce Building in Washington June 12.

Textile industry hearings are scheduled for June 19 at the Hotel Raleigh here and for June 26 at the Hotel Ansley in Atlanta, Georgia. The textile industry committee proposal called for 32½c an hour, though labor representatives had asked for 40c, the highest possible under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Lewis Urges Cuba Accept Refugees

Washington, June 3.—Appealing for the German refugees from Nazi terror now awaiting permission to land at Havana, Cuba, Pres. John L. Lewis of the CIO today sent the following appeal to Col. Fulgencio Batista:

"I beg to take the liberty of making a personal appeal to you in the name of humanity to allow the landing in your country of the desperately unhappy refugees now on the steamers St. Louis and Flandres.

"These refugees if returned to Germany will undoubtedly be sent to Nazi concentration camps. I take this liberty of appealing to you because of your well-known feeling for the victims of Nazism. I do hope that some aid can be given to these victims."

Vol. II JUNE 5, 1939 No. 23

Don't Listen to Casper!

There are too many Casper Milquetoasts who seek to inject into labor their own timidity.

Every time anything goes wrong, or some tories get tough, they say to labor: "Oh dear, oh dear, why did you try to do anything? Why don't you run?"

The coal miners did not choose to run. The open-shoppers frowned and bullied all they could. Casper and his friends said reaction was in the saddle and that labor had better run along like a good little dogie. But the miners preferred to stand up for their rights like men.

Under the fighting leadership of John L. Lewis, who has dedicated himself to the abolition of labor's inferiority complex, the United Mine Workers of America as a result has won such a victory as may change the whole course of the labor movement.

The union shop agreement won in the anthracite as well as the bituminous fields spells defeat for the whole open shop drive against labor. The UMWA has risen to its greatest strength in the face of attack, attempted disruption and the general offensive of reaction.

In so doing, it lends new courage and inspiration to every union. It demonstrates the basic strength and stability of the CIO. And it points the way to all of labor to advance and not retreat when challenged by its foes.

Let the Casper Milquetoasts of liberal politics also take note. Progressive labor, as represented by the CIO, is solidly organized and militantly led. It believes that the workers have barely begun to get the consideration to which they are entitled and which they have the power to win.

Those who fight boldly and bravely for liberal measures and democratic progress will find they have the loyal support of an advancing and determined army of labor. But the politicians who shrink and pussyfoot when reaction says "Boo!" will fall by the wayside.

Health and Safety

Millions now living will die years before they should, unless proper action is taken to care for the nation's health.

A fairer distribution of health is as important as a fairer distribution of wealth.

In fact, the two are inseparably connected under present circumstances.

The report of the recent National Health Conference showed that sickness and death increase as income goes down; that industrial workers die eight years younger than others; and that fifty million Americans in families with less than $1,000 income a year have little, if any, medical care.

The accident rate is also highest among those who do the country's hard work.

Two bills at present before Congress are designed to make life healthier and safer for those who need it most.

The Wagner Health Bill makes a beginning to establish national responsibility for the health of the nation. It is designed to make proper medical care available for millions who cannot afford it at the present time.

Mining is one of the country's most dangerous occupations. The accident rate is nearly five times higher in mining than in other industries, and the number of fatalities reaches staggering totals.

The Neely-Keller Bill is sponsored by the United Mine Workers to protect the lives and limbs of the miners by providing for federal inspection of mines.

Both of these bills are under committee consideration at the present time. Let your Senators and Congressmen know that every consideration of humanity and the country's welfare demands the speedy passage of these measures to protect the health and safety of its citizens.

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Wanted, More Paul Reveres!

If King George VI has a sense of humor, he may be amused to observe on his visit to the United States that home-grown American tories are now trying to do to their country what King George III and all his British tories failed to do.

The general idea of the American tories seems to be that democracy and freedom are the bunk; and that the lower classes should be kept down by a judicious mixture of starvation and class legislation.

The plot to starve the American people into submission is at present being hatched behind the closed doors of the House appropriations committee.

The campaign to enslave American workers as a subject class, bound by legislative chains to the chariots of their corporation masters, is already in the open. It has won preliminary skirmishes in Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Minnesota and other states, and the tory army is now moving in on the nation's capitol.

Hidden Warnings

Paul Revere might have done his job more quickly and effectively with a nationwide radio hookup, or if the wire services had released his warning for the first editions of all morning newspapers.

But despite the lack of modern methods of communication, he did a pretty good job with the aid of his horse and his own lungpower.

The Paul Reveres of today do not receive the same undivided attention as did their predecessor. If the voice of warning that American liberties are in danger is heard over the air, it is soon drowned out by the din of jazz orchestras and offset by the speeches of dozens of tories who proclaim that they mean no harm.

As to the daily press, the alert American may read on some inside page a few lines about a House committee considering WPA appropriations, or about efforts to amend the Wagner act; and he may possibly locate near the classified ads some reference to various state laws curbing unions.

But more than likely, the front page headlines about crime, sex, sports and sudden death will engage his attention, after he has separated the paper from the milk bottles. And instead of reaching for his trusty musket to resist the advancing tories, he will yawn and go back to bed convinced that all is well and that the enemy is far from his door.

Have You Heard?

The liberties and the very livelihood of millions of Americans are in serious danger today. Yet, despite all the modern methods of communication, only the labor press conveys any real call of warning to patriotic Americans.

How many readers of this column, for instance, have learnt from the radio or the daily press that hundreds of thousands of unemployed will be cut off the WPA rolls, under even the billion and a half appropriation proposed by the administration; and that the tories are plotting to cut off hundreds of thousands more?

Or again, how many Americans realize that the democratic rights which labor has fought for generations to win, have already been stolen away by the tories in a number of states; and that the drive in Congress to amend the Wagner act aims to do the same for all the country's workers?

State Anti-Labor Laws

The Pennsylvania legislature has just adjourned after voting the courts more power to issue anti-labor injunctions; crippling the workmen's compensation law; calling for forced labor for the unemployed; and amending the state labor relations act into an instrument for the oppression, instead of the emancipation, of labor.

The new state law restricts the right to strike; seeks to prohibit the checkoff of union dues; establishes "unfair labor practices on the part of unions to cripple their activities; makes craft division practically compulsory; and curtails the labor board's power to invalidate phoney contracts imposed on the workers.

In Wisconsin and Minnesota, tory administrations have also put through revisions of state labor laws, to curtail the right to strike and picket, and to deprive unions of most of the rights they have won through generations of effort and struggle.

In half a dozen other states, similar attempts have been made, with more or less success, to shackle the workers with anti-labor laws.

The Rattle of Chains

Fortunately the scope of these state slave laws is limited, since the federal Wagner act still protects a large proportion of the workers. And even the most tory administrations may hesitate to enforce such vicious laws to the limit, if they hope for re-election.

These state anti-labor laws may even serve a good purpose if they can be used to arouse the country to the dangers in store for all, if the Wagner act is amended; and if they convince the workers who suffer from them that every vote for a tory is a link in a chain of slavery for themselves.

Win Rights

Pittsfield, Mass., June 3—Sole bargaining rights have been granted to Local 301, Textile Workers Union, by the Berkshire Woolen Co. here, which employs 630 workers.

The CIO union also announced that it is conducting a successful organizing drive among the workers of the Wyandotte Worsted and Elmvale Worsted mills.

CIO Backs National Health Bill

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Seventy million sick people in the U. S. lose more than one billion work days annually. Industrial workers die at least eight years younger than non-industrial workers. Over 1,000,000 workers are exposed to silicosis. Thirty-five per cent of workers on relief have no medical care whatever. Sixty-two per cent of American workers are without proper health care on the job; two-thirds of our rural areas have no child health centers or clinics.

These figures, taken from the report of the National Health Conference held last year, are only a partial record of the staggering health needs of the nation, expressed in the baldest terms.

RATIO TO POVERTY

They help to show, in statistical terms, the great need for a national health program, whose outlines were presented in the Wagner Health Bill (S 1620) recently brought before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor by its author, Sen. Robert F. Wagner of New York.

The Wagner bill, admittedly only a beginning in tackling this vast national problem, would make Federal grants to states available for five basic purposes:

1. Child and maternal health. (70,000 mothers and infants died last year from lack of maternity care).

2. General public health services and investigations.

3. Construction of hospitals. (There's a shortage of 360,000 beds today).

4. General programs of medical care.

5. Insurance against loss of wages in sickness. (American workers lose more than two billions in wages annually through sickness.)

Both CIO and AFL are in support of the Wagner Bill. Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, pointed out in his testimony before the Senate Committee that the bill was a beginning on the lines approved by the CIO convention at Pittsburgh last November.

59 Lives Lost In W. Virginia Mines In 90 Days

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., June 3.—During the first three months of 1939 59 miners lost their lives in West Virginia mines, according to a report just made public by the State Department of Mines.

The report disclosed that the chief causes of accidents were: Failure to timber working faces properly; lack of safety posts; overhanging brows not taken down; improperly functioning machinery; unguarded wires, and clearance not maintained.

Accident Rate Highest In Mines, Union Says; Asks Passage of Law

WASHINGTON, June 3—Figures showing that coal mining has the highest accident rate of all industry, amounting in bituminous coal to 2.7 times and in anthracite to 6.7 times the rate in manufacturing, were cited by A. D. Lewis, United Mine Workers official, in support of the Neely-Keller bill now before Congress.

The bill, which would provide a Federal system of mine inspection, is aimed at curbing this excessively high fatality and injury rate, Lewis explained, and would be an invaluable check on a state mine inspection systems and safety laws, which at present are inadequately enforced.

COST TO MINERS

In addition to the higher accident rate suffered by miners, Lewis pointed out that the cost is much greater to the miners than it is to the operators. According to Coal Commission figures, miners lost $518,000,000 in wages in the last decade, of which only 22 per cent was covered by workmen's compensation.

"These conditions in the coal mining industry," Lewis said, "are appalling from the standpoint of the mine worker, the operator, and the investor in coal properties. From the viewpoint of the public interest they are unpardonable and should not longer be condoned."

Sam Caddy, president of UMWA, District 30, testified that his state (Kentucky) has the highest accident rate of all and the highest insurance rates. In spite of this, he said, less than one-half mill per ton of coal mined is paid by the state for inspection. In one Kentucky mine, he declared, there were over 600 accidents in one year for 600 men employed—more than one per man-year.

BASIC CAUSES

The proposed bill, Lewis pointed out, would in no way interfere with any existing state agencies, but would rather supplement their work in preventing accidents.

"Its purpose is to be cooperative, supplementary and coordinative," he said. "Through it we wish to mobilize scientific resources of the Federal Government against this appalling mortality, human suffering and financial loss in the coal mining industry.

WILL HELP PREVENTION

"We believe that with Federal investigation of accidents basic causes will be revealed and preventive measures developed. Also when accidents occur, human suffering will be alleviated. Rescue measures will also be greatly accelerated.

"The enactment of the pending bill is entirely appropriate and will serve to coordinate and render more effective the regulation and supervision of the coal mining industry by the Secretary of the Interior."

Admit Child Refugees, Brophy Asks

Washington, June 3.—The CIO is wholeheartedly supporting the Wagner Bill to admit 20,000 German refugee children into this country, John Brophy, CIO director, told the Congressional committee holding hearings on the bill here.

"There is something particularly revolting about cruelty when it is practiced on little children, as it is practiced by the cowardly thugs who are in power in Germany today," Brophy said.

"To my mind it is incomprehensible that decent human beings in America should oppose this bill, which offers an American refuge to a small number of those defenseless ones who are subjected to the brutalities of Hitler's official sadists."

Labor, Progressives Hail Anti-Fink Law

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, June 3.—CIO President John L. Lewis will appear before the Senate Education and Labor sub-committee to express labor's demand for passage of the LaFollette-Thomas bill, outlawing labor spies, industrial munitions and strike-breakers.

Lewis will be preceded on the stand by President Green of the American Federation of Labor, Beryl Whitney of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and J. G. Luhrsen of the Railway Labor Executives Assn.—all of them agreed that the bill should speedily be passed.

Other witnesses who have appeared to support the bill include Sen. LaFollette, Merle Vincent of the U. S. Wage-Hour Division, Gerald Reilly, U. S. Labor Department solicitor, Chairman Madden of the National Labor Relations Board and Atty.-General Frank Murphy.

AIMED AT FINKS

Backed by this array of labor and liberal leaders, the bill is expected to get quick attention in Congress. Based on three years' investigation by the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, it draws a tight net around the fink industry, and would bar goods manufactured under oppressive labor conditions from interstate commerce.

"The bill," Reilly told the committee, "fits into the scheme of existing federal legislation and compliments present statutes . . . Collective bargaining has been encouraged by the Congress because, among other reasons, the process of collective bargaining leads to the peaceful settlement and adjustment of labor disputes."

Sen. LaFollette asserted that the bill is aimed at a powerful minority of employers who "may condemn their oppressive labor practices before Congressional committees in Washington, but their conduct in communities where they have plants is very different.

"There they brook neither interference nor criticism. A highly respected minister in Youngstown, Ohio, ventured to condemn the labor espionage carried on by a great steel company in his town. He had officials of the company in his congregation, who undertook a campaign of active opposition to him, and he shortly found that he had lost his post.

The Senator charged that "dishonesty is the labor espionage trade," adding that so long as management resorts to such practices, no system of industrial relations based on responsibility, mutual trust and observance of the law can be expected."

Madden Raps Act Violators

WASHINGTON, June 3.—If anything is needed in the Wagner Act, it is a system of penalties for consistent violators, J. Warren Madden, Labor Board chairman, told the House Labor Committee in continued testimony on proposed amendments here this week.

Citing a bulletin issued by the Illinois state Manufacturers' Assn., he declared that the attitude of some employers who persistently broke the law even after their violations were pointed out led him to believe that the law would require teeth in the form of fines or other punishments.

ADVISED STALLING

The Illinois NAM branch, Madden said, issued a bulletin whose general tone was: "When in doubt, don't hesitate to violate the law, because in general it doesn't cost you anything. The Board may make its order against you, but it can't do anything about it."

This kind of advice, directly encouraging anti-union employers to break the Federal law, might persuade the Government, "in order to maintain its dignity," to put penalties in the Wagner Act, Madden said.

"We thought we saw indications that employers by and large were finding that the way they could best get on with their employes was to live on the safe side of the law, and not be all the time trying to see whether, 'can I go this far if I do not go just a little bit farther,'" he said.

"But if the thing does take that turn I do not see what you can do except put some real teeth in the law."

EMPLOYER PETITION

While the Board was willing to consider the right of employers to petition for elections, great care must be taken to see that this was not used against unions, Madden explained.

Busy

A busy man is Sen. Robert Wagner of New York. Right now, hearings are in session to discuss amendments to his Labor Relations Act, and to examine his child refugee and national health bills.

15,000 Chicago Workers Pay Tribute to Victims Of 1937 Massacre

CHICAGO, June 3. — Fifteen thousand Chicago workers gathered in front of the Republic Steel plant here to honor the memory of 10 SWOC members murdered in the Memorial Day Massacre of 1937.

They heard Van A. Bittner, SWOC director and chairman of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, pledge new effort in organizing as the most fitting memorial to the 10 who died for labor freedom.

Bittner told the crowd that the 627,000 members of the United Mine Workers, now that their union shop contracts have been won in anthracite and bituminous, wanted above everything else to help in organizing the unorganized.

READY TO FIGHT

"They told me to tell you that now they have won their fight, they will devote their time, their energy and their money to organize every unorganized worker," he said.

The next great step in Chicago, he said, was a national contract with the packing employers. "If the packers won't recognize collective bargaining without a fight, we will make them recognize it with a fight," he declared.

Appearance of Alderman W. A. Rowan at the memorial meeting was hailed by Nicholas Fontecchio, meeting chairman, as a sign that times have changed in the city.

"I have found in my relations with the SWOC that it is an organization with the highest motives and ideals," Rowan said.

Bittner praised Pres. Roosevelt as a breaker of precedents, citing the Wagner Act as an outstanding example. "I don't know if he will run again," he said, "but if he does, the workers will support him. All we ask is a chance to give him a third term."

Members Quit Dual Union, Join CIO

Wilkes-Barre, June 3. — Former members of Local 846, UMWA, meeting in Alden last night, unanimously discarded their membership in the Progressive Miners Union, an ineffectual dual movement, and decided to come back as a body into the UMWA.

Having realized the futility of the Progressive Miners Union, and being told by mine operators that one union is a pre-requisite of renewed operations of the Alden Coal Company, for whom the men work, the membership last night decided that the UMWA was their real choice.

Anthracite Miners Get Contract

"It is commendable that the agreement was negotiated without loss of work by the miners. It is notable that for 14 years there has been no stoppage of work during progress of negotiations."

The contracting evil eliminated by the 1939 agreement operated so that mine owners could "let out" sections of their mine properties to sub-contractors, who frequently hired labor at wages below the union scale and otherwise evaded provisions of the UMW agreement.

With both bituminous and anthracite contracts tucked away—and with only employers of 10,000 Harlan County, Kentucky, miners still resisting the UMW—the nation's largest union is in the strongest position of its history.

The union shop provision has barred the door to AFL attempts to chisel their way into the coal fields and attempt to weaken the CIO and its most powerful affiliate. The AFL several months ago chartered a small dual outfit and with a burst of publicity in the tory press, announced plans for splitting the UMW.

AFL LEADERS SORE

Signing of the agreements put the kibosh on their plans, much to the dismay of AFL executive council members, who met in a grumbling session at Washington two weeks ago.

In winning its nationwide contracts, the mine union and its leaders also ended a big-business attempt to crack the CIO. Outside interference from Wall Street and other powerful reactionary sources was blamed by Pres. Lewis for the long lockout of the bituminous miners.

Pres. Lewis and other officials of the UMW have been spending most of their time in New York City since the middle of March, when the bituminous negotiatons got under way.

Support Grows For Casey Bill friends of American unemployed would like to see.

"Its enemies—and therefore, the enemies of our unfortunate citizens who cannot find jobs in private industry—have too long been seeking to cripple and hamper the WPA. We are trying to implement it so that it can do its job most effectively.

UP TO CONGRESS

"If Congress writes the provisions and safeguards contained in this bill into the law of our land, we will soon see a time when that number of jobs will no longer be necessary. If Congress disregards them and harkens to those who urge a selfish and short-sighted 'economy,' we will condemn our unemployed citizens to a hopeless future and a slow starvation and will threaten our entire nation with a new and more disastrous depression."

In addition to providing for a minimum of 3,000,000 jobs until employment increases substantially, the bill would eliminate the need for workers to pauperize themselves before being eligible for WPA work. Prevailing hourly wage rates—with a minimum of 30 cents—would be paid on WPA jobs is the bill is enacted.

FAECT Sponsors Exhibit At World's Fair

By Lucien Zacharoff
LEAGUE OF AMERICAN WRITERS

No startling secret was given away when President Whalen of the New York World's Fair, Mayor LaGuardia and other dignitaries at the dedication ceremonies named organized workers in scores of trades, crafts and professions as "the men who made possible" that greatest show on earth.

It may surprise most fair officials, and even labor, however, to learn that the latter is represented among the exhibits. The distinction of being the only exhibiting union—in the New York City Building—goes to the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, FAECT-CIO to you.

The youthful FAECT itself, though proud beyond words at the distinction, is no amateur at being distinctive. "First" or "only" is a commonplace designation for it, if we take the word of its educational director, Joseph S. Jacoby.

F. D. R.'S A MEMBER

Jacoby will concede that other unions are also accomplishing things, but let any unionist bragging about his outfit in his presence beware. No sooner did I begin to boast about the greatness of my own union, the American Newspaper Guild, pointing out that Mrs. F. D. R. herself was our member, than he squelched me by retorting:

"President Roosevelt holds an FAECT card by virtue of being an amateur architect."

As a working newspaperman I observed the FAECT birth pangs in August, 1933, and have followed at close range many subsequent events of its young and very vigorous life. With all due allowance for a founding father's pride, the FAECT is a bouncing baby, indeed. Both the baby and all the founding fathers are doing well, thank you, as this story will show.

TYPICAL MEMBER

In tracing this story for the benefit of THE CIO NEWS readers, I asked many officers and rank-and-file members of the Federation whom they considered a fellow-member whose personal experience was typical and representative of the average in the union, paralleling its own progress and development. Almost invariably the accusing finger was pointed at the young and dynamic educational director. And so, willy-nilly, Jacoby will please step up to the operating table and be dissected in the interests of science.

Joe was born in Boston in 1908—which makes him a few years younger than the average age in the FAECT; otherwise . . . but let's go on. A week after high school graduation he was working as a draughtsman in a structural engineer's office, and spending his evenings preparing for entrance examinations for Cooper Union Night School of Science. He passed the exams with flying colors. Working his way, he was earning enough after two years to enter the Brooklyn Polytechnic, majoring in civil engineering.

LOTS OF JOBS

In his "spare" time, he took courses in psychology, economics and sociology at City College. He worked successively as a surveyor, estimator, inspector of erection of steel structures, then back to the board, first as draughtsman, then as designer of steel, timber and concrete structures.

In 1930, the depression hurricane struck the engineering and related fields with particularly catastrophic results.

COMPLETELY DAZED

"Most of us were completely dazed and confused," relates Joe. "Here we were, trained and experienced technicians, in the richest country in the world, with thousands upon thousands of unpaved and unlighted streets and roads, hundreds of cities and towns lacking adequate housing and sanitation—yet we were idle!"

At the onset of the crisis Joe married and acquired a modest home of his own. He owned a car. By 1932 the sheriff had taken away the home; the car was gone too. Many of Joe's friends among technical workers—professionals and subprofessionals—were in a similar plight.

Things were at their lowest ebb in the Spring, 1933, when in the normally very active New York area, for example, virtually all architectural draughtsmen, 98 per cent, were totally unemployed; ditto 85 per cent of engineers and 65 per cent of chemists.

The NRA was getting under way. Heads of the construction industry proposed a wage minimum of 50 cents an hour for technical employes. That started the fireworks for Joe and his friends, who for some time had been wondering whether unionism might not be the most fruitful form of professionalism. Determined to fight that miserly pay they called a mass meeting on August 18, 1933.

1,000 AT MEETING

Almost 1,000 technical men and women packed the hall in spite of meager publicity for the event. A delegation was elected and sent (in a borrowed car) to Washington to object to the employers' code.

NRA Administrator Johnson was duly impressed with the fact that the delegation represented the sentiments of technical people. The wage provision of the code was defeated. Two of the delegates were invited to join a committee for drafting the code for the chemical industries. Technical professionals were later consulted on other codes.

Chapters of the FAECT opened in New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Chicago. Committees worked feverishly on the codes, on securing jobs for the unemployed technicians, etc. Let Joe resume his account, which I cannot call personal because it is so intimately intertwined with that of the Federation:

"It is difficult to convey an idea of the effect this entire movement had on my morale. At last we were doing something to help ourselves. I dropped every other interest I had, including the many worries that plagued me, and devoted myself completely to the task of helping to build the new organization."

HUNDREDS ACTIVE

Hundreds upon hundreds of Joe's colleagues, seemingly unaware that as professionals they were supposed to uphold the myth of rugged individualism, plunged into the same activities. After a few months of intensive work, mass meetings, delegations to local, state and federal authorities, projects to employ technicians began to emerge.

Very slowly private employment opportunities began to improve, with the FAECT keeping a sharp lookout for openings, for some men their first job in three years.

Among many improvements in public welfare, which incidentally provided numerous jobs for technical people, initiated or vigorously backed and sponsored by the FAECT have been slum clearance, new housing developments, demolition of the ugly and slum-breeding elevated lines in New York City and elsewhere.

MANY CONTRACTS

A recognized spokesman for technical employes in many cities and states, it has conducted in recent years many successful negotiations for union contracts in the leading concerns. Professional societies and journals in the technical fields that earlier ignored or ridiculed the union have of late been jolted out of that attitude and are considerably more respectful.

The FAECT has been conducting a Technical School where leaders in the profession help young college graduates round out their education with practical work that improves their chances of finding positions, while older members brush up and bring up to date their knowledge.

No greater boon to the growth of the FAECT could have happened than the setting up of the CIO, which specifically tackled the organization of the very industries where the majority of technical men and women are employed—steel, auto, machinery, electric and rubber.

New Homes for Old

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing.

Opening New Homes

By THOMAS HUMPHRIES

The first fruits of the New Deal's low-rent housing program are about to be harvested.

During the next few months the first housing projects built by local housing authorities with the financial and technical aid of the United States Housing Authority will be opened for occupancy. Hundreds of families who are now living in crowded tenements and tumble-down shacks will pack up their belongings. Hundreds of men, women and children will move into these well-built, healthy and attractive housing projects.

LOW RENTS

But what will the rents be? Will they be low enough? Or will they be so high that families from the slums can't move into them?

In Jacksonville, Florida, and Buffalo, New York, the rents have already been definitely set. Let us see how much it would cost a family to live in either of these projects.

At the Brentwood Park project in Jacksonville rents range from $12.25 a month for a one-bedroom unit to $14 a month for a three-bedroom unit. These figures include the cost of water and of electricity for lighting, cooking and refrigeration.

At the Lakeview project in Buffalo the average monthly rent is only $21 for white families and $19.38 for Negro families. These figures also include utilities.

These two projects are fairly typical—from $12 to $21 a month for everything. Some projects will rent at a slightly higher figure, many at a lower figure—but all of them will really be within the reach of low-income families who wouldn't otherwise be able to secure adequate housing.

A JOB FOR THE UNIONS

Both the Jacksonville and the Buffalo projects will open early this summer. At close intervals others will open up in other cities: In New York, in Austin, in Syracuse, in Louisville, in Augusta, in Toledo and in Youngstown.

In all of these towns there are CIO members who are eligible for occupancy—that is, who don't make more than five times the rent and who live in sub-standard housing. The unions might well take it upon themselves to acquaint their members with the fact that a local project is opening and that applications for tenancy should be sent in before the project is completed.

In fact, union locals and industrial union councils should contact the local housing authorities and ask for a stock of application blanks. These applications can be distributed at union meetings, filled out then and there and turned in to the local housing authority by the union itself. In this way, the unions can perform a service not only for the low-rent housing movement, but for their own members also.

S. 591 AND H. R. 2888

The only trouble with these housing projects is that there aren't enough of them, as yet. And since the USHA's funds have all been used up, no new projects will get under way any place in the United States unless Congress passes S. 591 and H. R. 2888—which will authorize an additional $800,000,000 in loans and $45,000,000 in annual rent contributions.

At the present moment S. 591 has already been reported on favorably by the Senate Education and Labor Committee. It should come to the Senate floor in the near future.

H. R. 2888, which is exactly the same as S. 591, has not yet been finally reported out of the House Banking & Currency Committee. Hearings are due to be held any day now. A serious fight is expected.

CIO locals should send resolutions supporting increased housing funds to the House Banking & Currency Committee and to their respective Senators and Representatives.

Green's Coercion Policy Rapped By AFL Local

GREAT FALLS, Mont., June 3.—Green's policy of threats and abuse of AFL bodies opposed to amendments to the Wagner Act received a sharp rebuff from the Cascade Co. Trades and Labor Assembly here when the Assembly refused to rescind a Wagner Act resolution as demanded by Green.

Green's letter to the Assembly, written in a provocative, bullying tone, openly threatened to revoke the charter unless the delegate body retreated from its position.

"Central bodies chartered by and established by the AFL must rest on a solid AFL basis," Green wrote. "We expect your central body to occupy such a position. It must and will occupy such a position, even though it may be necessary for us to revoke your charter. . . Let me hear from you quickly and without a moment's unnecessary delay."

UP TO AFFILIATES

The Cascade Assembly refused to rescind its resolution, and referred Green's letter to affiliated unions for an expression of opinion. The resolutions, passed some time ago, put the finger on AFL top leaders' collusion with anti-labor forces, when it said:

"The Natl. Manufacturers Assn., the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, and certain labor officials have started an unprincipled attack on the Act and the Board for the purpose of amending the act during this session of Congress so that it may serve corporate interests in their greed."

Washington, June 3.—Local 205 of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, has been certified by the Labor Board as the collective bargaining agency chosen by a majority of the employes of Warner Telechron Co., Ashland, Mass.

The Board's action was based upon a comparison of company payrolls and union authorization cards, which disclosed that 508 out of 655 employes in the appropriate unit had signed union cards. The workers are employed at the company's two plants in Ashland and at the warehouse in Framingham.

Peace Settling Over West Coast Waterfront

By MIRIAM ALLEN DE FORD

SAN FRANCISCO.—Peace has settled on or is now hovering over most of the current waterfront disputes.

The Bristol Bay salmon fleet has at last sailed for Alaska with 3,500 CIO workers aboard. The sailors, though they picketed the ships for days in a demand to replace the Alaska Fishermen's Union members who sail the ships up and then work through the season, finally withdrew their pickets after securing a few extra jobs which did not interfere with the AFU.

Radio telegraphers received an advance in pay, and Marine Cooks and Stewards got overtime for Saturday afternoons and Sundays.

ASK ARBITRATION

In Oakland, the Port Commission, which had previously refused to deal with any of the maritime unions, recently asked Secretary of Labor, Perkins, for a Federal arbitrator to settle the dispute with the Ship Clerks' Union of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union. This centers in a demand for overtime for a cargo checker working before 8 A. M. The Port refused to pay this overtime, as is done in San Francisco, so the 6 A. M. - 3 P. M. man was withdrawn by the union. Federal Arbitrator Wayne Morse has not yet announced his decision on the labor spy and preferred gang disputes in San Francisco.

The warehousemen in San Francisco won a nine-week strike against the United Drug Co., giving them two weeks' paid vacation and two weeks' sick leave. Other conditions of the agreement will be determined by the general warehouse arbitration now under way.

CIO UPHELD

The attempt of the "dirty dozen," the small remnant of the AFL Intl. Longshoremen's Assn., to force the ILMU to give them jobs on the waterfront, received a set-back when Judge I. M. Golden sustained a demurrer of the ILWU and the Waterfront Employers' Assn. exempting the latter from the ILA suit.

The demurrer included an affidavit from Thomas Loughran telling how, in 1938, as a member of the ILA, he had helped in a beef squad beating of John Shoemaker, an ILWU official, and was then given money by the ILA to escape to Tacoma.

Meanwhile the ILA is trying, in Washington, to have set aside the NLRB certification of the ILWU as Pacific Coast bargaining agent for all longshoremen. Tacoma is the only West Coast port left where the ILA is still active.

Labor, Co-op Institute In Akron

Akron, Ohio, June 3—Farm, labor, church and consumers' leaders attended sessions of the Akron Institute on Organized Labor and Consumers Cooperatives, which opened here today.

Speakers at the conference discussed methods in which the co-ops can be of service to workers. Ted Silver, secretary of the Ohio Industrial Union Council, and Pres. William A. Frogge of the AFL National Federation of Post-office Clerks discussed labor's interest in consumer problems.

THIRD IN SERIES

The meeting was arranged under the auspices of the Cooperative League of the U. S. A., which has sponsored other such meetings at Dillonvale, Ohio, and Racine, Wis.

Previous get-togethers "have done a great deal to bring mutual understanding between farm, labor and cooperative organizations," according to Wallace Campbell of the national league.

Seattle, Wash., June 3.—President Harold J. Pritchett, of the International Woodworkers of America, has received a new temporary permit allowing him to remain another three months in the United States. He had previously returned to Vancouver where he spent two weeks awaiting permission to re-enter the U. S.

Certain anti-labor interests have been trying for months to have him deported, along with Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, who was born in Australia.

Illinois Senate Kills Anti-Labor Bill

All Unions Join In Campaign

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 3 —Joint CIO-AFL action killed a proposed strait-jacket bill for Illinois labor designed by some of this state's leading reactionaries.

The bill met defeat in the state senate on motion of a Chicago representative who argued that it would "destroy labor's right to strike" by forcing unions to give 10 days' notice before taking strike action.

The measure—called the Lantz bill—is similar to bills sponsored by the Republican party in Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, and already passed in the last three of these states.

Labor's objections to the bill were contained in a blasting statement issued a week ago by Ray Edmundson, Illinois regional director for the CIO and United Mine Workers district president; Pres. R. G. Soderstrom and Sec.-Treas. V. A. Olander of the state AFL federation; representatives of the railway brotherhoods and other labor groups.

CALLED DANGEROUS

The Lantz bill was called the "most insidiously dangerous labor proposal ever submitted for consideration in the Illinois legislature."

Its passage, the joint labor statement warned, "will have the effect of compelling workers and employers alike to discard practically all peaceful methods of adjusting industrial disputes, to wipe out collective bargaining, trade union agreements and arbitration as a means of settlement.

"The outcome of all such disputes will be subject entirely to the exercise of the elemental rights of strike and lockout."

'Scientific Espionage':

Pinkertons Yield to Engineers In Tests to Find Your 'Attitude'

By WALTER POLAKOV
Engineering Dept., United Mine Workers

After the unsavory publicity given to finks and all undercover labor spies by the LaFollette hearings in the Senate, management turned to engineers and psychologists. It became their dirty job to pry into private thoughts and moral evaluation of working men and women under the disguise of scientific studies.

They call it "attitude measurement"—a fancy name for snooping into "what their employes think". Substantially, this form of espionage consists of "requesting" employes to fill in a questionnaire. Then the management counts the check marks placed against such printed statements as one agrees with:

1. "On the whole, the company treats us about as well as we deserve."

2. "I think the company's policy is to pay employes just as little as it can get away with."

3. "I do not want to be forced into a union."

If 57 out of 100 questions have checkmarks, the management concludes that the majority is of such-and-such an opinion. Simple enough and apparently quite innocent. Is not management entitled to know, they say, what their employes think?

LIKE FASCIST ELECTIONS

If you say that this is prying into your private opinions, they reply, "Oh, no, we do not even know the names of the individuals, the forms need not be signed, like ballots." However, we know that Nazi, Fascist and other dictatorships also hold plebiscites with "secret" ballots — but the people do not dare even on secret ballots to vote against dictators.

We also know that the form handed to an employe to fill in may have a creased corner or spot in some place or some other distinguishing mark. Just as card "sharks" know which is the card, so management can readily identify the person.

If you say that our United States Bill of Rights guarantees us freedom of speech, of assembly, of creed, of press, they reply that such "attitude" investigations do not in the least infringe upon these constitutional rights because they deal merely with your "thoughts" and your sense of moral and social justice.

FIRINGS LIE AHEAD

Thus, if your answers show that most of you hold the management in low esteem because of its negligence to provide fair and safe working conditions, because of low pay or some kind of discriminiation, or because high dividends are paid to shareholders while payrolls are cut, you may be sure that all of you are under supervision of being reds, radicals, ingrates and what not. From that to weeding out "discontented" or "disturbing" men and women is but one small step.

Management always knows who are the brighter, the more influential, the less subservient among their employes. They need no stool-pigeons for that. This method costs less money than do the Pinkertons. And engineering firms do it with no undesirable publicity.

Then, even if a few perfectly innocent, loyal and docile people are "separated" from the payrolls, in these days of mass unemployment they are easily replaced without any harm to business.

If you want to know more about this newfangled device of management to pry into your private attitudes, get a copy of a paper prepared by H. B. Bergen, an employe of a management firm, McKinsey-Wellington and Company, and published by the National Industrial Conference Board, 247 Park Ave., New York City, which is entitled — "Finding Out What Employes Are Thinking".

Tories Run Wild In Pennsy

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 3 — Pennsylvania's Republican-controlled legislature wound up its annual session today after having swung the axe on a half-dozen pieces of liberal labor legislation written into the statute books during the past few years.

Elected on a promise to befriend the working man, Gov. Arthur James, Republican, led the attack on progressive laws. When the wreckage had been cleared away after the final days of the session, the state labor relations act had been crippled by amendments, workmen's compensation payments were slashed and unemployment insurance regulations had been tightened to the point where it will be more difficult for workers to receive benefits.

SLASH RELIEF

In addition, state relief appropriations were cut almost to

THOMAS KENNEDY

By amending the state "Wagner Act," the legislature "set up a criminal code against labor which will make it harder for labor to organize and secure collective bargaining," declared Sec.Treas. Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers, former lieutenant governor of the Commonwealth.

SWEATSHOPPERS BENEFIT

"The act as amended is an invitation to non-union sweatshop employers to return to Pennsylvania."

Criticizing the reduced compensation payment scale, Kennedy asserted:

"It does not take much of a student of government to know that while the state saves employers and insurance companies millions of dollars in reduced compensation payments, the state, in effect, will be compelled to make up the difference in additional relief payments to those who will not be able to live on the reduced compensation benefits."

The UMW official also took a poke at the newly-amended labor injunction law, which will permit judges to grant writs against unions without even hearing testimony about the dispute.

Patrick Fagan, UMW district president in Pittsburgh and a member of the state labor relations board charged that "every vestige of advance made by the worker in this state" has been destroyed. "Labor would be better off if the entire state labor relations act were repealed."

Renew Three Steel Pacts In Indiana

Indianapolis, Ind., June 3. — Three important contracts have just been renewed by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in this city, according to James Robb, SWOC district director.

The Hecker Products Co. granted a 2½c hourly increase to members of Lodge 1544, in addition to improvements in working conditions.

An agreement with the Climax Machinery Co., won by Lodge 1695, calls for a 4c increase, sole bargaining rights and vacations with pay, while the new pact with M. A. Hofft Co. maintains present working conditions and wage scales, and continues the cordial relationship built up in the last year.

Robb also announced that the Kraft-Phoenix Corp. at Sullivan, Ind., has renewed its contract with United Dairy Workers Local Industrial Union 97.

Garrison To Discuss Labor Act

Washington, June 3.—Lloyd K. Garrison, dean of the University of Wisconsin Law School and a vice-president of the National Lawyers Guild, will speak from Chicago at 5 P. M. on Wednesday, June 7, over the Red network of the National Broadcasting Company, in support of the Wagner Act.

This broadcast is part of the Lawyers Guild program in defense of the Act.

Dean Garrison was the first chairman of the National Labor Relations Board and served on the President's Commission on Industrial Relations in Great Britain and Sweden.

Form Steel Union District In Canada

Halifax, Nova Scotia, June 3.— Pictou County has been made a sub-region of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, Silby Barrett, Canadian Director of the organization has just announced.

The sub-region, first union of its kind in Canada, corresponds roughly to a sub-district in the United Mine Workers of America organization which has long been established in Nova Scotia.

HAGUE DECISION SPURS FIGHT FOR CIVIL RIGHTS

The News In Brief

(See Stories on Inside Pages)

Finks

Washington.—The use of labor spies, strikebreakers, tear gas and munitions must be eliminated from American industrial life, CIO Pres. John L. Lewis told a Senate Committee, adding that the LaFollette-Thomas bill is the way to do the job and calling for continuance of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee.

Maritime

Everett, Wash. — Plans for national unity of all maritime labor organizations were discussed at the convention of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, attended by delegates from practically every marine workers' union on the west coast.

Apex

Philadelphia. — Congress never intended the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust laws to apply to labor unions, the CIO declared in a brief filed to contest $711,000 restraint of trade verdict won by the Apex Hosiery Co. from the American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

Conference

Chicago.—Increasing possibility of a battle for union recognition from the "Big Four" of the packing industry was voiced by leaders of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee. PWOC Chairman Van Bittner has invited John L. Lewis to address a nationwide conference of the union July 17 at which future plans will be discussed.

Hearst Strike Passes Six Month Mark

Chicago, June 10. — Almost three million lines of advertising have been lost by the Hearst-owned Chicago Herald-Examiner as a result of the Newspaper Guild strike during the last six months, the Guild's committee announced today.

The strike for job security reached its half-year anniversary on June 5, with morale high and assistance pouring in from workers throughout the nation.

Court OKs Ban on Fake AFL Pact

San Francisco, June 10. — The National Labor Relations Board today won a federal circuit court decision in a case outlawing a company union contract signed by an AFL union.

A closed shop pact signed by an Intl. Assn. of Machinists local with the National Motor Bearings Co. during the course of a lockout in 1937 was invalidated by the Board in an order more than a year ago. The court upheld the NLRB in all important points in the case.

LOCKED OUT WORKERS

The company shut down its plant in the spring of 1937 when a clear majority of the workers had joined the CIO United Automobile Workers, refusing to bargain collectively with Local 76 of the UAW. A few days later it signed the company union agreement with the IAM.

The contract with the IAM—whose local sprang up "mysteriously" after the lockout had commenced—was used by the company to promote a back-to-work movement and the weeding out of UAW members from the employment rolls. The NLRB order provided for reinstatement with back pay of more than 50 CIO members thus discharged.

CIO Hails Victory; To Push Drive In Jersey City

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The U. S. Supreme Court decision upholding the CIO in its fight against Frank Hague of Jersey City has opened the way for a vigorous battle against all violators of the civil rights of the American people, it became apparent today.

The CIO, in addition to announcing that it will undertake a campaign to organize the unorganized workers of Hague's bailiwick, declared its intention of asking the Department of Justice to take criminal action against those who rob workers and their leaders of constitution-guaranteed civil liberties.

Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, in discussing the issues involved [See Labor and the Law, Page Seven] declares that the 5-2 court ruling has made possible prosecution of all who attempt restriction of freedom of speech, assembly and press.

MURPHY PLEASED

Atty. Gen. Frank Murphy predicted the decision will "bolster our work in the Department of Justice." Although the department's Civil Liberties Unit is still in its infancy, he promised that it will "grow into something very important."

"The mere fact that an agency is here in the department will serve as notice to people who want to violate civil liberties that they must deal with the Department of Justice," Murphy warned.

Future hearings on civil liberties violation cases may be thrown open to the public, the attorney-general declared.

Plans for a CIO mass meeting in Jersey City are being discussed by local CIO officials there. Meanwhile, thousands of names have been affixed to petitions demanding that the Federal Bureau of Investigation look into corruption in the Hague-dominated municipality. It is hoped that the Department of Justice will soon act on the requests.

FIGHT JUST STARTING

"Frank Hague has found out that he is not the law," declared William Carney, CIO regional director for New Jersey.

"While Hague will no longer be able to suppress freedom of speech and press and will no longer be able to deny to the people of Jersey City their right to join a union of their own choosing, we cannot fool ourselves that the fight is over.

"It has just started."

Lewis To Address Packinghouse Confab

CHICAGO, June 10.—John L. Lewis, CIO president, will address a national conference of Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee locals at which action to force union recognition from the "Big Four" will be considered, PWOC Chairman Van A. Bittner announced today.

Armour, Swift, Wilson and Cudahy comprise the bloc of four big corporations which have yet to sign PWOC agreements. Despite the fact that the union has been certified as sole bargaining agent in every major Armour branch plant, that company has turned thumbs down on all attempts to negotiate such an agreement.

"It is quite evident," PWOC Director Don Harris declared, "that extraordinary steps must be taken to bring Armour & Co. to reason and teach them the American way of collective bargaining.

COMING TO A HEAD

"It is equally evident that the rapid growth of our union among the other members of the 'Big Four' is rapidly bringing matters to a head in that direction as well.

"We are in a position now that justifies us in demanding negotiations with Wilson and Cudahy, as well as with Armour. Before the summer is out, the Swift chain will likewise be well in hand."

SYMBOLIZES SUPPORT

PWOC Asst. Director Henry Johnson commented that the presence of Pres. Lewis will "not only symbolize the support of the CIO, but it will mean that the packinghouse workers will benefit from the advice and leadership of the man who successfully led the United Mine Workers through the battle with the coal operators."

CIO Local Wins Parade For King; Company Sore!

TRAIL, B. C., June 10.—The CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' Union was once again a winner here, this time in a parade celebrating the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to the dominion.

Much to the discomfort of the agents of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Corporation, whose employes the union is organizing, the MM&SU entered a gaily-decorated float in the official fete. It not only captured the admiration of the celebrants, but won first prize from the official judges.

The float represented a royal crown covered with purple lilacs, the balance of the car being covered with maple leaves, emblem of Canada.

Consolidated agents protested the float was intended to "put over propaganda for the CIO," but the mayor and the parade committee disagreed and welcomed the union's entry.

Recently the union held its first meeting here in 20 years. It was attended by nearly 2,000 employes of Consolidated.

Pacific Maritime Federation Calls for National Organization; U. S. Commission Attacked

EVERETT, Wash., June 10.—Delegates representing 45,000 workers in the maritime industry of the Pacific coast, Alaska and the Hawaiian Islands, assembled in the Labor Temple here this week as the Maritime Federation of the Pacific opened its fifth annual convention.

Among speakers who addressed the opening session were Eugene V. Dennett, executive secretary of the Washington State CIO Industrial Union Council, and Kenneth McClasky, regional representative of the National Labor Relations Board.

McClasky recalled the achievements of the American labor movement since the Wagner Labor Act started functioning and praised the Maritime Federation of the Pacific for its demonstration of unity. The Federation is composed of both CIO and AFL unions.

DISCUSS UNITY

Important questions before the convention were a discussion of labor unity including that portion of the MFP program which calls for the establishment of a National Maritime Federation to cover the East Coast, Gulf and Great Lakes regions as well as the Pacific; and consideration of agreements between union affiliates of the Federation and the waterfront operators. Virtually all agreements expire on September 30.

Later the convention pledged itself to work for the formation of a National Maritime Federation.

Deliberation and action on legislation of interest to maritime workers is a third major point on the agenda of the convention. Chief among the bills now before Congress with which the delegates are concerned is one introduced by Representative M. C. Walgren of Washington State, calling for the abolition of government hiring halls for government-operated shipping lines.

UNIONS IN DANGER

Although unions in the Federation were instrumental, along with other civic and labor forces, in making possible the establishment of government-operated shipping lines on the West coast, they are now faced with the possibility of having the standards of working conditions, built during a five-year struggle, broken down.

Bruce Hannon, MFP secretary-treasurer, said at the beginning of the convention that "the problem facing the maritime unions, in relation to the Maritime Commission's ships, is the most serious to confront maritime labor since the strikes of 1934 and 1936.

"We must make clear the fact that both the 1934 strike and the lockout of 1936-37 were brought about by the question of hiring halls for maritime workers. The union hiring hall is the backbone of our unions. If the Maritime Commission can destroy union hiring halls, they can destroy our unions.

"We do not propose to let the Maritime Commission, private operators, or anyone else, destroy the conditions we have built and maintained through the tireless efforts of our entire membership and even the sacrifice of the lives of many."

H. F. McGrath, president of the Federation, announced that Harry Bridges, president of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, was expected at the convention later. He said that the sessions would probably continue for a week.

On the second day, five members of the Seattle Warehousemen's local of the ILWU, appeared before the delegates to tell of an attack made upon them the previous Saturday night. After having left the Colbrook picket line where they were marching in protest against threats made on the crew of the vessel, on which a strike had been declared by the National Maritime Union, the five men were set upon outside the ILWU hall.

Insurance Firm Renews Pact, Lauds CIO Union

NEW YORK, June 10.—The Golden Eagle Life Insurance Co., first in its field to sign a CIO union contract with its agents, today had negotiated a renewal of the agreement.

Compensation increases amounting to about 12½% and ten days' vacation with pay—instead of a week—are provided in the new pact with Local 30 of the United Office & Professional Workers.

Pres. W. O. Dietrich of the company praised the union and declared:

"Our experience with the union in the past year has conclusively proven that collective bargaining through a genuine union is not only a practical thing in insurance, but also a means for providing the most effective service and protection to the company's policyholders.

"The relationship between management and the employes has proven entirely satisfactory and the business has prospered as a result. The company was able to declare a larger dividend this year than last."

Steel Union Gets Label On Products

Hespeler, Ont., June 10 — The first union label shop was established in the steel industry yesterday when lodge 2,000 of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers renewed its agreement with the Stamped and Enameled Wares Limited, manufacturers of kitchenware and enamel tops for washing machines.

The company agreed to a union shop and the local permitted the firm to place its label on all products manufactured by the factory.

As a result union-conscious housewives can now buy their utensils stamped with a union label denoting that they were made under fair working conditions.

Shipyard Union Gets PactRenewal

Kearny, N. J., June 10.—Some 6,000 workers of the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Company are covered by a new contract signed last week by Local 16, Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

Adjustments of wage rates giving pay increases to 1250 men were included in the agreement along with a number of other major improvements, such as liberalization of the vacation plan, added overtime benefits, and elimination of wage differentials between ship and shop work.

6,000 Pickets Ask Allis-Chalmers For New Contract

WEST ALLIS, Wisc., June 10.—Six thousand workers were marching on the picket line today as the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. stood by its refusal to negotiate a new contract containing provision for the union shop.

The united action of the membership of Local 248, United Automobile Workers, CIO, brought praise from veteran labor leaders in this area who have watched the progress of the "baby" union over a period of the last two years.

Closing of the plant followed two weeks of futile bargaining by company and union representatives, with the management singing a steady song of "no" to requests for the union shop provision, for a joint agreement covering the West Allis plant and others in Boston and Pittsburgh, and wage adjustments.

CO-OP BACKS UNION

Full backing of the UAW was pledged to the local by William Cody, regional UAW director and a member of the international's executive board. Other support came from the powerful Milwaukee County Consumers' Cooperative Assn., which told the A-C management:

"Our rural members fully realize that the wages lost during a strike reflect a decreased purchasing power on the part of the consumer and therefore directly affect the income of the farmer; but they also understand that cooperation between the employers and employes results in greater benefits to both."

The letter predicted that a "half-way" attitude by the company would bring about quick settlement of the issues in dispute.

Union Wins Briggs Body Walkout

Detroit, June 10 — Ratification of a new Briggs Manufacturing Co. contract with the United Automobile Workers, CIO, today paved the way for new gains for some 13,000 employes and spelled doom for Homer Martin's disruptionist efforts.

The new contract, which followed a two-week strike, makes the UAW-CIO sole bargaining agency for the company's workers until such time as the National Labor Relations Board holds an election to determine the agency. Inasmuch as the CIO auto union has already secured more than 12,600 names on petitions, outcome of the NLRB poll is practically known in advance.

BLOW TO AFL

Martin had tried to worm his way into the strike situation by claiming a majority of the workers, though he has only a small factional group in the plant.

The blow against Martin came less than a day after he and Pres. William Green announced AFL chartering of the rump group, midst grumblings from two AFL craft unions about jurisdictional problems. It seemed that neither Green, Martin nor other AFL leaders were sure of the boundaries of the rump group's theoretical jurisdiction.

THOMAS HAILS VICTORY

UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas said the victory shows the unity of the union and that its members are solid behind the UAW and the CIO.

"This has been the most serious industrial situation since the efforts to disrupt the UAW were launched several months ago by the Homer Martin company union elements."

Uncover Plot Against CIO Auto Union

Los Angeles, Calif., June 10.—Witnesses for the prosecution unfolded a plot aimed to destroy the United Automobile Workers during the trial of 14 Chrysler workers charged with "extortion," union officials here declared this week.

The UAW Chrysler local claims that the trial is a frame-up conspired by the Chrysler Corp., the Neutral Thousands, the Southern Californians, Inc., and other open shop elements, with the aid of District Attorney Buron Fitts.

REVEAL COMPANY TIES

One of the witnesses, Paul Brooks, organizer of the so-called 40-hour Club admitted that he had formed this organization on company property after conferences with leaders of the Neutral Thousands, and that he had received a check for $150 to file a suit against the UAW members last November.

Another prosecution witness testified earlier under cross examination that he had conferred with representatives of the district attorney before he joined the UAW, which he had previously refused to join.

Charges against the 14 members of the Chrysler local are based on their activities in collecting union dues, which the prosecution alleged were "extorted" from the workers.

Company Stooge Kills Union Member

Des Moines, Ia., June 10.—CIO Packinghouse workers and all labor and progressives here are mourning the brutal death of John Charlton, member of PWOC Local 89 who was killed by a blow from Martin Neal, Swift and Co. company union representative.

Don Harris, PWOC national director, declared that Charlton's death was the result of Swift's policy of refusing to bargain collectively in good faith with their workers, and pinned the blame on the Swift company union.

Packinghouse workers and hundreds of other unionists turned out for Charlton's funeral yesterday, and pledged to uncover the whole sordid story of Swift's anti-union tactics that led to the killing.

High Court's Ruling Gives CIO Green Light For Jersey Drive

CIO Asks Reversal Of Apex Decision

Philadelphia, June 10.—The anti-trust laws were never intended to apply to unions and Congress, when it passed them some years ago, took care to emphasize that they only applied to employers and corporations, according to the brief on the Apex verdict appeal filed here by Lee Pressman, general counsel, CIO.

Furthermore, Supreme Court and other decisions holding that the laws do apply to unions are in error, and should be reversed, the brief argues.

Under the Apex verdict, Branch One of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers was fined $700,000 for alleged violations of the anti-trust laws during a strike at the Apex Hosiery Co. mills in Philadelphia in 1937.

EXCLUDED UNIONS

1. "That the full legislative history of the Sherman and Clayton Acts, not hitherto brought to the attention of the courts, conclusively demonstrates that it was intended by Congress to exclude labor unions and their activities from the effect and prohibition of such legislation;

2. That the first decisions interpreting the Sherman and Clayton Acts so as to embrace labor unions within their prohibitions rest upon an inaccurate and erroneous statement of the legislative history of these two laws.

MODERN CONDITIONS

3. That modern conditions compel a re-examination of the judicial decisions which have perpetuated the erroneous doctrine that labor unions were within the purview of the anti-trust laws, because the mischief committed by this erroneous doctrine is now growing into a menace to the continued development and functioning of labor unions."

On this point the brief cites the Supreme Court as having "recently indicated that it is prepared to re-examine long standing judicial precedents and if proper cause be shown, to reverse such precedents in order to eliminate any abuses or injustices that may have been done under past decisions."

4. That such court interpretations, unless reversed, would nullify the efforts and achievements of labor unions in bringing stable labor relations to industry in competitive fields and on a national scale.

The brief then shows that Supreme Court decisions applying anti-trust laws to unions have held illegal attempts of unions to eliminate competition of anti-union employers in interstate commerce.

The sit-down strike or other acts of unions are not involved, the brief declares; "the fact that the union is engaged in lawless or violent acts, including the physical destruction of property, ... upon persons, does not bring it within the Act."

9c-Hourly Pay Raise

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 10.—A CIO contract calling for a closed shop and nine cents hourly increase in wages has been signed by the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company here.

Ask Criminal Action

WASHINGTON, June 10. — The following statement was issued today by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, in regard to the Supreme Court ruling on the Jersey City injunction:

"The decision of the United States Supreme Court upholding the injunction against Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, represents a notable victory for the CIO in its struggle to assure the constitutional guarantees of freedom of assembly, speech and press for workers who seek to organize.

"In ruling that the Jersey City violations fall within the protection of the federal civil rights statutes, the Supreme Court makes it possible to bring criminal as well as civil suits against all who violate these rights.

"The CIO will therefore request the Department of Justice to take steps for the criminal prosecution of all who interfere with its organizing activities by violating the civil rights of the workers.

"Mayor Hague's terror has failed completely to stop the CIO in New Jersey. But the Supreme Court decision will lend new courage to labor everywhere by giving assurance that the workers have definite legal recourse to check the tyrannies by which he and other petty Hitlers have attempted to destroy the civil rights of American workers."

5-2 Decision Grants Injunction to CIO

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Plans for a vigorous organizing drive in Jersey City and criminal action against persons who interfere with labor's civil rights were mapped out today by CIO leaders following the U. S. Supreme Court's outspoken decision against Mayor Frank Hague.

"We plan to concentrate on four large plants," William Carney, CIO regional director for New Jersey, declared in discussing effects of the decision.

"There will be no 'mass invasion' of Jersey City. We have no desire for trouble and we will not allow the Hague stooges to provoke us into trouble. Our job is to organize the unorganized," Carney added.

"At the same time the CIO will back the drive of Labor's Non-Partisan League in Jersey City to give Frank Hague the same rebuke at the polls that he received at the hands of the U. S. Supreme Court.

"The 30,000 members of the CIO in Hudson County (Jersey City) have enlisted for the duration of the war until Hague is either in jail or in political oblivion."

SEEK CRIMINAL ACTION

Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, interpreted the court's action as making possible criminal as well as civil suits against all who violate the civil rights of the people.

"The CIO will therefore request the Department of Justice to take steps for the criminal prosecution of all who interfere with its organizing activities by violating the civil rights of the workers."

Mayor Hague's office announced that the Jersey political czar would accept the decision "implicitly" but Leonard H. Goldsmith, secretary of the state's Industrial Union Council was skeptical about the decision's ability to take the sting out of Hague's vehement anti-unionism.

"The Supreme Court decision will help a lot," he said, "but it will drive Hague underground. There he will try to mobilize his supposed-to-be veterans and his other stooges to foment trouble against us."

DELIBERATED 14 WEEKS

The court ruling, delayed for 14 weeks, came on the last day of the session and found the seven participating justices writing five separate decisions.

Justices Butler and McReynolds—sole surviving members of the Tory crew which dominated the nation's highest tribunal—snarled dissenting opinions which in effect said that Hague's restriction of civil liberties was none of the federal government's business.

The two major decisions upholding the CIO were written by Justice Roberts and Justice Stone, with Justice Black agreeing with the former and Justice Reed con-

Buffalo CIO, AFL Defend Wagner Act

Buffalo, June 10.—Joint action by CIO and AFL unions here in upholding the Wagner Act took shape today in the formation of a united committee to save the Act from amendments.

The committee, under the leadership of Owen J. Kavanaugh of the AFL and Hugh Thompson, CIO official, is made up of representatives from 23 AFL locals and 57 CIO. It was formed after a resolution upholding the proposed amendments to the act was steamrollered through the AFL central body under orders from top leaders.

RAP WALSH BILL

First act of the committee was a resolution denouncing the Walsh amendments, which are backed by AFL Pres. Green, as an attempt to "destroy the Wagner Act and nullify benefits to all labor under the act." Charging that the AFL convention never authorized the amendments, it said the Walsh bill would "foster company unions and shackle American labor to the courts."

The resolution called on Buffalo workers to join in opposition to amendments and set up committees to push legislative work.

Pennsy Governor Slaps Labor; Refuses To Veto Tory Bill

Harrisburg, Pa., June 10—Gov. Arthur C. James—who campaigned for office on a platform of befriending the working man—today told leaders of the state's CIO and AFL organizations that nothing would stop his signing hostile amendments to the state labor relations act and the 1937 state anti-injunction law.

Unmoved by a two-hour conference with 20 important labor leaders, who voiced dozens of objections to the bills passed by the state legislature during the final days of its recently-adjourned session, the governor charged that the workers' leaders were engaging in a "smokescreen of misrepresentation and propaganda."

GETS CATCALLS

As the governor concluded the meeting and left the state house in his car, he was met with a chorus of resounding boos from two thousand workers who had traveled from all parts of Pennsylvania to express opposition to the bills.

John Phillips, president of the Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council, hailed the demonstration as evidence of "labor united in Pennsylvania." Pres. James L. McDevitt of the AFL state federation of labor voiced similar sentiments.

"We're here to tell them that more than half a century of suffering and battling can not be thrown aside by the representatives of the vested interests," warned Martin F. Brennan, head of District 9 of the United Mine Workers.

Previously Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Kennedy of the UMW had described the amended law as "an invitation to non-union sweatshop employers to return to Pennsylvania."

The new law will nullify guarantees given to workers in the original state labor relations act, encourage long-term company union contracts, set up an elaborate system of "unfair labor practices" for workers and kill the Pennsylvania version of the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction act.

One of the worst features of the amended labor relations act provides that if no complaint is made against an employer's unfair labor practice within six weeks of its occurrence, the boss can not be held liable for it. Labor leaders have pointed out that frequently it takes a union many weeks—or even months—to obtain sufficient evidence to file a complaint.

Ratify New Firestone Contract

Akron, Ohio, June 10.—A new contract between Local 7, United Rubber Workers, CIO, and the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company has been ratified.

Containing only minor changes, the agreement continues the provisions for sole bargaining rights, a six-hour day, time and a half for overtime and protection against wage reductions.

No layoffs are to be made by the company until hours have been reduced to 24 a week for eight consecutive weeks.

The United States versus Hague

The decision of the United States Supreme Court against Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City represents a splendid victory for the CIO—and for the American people. Its consequences may be far-reaching.

The CIO asked no special privileges of the Supreme Court. All it asked was that workers who seek to organize be granted the same rights of freedom of speech and freedom of assemblage as the constitution guarantees to all American citizens.

Mayor Hague denied these rights to the workers of Jersey City. CIO organizers were seized and run out of town. Union meetings and leaflet distribution were prohibited. Unionists were held in jail without charges, and a campaign of intimidation was conducted to prevent the workers organizing in the CIO.

In upholding the injunction which forbids these practices on the part of Mayor Hague, the Supreme Court has also upheld the validity of the federal civil rights statutes as applying to such cases.

This means that workers whose civil rights are violated by Hague and his imitators in other cities and states, are assured of legal redress through a number of different channels. It also means that criminal as well as civil suits may be brought against all who violate these rights.

The CIO is therefore in a position to ask the Department of Justice to begin the criminal prosecution of all who interfere with organizing activities by violating workers' civil rights.

There are many other cities in the United States where Hague's methods have been used, and are still being used, in more or less degrees, to check union organization. Labor may therefore go forward with new courage in all these places, exercising its full constitutional rights with the assurance that there are legal methods to secure the punishment of those who seek to deny it these rights.

For the whole American people there is also a victory in the Supreme Court decision. CIO resistance to the near-Fascist dictatorship which Mayor Hague sought to establish, has led to this reaffirmation of our democratic liberties in unmistakable terms. It constitutes a timely answer by America to the Fascist reaction which is threatening the world today.

The Civil Liberties Committee and Its Bill

"A West Virginia coal operator in the city of Washington boasted in the presence of members of Congress that his corporation had five machine guns, rifles, ammunition and nauseating gas, and that he expected to use these to shoot himself some miners in the month of May."

This was one of the incidents related by President John L. Lewis of the CIO in the course of his testimony before a Senate subcommittee on behalf of the LaFollette-Thomas oppressive labor practices bill.

He compared the professional strikebreakers, labor spies and private armies of anti-union corporations with the storm troop armies of Fascist nations. "These armies," Lewis said, "act as the agents of supremely arrogant men who have usurped a power to police their fellow citizens that should be reserved to the community."

The LaFollette-Thomas bill would outlaw the use of labor spies, professional strikebreakers, private armies and private arsenals. In urging its passage, Lewis commended particularly the provisions in it which would deny government contracts, loans and subsidies to corporations or employers that violate the law.

He also suggested that the scope of these clauses should be widened to deny such government help to all violators of the National Labor Relations Act.

The LaFollette-Thomas bill is a product of the investigations of the Senate civil liberties committee, and Lewis emphasized the importance of voting more funds to assure the continuance of this committee.

The purposes of the oppressive labor practices bill are so meritorious, that practically no public opposition has been expressed to it as yet. The record of the civil liberties committee is also so outstanding that its opponents hesitate to come out into the open.

The danger is that the resolution to continue the committee's life may be kept bottled up in the Senate committee on audit and control, which has so far refused to report it out or to hold hearings.

Renewed demands should therefore come from labor and all progressives throughout the country for speedy action to continue the Senate civil liberties committee, as well as for the passage of the bill designed to end some of the evils which it has exposed.

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

The End Of A Big Noise

THE Big Noise of Jersey City is only a pipsqueak after all.

A year or so ago Mayor Hague was going to stop the CIO. He wasn't the only one. Tom Girdler and Pearl Bergoff had quite a choice collection of thugs who tried the same thing.

But somehow Hague stood out among all the rest. He had the loudest voice, the worst grammar, the biggest income, and the most gall.

All the other thugs looked sheepish when you talked about the law. But Hague said, "I am the law!"

The other big shots might lord it over a red-light district and defy or buy off a few cops. But Hague ruled a whole city, had his own police force and defied the constitution of the United States.

So the Big Noise from Jersey City was heard over the whole country when he told labor organizers to stay out and denied freedom of speech and assemblage to union workers.

"Hague has the right idea." became the password wherever two or three of the idle rich gathered together to hate the New Deal and the CIO, and to snort about the rise of the "lower classes."

From Oregon in the west to Ontario in the north and New Orleans in the south, other publicity-hungry politicians began to echo the Big Noise of Jersey City by defying John L. Lewis and chanting, "CIO stay away from my door."

Nothing Left But A Squeak

But it's a long time now since more than a squeak was heard from the once Big Noise. Even a Tin Horn Moseley can outdo him now, and the clubmen have turned from dreams of stopping the CIO to the outright Fascism of the screwball ex-general.

One by one the various politicians who were going to stop the CIO have been retired from office by the voters, or else have gotten wise and are trying to drop the subject.

History relates that even King Canute gave up and called it a day, when the incoming tide showed no respect for his orders or his royal tootsies.

And Hague and all his imitators have found that while they were loudly challenging John L. Lewis to come on and stay away, the tide of CIO union organization was quietly rising right under their noses.

Tyrants, Beware!

The Supreme Court decision against Hague has registered an accomplished fact, so far as the CIO is concerned. The workers in Jersey City had heard of the United States constitution, even if Hague had not. They also knew they had the right to organize, and CIO union contracts were being won, even while Hague was emitting his loudest noises.

But nevertheless, the fact that the highest court has upheld the contentions of the CIO will have a great moral effect in encouraging workers everywhere to exercise their constitutional rights.

It serves notice on every petty tyrant who may seek to imitate Hague that he will thereby be defying the government of the United States.

More than that, the Supreme Court ruling makes possible the criminal prosecution of those who violate the civil rights of the workers, so union labor may yet have the satisfaction of seeing some of its would-be persecutors put behind the bars.

The Right To Work

If Hague has come to regret that he ever said, "I am the law," a lot of anti-union employers are sorry that they ever started talking about the "right to work."

What they really meant by it was the right to scab. But the CIO was liberal-minded enough to take up the slogan at its Atlantic City conference, at the beginning of the present depression, and to proclaim the right of every American to earn a decent living even when employers choose to close down their plants.

Walter S. Tower, executive secretary of the American Iron and Steel Institute, rashly complained that the Wagner act protects the right to strike but not the "right to work," when he testified before the Senate committee against the labor act.

Senator Thomas threw him into confusion by inquiring if he really wanted an amendment which would guarantee employment to all workers.

But that was going too far for Mr. Tower, and he didn't like it when the Senator suggested that what he really wanted was a guarantee of the open shop.

The "right to work" is becoming more and more recognized as one of labor's basic demands, and it has nothing to do with some employers' ideas of a right to take another man's job when he goes on strike.

CIO Board Meets Tuesday

WASHINGTON, June 10 — Plans for further organization efforts, reports of special committees and legislative administrative matters will be discussed at the regular semi-annual meeting of the CIO Executive Board, Pres. John L. Lewis announced.

The meeting, which will bring together representatives of all the CIO's international affiliates and organizing committees, will be held in the United Mine Workers Building beginning June 13.

Lewis Says: Spies, Tear Gas Must Go

Lauds Bill Based On Probe

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Laws to curb anti-labor violence, industrial spying, murder by company guards, and the building up of huge private arsenals by labor-hating corporations were urged here by John L. Lewis in his testimony before the Senate Labor Committee on the LaFollette-Thomas Oppressive Labor Practices bill.

"It is vitally important to labor and the nation that this bill be passed without delay," Lewis said.

"The principles it embodies have been recognized by every worker and every fair-minded citizen as necessary to the continued existence of our democracy. Such a law should have been on the statute books years ago."

The proposed bill, Lewis declared, would restore basic rights to American workers that autocratic employers have consistently violated in their attempts to crush unions.

WOULD END VIOLENCE

"It will outlaw the labor spy, the professional strikebreaker, the irresponsible private army, the private arsenals that American industry has relied upon to deny collective bargaining to its workers. It will remove a burden of violence and a fear of reprisals that hang over thousands of Americans in their attempts to organize for the improvement of their working and living conditions."

Lewis pledged the support of the CIO and pointed out that he spoke for all labor and progressives in praising the bill and the work of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee whose exposures laid the groundwork for it.

"SHOOT ME SOME MINERS"

Asked if he knew "of his own knowledge" of employers whose conduct showed the need for such a bill, Lewis replied that he did, citing the statement of a West Virginia coal operator who boasted in a Washington hotel "in the presence of members of Congress that his corporation had five machine guns, rifles, ammunition and nauseating gas, and that he expected to use those to shoot himself some miners in the month of May."

Lewis devoted part of his testimony to discussing the provisions of the bill that would withhold U. S. government contracts from violators, describing it as "the most important sanction of the bill."

This would be done, he explained, by enlarging the scope of the present Walsh-Healey and Bacon-Davis bills, that govern placing of federal contracts with private employers. He suggested that the bill go further in denying such contracts to employers who consistently violated the Wagner Act.

"This is an essential part of the bill," he said. "Outlawing the labor spy, the professional strikebreaker, the oppressive armed guard, the corruption of police and the private arsenal, is not enough. It is necessary to make all these measures evasion-proof by putting economic as well as statutory teeth into the bill.

"This can best be done by making it absolutely clear that the U. S. will not assist violators of the law by continuing to award them profitable contracts while they break the law.

"This is the most important sanction of the bill. The CIO favors its inclusion, as it has pressed for similar penalties against corporations or employers who break other federal laws."

PRAISES COMMITTEES

Lewis praised the work of the Civil Liberties Committee in telling the American people about the consistent flouting of basic democratic rights by union-hating corporations that made such a bill necessary.

"Due to the untiring work of the Civil Liberties Committee, our people have learned the sordid story of the Weirtons and the Harlan Counties and the Republic Steel Corporations of our nation," he said.

"Millions of Americans now know that there are hundreds of communities in this country, sometimes the typical country town, sometimes the entire industrial city or even county, nominally a part of America, but actually dominated by a ruthless community, where freedom of assembly, of speech, the secrecy of the ballot, are systematically and effectively violated."

Due to the LaFollette Committee, he pointed out, these conditions are known and resented by millions of Americans. "It has done a competent job," he continued. "It has earned the gratitude of labor and the grudging respect of labor's enemies. Its methods have been completely fair and completely democratic — unlike the methods of other committees that have dealt with the problem of un-American activities."

DEMANDS CONTINUANCE

The work of the LaFollette Committee is not finished, he declared, and there are many areas and industries where anti-labor activities flourish unchecked.

"The conspiracy against American rights is so vast and so ramified that it will require many more months of work before the whole network is uncovered. There is an attempt now on foot to bring the Committee to an end," he said.

"A resolution is now pending in the Senate Committee on Audit and Control which would authorize the continuation of the Civil Liberties Committee. The Audit and Control Committee has refused thus far to report out that measure, or to hold hearings on its merits.

OUTRAGE ON LABOR

"It would be an outrage on labor and upon the people of the U. S. if this resolution were to be kept bottled up in that Committee and if it were not reported out with a favorable recommendation at this session of Congress.

"A vociferous demand for hearings on amendments to the Wagner Act went up as soon as they were proposed. The demand was acceded to. Labor cannot see why its demands for hearings on the Civil Liberties Committee resolution should not receive the same consideration."

"I am speaking for 4,000,000 men and women of the CIO when I urge that the Committee be allowed to continue, and that it be given sufficient funds to carry on its work for the welfare of the American people.

"The forces this bill will deal with are not only the enemies of labor organization. They are enemies of democracy and of all government that is not dedicated to their profit alone.

"I know that I am not speaking only for the CIO when I urge the immediate passage of this bill. I know that I am expressing the desires of every man and woman in America who must get a living by working for it, and who must have the right to organize freely and without fear in order to make that living one fit for the American people."

Big Textile Firms Flout Laws, Get Big U. S. Orders—Rieve

New York, June 10.—Employers in the textile industry who are among the largest beneficiaries of public contracts continue to defy the National Labor Relations Act and to violate the civil rights of their workers, President Emil Rieve, of the Textile Workers Union of America, declared this week.

In a letter to U. S. Senator David I. Walsh, chairman of the sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, Rieve urged adoption of the provision in Bill S. 1032 amending the Walsh-Healey Act to deny for three years the right of government contract to employers found guilty of interfering with the collective bargaining rights of their employes.

DANGEROUS BLOW TO LABOR

Unless the government ceases giving grants to such concerns, Rieve said, "collective bargaining will not become a reality in the textile industry for many years." He listed eight prominent textile concerns enjoying federal contracts which have been found to have violated the labor act.

From May 7, 1938 to May 27, 1939, the eight companies received federal contracts totalling:

Lane Cotton Co., New Orleans, La., $925,647.
Eagle-Phenix Co., Columbus, Ga., $490,689.
Mooresville Cotton Mills, Mooresville, Ga., $26,635.
Marshall Field & Co., Spray, Draper & Leaksville, N. C., $201,349.
Gudebrod Bros., Pottstown, Pa., $18,940.
Bradford Dyeing Associates, Bradford, R. I., $11,817.
Uxbridge Worsted Co., Uxbridge, Mass., $15,031.
American Manufacturing Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., $26,242.

Violations consisted of sponsoring company unions; discharging workers for union activity; refusing to bargain with the union, and other infringements of the Labor Relations Act.

Chamber Head Uses Labor Spies

Washington, June 10. — W. Gibson Carey, head of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and president of the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Co. is equally enthusiastic in his praise of the Golden Rule and in his admiration of the use of labor spies, the Senate Committee on Education and Labor learned today.

Carey was represented at Wagner Act amendment hearings by Richard Plumley, his general manager, who seemed hurt that the CIO would attempt to organize a plant where the management arranged for "outings and picnics and smokers and bowling matches"—along with the Natl. Metal Trades Assn. spies on the quiet.

Plumley admitted the use of NMTA "investigators" and claimed they were hired to learn about the activities of "Communists".

PROVEN A LIAR

Sen. Thomas inquired if the firm considered the "employment of labor spies to wreck a labor union is an application of the golden rule," and received a reply that NMTA men weren't used for that purpose.

But LaFollette committee records produced for the witness' benefit showed that the spies wormed their way into an AFL machinists union — and in short order managed to cut its membership from 243 to 21.

Plumley wound up by claiming that "sometimes" the use of labor spies helped to build sound relations between workers and employers.

"When things are going on underneath that can't be brought out on the surface, we have used the so-called spies," he admitted.

BE ON GUARD!

Look for the union label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America when buying men's and boys' clothing, overalls, shirts, undergarments, neckties, lumber jackets, gloves, and all other kinds of men's wearing apparel.

The Amalgamated Label is your guarantee that the articles you buy are of the best workmanship and produced under one hundred percent union conditions by members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

By insisting on the Amalgamated Label you will help to guard against a return of sweatshop conditions to the industry. By helping the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America you help the labor movement generally.

Ask for the Amalgamated label on each part of the suit, coat, pants and vest. There are different Amalgamated labels for coats, pants, vests, shirts and undergarments, work clothes, neckwear and gloves.

Girdler-Weir Stooge Taken For Ride By Senators

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Walter Tower of the American Iron & Steel Institute, stooge of Tom Girdler and Ernest Weir, struck out on three pitched balls at Wagner Act amendment hearings before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

Breezily starting his spiel with an explanation that he favored amendments in order that workers' "liberties may be fully safeguarded," Tower wound up by refusing to submit to further interrogation by committee members.

Drawing heavily on data contained in reports of the Civil Liberties Committee, Senators Elbert Thomas, LaFollette and Ellender laid down a barrage of questions that took the starch out of the Little Steel witness. Efforts by Sen. Burke of Nebraska, who has been catering to industrialists in their appearances before the group, to save the steel man were all in vain.

ADMITS ANTI-UNIONISM

1. That, far from favoring the Wagner Act, a Steel Institute pamphlet in 1935 had claimed that "the measure is not a bill whose vicious features could be remedied by amendment, because the whole idea behind it is basically unsound."

2. That 23 corporations represented on the Institute's board of directors expended $234,016 for industrial munitions between 1933-37, one-third of the total purchases made during that period.

3. That George Sokolsky was paid $28,000 by the Institute's publicity firm merely to tell them whether their anti-union publicity campaign work was good or bad—and that while Sokolsky was receiving this money, he was being paid by the New York Herald-Tribune as a supposedly impartial observer and commentator.

4. That, "If I have an employe who is employed to do a certain job in my organization, obviously I pay him a salary. If he, in his capacity as a citizen of the United States, libels somebody else or anybody else, it is no concern of mine or responsibility of mine, as I see it."

DEBATE CHARACTER

Senator Burke, who is sponsoring the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers' amendments, engaged in a heated discusion with Sen. Thomas, chairman of the committee, over Sokolsky's character.

Referring to the Steel Institute publicist, Burke declaimed:

"In my judgment he is one of the keenest students of public affairs in this country. . . . I reiterate my statement of my firm belief in the integrity of Mr. Sokolsky and in his very good ability."

Thomas, criticizing Sokolsky's red-baiting against those who think the United States is a government of men rather than laws, retorted:

" . . . He may be very keen, he was keen enough to deceive to hurt, but anyone who calls that kind of a man an honest man is stretching his imagination a little bit too far."

About that time spectators began to feel that Tower and the Steel Institute would have helped their case by staying in New York fighting unions on the quiet.

Gimbel Store Renews Pact

New York, June 10.—Thirteen hundred members of Local 2 of the United Retail and Wholesale Employes, CIO affiliate, were working today under a new two-year contract providing for $137,000 annual wage increases and a modified union shop at Gimbel's department store.

Provisions for time and a half for overtime, seniority rights for union members, additional vacation benefits and elimination of peak working conditions were also included in the agreement.

Pres. Samuel Wolchok headed the union's negotiators.

CIO Wins Decision Over Hague

curring in the broader doctrine of civil liberties outlined by Stone. Though differing in their approach to the question, both groups were severely critical of the practices used by Hague in his futile effort to interfere with the rights of Jersey City workers to join the CIO and its affiliated unions.

ROBERTS' OPINION

". . . The narrow record presented by the record," Justice Roberts declared, is whether "freedom to disseminate information concerning the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act, to assemble probably for discussion of the act, and of the opportunities and advantages offered by it, is a privilege or immunity of a citizen of the United States secured against state abridgment by Section One of the 14th amendment. . .'

"Thus, under the Robert's ruling, only U. S. citizens have the inalienable right to meet for discussion of federal laws or problems.

STONE'S RULING

"I am unable to follow the path by which some of my brethren have attained their decision," Justice Stone remarked.

"No more grave and important issue can be brought to this court than that of freedom of speech and assembly, which the due process clause guarantees to all persons, regardless of their citizenship, but which privileges our immunities clause secure only to citizens, and then only to the limited extent that their relationship to the national government is affected.

"I am unable to rest decision here on the assertion . . . that respondents (the workers) must depend upon their limited privileges as citizens of the United States in order to sustain their cause, or upon so palpable an avoidance of the real issues in the case, which respondents have raised by their pleadings and sustained by their proof."

The Court's decisions had the effect of upholding—though modifying in minor respects—a district court injunction granted to the CIO to prevent Hague from interfering with the right of workers to hold meetings in public places in Jersey City.

Insurance Union Wins Board Poll

New York, June 10.—Another union victory in the life insurance field was chalked up for the United Office & Professional Workers, with the winning of a recent election in the two Pittsburgh offices of the Eureka-Maryland Assurance Corporation.

The poll, conducted by the State Labor Relations Board, covered both insurance agents and clerical employes. The vote was 44 to nothing in favor of Industrial Insurance Agents Union, Local 65 of the UOPWA.

An Interview With:

Vincent Lombardo Toledano, Head Of The Mexican Labor Movement

By M. Page

We pass a group of workmen in blue denim overalls going up the broad stairs of the building, gesturing and talking rapidly in a language unfamiliar to our Yankee ears. A few have miners' lamps on their caps, others wear the work-stained khaki outfit of the oil fields. We pass two girls laughing together, then a group of agricultural workers dressed in the simple white garb of the tropics.

All of these people have the proud bronze features of the Mexican Indian; all of them are speaking in the same unfamiliar tongue—yet running through their talk we catch one word, said over and over, that makes us smile with warm recognition: syndicate. That we know means union.

We are entering headquarters of the powerful Mexican Confederation of Labor (CTM). Upstairs we find committees and organizers at work in various conference rooms, union men and women from textile mills, packing houses and metal shops confering, arguing, agreeing; telephones ringing, secretaries going to and fro with messages.

FAMILIAR SETTING

This place gives us the familiar feeling of a busy union headquarters in Pittsburgh, Frisco or New York. It happens to be Mexico City, sunny capitol of the young republic to the south of us that can boast one of the most alert, progressive trade union movements on our two American continents.

It is the hour that tradition sets aside for the welcome siesta; even stores lock their doors and shopkeepers go home for a nap. But in union headquarters their is no siesta, and none for the man we have come to see: Vincent Lombardo Toledano, general secretary of the CTM.

Many have referred to Lombardo Toledano as the John L. Lewis of Mexico—just as they compare the spectacular growth and succession of victories of Mexico's CTM with our CIO.

MUCH LIKE LEWIS

Indeed there is some basis for this comparison, for each of these modern aggressive union movements grew out of similar needs of working men and women in Mexico as in the U. S. A. for a vigorous unionism to safeguard their interests and better their life—needs that the oldline type of labor organizations were not able to meet. Both of these union movements and their leaders have come to the fore at a crucial period in the life of each nation, at a time when the forces of the people, of democracy and peace and progress, have been threatened as never before by the forces of open-shoppers and reaction.

TOLEDANO

The CTM, like the CIO, is recognized in the life of the country as a tremendous civic force. Toledano, like Lewis, is a public figure of first rank. What he has to say on a question carries weight second only to that of the Mexican President himself.

Toledano, we find, is a man of slight energetic frame and a swarthy quiet countenance dominated by the brew and dark brooding eyes. His glance is penetrative, his phrases come in low measured tones.

"The labor movements of your country and mine have much in common," he says. "Just as you in the States, we must get better working conditions for our workers we must raise the general standard of living." He speaks with firm emphasis. "We must make of Mexico a country of free men, a country bettering itself every day." This is Lombardo Toledano's dream. For this he has labored over 25 years, many times risked his life, organized and led the powerful CTM.

Today he looks tired, for he has been working this last week far into the night helping settle a crisis in the packing house industry, also guiding the needle trades' campaign to get rid of sweatshops. Yet somehow, in the succession of union drives he manages to find time for his family and to continue his studies and writing. (A university professor before he became a labor leader, Lombardo Toledano is author of many articles and books on labor and scientific topics.)

EVIDENCE OF PROGRESS

We have seen, in our weeks of travel throughout various parts of Mexico, the gains which the CTM, with its close to a million members, have brought the Mexican people. Shoes in villages where there had been none before; new houses in place of mud huts; bolts of dress goods for sale in village markets and manufactured household gadgets, for people now have more money to spend; wage increases and sanitary improvements in cotton areas in Laguna and hemp regions of Yucatan, in the oil fields, paper and textile mills and mines.

"We want the closest fraternal ties with the unions of the States and Europe," Lombardo continues. "Our aim is to live on more and more intimate fraternal relations with peoples of other countries, particularly those closest to us. For we have not only a common aim — democracy and justice for all, but a common enemy—fascism."

The Mexican labor leader's travels in the States and abroad convinced him even more he says of labor's destiny, throughout the world, as well as the common future of all democracies. He has a deep admiration for John L. Lewis and the CIO. It was on the invitation of the CTM that Mr. Lewis made his trip to Mexico last fall to address the newly formed Latin-American Confederation of Labor, of which Lombardo Toledano was elected general chairman.

FIGHTING FOR DEMOCRACY

"The world today is divided into two fundamental camps," Lombardo continued, "democracy and fascism We are fighting for democracy. All our efforts are directed toward further democracy in Mexico. We cannot allow anti-democratic forces either within or without Mexico to halt our country's advance.

"Our enemies call the CTM a public menace." He leans forward to emphasize his point. "We are a menace to no-one but the country's traitors."

It is not hard to understand why the open shop reactionary forces in Mexico fear and hate Lombardo Toledano above all men, why his life has been openly threatened many times of late. Nor is it hard to understand why he is universally trusted in labor's ranks.

For Mexican labor feels as he does, they share his aim: "We must make Mexico a country of free men, a country bettering itself every day."

Labor and the Law

By Lee Pressman

CIO General Counsel

Significance of the Hague Case

For organized labor the significance of the U. S. Supreme Court's decision in the Hague case lies in the fact that it gives the federal courts the power to protect the constitutional rights of workers and organizers against interference by state and local officials.

In order to understand precisely what the decision means, one must keep in mind the terms of the injunction against Mayor Hague which won the high court's approval; for while the five justices who supported the injunction gave different reasons for doing so, they all agreed on its provisions.

RESTRAINS LOCAL OFFICIALS

Under the terms of this injunction, local officials will no longer be able to prohibit the holding of lawful meetings. They will no longer be able to interfere with the peaceful distribution of leaflets. They will no longer be able to seize union organizers and run them out of town. They will no longer be able to keep up a general campaign of harassment and intimidation, such as shadowing organizers and breaking up small groups meeting together. They will no longer be able to hold people in jail without charges, and upon making arrests, and they will have to specify reasonable charges and immediately bring the person arrested before a judge to admit him to bail, or to bring the case to trial.

The next important thing which the Supreme Court's decision has done is to uphold the validity of the civil rights statutes. These statutes were passed in 1870 when Congress realized the necessity of protecting the civil liberties and constitutional rights of the American people.

GUARANTEE CIVIL LIBERTIES

The civil rights statutes guarantee complete protection to the exercise of all constitutional rights of freedom of speech, freedom of press and freedom of assembly—and also the rights established by United States laws, such as the National Labor Relations Act.

The important thing about the statutes is that they establish several remedies whereby any violation can be stopped, as follows:

1. By providing for the right to bring an injunction in the federal courts against local officials who are interfering with the rights of workers and organizers;

PERMIT DAMAGE SUITS

2. By authorizing an action for damages in the federal courts against these officials;
3. By authorizing an action for damages against any official who negligently permits violations of constitutional rights to be committed;
4. By providing for criminal actions against any violators of civil rights;
5. By authorizing a civil action against any federal official who refuses to prosecute violations of civil rights;
6. By authorizing the United States local district attorney, marshal, deputy marshal, and commissioners to arrest all persons who may be charged with violations of the civil rights statutes and hold them for bail, and then bring them to trial.

CAN ASK FEDERAL ACTION

Thus, if any union organizer or member is deprived of his constitutional rights, he may immediately begin an action in the federal courts for an injunction, or for damages, or for both. At the same time he can demand that the federal authorities immediately take action to arrest and bring to trial the local officials who are responsible for these violations of his rights.

The legal department of the CIO stands ready to give all the advice and assistance it can in the important cases where such violations are shown to exist.

Full use should be made of the civil rights statutes to open up those sections of this country where corrupt and lawless local officials still prevent organization by denying fundamental civil liberties.

This is a new decision by the Supreme Court and it will probably take some time before the federal courts and the federal authorities all the way down the line become accustomed to the idea that the federal courts must be just as zealous to protect human rights as they are to protect property rights.

Your WPA Job

By Ralph Hetzel

CIO UNEMPLOYMENT DIRECTOR

It's strange but it's true. The worse the reports on the WPA that come from the House Sub-Committee on Appropriations, the stronger grows the support back of the Murray-Casey Bill.

New Dealers and progressives in Congress are rapidly realizing that the Committee will bring out such a bad bill that the only way left to save the WPA will be by supporting the Casey measure in the House of Representatives.

The Sub-Committee of the House Appropriations Committee—which is dominated by Congressman Woodrum of Virginia—is reported to be busily occupied in preparing a bill the real purpose of which is to smash the WPA.

MAY TRY MANEUVERS

Since the House Appropriations Commitee has made it a habit to be considerate of the delicate sensibilities of reactionary Congressmen, it will probably try to introduce its vicious bill under such parliamentary maneuvering that no record vote will be necessary. This practice has made it easy for them to slash relief appropriations in the past. They are now more eager than ever to spare their fellow-legislators the painful necessity of deciding whether to go on record as favoring the drastic curtailment of the entire program.

It is becoming perfectly clear what the attempted strategy will be to force a vicious attack on the WPA down the throats of the American people. The House Appropriations Committee will so delay the bringing of the measure to the floor of the House that, when it reaches the floor, they will try to shut off all debate on the excuse that, unless action is taken immediately, the WPA will have no money at all. They will seek to force a vote on the floor, just as they did on the $875,000,000 deficiency appropriation, under rules which will prohibit a record vote.

IF STRATEGY SUCCEEDS — — —

If this strategy succeeds in the House, the Senate will then be faced with consideration of a bill which will in substance break down the WPA principle. Every reactionary voice in the Senate will then be raised against improving the bill or support of the Murray-Casey Bill, "because," they will say, "the Senate must approve the House bill. If the Senate does not do so," they will say, "and changes the bill for the better, it will have to go back to the House for approval and that will cause a long fight which will delay the WPA appropriation so much that the WPA will be without any money at all on July 1st."

The strategy of the reactionaries is so clear on this bill that it is possible to predict every step.

"INVESTIGATION" OF WPA

Another thing the House Sub-Committee will do is to hold hearings all through the consideration of the Bill on the "investigation" of the WPA. They will do everything possible to smear the WPA with fantastic charges of all sorts. Before there is any opportunity to answer these charges, it will be too late as far as the consideration of the WPA appropriation is concerned.

But the very thoroughness and intensity of the reactionary drive to destroy the WPA is serving to rally around the Murray-Casey Bill the progressive forces in Congress and throughout our country.

Senator Murray has already announced that he has been assured the support of over half the New Deal Senators.

Reports are coming into the national office from CIO unions all over the country that they have been receiving pledges of support of the Murray-Casey Bill from their Congressmen.

CIO Nurses Greet Mooney

Members of the nurses' local of the State, County & Municipal Workers of America greet Tom Mooney as he steps to the speakers' platform in New York's Madison Square Garden. Heard by 20,000 in New York, Mooney has addressed other meeting in Washington, Philadelphia and Detroit.

Mooney Cheered by Growth Of U. S. Labor Unions

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The most hopeful and gratifying thing Tom Mooney sees after 23 years in prison is the growth in the American labor movement, he told a cheering audience of 2,200 CIO and AFL unionists and progressives in a mass meeting here.

"When I went to an unjust imprisonment back in the summer of 1916, the American labor movement was only a little more than 2,000,000 strong," he said. "Trade unionism was just a small fragment among the many millions of people engaged in the industry of our country.

"Now, when I come out to freedom, the American labor movement has grown to a gigantic and powerful force in the affairs of our country. It has nearly 8,000,000 members, and not only has it grown to great size, but we now see it spreading over the country and overflowing the boundaries of the past, entering into all of the industries and bringing true Americanism, independence and self-respect to the workers of this country."

Warning that reaction threatened the American people with slavery, Mooney described the labor movement as "the most powerful and vigilant force that stands between a free people and slavery."

"It is our responsibility to inspire and stimulate the entire nation to unite in defense of our constitutional rights and civil liberties," he said.

Mooney was introduced by Senator Murray of Montana and preceded Sen. Downey of California, who spoke briefly. Congressman Marcantonio, American Labor Party Representative from New York, brought down the house when he remarked "Its a long trail from San Quentin to the Mayflower"—Washington's swankiest hotel.

Job Congress Meets; Hears Mrs. FDR

Washington, June 10. — Far greater than any financial debt is the cost to the nation of underfed, under-privileged workers and their children, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt told the National Right to Work Congress here in the fifth day of its week-long session.

"That is a debt you will pay for alright, in tuberculosis hospitals, in prisons and insane asylums," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "There is an awful lot we are paying for today that none of us really think about, and I think we don't think about it because many of us don't know our country.

ALL OUR DEBTS

"I think we want to take stock of all our debts. I think we have reached a point where we have to take stock of what civilization has brought us."

The Congress, organized by the Workers Alliance of America, has brought close to 2,000 delegates from unemployed workers' organizations all over the country to Washington to discuss their problems and bring them to the attention of Senators and Representatives—particularly those who speak and vote against WPA.

Principal demands of the Right to Work Congress are for passage of the CIO-backed Murray-Casey Bill for 3,000,000 WPA jobs, and for a living standard of $2,000 per year for every American family.

The Congress has met in the Labor Dept. Auditorium, and has been addressed by leading Congressional liberals as well as New Deal officials.

Rubber Union Bares Goodyear Attempt To Slash Wages

By ROBERT CRUDEN

AKRON, June 10.—Plans of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., for reducing wages and lengthening hours were revealed as the National Labor Relations Board resumed hearings on a board complaint charging the company with four major violations of the Wagner Act.

Stanley Denlinger, general counsel for the United Rubber Workers and a member of the union negotiating committee which attempted to reach an agreement with the company, testified under oath that Fred W. Climer, personnel director of the company, told the union committee:

"Wages in our Akron plants must be reduced.

"It's like taking candy from a kid to ask them (workers) to take a cut. You must do it, and not ask them.

"We have made all our money in foreign plants and it's been eaten up by losses in the United States."

SOUGHT LONGER HOURS

Denlinger testified that Climer had demanded that the union take a 10 per cent wage reduction and the eight-hour day, 40-hour week in place of the prevailing 6-hour day, 36-hour week.

Counsel for the company failed to deny or cross-examine Denlinger on the wage-cut proposal. They said that by the eight-hour day proposal the company meant a "flexible" work week.

This was flatly denied by Denlinger, who declared that the company repeatedly rejected union offers a flexible work-week in emergencies.

FOUGHT CONTRACT

The union counsel also substantiated previous testimony by Goodyear Local Pres. John D. House that on two different occasions, company officials told union negotiators the company had decided not to sign a contract with the union although the company had ostensibly held meetings with the union on such a contract.

These revelations came as the board developed its charge against the company that it did not bargain in good faith with the union.

The board's other charges are interference with and coercion of workers in their legal bargaining rights, domination of the Akron Goodyear Employes Assn., and discrimination against union members.

3,000 Doll Makers Win Pay Raise

NEW YORK, June 10.—Renewal of a collective agreement covering about 3,000 doll workers in four states was announced this week by the International Union, Playthings & Novelty Workers, CIO.

Signed by the Associated Doll Manufacturers of New York, Inc., representing 80 per cent of the total doll production, the contract applies to workers in factories in New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts.

A. H. Esposito, general president of the union, pointed out that the renewed agreement provides that wages and piece-work rates in the second six months of the year are to be increased five per cent.

This unique provision was inserted to encourage manufacturers to spread manufacturing over a 12-month period instead of crowding production into the last five or six months of the year. In his report to the membership, Esposito said:

"In my estimation the five per cent wage increase for the second half of the year will be of great importance in curbing the major evil of the industry; that is, its highly seasonal character."

New York CIO Urges Special Legislative Session for Labor Bills

NEW YORK, June 10.—Demands for a special session of the state legislature voiced today by Pres. Allan S. Haywood of the New York CIO Industrial Union Council were coupled with a warning that cuts in the state budget "have started to raise havoc with vital social services."

The New York CIO group, which has upwards of 700,000 members, urged Gov. Lehman to call the special session to restore cuts in the finances of the departments of education, health, labor and other spots "where the will and welfare of the people were made subservient to the demands of the utility companies and real estate interests."

SCHOOLS CURTAILED

Action of the Republican-controlled legislature resulted in an order calling for dismissal of 1,000 New York City school teachers and crippling retrenchment of the entire school program.

"The cuts in the health department very definitely will bring curtailment of the public campaigns against the spread of tubercular and other controllable diseases and a bogging down of necessary aid to hospitals," Haywood said.

"The reduction in the appropriation for the state labor department will bring collapse of the Workmen's Compensation Bureau and would make ineffective any efforts to enforce the recently-established state minimum wage and hour laws for women and children in industry."

Haywood thanked Gov. Lehman for vetoing the Bewley bill, which would have seriously restricted the activities of the AFL teamsters union.

Ease Charge Against 20 Oil Strikers

Tulsa, Okla., June 10.—Having failed to convict 106 striking workers of the Mid-Continent Oil Company indicted by a Tulsa county grand jury of "unlawful assembly", the county prosecutor recently dropped a charge of conspiracy against 20 of the strikers and substituted a "riot" charge, local officials of the International Oil Workers Union here said this week.

"It is believed the action of the county prosecutor was prompted by the Mid-Continent Oil officials, who apparently believe conviction of the strikers on riot would be upheld in case of appeal", a statement issued by the Strike Committee said.

CITE AFL CASE

A recent decision of the Oklahoma Supreme Court upholding the conviction of two AFL leaders convicted on an alleged "riot" charge nearly two years ago, was considered to have given the prosecutor new hope of getting a conviction against the strikers of the CIO oil workers union.

The CIO oil workers strike against the refiners of D-X gasoline which has been going on for several months, "has been characterized by a spirit of solidarity and harmony", the union Strike Committee declared.

"Unable to break the strike by other methods, the corporation has changed its strategy, and is now trying to break the union financially."

Rescue Miner

Robert Galligan is rescued from a Shenandoah, Pa., mine after being imprisoned for 65 hours under tons of rock and dirt by a landslide over the pit. United Mine Workers are now supporting the Neely-Keller bill, providing for efficient U. S. inspection of mines in an effort to lower the high accident rate.

Oliver Plow Contract To Steady Work Loads

CHARLES CITY, Iowa, June 20.—A plan to relieve the evil of seasonal work is one of the outstanding points included in a contract signed this week between the Oliver Plow Company plant here and Local 115, United Farm Equipment Workers, CIO.

The new agreement which covers around 1,000 workers, brings the number of contracts now in effect in Oliver plants to three.

Company policy in the past has been to hire men from miles around during the peak season and shut down almost completely for at least three months a year.

TO BUILD WAREHOUSE

Under the new agreement, the building of a $250,000 storage warehouse is announced. This will enable the company to store machinery and avoid the big seasonal fluctuations which formerly have meant insecurity and low annual incomes for Oliver workers.

Other outstanding terms in the new contract provide for continuous seniority, regardless of layoffs; permission to collect union dues on company property; plant-wide seniority; and the right to post notices of special and division meetings on the plant bulletin board.

Newsmen Picket

New York members of the American Newspaper Guild march outside the store of Lane Bryant, one of a chain which continues to advertise in the struck Hearst papers in Chicago. Leading the procession are Executive Vice-Pres. Jonathan Eddy of the Guild and CIO Director John Brophy.

Boatmen Ask Security Act Extension

Seattle, Wash., June 10.—The Inland Boatmen's Union of the Pacific went on record in favor of extension of the Social Security Act to include seamen and workers on inland water craft at the annual meeting of the union's executive council just concluded here.

Preservation of the National Labor Relations Act in its present form and continuation of the WPA through a long-time program of government enterprise was also advocated by the Council.

ON RAILROADS

C. W. Deal, president of the Pacific Inland Boatmen, in advocating support for the Labor Act said that similar legislation had been in effect for several years in the railroad industry and was functioning with great effectiveness.

"There is no reason why employers nationally should not accept the same principles that have been so successful in the railroad industry," he said.

CIO BOARD GIVES SIGNAL FOR BIG FORWARD DRIVE

CIO Heads Together

Pres. John L. Lewis (right) seems to be telling a good story to Sec. James Carey and Vice-Presidents Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman just before Executive Board meeting opened in Washington. The CIO leaders, looking back over accomplishments of the past half-year, are in jovial humor.

Demands Security For Nation's Aged And Jobless

(See Stories on Inside Pages)

WASHINGTON, June 17 — Heartened by recent successes, the Executive Board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, meeting in Washington, gave the signal for advance on both organizational and legislative fronts.

High-spots of the three-day sessions were:

(1) Decision to expand organizing activities in a number of industries, following reports of heightened morale as a result of the United Mine Workers victory and other CIO union gains.

(2) Denunciation by Pres. John L. Lewis of the failure of Congress to advance any program to cope with unemployment, and decision to throw the full weight of CIO behind the Murray-Casey bill for 3,000,000 WPA jobs.

BIGGER PENSIONS FOR AGED

(3) Launching of national campaign, in cooperation with old age and progressive groups, for pensions of $60 a month at 60 years of age, and $90 for married couples.

(4) Decision to concentrate on building the CIO, organizing the unorganized and aggressive defense of CIO union rights, following report on breakdown of negotiations with the AFL.

(5) Decision to take the offensive against anti-CIO discriminations in respect to International Labor Office representation and on PWA jobs, and to initiate litigation, if necessary, against AFL unions boycotting CIO products or violating the Wagner act by collusive contracts directed against CIO organizing activities.

It was decided to hold the next CIO convention, beginning October 10, 1939, in San Francisco.

Auto Union Wins At Allis-Chalmers

West Allis, Wis., June 17.—Local 248 of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, won a major victory here as the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. won a week-old strike, gaining improved working conditions, provisions for a national company contract and guarantees that the union would be protected as sole bargaining agency.

Harold Christoffel, Local 248 president, gave credit to the unity of the 6,000 members who formed a solid strike unit. Ratification of the agreement was expected at a meeting today.

CIO Union Asks Verdict For Boycott

New York, June 17—Seeking an injunction and damages of $250,000, the CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers filed suit here against the AFL Electrical Brotherhood and the National Electrical Products Corporation.

The suit grew out of a boycott of CIO-made products by the AFL union, which refused to install or handle products from factories under contract with the CIO-affiliate. Defendants cited by the suit include two Brotherhood locals, seven officers, 13 contracts, and the National Electrical Products Corp.

American Can Signs Another Contract

San Francisco, June 17 — The American Can Company, largest can manufacturing firm in the country, has signed an agreement with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee granting sole bargaining rights for workers employed in its San Jose plant.

The contract which is effective until June 1, 1940, provides that basic rates of pay shall not be changed during the term of the agreement. A 40-hour week, time and a half for overtime, seniority rights, and other union conditions are specified.

American Can has 63 plants, 56 of them located in the United States, five in Canada and two in the Hawaiian Islands. In California the company has factories in Los Angeles, Monterey, Oakland, Sacramento, and San Francisco, in addition to the one in San Jose. CIO contracts are in effect in a number of these plants.

Thousands Cheer as CIO Wins Aluminum Poll

EDGEWATER, N. J., June 17.—Thousands of trade unionists here celebrated a sweeping victory won this week by the Aluminum Workers of America, CIO, in an election among the production employes at the Edgewater plant of the Aluminum Company of America.

Local 16 of the AWA defeated an independent union in the plant by a vote of 780 to 587 in a poll conducted by the National Labor Relations Board. Only 51 voted for no representation. The tremendous interest of the workers in the election was shown by the almost 100 per cent turnout, 1,418 out of a total of 1,499 eligible, casting ballots.

4,000 IN PARADE

When the results of the tally became known as the night shift was at work, the factory whistle blew excitedly, and a tumultuous outburst of cheers and honking of automobile horns broke forth outside.

A long line of autos quickly fell into parade formation, and 4,000 or more members of both CIO and AFL unions in the vicinity took part in celebrating the victory of the CIO Aluminum Workers.

Midwest Firm Signs Closed Shop Pact

Mt. Carmel, Ind., June 17—The Meissner Coil Company, one of the largest plants of its kind in the Midwest, has signed a closed shop contract with Local 1110, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, CIO.

The agreement which renews with improvements a pact signed last year grants check-off of dues, a general 40-hour week, time and one half for overtime with double time for Sundays and holidays and seniority rights. Discrimination against women employes is provided for in a clause calling for equal pay for similar work.

Union Leaders Tell of Gains, Set New Goals

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Reports on organizational progress and future plans occupied the attention of the CIO Executive Board members on the third and final day of their session here this week.

The note throughout the reports was one of pride in reporting achievements and confidence in the progress the CIO will make in organizing new fields in the immediate future.

R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers, reported a satisfactory settlement of the Briggs strike and a consolidation of union forces that will lead the organization to new achievements. Briefly discussing the attempts of Homer Martin to disrupt the union, Thomas pointed out that Martin's anti-CIO conspiracy has completely failed, and that the automobile workers are ready now to extend their union to cover the entire industry.

At the close of Thomas' report, the delegates rose in a standing vote to commend Thomas, the other UAW officers and members for their successful handling of a difficult situation and their defeat of Martin's rump outfit.

WEST COAST CONGRESS

Harry Bridges, CIO west coast director and president of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, reported on the successful work of his organization in consolidating progressive forces behind the election of a New Deal governor and the defeat of a vicious anti-labor law in California.

Reid Robinson, president of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, one of the founding unions of the CIO, outlined achievements in the nonferrous metal industries and presented a plan for organizing brass, copper and zinc plants into a powerful industrial union group.

Reporting for the Pacific Northwest, Harold Pritchett, leader of the Intl. Woodworkers of America, revealed that Big Bill Hutcheson's AFL Carpenters Brotherhood had spent $350,000 to fight the CIO Union—"and succeeded only in helping to build our union."

DIE CASTERS, PACKERS

George Peacock and Edward Cheyfitz of the Natl. Assn. of Die Casting Workers, told of possibilities of completing organization of their important branch of the machine industry.

Don Harris, director of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, reported on progress in his industry and prospects of a national contract with the "Big Four" packers.

NEW FIELDS

Powers Hapgood, speaking for the United Shoe Workers, urged the establishment of a CIO union label department, both by the national CIO and by the affiliated unions. This point, together with suggested plans for CIO expansion in aircraft, metal fabricating, die casting, and many other fields' was referred to the executive officers for further action.

President Lewis, summing up the CIO record and urging all CIO members to go ahead to complete the job of organizing the unorganized, said:

"The present basis the CIO has created allows it to expand. Great progress can be made and will be made in the future, if the CIO carries out the promise it has already given in such large measure."

Smethurst Asks Drives For Gains

Washington, June 17.—Organizational achievements and possibilities in such industries as aviation, paper making, distilling and shipbuildng were stressed by Walter Smethurst, executive assistant to Pres. Lewis, in his report to the CIO Executive Board meeting here.

"Since the signing of the United Mine Workers contract, there is renewed hope in the hearts of the workers," Smethurst said. "If the CIO can find ways and means of conducting a reasonable organizational drive, I am confident that we can greatly expand our movement.

ONE DIRECTION

"The CIO is the only force at work in this country that has done anything of a constructive nature to alleviate the distressful conditions that exist.

"Congress will adjourn without making a single constructive contribution to the welfare of the workers. We must not fail them! There is only one direction open to the CIO—and that is forward."

Brophy Hails Councils As Aid to CIO

Washington, June 17.—The need for building Industrial Union Councils both as an organizational and a political factor wherever the CIO is organized was stressed in the report of Director Brophy to the CIO Executive Board meeting here.

Organizationally, Councils are of great value in maintaining contact between CIO affiliates in the communities, he pointed out, and of great help to the national CIO rendering necessary services both to locals of national affiliates and to Local Industrial Unions.

"Politically, such Councils have a great and increasing role to play in the cities and states and counties," he said.

"Repressive laws passed in Pennsylvania, New York, Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Oregon are a clear example of the need for organized labor action to defeat such administrations in the future and to prevent them from destroying the gains labor has made in the past few years. Such action can best be organized by Councils, which provide a rallying point for labor and progressive forces in the area."

203 COUNCILS

As of June 1, Brophy reported that 203 such Councils had been set up, of which 27 were state bodies. "This is merely a beginning," he said. "We must continue to build Councils in every area where the CIO is organized."

Brophy also dealt with services of the CIO office to national and international affiliates, citing the recent amalgamation of the Fur and Leather Workers and the Fishermen as examples. He reported the existence of 601 Local Industrial Unions, and urged that all jurisdictional problems arising be referred to the national office for possible settlement.

Tots Picket GOP

"We want to go to kindergarten," say these New York kids—but they won't be able to if an 'economy law' passed by the state's Republican-controlled legislature stays on the books. Other slogans used by pickets as they marched around the GOP state committee's office were: "A democratic nation needs education" and "Night must not fall on the evening schools."

Rap Chiseller

Pickets from the Pecan Workers Union, CIO, march outside the plant of the Sunshine Pecan Shelling Co. in San Antonio, Tex., where the union charges the federal wage-hour law is being flouted.

Hearst Stooges Use Anti-Semitism To Fight Guild

Chicago, June 17.—William Randolph Hearst's struck Chicago papers turned to anti-Semitism today in the hope that it would prove a more satisfactory strikebreaking method than a dozen other devices used in the past six months.

Immediate reaction to a "poem" which appeared in a tabloid issued by the Hearst company unions on the Evening American and Herald-Examiner was a tremendous wave of protest from both Jewish and Gentile organizations.

That the use of Hitler tactics may prove a serious blow to the Hearst empire was indicated when various Jewish societies and organizations meeting over the weekend laid plans to bring to the attention of the nation "this newest evidence of the crude and un-American tactics employed by the Hearst management in fighting the American Newspaper Guild."

Attacked in the poem were Pres. Harry Wohl of the Chicago Guild and four other Jewish strikers. The doggerel bore the signature "F. T.", frequently used by Rev. Irwin St. John Tucker (who likes to be known as (Friar Tuck). Tucker is an Episcopalian minister who augments his ecclesiastical income by strikebreaking work on the Herald-Examiner copy desk.

Hosiery Mill Signs With Union

Atlanta, Ga., June 17.—A five-year contract between the American Federation of Hosiery Workers and the Real Silk Hosiery Mills of Dalton, Ga., was announced here this week by union officials.

Emil Rieve, president of the Textile Workers Union of America, to which the AFH is affiliated, initiated the negotiations. Terms of the agreement include a 40-hour week, check-off of dues and a preferential shop.

A one-year contract with Dallas Mills the Dallas Manufacturing Company, operators of a cotton mill in Huntsville, Alabama, was also announced here by the TWUA. The new agreement contains substantially the same points covered in the previous contract in effect for the past six months, with the addition of a few improvements asked by the union.

Macy's Signs Closed Shop Contract

New York City, June 17.—After four weeks of negotiations, the R. H. Macy Co. has signed a closed shop contract covering approximately 800 of its non-selling employes with the Department Store Employes Organizing Committee, CIO.

In addition to the closed shop, the contract provides for wage increases of from 5 to 15 per cent, overtime at time and one-half, seniority, mediation of discharge, the check-off, and a continuation of the present vacation plan by which employes get from one to three weeks' annual vacation according to years of service.

The union was represented by Samuel Wolchok of the DSEOC, John F. O'Donnell, attorney for the Committee; T. Darcy, General Organizer for the Committee.

Ask 'Wagner Act' Passage In Colorado

Pueblo, Colo., June 17. — Demands for a "baby" Wagner Act for Colorado were voiced at the second annual convention of the state's CIO Industrial Union Council, just concluded here.

Support was voted for an immediate organization campaign among rubber and iron workers in Denver, the state capital; for the drive of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee; for the Newspaper Guild strike against the Chicago Hearst papers.

Pres. Frank Hefferly of the council was re-elected for another term, as was 1st Vice-Pres. O. F. Nigro. A. S. Embree, official of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers was elected a vice-president, while Frank Price of Colorado Springs, another metal union member, was named council secretary.

Board Maps Organizing Campaign, Support For Jobless And Aged

AFL's Tory Leaders Cause Unity Plans To Fail, Board Hears

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The failure of the recent peace negotiations, due to the unwillingness of the AFL leadership to agree to any plan for genuine unity, was reported to the CIO Executive Board by the CIO peace committee, consisting of John L. Lewis, Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman. The committee's report was unanimously accepted by the Board.

Reporting to the press on the discussion and action on this subject, President Lewis declared:

"There was complete unanimity of expression by the members of the CIO executive board that the primary purposes of the CIO were in attaining its objectives as first declared, namely to organize the unorganized and to build a great progressive labor movement.

ORGANIZING COMES FIRST

"The Board felt that peace as such was secondary to the organization of the unorganized, the improvement of working conditions and the forming of articulate groups of workers in every industry which will make possible their expression on matters of industrial and public interest.

"The Board also felt that the AFL is still in the control of a group of leaders who are reactionary on public questions and who tolerate many evil conditions in the AFL.

AFL - EMPLOYER LIASON

"These conditions are exemplified in the liason and the entente cordiale between AFL leaders and industrial and financial interest opposed to labor in order to fight the CIO, and attempt to emasculate it and to bring about a crystallization of anti-New Deal sentiment in the country."

Lewis related some incidents to explain why the AFL representatives did not want peace with the CIO. He told of the monopoly of advertising in the American Federationist, official organ of the AFL, held by the late John Morrison. Morrison recently died, leaving an estate of more than half a million dollars. He made bequests to various members of the AFL executive council, including President William Green, Secretary Frank Morrison, and Vice President Thomas Rickert.

VESTED INTEREST

Rickert, a member of the AFL peace committee, received a bequest of $25,000, plus a one-fifth interest in the profits of the Morrison Agency, amounting to about $20,000 a year. Matthew Woll, another member of the AFL committee, receives his main income from an insurance business which is greatly helped by the fact that he is a vice president of the AFL, Lewis said.

"I am citing this as incidental to the main problem," he said, "but it was reported to the CIO Board so its members would see how impossible it was to negotiate peace with such men as Thomas Rickert and Matthew Woll."

Work For All Is Biggest Task - - Lewis

Washington, June 17.—Unemployment is America's No. 1 problem today, and any political party or candidate looking for support from the American people must offer a solution, John L. Lewis, CIO president, told the CIO Executive Board in his closing speech at the Board meeting here.

"Any party or candidate who seeks the support of the people will have to be qualified to offer a program that will give the people work," Lewis said.

"Congress has been an intellectual vacuum on this problem and I know of no budding statesman who has made any suggestion for its solution. It is a problem that runs to the right to live. Assuredly we cannot agree that a large segment of our population shall be permanently dispossessed of the right to a job."

SOLVENCY DESTROYED

"Meanwhile technological improvement runs on apace and becomes progressively more serious. The United States has the greatest producing machine in the world, but it is a machine that will not operate unless it finds a market.

"The national buying power for the products of that machine goes down as unemployment rises. The solvency of the people is destroyed, and the solvency of government becomes a myth—if only because the population cannot pay taxes.

"This problem must be solved. Jobs for workers at a wage to hold up buying power is America's No. 1 public question. As the CIO expands and becomes a greater and greater factor in national affairs, it will maintain the right of the American people to a job and the right of the American people to live. This is basically the most important problem of the United States today."

Lewis Flays Congress For Failure to Cope With Basic Problems

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Expansion of organizing activities and legislative drives for security for the unemployed and aged, were authorized by the semi-annual meeting of the Executive Board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, held in Washington, June 13-15.

The Board members, representing every CIO national and international union, hailed with enthusiasm the various reports on organization and legislative progress, and adopted a program for CIO advance on a number of fronts.

Noting the failure of the recent peace negotiations with the American Federation of Labor, the Board resolved to redouble its efforts to build the strength of the CIO. Instead of remaining on the defensive against attacks on CIO unions, it served warning that the CIO was fully capable of striking back at its attackers.

DISCUSSES UNEMPLOYMENT

President John L. Lewis described unemployment as "the overshadowing and basically the most important problem of the United States today."

"Jobs for workers at a wage to hold up buying power is America's Number 1 public question," he said.

Lewis attacked the record of the present Congress for its failure to do anything to meet this problem. Instead, he said, "the responsible agencies of Congress have busied themselves, in open cynicism, with tearing the vitals out of the meager provisions already existing to help the unemployed eke out a living."

BACK CASEY-MURRAY BILL

As a means of coping with unemployment, the Board gave its full approval and support to the Murray and Casey bills for a WPA appropriation of $2,250,000,000 and a minimum of 3,000,000 WPA jobs for 1940. It described these bills as "the only practical alternative to the vicious proposals of the House Appropriations Committee which would destroy the WPA."

$60 PENSIONS

In regard to security for the aged, the Board described the present federal and state schemes as "utterly inadequate." It resolved that the CIO "undertake a national campaign in cooperation with old age and progressive groups to achieve a program of real security for our aged people upon the basis of a pension of $60 per month at 60 years of age for individuals and $90 per month for

Board Votes $60 Pension Campaign

Washington, June 17.—The CIO was on record today for $60 a month pensions for all persons over 60 years of age.

Accepting a recommendation from the Social Security Committee, the CIO Executive Board joined forces with those progressive groups which are seeking more adequate protection for the nation's elderly population.

The resolution pledged the CIO "to undertake a national campaign in cooperation with old age and progressive groups to achieve a program of real security for our aged people" on the basis of the $60-60 plan.

APPEALS BEFORE CONGRESS

Less than 48 hours after the Board had taken its action, Pres. Sherman Dalrymple of the United Rubber Workers, head of the Committee, appeared before the House of Representatives Ways and Means Committee with a demand for incorporation of the CIO recommendations into the Social Security laws.

The CIO Board acted favorably on the entire committee report, which called for $90-a-month allowances for couples over 60 years, combining of present federal and state funds for payment of pensions, use of payroll taxes as a means of securing revenue rather than as a measure for determining the size of benefits, and the securing of further social security funds out of general revenue, especially from estate and gift

Demand CIO Member On Geneva Delegation

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Criticism of the U. S. Dept. of Labor for its failure to name a CIO representative to the American delegation to the International Labor Office at Geneva came from the CIO Executive Board meeting here.

A resolution said that the Board "strongly condemns this discriminatory action on the part of the Labor Department and calls upon that Department hereafter to recognize the injustice that has been done to the CIO and to provide for full CIO representation to the International Labor Office and to all conferences of any character having to do with the welfare of labor."

CIO requests for representation —demanded at the Pittsburgh convention last year—were "ignored," the Board charged, and only AFL officials were named.

Speaking to reporters later, Pres. John L. Lewis charged that the AFL top leadership had gone so far as to threaten to defeat the ILO appropriation pending in Congress unless it was granted a monopoly on the American delegation.

In the discussion, Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers called attention to the fact that the last meeting of the executive committee of the Miners Intl. Federation in Paris had been concerned by the collaboration of the Intl. Federation of Trade Unions and the AFL "in its tactics to defeat the CIO."

Victory on Dotted Line

Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers (left) and Pres. W. P. Brown of the Briggs Manufacturing Co. in Detroit put their signatures to a contract which spelled victory for the CIO auto union. A strike of 17,000 workers, which affected 55,000 others, brought the UAW sole bargaining rights at the body plant.

Harlan Cracks

Harlan, Ky., June 17 — Signs of weakness in the anti-union front of the Harlan Coal Operators' Assn. were seen today in an announcement that member corporations were privileged to sign individual contracts with the United Mine Workers of America.

Locked out since April 1, the 10,000 miners affected have been seeking the union shop which has become standard in almost every section of the anthracite and bituminous coal fields. With each Harlan operator now permitted to sign a contract with the UMW, the number of idle will be sharply reduced, it is expected.

The Signal to Advance

There is great cause for encouragement in the reports made to the recent meeting of the executive board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and in the decisions of the assembled representatives of the millions of workers organized in the progressive labor movement.

The CIO board reviewed the accomplishments of a sound and growing movement, which has survived all the problems of depression and all the attacks of its enemies, and which is now in a position to advance to new gains for American labor and American democracy.

The board gave the signal for this advance, by authorizing extensive organizing campaigns in a number of industries whose workers do not yet enjoy the full benefits of unionism which the CIO has already brought to many other mass-production industries.

The CIO board also voted to take the lead in legislative campaigns for real security for the aged, for adequate provision for the unemployed, for civil liberties and for other pressing needs of the American people—besides intensifying its efforts in defense of the Wagner labor relations act and other existing social legislation.

An examination of the actions of the board will show that American labor has in the CIO such a champion as it never had before, and that this champion has just begun to fight.

Sixty Dollars at Sixty

No country can call itself civilized which does not provide adequate care for its old people who can no longer care for themselves.

The failure of the United States to provide proper pensions on which elderly Americans can live in decency and comfort, has led to pension movements which have aroused the enthusiastic support of millions of people of all ages.

The advocates of the various plans advanced correctly point out that generous pensions will not only benefit the old people concerned, but will put into circulation purchasing power which will benefit the whole country.

The CIO, at its recent board meeting, noted that the present government old age schemes are "utterly inadequate." It adopted a feasible pension program for security for our aged people upon the basis of a pension of $60 per month at 60 years of age for individuals and $90 per month for married couples of 60 years of age."

In launching a national campaign for this pension program, the CIO will seek the cooperation of existing old age and progressive groups.

It is natural that labor, representing millions who are in the most dire need of adequate pensions, should be the backbone of such a movement. If other old age and progressive groups will join with it in a common campaign, the day should soon come when rich America will at last provide real security for its aged people.

Taking the Lead for the Unemployed

The failure of the present Congress to meet the pressing problems of unemployment and economic depression, was noted by President John L. Lewis in his opening speech before the executive board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Instead of advancing constructive plans to bring back employment to the millions of unemployed, or increasing provisions for their care, he said, the reactionaries in Congress "have busied themselves, in open cynicism, with tearing the vitals out of the meager provisions already existing to help the unemployed eke out a living."

The record of the leaders of the American Federation of Labor is no better than that of Congress in this situation. In spite of all the benefits the AFL and its members have received from WPA, for instance, it has not joined in the campaign of the CIO against Congressional efforts to strangle the WPA program.

"The CIO alone has stood in defense of WPA," the CIO unemployment committee reported to the board. "The AFL, with hundreds of thousands of members benefitting extensively from the WPA, has stood idly aside or has engaged in legislative activities to break down the WPA."

The CIO, at its board meeting, sounded a clarion call for proper provision for the unemployed. It voted full approval and support for the Murray and Casey bills for a WPA appropriation of $2,250,000,000 and a minimum of 3,000,000 WPA jobs for 1940. These bills it described as "the only practical alternative to the vicious proposals of the House appropriations committee which would destroy the WPA."

Looking Ahead

Out of the Doldrums

LIKE a fresh breeze that drives a sail-boat forward was the recent CIO executive board meeting in Washington.

John L. Lewis, in his opening speech, referred to the rising spirits of the progressive forces after the "doldrums of the past winter."

Doldrums (for the information of landlubbers) is a sailor's term for tropical zones of calms in which sailing ships find it difficult to advance. It is a word usually used to describe depression of spirits.

Labor in the past winter has had to meet many onslaughts of reaction. It has resisted them valiantly. But such defensive fighting is a severe test of the morale of any movement.

Lately, however, the great victory of the United Mine Workers, the notable stand against destruction of the Wagner Act, the squelching of Hague, and other CIO successes, have shown that progressive labor has met this test and is now on the march forward.

The CIO executive board meeting registered this turn from the defensive to the offensive, and gave the signal to advance on all fronts.

Clearing the Air

The straight-from-the-shoulder discussion of relations with the AFL cleared the air of much befuddling propaganda which has tended to obscure the real issues and to dampen the spirits of progressive unionists.

The union representatives, coming from direct daily contact with the workers in industry, were unanimous in expressing their members' determination to safeguard the gains made through industrial organization; and not to sacrifice the progressive policies for which the CIO stands by submission to the reactionary leadership of the AFL.

They reaffirmed the primary purpose of the CIO to organize the unorganized and to improve the workers' economic conditions, and declared that the cause of eventual labor unity can best be served by building the strength of the CIO and adhering firmly to its constructive principles.

Anti-Union Practices

In line with this attitude, the board made plans for expanding organizing activities in a number of industries and resolved not to continue passive in the face of attacks on CIO unions.

In answer to lawsuits brought by the AFL against a number of CIO unions, for instance, the board authorized the initiation of suits against the AFL, where it boycotts CIO union products, and against AFL unions which scab on CIO unions "by entering into collusive contracts with employers where they have no members, solely for the purpose of defeating organizational activities of the CIO."

The board also demanded an end to discrimination against CIO members on PWA projects. It denounced the AFL graft whereby workers desiring to work on PWA jobs are forced to pay excessive fees for temporary membership—only to be dropped from membership at the end of the job, or to find themselves soon fired so that AFL grafters may enjoy a continuous income from a succession of new workers required to pay their exorbitant initiation fees.

Gravy from Ads

Another factor which accounts for some AFL leaders' unwillingness to agree to real labor unity, was also brought to the attention of the CIO board.

John Morrison, the man who had a monopoly on advertising in the American Federationist, official monthly organ of the AFL, recently died, leaving an estate more than half a million dollars. His will revealed that he had left bequests of $5,000 apiece to William Green, William Hutcheson, Frank Duffy and Frank Morrison, all AFL officials.

Thomas Rickert, a member of the AFL committee to negotiate with the CIO, was not only left a bequest of $25,000 but was also given a one-fifth interest in the Morrison agency handling AFL advertising, which should net him $20,000 a year.

Yielding to Threats

Another sample of AFL tactics which the CIO intends to defend itself against is the method whereby the Department of Labor was bulldozed into denying the CIO representation in the International Labor Organization.

President Lewis revealed to the board that the AFL leaders made threats to the Labor Dept. that they would defeat the ILO appropriation pending in the Senate, if they were not given exclusive representation in the ILO by the government.

The department yielded to these threats by recommending appointment of only AFL leaders as labor delegates to the ILO.

Name Scholle CIO Director In Chicago

Washington, June 17.—August Scholle of Toledo has been named CIO regional director in Chicago, succeeding Frank Rosenbloom, resigned, it was announced here.

Scholle has been regional director in Toledo, where he won a high record for building the CIO into a powerful force in that city. Recently, he has been doing organizing work in the automobile industry.

Call For 3,000,000 WPA Jobs

WASHINGTON, June 17. — Full CIO support for an adequate WPA program and a review of CIO work in pressing for the Murray-Casey bill and similar moves to give jobs to unemployed workers featured the report of CIO Unemployment Director Ralph Hetzel, Jr., to the Executive Board meeting here.

The report pointed out that the Murray-Casey bill, which calls for 3,000,000 WPA jobs for the fiscal year 1940, fulfills the conditions for an adequate WPA program laid down in Pres. Lewis' letter to Congress of May 11, which expressed the minimum needs of the jobless in five basic points:

1. Jobs for all unemployed willing to work.

2. Full right of organization of project workers.

3. Jobs suited to workers' skills.

4. Socially useful and productive projects, e. g. housing, flood control, construction, health, white collar and cultural work, vocational training.

5. Wages sufficient to maintain an American standard of living.

DUE TO CIO

Describing the nationwide demand for such a program, Hetzel's report declared: "Much of this activity from the field has been due to the vigor and alertness of the CIO—and this has been widely recognized in Washington."

While the CIO has consistently pressed for an adequate WPA program, the AFL has either been inactive or has helped Congressional tories to break down WPA, the report pointed out.

"The AFL has received extensive benefits from the WPA," Hetzel said. "In many places it has been the object of special privileges and favors from WPA officials. In spite of these facts, the CIO has stood alone in defense of WPA. The AFL, with hundreds of thousands of members benefitting extensively from WPA, has stood idly aside or has engaged in legislative activities to break down WPA."

WINS APPROVAL

At the conclusion of Hetzel's report, the Board voted unanimously to support the Murray-Casey WPA bill as "the only practical alternative to the vicious proposals of the House Appropriations Committee that would destroy WPA."

"Unless this kind of program is established by Congress," the Board declared, "the Representatives in Congress will take on themselves the responsibility for a serious economic and political condition in this country."

For Decent Living

Murray-Casey Bill

The following report of the Unemployment Committee won unanimous approval from the CIO Executive Board at its meeting here:

The Committee on Unemployment recommends to the Executive Board that it give full approval and support to the so-called Murray and Casey Bills for a WPA appropriation of $2,250,000,000 and a minimum of 3,000,000 WPA jobs for 1940. These bills are the only practical alternative to the vicious proposals of the House Appropriations Committee which would destroy the WPA.

Under the guise of limiting the size of projects done by the WPA, the Appropriations Committee actually would prevent the WPA from carrying on the vast majority of its current projects.

'DISCRIMINATION OF WORST KIND'

The proposal to assign certain funds to the PWA is absolutely untenable. It would both stifle adequate PWA appropriation and also cut funds from WPA appropriations already too meagre. The destruction of the WPA arts and theatre projects and other white collar occupations would be discrimination of the worst kind against a highly important group of citizens.

In addition, the proposals of the Appropriations Committee would establish a starvation period for workers unable to get jobs after a certain period of time. The appropriation which is presented by the Committee is completely inadequate and would cause a cut to practically half the present WPA enrollment.

ALTERNATIVE TO VICIOUS PROPOSALS

The only alternative to this group of vicious proposals is the Murray-Casey Bill. This measure is one which would correct in many ways some of the abuses which have arisen in WPA, largely because the WPA never has been given a chance to operate under a satisfactory law. It provides a practical workable program of public works. Unless this kind of program is established by Congress, the representatives of Congress will take upon themselves responsibility for a serious economic and political condition in this country.

The officials of the CIO should be directed to convey to the proper authorities immediately the most vigorous support on the part of the CIO of the Murray and Casey Bills, S. 2507 and H. R. 6470, respectively.

$60 a Month for Aged

The following resolution was passed by the CIO Executive Board:

"RESOLVED that the CIO undertake a national campaign in cooperation with old age and progressive groups to achieve a program of real security for our aged people upon the basis of a pension of $60 per month at 60 years of age for individuals and $90 per month for married couples of 60 years of age."

married couples of 60 years of age."

Reports on organizing progress were heard from most of the industries in which the CIO is active, and the executive officers were authorized to aid in pushing aggressive organizing campaigns in a number of these industries.

'WE CANNOT REST'

"We are here to determine upon new fields of organization and new directions in which to employ our resources," Lewis declared. "There are still in this land twenty million unorganized wage earners, and in many important industries we have only begun the jobs of organization. We cannot rest. We are a vital labor movement and there is no stopping or no rest for us until all who work for their living in this country have a union for their protection."

In announcing the breakdown of peace negotiations with the AFL, the CIO peace committee, whose report was unanimously accepted, placed the blame squarely on the shoulders of the AFL leadership for refusing to agree to reasonable proposals for a unity which will preserve the gains of industrial organization.

The Board noted the boycotts conducted by AFL unions against CIO union products, their lawsuits against CIO unions, and the "collusive contracts entered into by AFL unions with employers where they have no members, solely for the purpose of defeating organizational activities of the CIO."

It authorized the executive officers, at their discretion, "to initiate affirmative litigation against corporations and AFL unions which have been active in attacking the CIO or its affiliated organizations."

The Board protested vigorously against the denial of CIO representation in the International Labor Office. President Lewis reported that the Labor Department had yielded to AFL threats to defeat ILO appropriations, if they were not given exclusive representation in the ILO.

DENOUNCE AFL RACKETS

The Board also protested against discrimination against CIO members in employment on PWA projects. It denounced the AFL racket, whereby PWA workers are required to pay exorbitant initiation fees for temporary membership, and are repeatedly laid off so that AFL officials may get more of these fees from newly hired workers.

Action was taken in favor of adequate appropriations for the National Youth Administration and the Farm Security Administration.

The Board heard and approved extensive reports from the CIO committees on legislation, unemployment, housing and social security, as well as from the various CIO department heads.

San Francisco was chosen by the Board as the site for the next CIO convention, which is to begin October 10, 1939.

AFL Rackets On PWA Under Attack

Washington, June 17.—Backing for the Public Works Administration program was coupled with demands for an end to anti-CIO discrimination on public works projects in a resolution passed by the CIO Executive Board, meeting here.

The policy statement came in the form of approval of a CIO Unemployment Committee report, which in turn had endorsed a discussion of the PWA problem by Ralph Hetzel, Unemployment Director.

Hetzel told the committee that reports from many parts of the nation have shown it is almost impossible for CIO members to get employment on PWA unless they become AFL members. PWA has promised not to influence "in any way" the choice of unions to work upon its projects, Hetzel said, pointing out that the CIO is "completely in favor" of PWA's hiring workers through unions.

In addition to anti-CIO bias of some minor PWA administrators, certain AFL officials are "abusing PWA" by forcing its workers to take out temporary union memberships at "excessive rates," Hetzel charged.

CONDEMNS EXEMPTIONS

The report analyzed the Byrnes amendments to the Social Security Act and condemned in particular the exemption of large numbers of agricultural workers.

"This," the report charged, "is due to the high-powered lobbying of commercial cannery and packing interests masquerading in the name of the small farmer. It is absolutely without any justification."

In his appearance before the Congressional group, Dalrymple called attention to the fact that the CIO rests its social security program "upon the assumption that this country will have a continuously expanding economic system, returning increasingly larger yields of income to the nation.

NEED NATIONAL PLAN

"We know that a program of this kind will require the determined development of a national plan and policy to bring about the maximum use of our productive capacities."

Recent Gains Strengthen Labor, Lewis Tells CIO Board; Urges Congress to Act

Nation In Crisis, He Notes

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The CIO NEWS herewith prints excerpts from the report of Pres. John L. Lewis to the CIO Executive Board, meeting in Washington on June 13:

Recent Victories

Within the past few weeks the spirits of the progressive forces in this country have risen from the doldrums laid upon them by the reversals of the past winter. Not least among the factors creating this change was the realization that the great industrial union movement is stronger than ever, ready to move forward again in the cause of the organized and unorganized workers. The victory of the mine workers, the notable stand against destruction of the Wagner Act, the great decision on behalf of labor's rights against Hagueism, have reminded the nation that progressive labor is not retreating.

Sometimes political leaders forget how enduring and deep-rooted the labor movement is, and then they attribute to themselves the strength that organized labor has bestowed on them. But such politicians soon find that it is they who depend upon the goodwill of labor, and not otherwise.

Nation In Crisis

In many ways the nation is still in crisis. Economically we now stand little ahead of where we stood four years ago. Politically we have suffered because there has been economic paralysis. When, in nations in crisis no leadership appears which can resolve the crisis, the people become disheartened. They turn to the dangerous and irresponsible who for the sake of power offer benefits they cannot deliver.

Today, therefore, a responsibility greater than ever lies upon political and industrial leaders. I do not think the people will much longer have patience with the nostalgia and the reaction of the powers of corporate business. Nor will they be content with timid solutions offered by government, solutions fearfully withdrawn before they can be really tested.

Unless the nations is lead unhesitatingly and courageously forward to the solution of its problems, we stand in danger of being engulfed by a wave of despair and black reaction. Fascism is built upon such despair and such reaction.

'Do-Nothing' Congress

Since we met in convention in November, 1938, there has convened in Washington a Congress faced with some of the most pressing problems that ever confronted America. When that Congress met in January, 11,000,000 of our people were unemployed — 11,000,000 able-bodied workers with their millions of dependents, the little children, the ill, and the aged. Their plight is a disaster more overwhelming than any flood or hurricane that ever struck the land.

The slow undermining of the faith of these people in the ability of our nation to provide them with a job constitutes an ever-growing menace to the stability of our form of government. So does their exile from the economic system of the nation raise increasing doubts as to the ability of that system to survive.

What has Congress done? Worse than nothing, for the responsible agencies of Congress have busied themselves, in open cynicism, with tearing the vitals out of the meager proviosions already existing to help the unemployed eke out a living.

Not one constructive measure to bring back employment of these people. Not one advance in provisions for their care during those heartbreaking days when they cannot receive jobs. That is the record of Congress so far for our American unemployed.

Confronted by a long record of vicious violations of civil and labor rights, jeopardizing our traditional liberties, Congress has failed so far to act in any way to conserve our precious heritage.

FLAGRANT VIOLATIONS

A record of flagrant violations of the right of labor to bargain collectively stands before Congress, demanding provision for more rigid enforcement of the law. Has Congress sought more rigid enforcement? Not at all. We find, rather, those corporations who have violated the National Labor Relations Act most viciously are fattening on new government contracts.

More than that, committees of Congress have busied themselves with the examination of the amendments of those enemies of labor, within and without its camp, who would destroy the National Labor Relations Act. Had it not been for the thunderous voice of labor, the CIO united with the rank and file of the American Federation of Labor, this Congress might have destroyed the National Labor Relations Act.

RECORD TO PONDER

Upon unemployment compensation, upon provision for the aged, upon improved protection of minimum wages and maximum hours, upon the right to health and upon Federal aid to education, there has been no substantial move by this Congress.

This is a record labor must ponder long and carefully. Labor fights for those who can act and act in behalf of the betterment of the welfare of the people. It must judge not upon promises but upon facts, not by words but by food and clothing, by wages and work.

* * *

Conspiracy

I will outline to you later in these sessions the extensive evidence proving my accusation that certain high officials of the American Federation of Labor conspired with the representatives of reactionary big business to destroy the National Labor Relations Act; proof of a conspiracy which no vague and categorical denials can wipe out.

* * *

Unions Move Forward

A few weak and treacherous ones who joined our ranks when the way was easy have fallen by the wayside. They have been replaced by thousands of honest and loyal union members.

Our unions have been through the throes of unemployment, through vicious attacks by those who would destroy us and they have come out more vigorous and more determined than ever before. The mine workers stand secure under contracts which guarantee them their hard-won right to their union.

The automobile workers are moving ahead with a new faith in their great union. The textile workers have just established upon a permanent basis a magnificent union that holds promise of rivaling in numbers the more extensive of our organizations. The organized workers in the packing houses are moving rapidly to national negotiations with the great packers.

* * *

New Fields To Organize

We are here to determine upon new fields of organization and new directions in which to employ our resources. There are still in this land 20,000,000 unorganized wage-earners. In many important industries, such as the rapidly expanding aircraft and shipbuilding operations, we have only begun the job of organization.

We cannot rest. We are a vital labor movement and there is no stopping or no rest for us until all who work for their living in this country have a union for their protection.

* * *

Patience Nearing End

The CIO did not set out to reorganize the organized, but to organize the unorganized. We have not struck back the foul blows delivered by the American Federation of Labor. We have not, as has the American Federation of Labor, organized unions to absorb existing unions. Some AFL unions, incapable of organizing after long years of inaction, slink behind the organizers of the CIO and try to steal what the CIO has won.

The CIO will not long tolerate that policy. Until now we have done no more than merely to defend ourselves. The CIO is capable of inflicting injury upon an adversary, and the day will come when its patience and tolerance in the face of the vile and lying attacks upon its integrity and its policies and its organizations will end. Then let those who attack us beware.

Pres. John L. Lewis puts his name on the "adoption paper" of Anne Tonchick (at right), striking business office employe of the Hearst papers in Chicago, while Jonathan Eddy, American Newspaper Guild vice-president, looks on. Under the plan worked out by the strike committee, individuals, unions or organizations can "adopt" a striker by paying the Guild $5 a week. The plan has met with great success.

AFL Heads Given Warning

Urge Union Support For The CIO News

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Increased support for The CIO NEWS so that it may "develop further into a great national weekly of more popular character than is possible as yet, and with scope and influence commensurate with our movement," was urged upon CIO affiliates, in the report of Publicity Director Len De Caux to the CIO Executive Board meeting.

The report covered the intensive publicity campaigns in connection with defense of the Wagner Labor Relations Act and other legislative and organizational drives of the CIO.

BETTER PRESS

It noted some improvement in fairer coverage of CIO activities in the general press, stating:

"The stability, strength and constructive character of the CIO has been demonstrated so conclusively over a long period now, that only the most reactionary papers give any credence to the irresponsible slanders which are periodically issued by anti-CIO propagandists.

STILL FACE HOSTILITY

The report warned, however, that the CIO is still confronted with editorial hostility on the part of most of the business-controlled press, and may again suffer the more extreme forms of anti-CIO propaganda "when industrial interests with whom we may clash again feel sufficiently aroused to spend large amounts of money for anti-CIO campaigns."

San Francisco to Play Host To CIO Convention Oct. 10

WASHINGTON, June 17.—San Francisco, most highly-unionized large city in the country, will be host to the CIO convention next autumn.

The Executive Board set the date of the CIO's second convention for October 10, and the place as the Golden Gate City. In doing so, the Board accepted an invitation to meet in the city made several months ago by Pres. Harry Bridges of the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union.

The Bridges' request followed a decision by the AFL to move its convention site from San Francisco to Cincinnati. San Francisco is closely linked to the birth of the CIO, for it was at the AFL convention there in 1934 that the industrial union forces in the Federation made their demand that organization of mass-production workers be undertaken.

Fight for Labor's Legal and Civil Rights Recounted

WASHINGTON, June 17. — Broad fields of activity in defense of the Wagner Act, the Wage and Hour law, civil liberties, and the right to collective bargaining were covered by the report of the CIO Legislative Committee, submitted to the Executive Board by Sidney Hillman, chairman, and Lee Pressman, executive secretary.

The report also dealt with the decision against Mayor Frank (I Used to be the Law) Hague in the Supreme Court and with the question of litigation against certain AFL unions that have illegally attacked the CIO.

On the Wagner Act, the report pointed out that the CIO had successfully withstood a frontal attack from the leadership of the AFL in collusion with reactionary employers, on this basic statute for workers' rights, and had uncovered the conspiracy between AFL leaders and the Natl. Manufacturers Assn. to destroy the act by amendments.

OUTSTANDING VICTORY

The report also described the decision against Boss Hague as "an outstanding victory for all organized labor" and one that was secured by the initiative and militancy of the CIO.

In regard to litigation against AFL unions, the report cited illegal boycotts against CIO unions, strikebreaking attempts, and scab-herding conducted by the leaders of the AFL in the attempt to damage the CIO. The Committee recommendation that CIO officers be empowered to start lawsuits against such AFL leaders was unanimously accepted by the Board.

Anti-alien bills now passed or pending in Congress were described by the report as being in reality aimed against labor unions, and affiliates were urged to carry on a vigorous fight against them.

The work of the CIO Legislative Committee in pressing for guarantees of collective bargaining in U. S. government contracts was reviewed, and a recommendation to carry on this struggle endorsed by the Board.

Librarian

Archibald MacLeish, noted liberal poet, who has been appointed director of the Library of Congress by Pres. Roosevelt.

CIO Supports Youth, Farm Programs

WASHINGTON, June 17. — Declaring that the National Youth Administration has "done yeoman service in behalf of the young people of this country," the CIO Executive Board called for passage of the $123,000,000 appropriation requested by President Roosevelt.

"Similarly," the Board said, any cut in the President's demand for a like amount for the Farm Security Administration, "would be deeply resented by labor."

"The men and women helped by the Farm Security Administration," the Board resolution declared, "would be deeply resented by labor, for the men and women helped by the FSA are working people, and it is to labor's interest to see that the welfare of the farm population is properly protected."

PROTECTS EDUCATION

The National Youth Administration, the resolution noted, "has enabled many who otherwise would be thrown upon the streets, hopeless and helpless, to continue their education and to gain training in useful occupations."

A nationwide attempt by employers to discredit labor organizations by "telling young men and women that unions prevent the employment of youth in industry" was called to the Board's attention by the Committee on Unemployment, with a recommendation for a counter-attack to correct "the false impression of labor's attitude" which has been spread by Tory groups.

VICIOUS SMEAR CAMPAIGN

The employers' propaganda campaign, the committee charged, "is simply a vicious attempt on the part of reactionary interests to absolve themselves of the blame because there are no jobs for young people.

"The CIO is following a policy designed to create greater employment throughout the nation. It has heartily supported the NYA. It has endorsed apprenticeship provisions for young people. It has laid down in its convention support of the proposals of the American Youth Congress."

Praise Housing Program For Increasing Jobs

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Extension of the U. S. Housing Authority slum-clearance program will provide employment for thousands of workers in CIO - organized industries, the CIO Committee on Housing advised the Executive Board here.

The committee, headed by Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union and Anthony Wayne Smith of the CIO legal department, predicted a rise in the present ratio of 15 workers employed in the production of building materials for every 10 men engaged in constructing USHA homes.

ASK ACTION ON BILL

A demand that the House Banking and Currency Committee take favorable action on the Wagner-Steagall bill, providing for an additional $800,000,000 in loans and $45,000,000 in rent contributions, was issued by the committee at its meeting here. The Senate has already passed the bill designed to expand the USHA program.

"There can be no question about the popularity of the measure, and no question that if it is reported out of committee promptly, as it should be, it will pass the House by an overwhelming vote," the letter said.

District 50 Hits Pay Scale For Fertilizer

Washington, June 17. — Sharp objections to wage recommendations of 40c an hour by the Public Contracts Division of the U. S. Department of Labor for the fertilized industry were expressed today in a statement by Pres. James Nelson of District 50 of the United Mine Workers.

The union official charged that the rates had been put into effect "without giving adequate weight to the well-known fact" that the companies most affected are the largest in the industry and have far greater production than the large number of small, inconsequential companies which have a lower scale.

Marine Union Ousts Official For 'Sabotage, Disruption'

NEW YORK, June 17.—Suspension from the union for 99 years was the verdict returned this week against Jerome King, secretary-treasurer of the National Maritime Union in a trial before the NMU membership committee.

King was charged with disruption and sabotage on 14 counts, ranging from failure to carry out his duties to accepting money from the Standard Oil Company for sabotage.

The committee's verdict was unanimous on seven counts, divided on six and not guilty on one. Division was geographical in the divided verdicts, representatives of the Gulf District finding King not guilty.

The recommendation, voted unanimously by the committee, was accepted by a membership meeting in New York and will become final when a majority of the Atlantic and Gulf district ports concur.

The resolution passed by the committee recommends:

"That Jerome King, national secretary-treasurer, Engine (membership) book No. 103, be suspended from the National Maritime Union for a period of 99 years and that his picture and a history of this case be carried in the Official Organ of the union, "The Pilot," and that it be submitted to labor papers generally."

Signed confessions by Walter Carney, suspended NMU member now in jail, and Octave Loones, former editor of the "Rank and File Pilot," defunct anti-union paper, implicating King in disruptive activities were introduced at the trial.

Lorillard Still Unfair

Middletown, Ohio, June 17.—Members of CIO Pioneer Tobacco Workers Local Industrial Union 55 point out that products of the P. Lorillard Co. are still on the union's unfair list.

Lorillard products include Old Gold, Murad and Sensation cigarettes, Between the Acts, Ripples and Bounty little cigars, Climax, Muriel and Rocky Ford cigars and Union Leader, Briggs, Friends, Beech Nut, Bag Pipe and Havana Blossom tobacco.

They Want Cooperation

Maritime Union Ends Strike on Tankers

NEW YORK, June 17.—The National Maritime Union voted this week to terminate the present strike against four big oil companies to forestall establishment of a company union for unlicensed men on Standard Oil tankers. The other three companies involved are Socony-Vacuum, Tidewater Oil and C. D. Mallory.

The union announced, however, that the companies would not be taken off the unfair list until full union crews are back on the ships under contract.

FORMING COMPANY UNION

Action to call off the strike was initiated by the Strike Policy Committee shortly after it was learned that an Esso Tanker Men's Association was being formed and had already petitioned the National Labor Relations Board for an election on Standard Oil of New Jersey ships.

Recommendations drawn up by the committee and the NMU National Council were accepted at a membership meeting in New York. Other ports were asked to act on the recommendations as soon as possible.

CITE REASON

A statement issued by the union declared that the formation of the company union was part of Standard Oil's anti-union strategy and the main reason why the company had forced the strike, which would have become a lock-out if continued.

Nearly a score of Standard Oil tankers in the domestic trade, the NMU stated, were transferred to foreign runs when the strike started, and still have their NMU crews aboard, but the company plans to bring these vessels into American ports during the next two weeks and "dump" the NMU crews.

CONVICTED

New York—The first prosecution of a violation of the State wage-hour law as it applies to women and children brought a $150 fine on three counts for Frank Franghi of the Star Beauty Shop.

Urge Annual Wage at General Motors

Reuther Suggests 30-Hour Week At Present Pay

DETROIT, June 17.—Recommendations that an annual income guarantee and the five-day, 30-hour week at present wage rates be written into a new General Motors contract were heard today by the United Automobile Workers' GM council.

Presented by Walter Reuther, director of the council, the plan had won previous acceptance from the UAW international executive board, it was revealed. The council consists of 22 GM local representatives from all sections of the nation and Canada.

Other proposals made by Reuther included: Complete recognition of the shop steward system; improved seniority systems, with elimination of special or preferential lists of employes; time and a half for Saturday work and double time for Sundays and holidays; ten-cents-an-hour premiums for night work and vacations with pay.

SEASONAL DIPS

Pointing out that the industry has failed to pay an adequate annual wage to its workers, Reuther commented on the fact that "we have months of hectic activity including night work and speed-ups, which are followed by long months of unemployment and complete loss of income to the workers."

The UAW leader anticipated in advance two GM "alibis" to the union's proposals—that it can't afford it, and that technological improvements are steadily reducing the need for human labor in its plants.

"Can GM and the auto manufacturers afford to pay a guaranteed annual wage?" Reuther asked. "No industry in the United States can afford it better. The current report of the Federal Trade Commission shows that 11 automobile corporations from 1927 to 1937 earned net profits of $2,375,000,000—and that period, it must be remembered, included five depression years.

"We recognize that improved machinery means smaller working forces. But we are not inclined to accept fatalistically a situation which each year throws more and more of our people on the scrap heap of unemployment and poverty.

LABOR MUST SHARE

"We are not against technological improvements, have no quarrel with the introduction of more efficient machinery. We have no desire, even if we could, to stop progress.

"But we do insist, and emphatically, on sharing the gains of such progress. Improved machinery should not merely mean greater profits for corporations. It also should mean greater income for labor and more leisure—not the leisure of unemployment but the leisure of a 30-hour week and wage adequate enough to make the leisure a blessing rather than a curse."

Win $10,000 In Increases

New York, June 17—Pay increases amounting to nearly $10,000 were won for the workers of the Superior Felt & Bedding Company in a contract signed between the firm and Bedding Local 140, United Furniture Workers. The wage boost, which ranges from 5 per cent to 25 per cent, covers 100 workers employed at the shop.

Rump Outfit's Auto 'Strike' Goes Boom

Detroit, June 17.—Homer Martin, newest member of the AFL's scab-herding department, lost his second bid for power in a week as General Motors plants in Flint continued to operate despite a "strike" called by the rump organization which split away from the United Automobile Workers, CIO.

The Martin demonstration, called June 8, found few auto workers following the discredited former leader of the UAW. Of the dozen plants affected by the appearance of Martin pickets—many of them imported from other cities—only the Buick plant closed, and that only for one shift because of a temporary lack of bodies.

Previously the rump group had failed to disrupt the strike at the Briggs Manufacturing Co., where the UAW-CIO won sole bargaining rights in its new contract.

UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas charged in a statement that "the AFL-chartered rump is not a labor organization in any sense of the word. It has no responsibility. It has no contracts. It has no members."

Storm Center

West coast maritime workers picket the S.S. Coldbrook, tied up in Seattle harbor. The Coldbrook, picked for trans-Pacific freight service by the U. S. Maritime Commission, will be operated by crews from non-union hiring hall—so hopes the government agency. Seamen and longshoremen, interpreting the decision as a blow at their carefully-won gains in recent years, have determined to allow the ship to sail only when the commission hires a crew from the union.

Court Dismisses AFL Stab At Union Shop Contract

SCOTTVILLE, N. Y., June 17. — An AFL petition for a temporary injunction to restrain the Textile Workers' Union of America, CIO, and the A. D. Juillard & Co., Inc., mills here, from carrying out the terms of a preferential union shop contract was dismissed this week by the New York Supreme Court.

In applying for the temporary injunction, the AFL sought to restrain the company from discharging or threatening to discharge any of the plaintiffs for failure to pay dues to Local 96 as provided in the agreement.

Previously the National Labor Relations Board had upheld the Regional Labor Board in refusing to certify the AFL as collective bargaining agent at the Atlantic mills of the Juillard chain here. The AFL attempted to win recognition as bargaining agent in face of the fact that the TWUA has had an agreement for the past two years.

Get Laundry Contract In Indianapolis

Indianapolis, Ind., June 17—A CIO contract covering workers of the Dry Cleaning & Laundry Plant Owners of Princeton, Indiana and vicinity was announced this week by James Robb, CIO regional director.

Extension of an agreement with the Inland Container Corporation for 15 days, pending further negotiations for a new contract was also announced by Robb.

An Artist Who Paints For The Workers

Emanuel Romano, artist, sympathizer with the worker, rebel — and now painter of murals for an insurance company's exhibits at both San Francisco and New York World's Fairs.

The situation is an anomaly, especially when you discover in the vivid paintings a keen sympathy which manifests itself in a tender portrayal of the old farmer and his wife, the laborer in the city, the tenement dwellers.

But Emanuel Romano is himself an anomaly. Even his name is not what it seems. For he is Emanuel, son of Enrico Glichenstein, the eminent Polish sculptor, who settled with his wife, also an artist, in Italy, just before Emanuel was born.

PARENTS WERE REFUGEES

"My father and mother thought that after Poland, Italy would be a haven, a refuge, a land of glorious freedom and liberty for all. And so they named me Emanuel Romano — for the city which 35 years ago gave them a welcome, which a quarter of a century later it was to take back."

And so, ten years ago, when Enrico Glichenstein came here with his son, already known in Europe for several one-man exhibitions, it was as "Emanuel Romano" that the artist was to emerge when friendly Boston showed his works.

One of the first things Romano did when he came to this country was to join the CIO Artists Union, and as members of Local 60 will tell you, he is one of the most vociferous and active members.

"I never had a chance to join a union in Fascist Italy," this slight, dark, typically Italian young man said. "That is, there is nothing but Fascism to join, and if I had told my real opinions I would have been clapped in jail. And I still don't see any way to do work while I am in jail," he said.

Although the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company refused to allow him to put Negroes into their murals, it is Negro life in America which has fascinated hi mfrom the first. Among the Negroes whom he plans to paint this coming winter is Paul Robeson, a good friend of his. Among the most successful of his oil portraits, many of which will be exhibited in a one-man show in New York this fall, are the Harlem studies he has made, the stevedores, the farm workers, the subway-riders.

"They express America to me," he says. "They are so strong, so full of life, so full of laughter under heavy burdens."

The theme of the Metropolitan murals which are to become a permanent part of the company's collection in New York, is "a panorama of American life."

"I wanted to make it a panorama of America's workers," Mr. Romano said, "but the Metropolitan thought that was too —what shall I say — proletarian!"

So you will find in these immense canvasses which at the New York World's Fair, half the wall at the end of the Business Systems Building, the capitalist with his white carnation in his buttonhole alongside of the laborer with his shovel in his hands. And the women he depicts are working women, girls with muscle and brawn like their brothers — like the peasants he used to paint in Italy.

"I never had a chance in Italy to do what I wanted to do," he said. "But here in America I am bursting with ideas. If the WPA art project would only continue, and give artists a chance to express themselves, how much they would and could do for America! It is the REAL America we would show!"

Harlan Mine Signs Contract

Harlan, Ky., June 24—(FP)— Miners, their wives and local merchants paraded four miles to celebrate the first union shop contract to be signed by a member of the Harlan County Coal Operators Assn.

The Creech Coal Co., employing 350 bituminous miners, reached the agreement with the United Mine Workers this week.

The pact came five days after the operators' association had released its members to negotiate individually with the union. At the same time national guardsmen on duty for the past five weeks in the Harlan coal fields allowed the UMW to hold its first mass meeting since the operators attempted to resume operations on an open shop basis.

Miss Ann Tonchick, Chicago Hearst striker, seems mighty happy about having CIO Pres. John L. Lewis as an "adopted" father. Lewis signed the "adoption" papers just before the CIO Executive Board meeting last week, agreeing to pay $5 weekly to help support the striker, under a plan worked out by the Newspaper Guild.

"It is an honor and responsibility to be 'adopted' by Mr. Lewis," she said. "I'll have to be a good striker and work twice as hard to win. I can't get accustomed to the idea of being Mr. Lewis' honorary daughter."

Strike committee leaders described Miss Tonchick as one of the most active Guild members, noting that she has not missed a day's work on the fund raising committee during the six and a half months of the strike.

Warns Slashes Will Hurt Entire Nation

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Demanding passage of the Murray bill for 3,000,000 WPA jobs as "a decent provision for the unemployed," the CIO presented testimony before the Senate Appropriations Sub - Committee to show that present Tory plans would wreck WPA and sabotage recovery.

The CIO testimony, presented by Ralph Hetzel, Jr., unemployment director, attacked the vicious Woodrum bill that would destroy WPA through crippling limitations on funds and on the nature of WPA projects.

Hetzel cited a CIO survey on employment possibilities to show that private industry could not hope to absorb dismissed WPA workers, and called on Congress to "consider profoundly" the severe effect cuts would have on the national economy.

Joining the CIO in testifying for the Murray bill and against the Woodrum measure were the United Automobile Workers, Labor's Non-Partisan League, and several AFL groups.

Hetzel also sharply attacked Pres. Green of the AFL for his refusal to oppose the Woodrum bill, even though its final passage would be a blow to hundreds of thousands of AFL workers.

New York CIO Fights Cuts

New York, June 24 — Launching a mass campaign here against the Woodrum bill for WPA cuts, the New York CIO Council called upon all its affiliates in greater New York to make a fight against the bill "the first order of business."

"Unless the tory-inspired Woodrum sabotage of the Federal WPA and relief program is checked at once," President Allan S. Haywood of the Council declared, "New York faces its greatest relief crisis amid the most chaotic conditions since 1930."
